An old physician, retired from practice having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and pleasant cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. SHERAR, 14 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

Dandelion.

Who does not know this harmless, little plant which, with its bright green leaves and golden colored flowers, adorns our grass-plats and pasture grounds? Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative is prepared from Dandelion root, in combination with other valuable roots, barks, and herbs, and is a safe and certain specific for biliousness, kidney deseases, rheumatism and constipation of the bowels, and as a blood purifier and renovator it is positively unequaled, removing pimples and sallowness, producing a pure complexion. Pint bottles only one dollar, and every bottle warranted. For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug store. 15 2w

Read This.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county who is authorized to sell the Singer sewing machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Headquarters at the Central House 14-tf.

COMBS, ROBBIS & BELL, ATTORNEYS.

Notice to Non-Residents.

STATE OF INDIANA, } ss.
DeKalb County. }

In the DeKalb circuit court, May term, 1880. Andrew Stern and Susanna Stern, (his wife), Benjamin King and Martha S. King, Charles E. Smith and Joseph Smart, are hereby notified that an action has been commenced against them in said court, by Jonathan Edwards, trustee, for foreclosure, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 15th juridical day of the next term of said court, which commences May 24th, 1880.

Witness, the clerk of said court, this 8th day of April, 1880. JOHN W. BAXTER, Clerk
16-3w

Attachment Notice.

Before Jacob Walborn, justice of the peace in Union township, DeKalb county, Indiana.
Alexander H. Phillips, vs
Ephraim Rockwell.

Whereas, the Plaintiff in the above entitled cause has filed with me his affidavit and bond in attachment, and a summons having been issued and returned not found, and a writ of attachment having also been issued thereon and property of the said defendant having been attached by virtue thereof, and it also appears that the defendant is a non-resident of the state of Indiana. Therefore, the said defendant and all persons interested are hereby notified that said cause is set for trial on the [illegible] day of May, A. D. 1880, at 9 o'clock a. m., before me, the undersigned justice of the peace, at my office, in the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind.
15-4. JACOB WALBORN, J. P. [SEAL.]

HIAWATHA.

By American Clay.

1st DAM—By Capt. Beard, he by imported Yorkshire.
2nd DAM—By Chorister, he by imported Contract.
3rd DAM—By Ohio, he by Monsieur Tonson.
4th DAM—By imported Hedgeford, he by Filho da Puta.
5th DAM—By imported Buzzard, he by Woodpecker.

AMERICAN CLAY was sired by Strader's C. M. Clay, Jr.
C. M. CLAY JR., was sired by C. M. Clay.
C. M. CLAY was sired by Henry Clay.
HENRY CLAY was sired by Andrew Jackson.
ANDREW JACKSON was sired by Young Bashaw.
YOUNG BASHAW was sired by imported Grand Bashaw.

An extended pedigree will be furnished on application and will be guaranteed reliable.

HIAWATHA

Will serve a limited number of good mares during the season of 1880 at the very low price of $10 For the Season.

$5.00 forfeit payable at the time of first service, and $5.00 to be paid when the mare is known to be with foal.

The season to commence April 1st, and end July 1st, 1880.

The owner will not be responsible for accidents.

For further information call at Allen's livery stable, Auburn, Ind.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, APRIL 22, 1880.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

IN THE EAST.

THE widow of the late Daniel S. Dickinson has just died in New York, aged 77....Five miners at work in the Preston colliery, in the Schuylkill coal region have been severely and perhaps fatally burned, by an explosion of fire-damp....The Waterbury (Ct.) watch works have been damaged by fire to the amount of $75,000.

ELLIOTT C. COWDIN, a prominent and wealthy New York merchant, is dead....Chastine Cox, who murdered Mrs. Hull, and Pietro Balbo, who murdered his wife, have been resentenced to be hanged at New York, on the 28th of May....Dr. Albert Goersen, formerly a well-known homeopathic physician of Philadelphia, is under arrest in that city on suspicion of having poisoned his father, his wife and his wife's mother, all of whom have suddenly and mysteriously died recently.

A DUEL between Dr. J. W. White and Robert H. Adams, Jr., of Philadelphia, was an absurdly ridiculous affair. They fired once, apparently without intending to hit anything, and then shook hands and sought seclusion, from which they have not yet emerged.

WHILE some men were raising a bridge a Newmill, N. J., the steel and iron works of the beam fell, killing William Obendenfer and Lewis Powell....Forest fires in New Jersey have burned over a tract of country fifty miles long by ten wide, suffocating thousands of birds and considerable stock....Tom Thumb is the chief attraction in a New York 10-cent show, and little Commodore Nutt is about opening a whisky saloon in that city....A strong British rifle team is expected at New York in 1881, to compete for the American trophy. The American team goes to Ireland this year....A man and woman who arrived at Baltimore last week, with 1,500 other immigrants, have been sent to a hospital in that city, suffering with small-pox. It is feared that germs of the disease may have been disseminated among their companions who left immediately for the West.

THE WEST.

THE Western Iron Association has reduced the price of nails from $4 to $3.20....There has been a disastrous conflagration at Dixon, Ill. Four manufacturing establishments were destroyed and two others somewhat damaged. Two men were killed and several others injured by falling walls. Two hundred thousand dollars' worth of property was consumed....A car attached to a passenger train on the Bellaire and Southwestern railway jumped the track on a trestle, eighteen miles from Bellaire, Ohio, and fell eighteen feet to the ground. Four or five persons were seriously injured.

GEN. HATCH'S command, operating in Southern New Mexico, has had an engagement, lasting four hours, with Victoria's band of Apaches. The savages finally broke and fled, leaving several of their dead on the field and considerable stock, which fell into the hands of the soldiers. Capt. Carol, of the Ninth Cavalry, and seven troopers were wounded....Near St. Louis, Mo., two men who were clenched in a desperate fight on a railroad track were run over by a train and one of them instantly killed, the other being slightly injured....The annual report of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, just made public, shows that during the past year that company bought or built 535 miles of road and earned $4,580,024.

TWO MEN were killed and twelve wounded by a premature explosion of dynamite in a quarry at Downington, Pa....It remained for a colored man to make the best pedestrian record ever made. Hart who won the O'Leary belt at New York, scored 565 miles and 165 yards in his six days' walk. This is thirteen miles better than the record of the Englishman, "Blower" Brown, whose feat had hitherto been unsurpassed....A two-story tenement house at Haverhill, Mass., occupied by ten families, was destroyed by fire, two of the inmates perishing in the flames.

MASKED burglars entered the residence of Mrs. I. L. Coats, at Neenah, Wis., and, after beating the lady with their revolvers, ransacked the house, and made off with diamonds, watches and jewelry to the value of $4,000....Died in Chicago, Mrs. Leer Hall (colored), aged 107 years. She was an inveterate smoker up to the day of her death, and for the last twenty years of her life never wore shoes nor stockings. At the age of 90 years she traveled on foot from Chicago to St. Louis, and thence to Oxford, Ohio, for the purpose of visiting relatives.

COL. HATCH, in command of the troops operating against Victoria's band of Apaches in New Mexico, thinks the punishment recently inflicted on the savages will bring them to terms. A dispatch from Santa Fe places the loss of the Indians in the last engagement at thirty killed. ....Miss Belle Cook, of Santa Clara county, Cal., well-known throughout the Pacific coast as an equestrienne, publishes a challenge to ride a twenty-mile race with any lady in the United States for $1,000, $2,000, or $3,000 a side.

THE Minnesota Millers' Association, at a meeting held in Minneapolis, adopted a resolution that, in view of the insufficient store of wheat in the State to keep the mills running until next harvest, and also of the surplus on the market, the mills be closed for one month. ....Daniel Swygart, an insane man, living near South Bend, Ind., starved himself to death. He believed that if he ate anything his family would starve, there not being enough for both. He was quite wealthy.

A SEVERE shock of earthquake was experienced at San Francisco the other day. Buildings rocked, but no serious damage is reported....The Western Nail Association, at a meeting in Pittsburgh, agreed unanimously to a further suspension of two weeks. After discussing the advisability of reducing the prices, it was decided to maintain the present rates.

THE SOUTH.

SAMUEL ROBINSON, colored, was hanged at Leesburg, Va., on the 9th inst., for the murder of Edward Thomas, Oct. 23, 1870. His neck was broken by the fall. Amos Wooten, colored, was hanged the same day at Bennettsville, S. C., for burning and robbing Breeden's mills. The fall did not break his neck, and he died from strangulation. This is the first execution in that State under the new law against arson.

RECENT frosts are reported to have seriously damaged the fruit-trees of Kentucky, and a short crop is expected.

MOODY and Sankey have gone to Texas for a revival campaign in that State....Fifteen men took a colored murderer from jail in St. Helena parish, La., and shot him to death. ....At Munfordsville, Ky., Thomas Boyd, in the presence of about a thousand people, jumped from the railroad bridge over Green river, a distance of 120 feet, to the water below. He sprung off the bridge head foremost, and struck the water in that position. In a moment afterward he appeared swimming. He was picked up by a boat's crew, and when brought ashore passed through the crowd, receiving what money was offered. He was not injured in the least.

AT WACO, TEXAS, Will Hardwick, killed John French, a rival in a love affair, and then committed suicide....James Black, a negro, who assaulted Mrs. Hattie Farrice of Dinwiddie county, Va., was taken from the jail by an armed party of seventy-five masked men and hanged. ....A New Orleans boy, who was exercising in a gymnasium, was accidentally strangled to death by getting his head in a swinging ring.

A WOMAN at Warren, Va., who interfered when her husband was punishing their son, was thrown by the infuriated father from a ladder on which she was standing, and killed.

GENERAL.

SEVERAL speculators in New York and London have got up a corner on opium. Of the 4,000 cases in the world, it is estimated that the ring has about 3,200 in its possession. The speculators began to purchase at $4.50 per pound, and the present price in London is $6.50.

THE wife of President Diaz, of Mexico, is dead....The price of iron has been reduced $10 a ton....Mr. Tilden has made a second donation of $5,000 to the Irish relief fund.

THERE arrived at the port of New York during the month of March, 1880, 28,616 passengers, 21,658 of whom were immigrants. During the corresponding period of 1879, the total number of passengers arrived at the port was 7,786, of whom 5,965 were immigrants. Of the total arrivals of immigrants at the port during the month of March, 1880, there were: From England, 2,780; Scotland, 775; Wales, 86; Ireland, 4,007; Germany, 6,503; Austria, 681; Sweden, 2,188; Norway, 494; Denmark, 391; France, 308; Switzerland, 614; Italy, 866; Holland, 509; Belgium, 85; Russia, 195; Poland, 250; Hungary, 678; Cuba, 42; all other countries, 43....William H. Vanderbilt has sent $30,000,000 more of Government 4-per cent. bonds to the United States treasury for registration, making in all $51,000,000 registered in his name.

O'LEARY challenges any two men in England to make a six-day "go-as-you-please" match with Hart and Dobler for $10,000 to $20,000 a side, the contest to take place in New York city....Grain in sight in the States and Canada: Wheat, 24,383,000 bushels; corn, 15,164,000 bushels; oats, 2,769,000 bushels; rye, 691,000 bushels; barley, 2,094,000 bushels....It is announced from Washington that a new bankrupt bill will be reported to the House at an early date. The experience of business men under the State insolvent acts, since the repeal of the former national Bankrupt law has led to a strong pressure for the enactment of a similar measure....Several members of the State horticultural societies of Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Texas and one or two other States met at St. Louis, Mo., the other day, and completed arrangements for a grand horticultural and pomological exposition of the Mississippi valley, to be held at St. Louis on the 7th, 8th and 9th of next September.

WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON dispatches report that the feeling in favor of a national Bankrupt law is growing in Congress, and that a strong pressure for its enactment is being brought to bear.

GOV. W. A. HOWARD, of Dakota Territory, died at Washington the other day. Gov. Howard was for many years a prominent Republican politician in Michigan, and a member of Congress from that State.

POLITICAL.

THE Cincinnati Enquirer publishes an interview with the Hon. Theodore Cook, a leading Democrat of that city, who has just returned from a visit to ex-Gov. Seymour, of New York, and who, as a friend of that gentleman, speaks authoritatively touching his position in regard to the Presidential candidacy. He says that Mr. Seymour is very much annoyed at the refusal of the press and people to accept his statements already made, that he will not be a candidate under any circumstances.

THE Democrats of Oregon have selected six delegates to the Cincinnati Convention, and all of them are said to be Tilden men, and nominated Congressman Whiteacar for re-election....The Nebraska Republicans will hold their State Convention at Columbus May 19.

THE Iowa Greenback Convention, to nominate State officers and to select delegates to the National Party Convention, will meet at Des Moines May 19.

THE Democratic State Convention of Louisiana was held at New Orleans on the 12th inst. A resolution was adopted favoring Gen. Hancock for President, but delegates go uninstructed, except to vote as the majority may decide, and for the maintenance of the two-thirds rule.

WASHINGTON telegram: "Gen. Merritt, Collector of Customs at New York, says that the reports about Mr. Tilden's physical condition are well founded; that those who are intimate with him say that while he retains his mental vigor his nervous system is undermined, and he will not live long."

A DISPATCH from Burlington, Vt., states that, while Senator Edmunds is not a candidate for the Presidency in the sense of being a seeker for the office, he would accept the trust from a sense of duty if nominated and elected.

REPUBLICAN State Conventions for the appointment of delegates to the National Convention at Chicago were held on the 14th inst. in Iowa, Missouri and Kentucky. In Iowa the Blaine men were largely in the majority, and the twenty-two delegates were instructed to cast the vote of the State as a unit, and to use all honorable means to secure the nomination of James G. Blaine. The Kentucky Convention instructed its twenty-four delegates to vote as a unit for U. S. Grant. In the Missouri Convention the Grant sentiment was also largely predominant, and the thirty delegates to the Chicago Convention were instructed to vote as a unit for his nomination.

FOREIGN.

THE Emperor of Germany, replying to Bismarck's request for permission to retire from office, says: "I do not feel induced to relieve you of your office, because you believe yourself unable, in a particular case, to carry out the task allotted to you by the constitution. I must, on the contrary, leave it to you to submit to me, and subsequently to the Bundesrath, proposals calculated to bring about a constitutional solution of the conflict of duties of this description."....The Madrid Republicans are organizing, and will issue a manifesto against the restrictions placed upon the press and suffrage in Spain.

NEWS comes from South America of a heavy battle between the Chilians and Peruvians, the former being defeated with the loss of 1,300 killed, besides many wounded and captured....A large body of Jesuits expelled from France are en route to Canada....A dispatch from Constantinople says: "An American citizen, accused of the murder of a Turk, was recently tried before Mr. Heap, Consul General of the United States, found guilty of manslaughter, and sentenced to two months' imprisonment. Sawas Pasha, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has protested against the right of the American Consul to try the case, and demands the surrender of the prisoner to the Ottoman authorities. Heap declines to surrender him."

GREAT destitution prevails in the neighborhood of Van, Armenia, and appeals have been issued in behalf of the suffering inhabitants....The Greeks, Bulgarians, and the Slavic peoples generally, are jubilant over the result of the English elections. They expect that Gladstone will let the "Sick Man" (Turkey) die...A dispatch from Rangoon, in Burmah, reports that 700 men, women, boys, girls, priests, and foreigners have been burned alive under the towers of the walls of Mandalay as a sacrifice for the restoration of the King's health. The panic there is frightful, and hundreds of people are leaving the city. The King's illness is said to be leprosy.

THE diabolism perpetrated by the drunken demon in human form who reigns as King of Burmah appears to have been even more horrible than, at first reported. Instead of burning them he buried alive 700 men, women and children under the walls of Mandelay....A still exploded in a creosote mill in London, England, killing eleven persons....Advices from South America show that the attack of the Chilians on the Peruvian city of Mollendo was attended by frightful atrocities. The invaders destroyed and sacked many costly buildings, and, coming to the residence quarter, spared neither age, sex, nor condition. At the height of the beastly revel the Chilian officers attempted to check their soldiery, but were unable to rescue the women and girls until they had killed with their revolvers several of their own men.

THE effect of the new German Army bill is shown in the increase in emigration. For the week ending April 13, 5,000 emigrants sailed from Bremen for the United States, and they are evidently but the advance guard of hundreds of thousands to follow.

IN the great billiard match at Paris for $2,000 and the championship of the world, between Slosson, of Chicago, and Vigneaux, of Paris, the American was badly beaten. The game consisted of 4,000 points, 800 points being played each evening for five consecutive days. Score: Vigneaux, 4,000; Slosson, 3,118. The former made the extraordinary run of 1,451 points. Slosson made a run of 1,108 points....The Liberal majority in the British Parliament over the combined opposition, including Home-Rulers, is about sixty. ....Otero, who attempted to assassinate King Alfonso on the evening of Dec. 30, as the royal carriage containing the King and Queen was passing through the palace gate, was executed at Madrid on the 14th inst....Lorillard's American horse Wallenstein won the Newmarket (Eng.) handicap.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

In the Senate, on the 8th inst., a resolution to lend flags to the Knight Templars' encampment at Chicago next August was passed, as was another lending artillery, tents, etc., to a soldiers' reunion at Central City, Neb. The House bill to provide for a public building for the United States Postoffice, revenue offices and courts, at Charlestown, W. Va., passed. Bills were introduced and referred as follows: By Mr. Paddock, a bill for the relief of certain settlers within the late Fort Kearney Military Reservation, Nebraska; also, to authorize the Secretary of War to turn over to the Interior Department certain parts of Camp Douglas Military Reservation, Utah; by Mr. Baldwin, making an appropriation for the erection of a lighthouse and fog signal at or near the entrance of Little Traverse harbor, Mich....In the House a large number of bills were reported adversely from the Committee on War Claims and laid upon the table. Mr. Reagan reported a resolution calling on the Secretary of War for information relative to an ice-harbor at Chester, Pa., and it was adopted. The House went into committee of the whole (Cox in the chair) upon the Army Appropriation bill, the pending question being upon a point of order raised against the amendment prohibiting any of the appropriations to be used for the subsistence, equipment, transportation, or compensation of any portion of the army to be used as a police force to keep the peace at the polls at any election held within any State. The Republicans were determined to force a political debate upon this amendment, while the Democrats wanted the rider passed without talk, and the whole day was used up in debate over the point of order. The House adjourned with a motion limiting the debate to four hours pending.

In the Senate, on the morning of April 9, a bill passed appropriating $50,000 for the erection of a public building at Paducah, Ky.; Mr. Bayard's resolutions appointing a joint committee upon internal-revenue taxes were passed. The House resolution for printing 300,000 copies of the report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for 1879 was passed. All the session was passed in debate on the Ute treaty. The President nominated John W. Barr, of Louisville, to be United States District Judge for the District of Kentucky. Adjourned to Monday....In the House, Mr. De La Matyr introduced a bill establishing a temporary Government fo Alaska. Reports of committees upon private claims were made. Mr. Newberry introduced a bill, providing that it shall not hereafter be lawful to transport imported goods, or any products of the United States, from one place to another when any portion of such transportation is made through any foreign country bordering on the Gulf of Mexico or on the Caribbean sea, except as the same is permitted by treaties of the United States with such foreign countries. Between fifty and seventy-five bills were reported adversely from the Committee on War Claims, and laid on the table.

The Senate was not in session on Saturday, the 10th inst....In the House, the Senate resolution for a joint committee to investigate the loss of internal revenue was concurred in. A debate (if debate it can be called where one party refuses to discuss a question) on the political rider to the Army Appropriation bill took all the time in committee of the whole for the day. The Republicans did all the talking, the Democrats having agreed not to debate the measure.

In the Senate, on Monday morning, April 12, Mr. Pendleton presented the report of the conference committee on the Census bill. Bills were introduced: By Mr. Ferry, to regulate promotion and fix the rank of line officers of the army; by Mr. Vance, defining and limiting the use of the Page patent; by Mr. Vest, to reduce the duty on lead ore; by Mr. McMillan, to repeal the law taxing the circulation of State banks. The conference report on the Census bill was taken up and adopted. The Ute treaty was taken up and passed, by a vote of 37 to 16. The President nominated J. M. Bynum, of Rienzi, Supervisor of Census in the First District of Mississippi....In the House, the Senate bill passed appropriating $200,000 for the erection of suitable posts for the protection of the Rio Grande frontier. The Senate amendments to the House bill for a public building at Paducah were concurred in. Bills introduced: By Mr. Phelps, extending for three years from the 1st of July next the time within which the application for arrears of pensions may be filed; by Mr. Chalmers, causing a week's notice to be given of the purchase of bonds by the treasury; by Mr. Hurd, supplemental to an act to establish regulations as to imported goods in bond, with duties paid; by Mr. Geddes, proposing a constitutional amendment that no person shall be eligible to the office of President for more than two terms; by Mr. Goode, authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to secure adequate coaling stations for the use of the navy; by Mr. Martin, permitting the use of domestic materials in the construction of steam and sail vessels for foreign account; by Mr. Willits, to regulate promotions in the army, and to fix the rank of line officers; by Mr. Money, regulating the compensation of the transportation of mails by railroad; by Mr. Warner, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to transmit subsidiary silver coins through the mails as third-class matter; also establishing a bureau of mines and mining manufactures and statistics; by Mr. Coffroth, calling on the Secretary of the Interior for information as to the delay in the payment of bounties and back pay; by Mr. Ainslie, amending the Pacific Railroad acts. The Speaker laid before the House a message from the President, transmitting the report of the Secretary of State relative to Chinese immigration. The House went into committee of the whole for a three hours' talk on the Army bill, which time was occupied by the Republicans, the Democrats again refraining from debate. The amendment was adopted in committee forbidding the use of troops at the polls, and the committee rose and the House adjourned.

In the United States Senate, on the 13th inst., Mr. Slater introduced a bill forfeiting to the United States the unearned lands included in the grant made to the Oregon Central Railroad Company. The joint resolution legalizing the health ordinances of the District of Columbia was taken up and passed. The session of the day was passed in debate on the Geneva Award bill, no conclusion being reached.....In the House, Mr. Thompson submitted the conference report upon the Census bill, and, after some debate, the report was agreed to. A bill giving the widow of Maj. Gen. Curtis, of Iowa, a pension of $50 per month was passed. After debate, the Army Appropriation bill was passed by a party vote. An evening session was held for action upon pension bills, a number being passed.

Mr. Wallace introduced a bill in the Senate on the 14th inst. to define the amount and manner of the purchase of public loans to be made by the Secretary of the Treasury. A bill was offered by Mr. Maxey for the relief of certain officers and privates of the United States army. Mr. Voorhees submitted a resolution instructing the Committee on Pensions to report a bill authorizing pensions to surviving soldiers and sailors of the Mexican war. A bill to remove certain Apache Indians from one agency to another was passed. Mr. Cameron (Wis.) introduced a joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to permit members of the soldiers' reunion at Milwaukee, in June, to use artillery flags and camp equipage belonging to the Government, which was passed. The Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill was taken up. The amount appropriated is $1,166,125, an increase of $7,500 over the bill as passed by the House. The bill passed. ....In the House, the bill passed authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to dispose of a part of Fort Dodge military reservation to actual settlers, under the provisions of the Homestead laws. The House went into committee of the whole and passed the Indian Appropriation bill. Mr. Hutchins introduced a bill to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy. An evening session of the House was held for the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs. In committee of the whole, the bills for a permanent construction fund for the navy, and for an expedition to the Arctic sea were reported favorably to the House.

How England Takes Her Census.

In Great Britain a census has been taken every ten years since 1801, and the system is now one of the most perfect in existence. Until near the close of the last century there was no real method, and all previous estimations of the population of the United Kingdom were mere guess work. It seems the more strange that such should have been the fact, considering that, in the American colonies, enumerations of the population had often been made by order of the home Government. In 1790 a beginning was made in Scotland by Sir John Sinclair, who, through his personal efforts in enlisting the co-operation of all the clergymen of the Established Church, collected returns which were of great value, although necessarily incomplete. After seven years he completed his compilations, and published the results in twenty-one volumes, probably the greatest statistical work ever undertaken and carried through by one private enterprise. Under the system adopted in 1851 the system in Great Britain is now taken in one day, the 31st of March. In 1851 30,610 enumerators were appointed in England and Wales by the 2,190 district Registrars in those countries, each enumerator having a distinctly defined district assigned to him. In Scotland the thirty-two Sheriffs appointed the temporary Registrars—generally parish schoolmasters—and 8,130 enumerators. For the smaller islands the Government appointed 257 enumerators, and in Ireland the census was taken by the constabulary. Some days before the census day printed schedules were delivered at every house or tenement; in Wales these were printed in Welsh, for the benefit of the lower classes. These schedules contained questions about the name, relation to the head of the family, condition, age, sex, occupation, and birth-place of every person in Great Britain, and also to the number of deaf, dumb and blind. Measures were taken to secure accurately the names of night laborers, persons out of the country, travelers, seamen, soldiers, etc. These schedules were all filled up in the night of March 30-31, and were taken up at an early hour on March 31, the collector filling up the parts that had been left blank through their negligence or inability. All unoccupied houses and buildings in course of construction were also noted. The floating population—persons who spent the night in boats and barges, in barns, sheds, etc., were required to be estimated as nearly as possible. The enumerators were allowed one week to make their returns in, all transcribed, and the summaries and estimates completed to detailed instructions. The district Registrars had to complete their revision of the returns of their subordinates in a fortnight, paying particular attention to nine specially defined points. These revised returns were again revised by the Superintendent Registrars, and then transmitted to the Census Office. The census was the most successful, in quickness and accuracy, accomplished in any country up to that time, and the same system has been pursued, with little variation, ever since. The digestion of the census reports by the central authorities is conducted most thoroughly, and the compilations are of the greatest value to statisticians and economists. The British system served as a model for many other countries, where the census is now taken in one day by means of printed schedules.

Something About "Roots and Yarbs."

The gathering of roots and herbs for medicinal purposes gives employment to many persons in rural districts throughout the country. A Cincinnati reporter lately "interviewed" an old herb-collector, and the following is a portion of the man's account of his business, with therapeutical observations interlarded:

"Yaller root, or golden seal, is worth 7 cents a pound. It is used fur makin' washes fur sore eyes an' mouth. Burwane root is used in makin' ager medicine; it's hard to git, and brings 8 cents a pound. Butternut bark brings as high as 3 and 4 cents; that's what yer physickin' pills is made of; jist bile it down till it gits thick, like a paste, and then roll it into yer pills; it is also used for dyeing purposes. Hoarhound is used in makin' cough sirup; it brings 8 cents a pound, although it is plentiful; some places it grows so thick yer can mow it with a scythe. Another herb is lobelia, and I git 10 cents a pound fur it, but the price is falling. If yer ever want to git rid of what's inside of yer, jist make a tea of lobelia leaves, and I'll bet my team of hosses out there it'll accommodate yer. I brought in a good many Indian turnips this fall, and got 8 cents a pound fur 'em. They are used in cough medicines. Silkweed-root is used in ager medicine, but it is scarce in my part of the country—it is worth 10 cents a pound. Pennyroyal and peppermint brings 10 cents a pound, but when dry it takes a heap to make a pound. There are a good many kinds of bark used. There's white-oak bark, best thing in the world to check the bowels, where it is made into a sirup. Yellow-poplar bark, used with wild-cherry bark, prickly ash, dogwood bark and wahhoo, is good for the consumption. Slippery-elm bark is ground up and used for poultices; good to take out fever; it's worth 10 cents a pound. Then there's elder bark; take it, beeswax, mutton taller and a leetle resin, and it makes the best kind of a salve for fresh cuts. Boneset is an herb that grows about three feet high, with leaves of a milky color; it generally grows in old pastures; it is used for colds, and is worth 6 cents a pound. Old field balsam looks a good deal like boneset, only it don't grow so high; it is used for the same purpose. I've sold lots of catnip to these druggists, but what it is used for, more than ter nourish babies with, I don't know. I sell these fellows here all sorts of roots and herbs, even to mullin and plantain leaves, which they make salve out of. Why, even these old gympsum weeds bring 3 cents a pound, and even sunflower seeds. Why, a couple of years ago I sold two bushels of sunflower seeds fur $21. They buy pumpkin and watermelon seeds, also, ter make kidney medicine out of."

THE VIGILANTS OF 1856.

How San Francisco Was Purged of Its Lawless Elements a Quarter of a Century Ago.

[From the New York Herald.]

The famous episode in the early history of California, which excited the attention of the civilized world in 1856, has become dimmed in general recollection by stupendous intervening events, although perfectly well remembered in California itself. The only precise knowledge of it possessed by the new generation is derived from Gen. Sherman, who, in his "Memoirs," gives a lively, but one-sided and hostile, sketch of its history.

Gen. Sherman was, at the time, a banker in San Francisco. Some time before the creation of the Vigilance Committee he had been appointed Major General of the State militia, but had not accepted and qualified. On the outbreak of the disturbances he was persuaded by the Governor to take the office, and he entered with characteristic dash and zeal upon the task of suppressing the "Vigilants." As the movement was outside the law, it was the duty of the State Government to suppress it, and it was for Gen. Sherman, as commander of the militia, to devise the plans. But he had no success, and threw up his commission in disgust. He applied to Commodore Farragut, then stationed at San Francisco, for a ship, but was refused. He applied to Gen. Wool, then commanding the United States troops in California, for arms. He asserts in the "Memoirs" that they were promised, and that Gen. Wool afterward denied his promise, and he is pretty severely handled in the "Memoirs" in consequence. When that alleged promise was violated, Sherman found that he was powerless, since all the arms on the coast were in possession either of the Vigilants or Gen. Wool. Thereupon Sherman resigned his commission and went back to his bank. An application was afterward made by the Governor to President Pierce for Federal assistance, which was refused. The best public opinion was so strongly on the side of the Vigilants that it was deemed unwise to interfere.

The state of affairs was much worse then than it is now. One Casey had been exposed in the Bulletin as a graduate of Sing Sing prison. On the same day he shot King, the editor, in the street before the latter could draw his pistol. This was the culmination of an excitement which had been growing for weeks. Casey, after the shooting, went and surrendered himself to the Sheriff, a member of the ballot-stuffing gang, who was his friend. The next day after King's funeral, the Vigilants went to the prison, seized Casey, tried him by their secret tribunal, convicted and sentenced him, and, on the following day, hanged him and another murderer, Cora, in front of the Vigilants' headquarters. These swift measures struck terror into the corrupt ring, and the Vigilants kept control for the ensuing three months, until they had accomplished their work, in the course of which they hanged four miscreants and banished about twenty. The most remarkable instance of their defiant and relentless energy was their arrest of the Chief Justice of the State, for stabbing one of their constables, and they would have hanged him if the constable had died of his wound. The friends of Terry, the Chief Justice, applied to the United States Judge for a habeas corpus, which he found a pretext for refusing. They afterward procured a habeas from a State Judge, which put the Vigilants in a dilemma. But their wits were equal to the occasion. Before the officer could approach to serve the writ, they had spirited away the Chief Justice, and then opened their doors and told the officer to satisfy himself that they were detaining nobody in custody. When they had done their work, they resigned, amid a festive celebration. Although they were technical murderers, no attempt was made to punish them, for no jury could have been found to bring in a verdict of guilty. For the ensuing twenty years San Francisco was one of the best-governed cities in the United States.

Sealing Letters.

A Dutch journal gives the following information about the different methods which have been used in sealing letters:

For a long period ordinary beeswax was the only material employed. Toward the middle of the sixteenth century this was replaced by sealing-wax, introduced from India. By degrees this came into general use.

The oldest book in which there is mention of sealing-wax is a treatise of one Garsias de Orta on Aromatics and Simples, published in 1563; and the first letter known to have been sealed with wax is said to have been written to Frederick Count Palatine, by a French gentleman, sent on a mission to the Court of Weimar.

Wafers made their appearance somewhere about the same time. Adhesive envelopes were invented and first used in England about 1848. It seems very strange that so simple a device was not thought of before.

By slow degrees the most conservative abandoned sealing-wax and wafers; but they were long retained in those strongholds of conservatism, the English Government offices. Sealing-wax-makers' occupation is now nearly gone.

What Old Men Have Done.

The Emperor William, of Germany, now by far the oldest sovereign in Europe, certainly deserves the celebration which his birthday has just received. For a man who was born before the close of the last century, who fought at Waterloo, bore all the fatigues of government for years before his coronation in 1861, and so lately received a severe wound from an assassin's bullet, to be still hale and active is a phenomenon worth noting. It is not, however, without a parallel. His famous predecessor, Frederick the Great, was on horseback for hours daily when over 70, and would probably have lived at least ten years longer, but for his imprudent exposure to drenching rain at a Silesian review. The Russian Marshal, Kamenskoi, was past 80 when he faced Napoleon on the Polish frontier in 1807. The Hindoo Sultan, Hyder Ali, when close upon 90, marched across the whole breadth of Central India, and defeated two British armies in succession. Blucher's hair was snow white when the French cuirassiers rode over him at Ligny; and Count von Moltke, who planned the campaign of 1870, and faced its fatigues better than many a younger man, is almost as old as his master.

ALL SORTS.

GEN. SPINNER is studying up the history of Florida.

IN New Orleans there are 4,500 buildings without occupants.

IT is said that in the Welsh language an infidel book does not exist.

RICHARD WAGNER has written a paper against vivisection. He takes occasion also to favor vegetarianism.

GEN. LEW WALLACE, Governor of New Mexico, is writing a novel, the scene of which is laid in Damascus.

THE late Mrs. Mary Chapman, an actress well known on the Pacific coast, was the mother of twenty children.

IT is said that the "electric middlings-purifier" for flouring mills, invented by two Yale students, is an entire success.

UNHAPPY King Cetywayo is confined in a narrow cell, and only permitted to walk on the ramparts accompanied by a sentinel.

A WOMAN at Jamestown, N. Y., rendered insane through religion, pulled a large portion of her brother's beard out by the roots.

IN some parts of Kansas farmers have sown flax and spring wheat in the same field. The profit is said to be greater than when either crop is sown alone.

FORTY years ago a stock of liquors, kept for sale in Swanzey, N. H., was bought and burned by the citizens, and since then none has been publicly sold in town

PRINCETON College is to have a new telescope, costing $25,000. The money to purchase the instrument has been subscribed by the friends of the college, Robert Bonner heading the list with $10,000.

THE sexton of one of the churches in Owensburg, Pa., abominates all such as will use the weed in the house of worship, and never fails to ostentatiously put a cuspidor within convenient reach when his watchful eye observes that the spitting has once begun or is about to begin.

THE Legislature of Georgia has passed a law requiring dentists to register with the Clerk of the Superior Court their names, when they began to practice, and how long they have practiced in the county. Those who have begun to practice since 1874 are required to show diplomas.

A WOMAN has been surprising Parisians by the performances of four birds, trained to such a degree that they select from a series of cards replies to almost any question from the audience. "Five crowned heads" have been pleased to be pleased with the feathered performers.

WILLIAM SMOAK, of Orangeburg county, S. C., has ten living children, 104 grandchildren, 391 great-grandchildren, and seventy great-great-grandchildren, making in all 575 living descendants, beside 116 dead. He boasts that there is not a drunkard among them.

A LETTER wandered into the dead-letter office the other day, on which the writer, a lady, had placed a 2-cent stamp and half of another of the same denomination. Her arithmetic was correct, but her method of making change had not proved acceptable to the postoffice authorities.

CARDINAL NEWMAN has so far recovered from his recent accident as to sit up. A rib that is over 80 years old is, of course, broken without any reasonable hope of its ever joining again; but his Eminence, though unable to stand, and therefore to say mass, has now the consolation of reading and writing almost as incessantly as before.

JAMES H. SHAFER, of Bellefontaine Ohio, had a wife whom his brother, George M. Shafer, loved. The upshot was a transfer of the woman by means of a divorce, and James received in payment a mortgage for $1,500 on George's property. This bargain, made several years ago, was kept a secret until lately; but a quarrel over the mortgage has carried the matter into court.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
BEEVES	$9 00	@10 [illegible]
HOGS	4 60	@ 5 00
COTTON	12	@ 13
FLOUR—Superfine	$3 [illegible]	@ 4 70
WHEAT—No. 2	1 29	@ 1 35
CORN—Western Mixed	53	@ 54
OATS—Mixed	40	@ 48
RYE—Western	85	@ 90
PORK—Mess	10 60	@11 12½
LARD	7⅛@	7⅜
CHICAGO.
BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	4 70	@ 5 00
Cows and Heifers	2 60	@ 4 00
Medium to Fair	4 30	@ 4 60
HOGS	3 80	@ 4 70
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter Ex	6 00	@ 7 00
Good to Choice Spring Ex	5 00	@ 5 75
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 11	@ 1 12
No. 3 Spring	99	@ 1 00
CORN—No. 2	36	@ 36
OATS—No. 2	28	@ 29
RYE—No. 2	72	@ 73
BARLEY—No. 2	74	@ 75
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	26	@ 28
EGGS—Fresh	8½@	9
PORK—Mess	10 00	@10 20
LARD	6⅝@	7
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—No. 1	1 11	@ 1 15
No. 2	1 08	@ 1 10
CORN—No. 2	36	@ 36
OATS—No. 2	29	@ 30
RYE—No. 1	70	@ 71
BARLEY—No. 2	61	@ 62
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red Fall	1 15	@ 1 16
CORN—Mixed	34	@ 35
OATS—No. 2	31	@ 32
RYE	70	@ 71
PORK—Mess	10 25	@10 50
LARD	6⅞@	7
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT	1 17	@ 1 18
CORN	40	@ 41
OATS	35	@ 38
RYE	78	@ 80
PORK—Mess	10 25	@10 50
LARD	6⅞@	7
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—Amber Michigan	1 22	@ 1 25
No. 2 Red	1 21	@ 1 21½
CORN—No. 2	39	@ 40
OATS—No. 2	33	@ 34
DETROIT.
FLOUR—Choice	6 75	@ 7 00
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 18	@ 1 19
No. 1 Amber	1 17	@ 1 18
CORN—No. 1	42	@ 45
OATS—Mixed	33	@ 36
BARLEY (per cental)	1 20	@ 1 65
PORK—Mess	12 00	@12 50
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	1 16	@ 1 18
CORN	35	@ 37
OATS	32	@ 34
PORK—Clear	12 75	@13 00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
CATTLE—Best	5 00	@ 5 25
Fair	4 00	@ 4 75
Common	3 10	@ 3 65
HOGS	4 50	@ 5 00
SHEEP	4 00	@ 6 00

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED,
JOS. J. LOWRY } Editors

Dr. Andrews heard a burglar in his house, in Philadelphia, and had no pistol to shoot him with, so he inflated a paper bag which happened to be at hand, dashed upon the thief with a shout, and exploded the bag, which made a noise like a pistol shot. The man sank to the floor in abject terror and begged for mercy.

Aaron McKenney, who died recently in Maine, aged 102, was a remarkable example of vigorous health and physical activity. Not long before his death he knocked down a man who had suggested the appointment of a guardian for him, which brought on his first lawsuit, wherein he acted as his own counsel. He had never been out of his native town, never tasted liquor or been on a railroad train, and never sent or received a telegram.

The British soldier can at last rejoice in the fact that pipe-clay has been abolished in the army. Hereafter white are to give place to brown belts, and the soldier's lungs are to be no longer clogged with dust and his heart to be no longer worried, after a long day's march, with cleaning material which is only to be immediately soiled again. Another reform is that no longer discharged soldiers will be seen all over England in ragged uniforms. In future, soldiers, on leaving the army, are to receive suits of plain clothes.

James Lynde, a rebel deserter, who afterward enlisted in the Fourth Michigan Cavalry, is said by the Detroit Free Press to have stolen Jeff Davis' horse and money after the rebel leader's capture. Lynde would never tell what he found in the saddle-bags, but his fellow-troopers are sure that it must have been gold, for after the regiment was mustered out he disappeared for a time, turning up six months later in Detroit with thousands of dollars in his possession, much of which was left after he had taken a year's trip in Europe.

A lady correspondent says she recently saw a new arrangement for wiping dishes that saves half the risk, while the dishes look nicer and brighter. The only outlay required is a half-bushel basket. Set this either in a sink or in a pan. Wash the dishes as usual, and put them in a tin pan or pail. Pour boiling water over them, rinse thoroughly, then set them up edgeways in the basket, so as to drain. The heat will dry them perfectly, and not a streak or particle of lint is to be seen. Five minutes will leave them perfectly dry. No one who tries it once will be likely to go back to the old way.

At a recent meeting of the Southern Historical Society, in Louisiana, an apron made in the semblance of a Confederate flag was shown, and its history told. In the spring of 1863 the Eleventh Virginia Cavalry passed through Hagerstown, weary, discouraged, and pursued by Federal troops. A young girl stood in a doorway, wearing this apron. The soldiers cheered enthusiastically, and the Colonel asked her to give him a piece of it for a memento. "You may have it all," she said, and it was carried with the regimental colors into a battle on the following day. The youthful soldier who bore it was mortally wounded, but he saved the apron from capture by hiding it in his bosom.

A singular case of a lost heir came lately before the Court of Chancery, England. In 1838 Isaac, eldest son of John Atkinson, a Cumberland gentleman of property, disappeared. There was no suspicion of his death, but no news ever reached his family about him. It now appears that about the same time one James Anderson started in business in Rome, Italy. He had a Cumberland accent, and, like Isaac, was a fine wrestler. This man was the lost heir. By the death of his father, in 1839, Isaac became heir, but, it is stated, never knew this till 1876. His claim was then nearly barred, nor did he take steps to assert it. He died in 1877, and so satisfied are his family of his identity that they have agreed on a compromise with his children.

According to the German imperial statistics for 1878 of births, deaths and marriages, just published, the estimated population being 44,200,000, the marriages numbered 340,000, the births, 1,785,000, and the deaths, 1,228,000. In France the number of births was 936,000, and of deaths 839,000, so that the births exceeded the deaths by 87,000. In Germany the excess of births was 557,000—that is to say, that while in France the population increased in 1878 at the rate of 0.27 per cent., it increased in Germany at the rate of 1.25 per cent. The number of marriages in Germany has greatly fallen off since 1872, when 423,900 were registered.

Kitty Kildey was ill, at Stony Creek valley, Pa., and the country doctors failed to cure her or to find out what ailed her. John McClain had the reputation in that region of superstition of being a successful antagonist of witches. He examined Kitty as an expert, and declared that she had been put under a spell by Mrs. Boyer, an old German neighbor. He gave the girl some medicine, and she immediately recovered. But it was not long before she was similarly ill again, and this time McClain said that the effectual way of relieving her was to kill Mrs. Boyer, which he undertook to do by filling a bottle with a decoction of herbs and breaking it with a hammer. Mrs. Boyer did not die, however, and has had McClain and the Kildeys prosecuted for slander.

Peter A. Nason broke his promise to marry a girl, and circulated stories against her. For this offense, he was told by her brother that he must give up his prosperous business and leave the town. He refused, and a party of women visited him at his store, threatening him with tar and feathers if he did not quit. Still he persisted in living where he liked. Finally a body of men, including the Selectmen, Justice of the Peace, and a Deputy Sheriff, waited upon him, while a mob blew horns in the street, and informed him that he must submit to banishment, or suffer very unpleasant consequences. He obeyed this time, and was pelted with eggs on his way to the railroad station. This did not happen in a wild border town of the West, but in Georgetown, a village of enlightened and law-abiding Massachusetts.

The convention which nominated Lincoln for President in 1861 sat three days, the first two being spent in preliminary skirmishing. The balloting took place on the third day, the contest from the start being between Messrs. Seward and Lincoln, though several other persons were placed in nomination. On the first ballot there were cast 465 votes, necessary to a choice 233, of which Seward received 173½, Lincoln 102, and the rest were scattering. On the second ballot Seward had 184½ votes and Lincoln 181; third ballot, Seward 180 and Lincoln 231½. These ballots were taken amid tremendous confusion. The moment the last vote was announced, D. K. Cartter, a delegate from Ohio, announced the change of four votes from Mr. Chase to Mr. Lincoln. This nominated Lincoln, and was followed by a whirlwind of excitement, amid which State after State changed its votes, and when some degree of order was restored Mr. Evarts, of New York, who had been Seward's spokesman from the beginning, moved, in graceful phrase but melancholy tones, that the nomination be made unanimous.

The Mineral Wealth of Montana.

A very interesting address was delivered before the Bullion Club by Mr. R. B. Harrison, of the United States Assay Office at Helena, Mont. His subject was Montana and its mineral resources. After speaking of the great agricultural resources of the country and its climatic advantages, he entered into a detailed account of the mining industries, a brief review of which we give. Montana stands third in the total amount of gold and silver produced, and next to California in the amount of gold. The first gold was obtained by means of placer-mining, and the results from some of the "gulches" were almost fabulous. Alder gulch alone is said by good judges to have produced to date since its discovery in May, 1863, over $70,000,000, and is now producing from $300,000 to $600,000 every year. From one pan in Confederate gulch the yield from the gravel was $1,000 gold. Montana has about 500 gold-producing gulches which have all been successfully worked since their discovery, and have added millions of dollars in wealth to the world's treasury. The total amount of gold and silver produced in the Territory from 1863 to 1880 was $159,017,000. The receipts of gold at the Assay Office, Helena, for 1879 were $511,194,04, the larger part being from gold-dust, and only about one-quarter of the production was handled at the Assay Office. A nugget worth $3,200 was picked up in a tributary of Snow-shoe gulch, and one worth $2,073 in Nelson gulch. Quartz mining has not been prosecuted with the same diligence, but some of the mines that have been faithfully worked have yielded well. The Union lode has turned out since its discovery in 1864 about $3,000,000. The famous Penobscot brick, valued at $54,262,62, was the result of thirty days' run of the Penobscot mine in 1878, and from the shaft of this mine, only sixty feet deep, $125,000 in gold was taken out in less then six months. Silver quartz veins were discovered at Phillipsburg, Deer Lodge county, in 1865, and silver quartz mining has now taken a prominent place. The Hecla Consolidated Mining Company is now producing annually about $500,000 of silver-lead and silver-copper bullion, and the property of the company has just been sold for $1,500,000. In the present year the silver-bullion produce of the Territory will exceed the gold-bullion product.

Mr. Harrison had a fine collection of ore samples, and among them a nugget of gold from Deadwood gulch worth over $900.—New York World.

Washington, Vt., has twelve men whose united ages are 1,056 years, viz.: Deacon Samuel P. Bailey, 100 years; Capt. Charles French, 95; Charles Wright, 93; Capt. Leonard Bradford, 89; Jabez Fisher, 88; Amasa Fairbanks, 88; Caleb Carr, 88; Harvey Spaulding, 84; Ziba Crane, 84; William Harnden, 82; Joel Severance, 82; Amos Russell, 83. Average age, 88 years.

The New York Commercial Advertiser states that in one of the largest savings banks in that city, which has nearly 16,000 depositors, the largest proportion are domestic servants, and the smallest are artists

SPARKS AND CLYMER.

A Lively Scene in Congress.

The House was in committee of the whole on the Army Appropriation bill. The pending amendment, providing that no contract Surgeons shall be employed until all commissioned Surgeons (except those put on duty in soldiers' homes or detailed for the purpose of preparing the medical and surgical history of the war, or upon examining boards) shall have been detailed to duty with troops, was rejected, 88 to 97.

Mr. Sparks, of Illinois, said he would demand a vote in the House.

Mr. Marsh stated he would object.

The Chair stated that the amendment, having been rejected, could not be reported to the House, and no vote could be had upon it unless it was permitted by the gentleman in charge of the bill [Clymer].

Mr. Clymer, of Pennsylvania, stated that yesterday afternoon, when there was not a quorum present, he had stated that he would allow a vote in the House. He would not now decide whether he would do so or not.

Mr. Sparks said, the amendment having come from the Committee on Military Affairs, he thought the gentleman from Pennsylvania would yield to allow a vote upon it.

Mr. Clymer—I have received no such request from that committee, but, when submitted to me, I will consider it.

Mr. Sparks, amid a great deal of confusion, intimated that Clymer had been bulldozed and cajoled, and said, excitedly, "I declare that it comes from that committee, and I am authorized to demand that thing, and the gentleman knows it and cannot dodge it."

Mr. Clymer—I do not propose that the gentleman shall come here and assert that which does not exist. There has been no request to me for the yeas and nays in the House.

Mr. Sparks (advancing in a threatening manner toward Clymer)—If the gentleman from Pennsylvania insinuates that that does not come from the Committee on Military Affairs, he lies, and that is all there is about it! [Great confusion and excitement, which the Chair tried in vain to allay.]

Mr. Clymer—Oh, you cannot insult me!

After quiet had been somewhat restored, Mr. Conger demanded that the objectionable words should be read at the Clerk's desk, and, this having been done, the committee rose and reported the words to the House.

On motion of Mr. Atkins Mr. Sparks was permitted to make an explanation. He said that he had never meant to state to the House that he had been authorized by the Military Committee to do anything except to offer an amendment and press it to conclusion. He did not know that the language which he had used made that fact as explicit as he might have wished. He had been at that moment laboring under considerable excitement, and he had understood the gentleman from Pennsylvania to say that he (Sparks) had not been warranted in his action by his committee. Understanding that the gentleman had insinuated that he was trying to deceive and cheat the House and falsify the acts of the committee, he had used the language which he had. Since he had been a member of Congress he had tried upon all occasions to be courteous to the honorable members around him. If he had not, it was the head that had failed, not the heart. He could not bear an insult without resenting it. He would scorn to insult another man falsely. A brave man would not insult his fellow-man falsely, and if he did it would be his duty to apologize. If he had mistaken the gentleman from Pennsylvania, if that gentleman had not insinuated that he was trying to cheat the House or misrepresent the committee, the language was unwarranted, and he would like to recall it. But if the gentleman had so insinuated no power under the sun could get him to withdraw it. If the gentleman had charged him with gross fraud he would not apologize for his remarks, if not he apologized to the gentleman, to the House, and to everybody on earth.

Mr. Clymer said that his language had been correctly reported by the official reporters, and, when read in a cool moment, certainly no such construction as the gentleman from Illinois imagined it capable of could be put upon it. He had intended only to say that no request had come to him from the Committee on Military Affairs that he should permit a vote on the proposition in the House. He had not pretended to say that the gentleman from Illinois was misrepresenting his committee. Here he left the matter. "I felt," he said, "that, when the excitement of the moment was over, when the gentleman had read what I really had said, he would do what he has done, come here as a man of honor, a gentleman, as he is, as a friend of mine, as he has always been heretofore in this House, and make that reparation which was demanded under the circumstances. He has done it, and I am content."

Learn a Trade.

I never look at my old steel composing rule, says a prominent writer, that I do not bless myself that while my strength lasts I am not at the mercy of the world. If my pen is not wanted, I can go back to the type case and be sure to find work, for I learned the printer's trade thoroughly—newspaper work, job work, book work and press work. I am glad to have a good trade. It is a rock upon which the possessor can stand firmly. There is health and vigor for both body and mind in an honest trade. It is the strongest and surest part of a self-made man. Go from the academy to the printing office, or the farm—for, to be sure, good farming is a trade, and a grand one at that. Lay thus a sure foundation, and after that branch off into whatever profession you please.

You have heard, perhaps, of the clerk who had faithfully served Stephen Girard from boyhood to manhood. On the 21st anniversary of his birthday he went to his master and told him his time was up, and he certainly expected promotion in the merchant's service. But Stephen Girard said to him:

"Very well; now go and learn a trade."

"What trade, sir?"

"Good barrels and butts must be in demand while you live. Go and learn the cooper's trade, and when you have made a perfect barrel bring it to me."

The young man went away, and in time brought his old master a splendid barrel of his own make.

"Now, sir, I want you in my counting-room; but henceforth you will not be dependent upon the whim of Stephen Girard. Let what will come, you have a good trade always in reserve."

The young man saw the wisdom and understood.

Years ago, when the middle-aged of to-day were boys, Horace Greeley wrote: "It is a great source of consolation to us that, when the public shall be tired of us as editor, we can make a satisfactory livelihood setting type or farming; so that, while our strength lasts, 10,000 blockheads, taking offense at some article they do not understand, could not drive us into the poor-house."

Cars in the Arabian Desert.

The world-renowned correspondent of the London Times, Mr. Russell, gives an interesting sketch of a run through a portion of the Arabian desert by a new railway route. We subjoin an extract: "Blanched bones of camels lie in dull whiteness on the sand. Not a bird fans the hot, silent air. Stones and sand, and sand and stones, are all and everywhere stretched out dead and hard under the blue sky and the relentless sun. The rail which conveys us through this desolation is single, and the line is said by English engineers to be very badly made, as the French engineers who laid it out took it over a ridge 1,100 feet high, instead of following a low level near the river, which would have greatly diminished expenses and cost of working. The water and coal of the engines are to be carried by the trains out to the various stations. So they are like commissariat animals in a barren country, which have to carry their own fodder and diminish the public burdens.

"The stations are helpless, hot, oven-like erections, generally eked out by old, forlorn wooden huts, within the shade of which may be seen an undoubted Englishman, smoking his pipe. At the twelfth station we coaled; the train ended in the desert here; but at long intervals, for miles in advance, we could see the encampments of Arabs, who for the time had become navvies, and were engaged in picking and burrowing, and blasting through the rocks a way for the iron horse. In a long, wooden shed—the center of a group of tents—were laid out long tables, covered with hot joints of recondite animals, papier mache chickens, and lignite vegetables. This was our dinner—it had come all the way from Cairo—so had the wine, beer and spirits. If manna and quails were at all eatable, we had envied the food of the Israelites."

Learning to Speak a Language.

Those who would learn a foreign language should associate with those who speak it. The reasonableness of this suggestion lies in the fact that it bids the learner follow the method of nature, which trains the ear to understand before it educates the tongue to speak a language.

Hammerton, the artist and essayist, tells how he once received excellent advice as to learning French from Mohl, the distinguished Orientalist. Calling at Mohl's rooms, the artist carried on the conversation in English, as he spoke French imperfectly. The Orientalist, being a master of French, as he was of several European languages, asked his guest if he was making progress in French.

Receiving an evasive answer, he asked Hammerton if he understood thoroughly French conversations when he overheard them.

"Yes, every word," replied the artist.

"Very well," answered Mohl, "then rely upon it you will soon speak fluently yourself. For, when the ear misses nothing, the tongue is sure to follow, but it always lags a little behind. For the present, you should listen attentively.

When the ear can only catch about one word in three of a conversation in a foreign language, the tongue will not speak correctly more than word in five. But it soon speaks fluently and correctly after the ear has learned to understand every word spoken by natives.

A Hebrew Tradition.

The following beautiful tradition about Moses has been handed down to posterity: He fed the flock of his father-in-law. One day, while he was contemplating his flock in the desert, he saw a lamb leave the herd and run further and further away. The tender shepherd not only followed it with his eyes, but went after it. The lamb quickened its steps, hopped over hills, sprang over ditches, hastened through the valley and plain; the shepherd unweariedly followed its track. At last the lamb stopped by a spring, at which it eagerly quenched its thirst. Moses hastened to the spot, looked sadly at the drinking lamb, and said: "It was thirst, then, my poor beast, which tormented thee, and drove thee from me, and I did not understand; and now thou art faint and weary from the long, hard way, thy powers are exhausted; how, then, couldst thou return alone to thy comrades?" After the lamb had quenched its thirst and seemed undecided what road to take, Moses lifted it to his shoulder, and, bending under the heavy burden, strode back to the flock. Then he heard the voice of God calling to him, saying: "Thou has at tender heart for my creatures; thou art a kind, gentle shepherd to the flocks of man; thou art now called to feed the flocks of God."—Jewish Messenger.

The Audiphone in the Wisconsin Institute for the Deaf and Dumb.

About six weeks ago Mr. R. S. Rhodes, of Chicago, the inventor of the audiphone, organized an audiphone class of eleven in the Wisconsin Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, at Delavan, Wis. The following is an extract from a letter bearing date of March 24, written by Mr. W. H. DeMott, the Superintendent of the Institute, to Mr. Rhodes. Other members of the class made quite as rapid progress as the pupil named in the extract:

> John Dahl, of Pigeon Falls, Wis., born deaf, in school four years, and taught heretofore entirely by signs. With the audiphone hears sounds in tone of ordinary conversation. Has learned to distinguish almost all sounds. Can understand and repeat a number of sentences, as "Give me a book;" "Walk to the door;" "I will go home;" "I can hear you," etc.

A firm in Bordentown, N. J., has contracted for the labor of 100 State-prison convicts, at 50 cents a day, to starch and iron shirts.

FARM NOTES.

One of the most useful implements that can be used on the farm is the field-roller. It crushes the clods, levels and smooths the ground, and presses the earth firmly upon and around the seed, which causes them to sprout and grow much earlier. Of course the ground should be dry when the roller is used. In very dry weather the good rolling of the ground will frequently cause seed to grow when otherwise they would not have germinated.

It is said that an extensive breeder of Angora goats in Texas considers it a much more profitable business than sheep-raising. This persons owns 1,119 goats. It costs $1,000 per annum to provide for them, and his profits last year he estimates at $2,000. The meat is claimed to be better than mutton, and each goat yields about two pounds of hair annually, which is worth 55 cents per pound in this country and 75 cents in England.

Prof. L. B. Arnold advises skimming the milk as soon as sourness is perceptible, and to churn at sixty degrees instead of seventy, before the cream gets sour. When the butter comes in granules, enough cold water or brine should be put in to reduce the mass to about fifty-five degrees, when, after a little slow churning, the granules will become hard and distinct, and the butter be in a condition for washing out all the buttermilk. The salt should then be worked in with as little labor as possible, and after standing awhile it will be ready to pack.

Some time ago a number of Canadian agriculturists met in convention and adopted for themselves the following creed: We believe the soil lives to eat as well as the owner, and ought, therefore, to be well manured. We believe in going to the bottom of things, and therefore deep plowing, and enough of it. All the better if it be a sub-soil plow. We believe in large crops which leave the land better than they found it, making both the farm and the farmer rich at once. We believe that every farm should own a good farmer. We believe that the fertilizer of any soil is a spirit of industry, enterprise and intelligence; without these, lime, gypsum and guano would be of little use.

After an orchard begins to bear, the Rural World says it is a good idea to pasture it with calves, hogs and sheep. They pick up all the decayed fruit containing injurious insects, and thus prevent a rapid increase of these pests. Their droppings help to enrich the ground, and orchards need fertilizing as other crops. Few realize the necessity of manuring orchards. When once planted, the trees are to remain on the same soil thirty or forty years at least. They in a few years exhaust the food in the soil that they are most fond of, and then they will cease to be productive and thrifty unless properly fed. It requires skill and judgment to properly care for an orchard.

It may be useful to some enterprising American gardeners to know that the following experiment has been tried successfully in England: Beds extending across the garden four feet wide were planted in spring with strawberries. On the outer sides of these beds three rows of early potatoes were planted. The potatoes were dug about the end of June, the ground cleared and raked level, where the strawberry runners could establish themselves and form a new row. The next spring rows of potatoes were planted, one row farther off, or on the borders of the runners. The gardener thus made a traveling strawberry bed, which became wider each year without planting. The third year the first plants were exhausted and were dug up, the beds thus moving slowly sidewise.

A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer says: "On good ground I have raised from 900 to 1,200 pounds to the acre of good broom corn, and if the season is favorable will give you about fifty to seventy-five bushels of good seed to the acre. It is good for stock, hogs, sheep and young cattle. It is best to tramp it with horses and run it through a windmill. I have known it ground with corn, and it makes good feed in this way; have known it to bring from 30 to 40 cents a bushel for feeding milch cows, and have known it to be used for making whisky. It makes a very fiery whisky. If left to get ripe on the stalk, the brush is red, and does not sell for nearly as much, and that is the reason there is not more of it left to ripen, and use the seed for feed; have known it fed to sheep all winter, and in the spring the sheep looked well; have kept stock-hogs on it all winter, without giving them any corn.

Mr. Ainsworth, as reported in the American Cultivator, says: "There are usually a few weeks during each season when butter is so plenty in our small markets that it is almost impossible to sell it at any fair price, when it may be packed in earthen jars, and be kept in good condition for family use. Take the butter in as good condition as I have described; press it into the jar compactly in a layer three inches in thickness; cut a piece of cloth of the size of the jar, wet it in strong brine, spreading it over this first layer; repeat the process with each layer until you have reached the top or within three-quarters of an inch. Now make a strong brine, to which add three table-spoonfuls of granulated sugar, one teaspoonful of powdered saltpeter; set in a cool, dry cellar; keep it covered with the brine until wanted, and it will cut out smoothly. But if butter is to be kept for a better market, I would recommend putting it up in any sweet package or jar, direct from the churn in the granulated form, covering it with strong brine, and when wanted take it up and work it over like new butter."

Enough for Condemnation.

On one occasion, while Lieut. R. was conducting a pack train from one post to another in Arizona, he was attacked by Indians while moving along the side of a very steep and rocky mountain. The Indians were above the command, and the attack consisted in rolling large rocks down at the troops. Lieut. R. gave his horse to an Irishman to hold while he was engaged deploying the men to dislodge the Indians. During the affair the horse was struck by one of the rocks, knocked off the trail and hurled down the side of the mountain. The Irishman had hold of the bridle at the time, which was broken by the sudden shock, leaving a portion of it in his hand. After the affair was over, and the command was about to resume the march, he came up to Lieut. R., saluted him, and, holding out the portion of the bridle, said: "Leftinant, I haven't yer horse, but I have enough to presint to the Quartermaster for condemnation, sur!"—Harper's Monthly.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

Salem Dessert.—Peel and slice apples, stew till done, then run through a colander, sweeten and season. Beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth, and just before serving whip them into a quart of the stewed apples. Eat with cream and call for more.

Fried Bread Pudding.—Take a stale loaf of baker's bread; cut in slices; beat up six eggs, stir them into a quart of milk; dip the slices into the milk and eggs; lay them upon a dish, one upon another, and let them stand about an hour; then fry them to a light brown in a little butter; serve with pudding sauce or sirup.

Sauer-kraut.—Take a nice piece of pork, two pounds to one quart of sauer-kraut; wash the pork and cover with boiling water, and boil one hour; then take your sauer-kraut, press all the water from it, and place it around the pork, and boil another hour. When done, serve the pork and the cabbage in separate dishes, with mashed potatoes.

Moonshine.—This is no relative to the "honey-moon," notwithstanding it is very nice. Beat the white of two eggs very light. Sweeten to taste. Then slice in very thin pieces one banana, and stir into it; or, if you choose, take two oranges, or any kind of fruit will do. Do not make it until just before going to table. It is a handsome dish and delicious for tea.

Graham Bread.—Three cups graham flour, one and a half cups Indian meal, half cup molasses, one teaspoonful of soda, two of cream of tartar, salt to taste. Wet up with milk or water to the consistency of thick batter. Bake in a covered tin three hours in a moderate oven, or steam, if preferred, the same length of time. This is pronounced excellent by every one who tries it.

Boiled Jelly Cake.—One teacupful white powdered sugar, teacupful flour, four eggs, whites and yelks beaten separately, pinch salt; beat the yelks and sugar to a cream; add the flour and salt; then the whites beaten to a very stiff froth; mix quickly; rub and butter a large roasting-pan; bake ten or fifteen minutes, according to oven; when done spread with jelly and roll quickly.

Molasses Cookies. Two cups and one-half of hot molasses, one cup of shortening (half butter and half lard, one teaspoonful of ginger and one of cinnamon; dissolve two teaspoonfuls of saleratus in a cup of lukewarm water, and throw in as quickly as possible; add some flour and stir a few minutes, as you would soft cake, then add more flour; mix as soft as you can conveniently, and roll out.

How to Make Moss Baskets.

Very beautiful baskets for holding flowers can be made of the longer and more feathery kinds of mosses. We have made them often, and never do either garden or wild flowers look more lovely than when clustered upon a verdant border of that most delicate and beautiful material, which by proper management may be made to preserve its freshness and brilliancy for many months. We will here give directions for their manufacture. A light frame, of any shape you like, should be made with wire and covered with common pasteboard or calico, and the moss, which first should be wel picked over and cleansed from any bits of dirt or dead leaves which may be hanging about it, gathered into little tufts and sewed with a coarse needle and thread to the covering, so as to clothe it thickly with a close and compact coating, taking care that the points of the moss are all outward. A long handle, made in the same manner, should be attached to the basket, and a tin or other vessel, filled with either wet sand or water, placed within, to hold the flowers. By dipping the whole structure into water once in three or four days, its verdure and elasticity will be fully preserved, and a block of wood, about an inch thick and stained black or green, if placed under the basket, will prevent all risk of damage to the table from moisture. To make such baskets affords much pleasant, social amusement for children, who will find a constantly renewed pleasure in varying their appearance.—Floral Cabinet.

She Had Him.

"Husband," said a wife, "I think we should have a filter for our hydrant." "But that would increase our grocery bill, dear," replied the head of the family with a twinkle in the corner of his eye. "How so?" queried she. "By our system losing just so much brain food—from the water, you know," he said. "Well, you are welcome to have your part of the water unfiltered," she continued. "Aye, but I need its brain food the least of any in the family," declared he, looking at her provokingly. There was a momentary pause only, when she retorted: "I can see that you are entirely right—having no brain to feed; dear, what should you want of brain food?" He looked up at her again—this time appealingly—and it was noticed that the twinkle no longer dwelt in his eye—it had gone over to hers.

He Turned the Tables.

There is nothing like presence of mind after all. One dark, rainy night, old Dr. Botts, who lives on Van Ness avenue, San Francisco, was trudging homeward when he discovered that he was being dogged by a burly ruffian, evidently intent on robbery. They were in a lonely part of the town, and the man was just at his heels, when the Doctor, buttoning his coat up to his chin, suddenly turned back and said to his pursuer:

"Please, sir, give me a dime to buy something to eat. I don't want to get whisky, indeed I don't; haven't had anything to eat for two days."

"Great Scott!" exclaimed the footpad, repocketing his slungshot with profound disgust, "to think here I've been piping off a pauper for over a mile."

And he walked off cursing the infernal luck to blazes.

Coal oil has been discovered in large quantities in the vicinity of Lake Ainsley, Cape Breton island.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., APRIL 22, 1880

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

"NO SOLID SOUTH, NO SOLID NORTH, BUT A SOLID UNION."

Democratic County Central Committee.

OFFICERS.
Wm. L. Blair, Chairman.
Theo. Reed, Secretary.
J. J. Van Auken, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.
Wm L. Blair, Jas. A. Barns, S. S. Shutt, J. Wm. Wagner, T. F. Jordan, Guy Plumb.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEEMEN.
C. M. Merica, Butler township.
J. J. Walter, Jackson township.
T. S. Murray, Concord township.
Geo. A. Munn, Newville township.
Jacob Christoffle, Stafford township.
Geo. W. Maxwell, Wilmington township.
M. Housten, Auburn precinct.
D. Y. Husselman, Waterloo precinct.
W. J. Frederick, Keyser township.
L. D. Britton, Richland township.
J. M. Brumback, Fairfield township.
Fred. Waterman, Smithfield township.
T. H. Tomlinson, Franklin township.
D. F. Cornelius, Troy township.

It is reported in Washington that Senator McDonald of this state is soon to lead to the altar a young and handsome widow.

◆

The Fort Wayne Sentinel's attempt to make the people believe that Tilden has everything his own way in New York, will be taken for what it is worth and no more.

◆

Two full delegations from New York will demand admittance to the national democratic convention at Cincinnati, and still some papers insist that the democrats of New York are united.

◆

The democrats will continue in force the two thirds rule in the nomination of candidates for the presidency. As yet, not a single state has favored the attempt of Tilden to abolish it.

◆

Tilden's reported withdrawal proved to be untrue, as we supposed it would. We do not expect to be favored in that direction while the Tilden bureau continues to send out electioneering documents by the bag-full. The Albany (N. Y.) Argus, with six columns devoted to Tilden's interests came to hand yesterday.

◆

The majorities in favor of the adoption of the several constitutional amendments, are said to be as follows:

First amendment		17,232
Second	"	38,319
Third	"	29,024
Fourth	"	39,429
Fifth	"	44,509
Sixth	"	34,308
Ninth	"	49,990

◆

The following dispatch to the Fort Wayne Sentinel will no doubt surprise the citizens of Corunna and vicinity:

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 20.—About 10 o'clock yesterday morning at Corunna, DeKalb county, Ind., a party of twenty went to the house of Tunis Miller, whose daughter had been recently married, to give the married couple a belling. Isaac Miller, brother of the bride, went out to try to induce the men to go away, and being assaulted by John Williams, shot him dead. Miller is now in jail.

◆

The extension of the Butler and Logansport division of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific railroad from Butler to Detroit will be made without a doubt. Of the $20,000 that Adrian is required to raise, the sum of $17,000 has already been subscribed, Mr. E. L. Clark of that place having headed the list with $10,000. Mr. James F. Joy is now in England trying to lease the Grand Trunk road, which, if accomplished, will give the Wabash a continuous line from St. Joseph, Mo., to Buffalo, N. Y., and the east. DeKalb county will then be on the line of one of the largest roads in the country.

◆

THE COURIER last week lectured republicans for, as it claimed, assisting in the making of democratic nominations; and it had the bad taste to fix up a slate for the coming republican county convention.—Waterloo Press.

The slate was fixed up by republicans and we published it as a matter of news, for the benefit of republicans, knowing that the republican press of the county would think it too delicate a subject to mention! we have since learned that some of our republican friends are objecting to the name of Mr. Robbins for auditor, as that was not made a part of the arrangement. We will endeavor to keep you posted, Charlie.

◆

An exchange says: The whirligig of time brings round its revenges when the son of Abraham Lincoln and the son of Stephen A. Douglas come together, the former as president and the latter as vice-president of a meeting in Chicago to advocate the nomination of General U. S. Grant for a third term to the presidency. In 1856, when the sires of these young men made their joint canvass for the senatorship in Illinois, and in 1860, when they were opposing candidates for the presidency, Grant was a Galena tanner, and had not yet been discovered. Now he is "Duke of America," and is not averse, perhaps, to a yet higher title, and the sons of the two men who divided the country when he was forty years old are earnest advocates of his pretensions. Spiritualism cannot be true, or Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas would make the climate of Chicago too hot to hold their recreant sons.

DOMESTIC INFELICITY.

A Sensation at Auburn Junction.

Some time last fall, in the early part, there came to this place, from Cleveland, a man named George F. Ashley, accompanied by his wife. They took up their quarters at the Junction, renting a portion of a house at that point, and the man got employment in the heading factory of D. McNabb. From that time up till four or five weeks ago, they seemed to be living harmoniously enough, and to all outward appearances were free from any serious difficulties; but the traditional wolf in sheep's clothing made his appearance on the scene about one month ago, in the person of one Gus. Francis, also from Cleveland, a printer whom they had both previously known in that city. Francis obtained work in the same factory with Ashley, and since his arrival has been living in the latter's family as a sort of mutual friend, enjoying the same rights and privileges as would have been extended to a member of the household, and perhaps a trifle more, as the sequel will show. Various discords have arisen in the small family of late, which resulted last week in a storm—a racket between the husband and wife—and Mrs. Ashley packed her little saratoga Saturday afternoon and "skipped out." At this juncture Francis steps in and offers his services to Ashley, borrowing money from the latter for the ostensible purpose of hiring a livery team and helping him to find his wife, but his real object, which he accomplished, was to join Mrs. Ashley and accompany her in the flight, and the results plainly indicate that it was a "put up job" between Francis and the faithless female. At all events, they drove that afternoon to Waterloo and from there took the train east to Butler, where the runaway spouse had left her trunk; this they expected to get, probably, and proceed on the journey; they were evidently in no great rush, however, at this stage of the scheme, for it is reported that they camped out together in the wildwoods near Butler, where they passed the long, weary hours of the night in each other's society, with no audience save the little birds, the shining stars and—and so forth.

To abbreviate a distressing story and curtail a lengthy tale, the base deceiver and his bird were overtaken Sunday afternoon, on the track of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway, by the irate husband who had been in pursuit of his reckless better-half from the time of her departure. Just what occurred at this stage of the game is not definitely known, but it is reasonable to suppose that it was an interesting tea-party. Mrs. Ashley returned Sunday night with her husband to Auburn, where they remained together over night at the Swineford; and Tuesday afternoon the unhappy pair shook the dust of Auburn from their garments and took the train for Cleveland. It is also asserted that Francis, by some strange fatality, has gone to Cleveland, where, if he can be ferreted out, he ought to be fined several thousand dollars more than he will ever be worth and imprisoned thirty days in congress.

◆

Danger Ahead.

There is an excellent opportunity down at the Seventh street bridge, at the east end of the same, for some man with an eye to business to "make a stake;" to be more explicit, there are two yawning gulches just beside the road, washed out by the heavy rains, into which a careful driver could plunge his team, his wife and his mother-in-law, without the slightest effort, if the night was dark enough; and if he were just enterprising enough, at the same time, to drive his own spine up through the crown of his hat, he would have a clear case against the city for damages—big damages, too. All levity aside, however, the trap alluded to is an exceedingly dangerous one, and the COURIER respectfully calls the attention of the proper authorities before it is too late.

◆

"Off His Base."

Samuel Roberts, a well-to-do farmer living a short distance southeast of Spencerville, left his family, consisting of a wife and several children, without notification yesterday and struck for Michigan. He has evinced numerous signs of insanity lately, and it is said that his unceremonious departure is due to his having heard that he was to be sent to the asylum. He passed through here on the B. & O. road yesterday, bound for Avilla, where it was his intention to take the Grand Rapids road for Michigan. It is unsafe for him to be at large, as he gets dangerous at times and has threatened to do desperate things; therefore, efforts will be made at once for his capture.

◆

A Trap.

While E. D. Hartman was driving down Main street, Tuesday morning, with Dr. Cowan's horse and buggy, he had a mishap—or rather, the horse had. A hole had been temporarily dug in the middle of the street by the surveyors, but it was there just long enough to let down the horse and cut an ugly gash in its breast, bang up one knee of the fore leg and peel a section of skin from the hind leg. Dr. Cowan attended, and at last accounts the patient was doing finely. The hole was uninjured and was immediately filled up.

SEMI-ANNUAL SETTLEMENT

Of the township trustees, showing the receipts and expenditures, and balance on hand in each township at the date of settlement with the county commissioners, last week.

The total receipts in each township include the amount on hand at last settlement, in October, 1879.

BUTLER TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$2,964.80
Expenditures	2,111.95
Balance on hand	852.85
JACKSON TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$3,069.67
Expenditures	1,977.80
Balance on hand	1,191.87
CONCORD TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$3,583.96
Expenditures	2,599.59
Balance on hand	984.37
NEWVILLE TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$2,103.78
Expenditures	1,592.28
Balance on hand	511.45
STAFFORD TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$1,253.57
Expenditures	813.17
Balance on hand	440.40
WILMINGTON TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$4,642.05
Expenditures	2,867.69
Balance on hand	1,774.36
UNION TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$4,504.74
Expenditures	1,864.09
Balance on hand	2,640.65
RICHLAND TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$3,860.29
Expenditures	2,312.95
Balance on hand	967.31
FAIRFIELD TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$3,957.85
Expenditures	3,008.36
Balance on hand	949.49
SMITHFIELD TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$2,783.70
Expenditures	2,112.39
Balance on hand	671.31
FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$3,955.65
Expenditures	1,463.95
Balance on hand	2,491.70
TROY TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$1,640.96
Expenditures	1,283.75
Balance on hand	357.21
KEYSER TOWNSHIP.
Receipts	$2,743.61
Expenditures	1,577.74
Balance on hand	1,165.87

◆

A well known German minister, Rev. A. Opitz, of Schleisingerville, Wisconsin, writes:

I was a sufferer with Rheumatism for years. Friends recomended the use of ST. JACOBS OIL; I tried it, and must confess that the result was astonishing. Having hardly used up the first bottle, I found relief, and the second one cured me. I therefore feel under obligations, and shall recomend this effective remedy, whenever I have a chance

The Breach Widens.

Both factions of the New York democracy met at Syracuse, last Tuesday, each holding a convention to appoint delegates to the Cincinnati convention. The Tilden convention recommended the nomination of Tilden, in a roundabout way, but did not instruct for him. The following resolutions express the sense of that convention upon that subject:

Resolved, That the democratic party of New York add to their condemnation of the election conspiracy of 1876 an emphatic declaration of their continued confidence in the character, ability and fitness of that distinguished citizen of New York, who was then elected to the highest office in the people's gift, and who was in his own person the object of joint attack on his party, his fellow citizens, and cause of free goverment. The blow which deprived the country of its chosen ruler was aimed, not so much at him as at the democratic millions who stood behind him. While making no instructions as to candidates, and committing to our delegates as heretofore the duty of joining in the deliberations of the national convention, we respectfully suggest to our brethren of other states that the dignity and welfare of the party and nation demand of them that they take such action as shall best present this great issue to the people. Higher than all other party duties is the solemn obligation to give to the free voters of the land a chance to pass their judgment upon this monstrous crime against the popular rights. On any such issue the state of New York will speak with no doubtful voice.

The Kelley convention met and appointed a committee to visit the Tilden convention, and ask for a conference to consider means for securing harmony in the party and a united delegation to Cincinnati, which proposition was not entertained by the Tilden convention. The Kelly convention then appointed delegates to the national convention and adopted resolutions, among which are the following:

Resolved, That in view of the importance of selecting candidates for president and vice-president, who are best fitted for the highest offices in the nation, and can best unite the democratic party and secure victory in the coming campaign, the delegation of New York to the national convention shall be unpledged.

Resolved, That in view of the powerful opposition to Samuel J. Tilden, in this and other states, his nomination to the presidency would be fatal to the democratic party and an act of treason to the democratic cause.

Resolved, That the democracy of New York having been forced into their present attitude, through their fidelity to the fundamental principles of their party, and their devotion to the democracy of the nation, pledge themselves to stand by any work with their brethren everywhere in the hearty and enthusiastic support of any worthy representative democrats they may nominate for president and vice-president, in the firm belief that the union under such leaders will result in a victory which the nation will be grateful for, and of which we shall have reason to be proud.

Accompanying the resolutions is an address of the democracy of New York to the democrats of the state and nation, which, among other things says: We protest against the degredation of the democratic organization into machines run for the interest of one man and his personal following. Tildenism is personalism which is false to the democracy and dangerous to the republic. We protest against the nomination of S. J. Tilden for president, because he is unfit for the office, and his election to it would be a national calamity, and because his nomination would defeat and disgrace the party beyond recovery, and because his nomination would deliver the country to another four years of republican extravagance and misrule. We protest against his nomination, because his record is not clear, because his political career has been marked with selfishness, treachery and dishonor; because he has lost the respect, confidence and friendship of many of the best men in the party, to whom it looks for guidance; because he has damaged the democracy more than any other man in the country; because his name is irrevocably connected with attempts to bribe electors, and these scandals brought to light by the cypher dispatches; because hundreds of thousands of democrats can not conscientiously vote for him, and his nomination would sound the knell of democratic defeat.

◆

A Sad Case.

His face was like the sear and yellow leaf; in fact, of such a golden hue was the man's countenance that it was evident he had resumed specie payment on a gold basis. It was a sad case of indolent liver. He was advised to try Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative, and acting upon this advise he is now happy, enjoys his food, and feels that he has taken a new lease on life. For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug store. 17-2w

◆

—Work will be commenced this week on the new barn of John Shugers. When it is completed it will be the largest in the neighborhood.

This Spring!

We are making some extraordinary efforts to do about two-thirds of the

CLOTHING BUSINESS

of this city. Heretofore we have, probably, done one-half of it. With our increased facilities, and having bought largely before the advance, etc., our belief remains unchanged, and we shall act upon it, that the best time to sell cheap is when others sell dear; and that more fortunes have been made by selling at low than high prices. Call and see the most complete stock of

Men's Clothing,
Boy's Clothing,
Children's Clothing,
Hats and Caps,
Gents' Furnishing Goods

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.

C. O. D.

One-price clothiers and displayers of the best goods for the least money.

Opposite North Door Court House.
FORT WAYNE, IND.

ROOT & COMPANY.

3,000

Dozens of Hosiery and Gloves just landed, comprising the most extensive lines ever shown to the citizens of this town. Ladies' Gentlemen's and Children's Hosiery and Gloves of every description and price. The newest colorings and designs, at the lowest prices ever before known.

ROOT & COMPANY.

LYONS BLACK DRESS SILKS.

(Cashmere finish); The richest goods imported. Examine special grades at $1.75, 2.00, 2.25, 2.50, 2.75, 2.85 and 3.00 per yard. Also now offering full lines of best makes of American Gros Grain Silks at $1.00, 1.20, 1.40, 1.50 and 1.65 per yard. Guaranteed to wear like iron. No house in this country can beat us on prices of reliable Black Silks.

ROOT & COMPANY.

EARLY SPRING DRESS GOODS.

Scotch Zephyrs, Ginghams, French Printed Muslins, Momie Cloths, Seersucker Stripes, Organdies, Jackonets and Lawns, Percales, Cambrics and Chintzes; also an immense assortment of Worsted Dress Goods in all the new fabrics, 20, 25, 35, 50, 60, 75 cents per yard and upwards.

ROOT & COMPANY.

BLACK SILK CASHMERES.

All wool 40 and 47 inches wide, at old prices. Examine grades at 50, 60, 75, 85c. and $1.00 per yard. They will be much higher in price soon. Also a large assortment of Mourning Dress goods in Momie Cloths, Henrietta Cloths, Chuddah Cloths, Pekin Stripes, Brocade and Fancy Styles, 50, 60, 75c. and up to $25.0 pr yd.

ROOT & COMPANY, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

DRY-GOODS, CLOTHING, HATS, CAPS AND GROCERIES.

BARGAINS! BARGAINS!

$15,000

Invested in NEW DRY-GOODS, CLOTHING, NOTIONS, CARPETS, HATS, CAPS AND GROCERIES.

ALL of which were bought before the recent advance in prices, thereby saving a LARGE per cent, which we are giving to purchasers. Our motto is "To sell goods cheap and make business lively."

DRY-GOODS AND NOTINS.

In this department we have opened a large stoc and full line of brown sheetings, bleached muslins, shirtings, tickings, denims, ducks, prints, ginghams, etc., etc.

We claim to have the best assortment of dress-goods ever brought to DeKalb county. Cashmeres, Alpacas, Brocades, and cheap dress-goods of all kinds. Also sole agents (in Auburn) for the popular Jamestown alpacas, which are warranted not to fade and shrink when washed. We buy these goods direct from the manufacturers, and therefore can sell them fully 20 per cent. lower than any of our competitors.

$7,000.00 WORTH OF CLOTHING.

Our immense stock of new clothing for Spring and Summer wear is certainly the largest and best selected assortment (of the latest styles in market) yet brought to Indiana. Our goods in this line were bought about the first of January, which enables us to sell them at less than last years' prices. We have clothing to fit men, boys, youths and children, from a $6.00 suit up to the finest imported worsteds. Boys' suits at from $4.00 to $6.00 per suit.

HATS AND CAPS.

Till you can't rest—the finest and best selected stock of nobby fur, wool and straw hats of all sizes and at very low prices.

GROCERIES AND QUEENSWARE.

We keep in stock staple and fancy groceries of all kinds, and sell them without profit, for the benefit of our customers who patronize the other branches of our mammoth establishment. Queensware, glassware and crackery, in the latest patterns, and of the best quality the market affords, all offered at remarkable low figures.

TRY OUR "NEW PROCESS" FLOUR.

Come and examine our immense stock and we now you will purchase something before leaving. Again, we say COME.

SCHAAB, BEUGNOT & CO., Auburn, Ind.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

—Mortgages.
—Warrantee Deeds,
—Quit Claim Deeds,
—Guardian's Receipts, (bound),
—Administrator's Receipts(bound,)
—For sale in large or small quantities at the Courier office. tf.

—The awnings are going up.

—Wall paper cheap at Davenport's drug store. 14-tf.

—Look out for the boss riding cornplows at D. D. Snyder's.

—The lemonade machine has commenced to grind at Hollister's.

—Boys' hats, THREE for 25 cents, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—D. D. Snyder has just received another car-load of reapers.

—Remember that no misrepresentations are made in selling the Eckhart buggy.

—Six-button kid gloves, and Josephine kid gloves at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—The Eckhart buggy takes the lead for durability and mechanical workmanship.

—M. H. Brown went last Monday to Delphos, Ohio, to attend the funeral of his brother.

—One dozen one-gallon milk crocks for 85 cents, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Chris. Baker sets a good table, in quality and variety, for the boys that board with him.

—Look out for Miss Cleveland's stock of millinery goods, which will be displayed Saturday.

—It will pay you to see Davenport's patterns before you purchase wall paper and window shades. 14-tf.

—"Mr. Vanderbilt," of Angola, whose other name is Markel, was here over Sunday seeing his girl.

—The latest French chips, and all the finest goods in the millinery line, can be found at Miss Cleveland's.

—Go to McQuiston & Ralston's for cheap clothing and carpets They are selling at old prices. 15-3t.

—Mike Long took his "run" on the B. & O. yesterday, after lolling around in elegant ease for several days past.

—Rev. B. Johnson used up last Tuesday at Fort Wayne, perhaps trying to get a rattle-box handsome enough for that new baby.

—D. P. Hale started Tuesday for Cincinnati, where he joined his wife, who has been attending a medical college in that city.

—Through the efforts of the proprietor of the Central hotel, a good plank crossing has been laid over Main street at the intersection of Tenth.

—A large lot of one, two and three-button kid gloves at from 30 to 60 cents per pair, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Fred. Clark wants to buy a horse and buggy for his private use this summer; not a gingerbread horse, but a genuine animated quadruped.

—Don't buy your embroideries, trimming silks, fringes, beaded gimps and tassels, veilings, etc., till you go to McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—John Leasure says he can remember anything, after it has been pounded into his cranium, just as well as a man that weighs ten hundred pounds.

—Miss M. Cleveland invites the attention of all lovers of style to her new stock of trimmed hats and bonnets which will arrive from the city Saturday.

—Worthy Croxton, the passenger agent's chief clerk on the Fort Wayne and Jackson road, was in town Saturday, on business connected with the road.

—Brown Matheny has finished his education in the drug business at Three Rivers, Michigan, and is again at home, where he will probably remain. "Be it ever so humble," etc.

—The season of the year is near at hand when the lining of last winter's suit will do for a summer outfit. We have ordered a cheap suit—of tissue-paper—for dry weather.

—The ware-rooms of the Eckhart carriage works are now well filled with buggies and carriages for the spring trade. Call and see them when in need of a good job.

—The new side-walk from the bridge out to the Eckhart carriage works, spoken of in this paper last week, is completed. It is a good one, and will be found a great convenience.

—Mrs. H. C. Bowers, of Kendallville, a sister of Will. Forsbey, is in town this week, visiting her mother and brother on Ensley avenue. Her husband, who is agent for the Grand Rapids road at Kendallville, will join her Sunday.

—The new Kiblinger building is growing slowly, but with a great deal of certainty, and when ready for occupancy, which will be about July 1, it will be a "daisy," both as regards appearance and location.

—George McCord turned a back handspring out of his wagon last Tuesday morning, while engaged in hauling sand for Kiblinger's new building, and came near turning himself wrong-side-out. His team ran away, and that was the cause of it. No damage.

—Decoration day comes on Sunday this year.

—Read Dr. Talmage's sermon on the first page.

—Adam and Eve are in town to-day. The boys all know who they are.

—A 46-piece set of dishes for $3.75 at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—James Culbertson sold three reapers last Saturday for D. D. Snyder.

—Lafe Miller, of Corunna, cast his shadow in several places around town Saturday.

—Spring shawls, linen dresses and ladies' linen dusters at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Mr. Jas. E. Dorland, of Louisville, Ky., will visit friends in Auburn next Sunday.

—House-cleaning and general scouring has been going on at the Swineford this week.

—Don't forget that the Physicians drug-store is the place to buy the latest style wall paper.

—The fruit and wheat crop in this county will be fully up to the average, or better, this season.

—Many ladies misinterpret their sufferings. Try a box of "Sellers' Liver Pills." Sold by all druggists.

—"Paris under the Commune" is the subject of Hon. E. B. Washburne's lecture at Fort Wayne to-night.

—Billy Rainier, the saloonist, has been doing Spencerville this week, where he has a branch establishment.

—The board of education meet Monday, May 3, at the office of the county superintendent in the court-house at Auburn.

—Schaab, Beugnot & Co. are selling Elkhart seamless half-hose at 15 cents per pair, and Chicago seamless half-hose at 25 cents for 2 pairs.

—The capital stock of the Farmers Mutual insurance company now amounts to $177,649. See notice of meeting in another column.

—Why suffer sleepless nights, with a distressing cough, while a quarter of a dollar invested in "Sellers' Cough Syrup" will give instant relief.

—Tom Scott will doubtless succeed himself as marshal. He has made an efficient officer, and a strong effort should be made to re-elect him.

—The Stamets house, at Auburn Junction, has been improved from time to time until it is now as neat and convenient as any hotel in this region.

—Choice coffee at from 16 to 22 cents per pound. New Java coffee 25 cents per pound. Arbuckle's Ariosa roasted coffee, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w —Coop. Ralston has had that spider kalsomined all over the skating-rink on top of his head, and now he thinks he has the dead wood on flies for this summer.

—The largest assortment of dress goods, such as cashmeres, alpacas, bunting, brocades and cheap suitings in the city, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Judge Francis Picker, of south Main street, will make some improvements on his residence property next week, beginning with a new wall on the west side or front of his house.

—The largest stock of bleached and brown muslin, shirtings, cottonades, ticks, ducks, denims, towelings, table-linens, hats, etc., etc., in the city, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Do you want a carpet this spring? If you do, go to McQuiston & Ralston's at once. They have already closed out several pieces. Those who go early will get the bargains. 17-3w

—The church-going people of Auburn are well pleased with the action of the M. E. conference in returning Rev. H. J. Norris to this charge for another year.

—Mr. Alexander S. Freeman and Miss Sylvia Bailey, both of Jackson township, were united in marriage last Sunday by Rev. W. L. Meese, at his residence in Auburn.

—Mrs. Mary Hall, a sister of Mrs. H. E. Little of this place, is visiting at present in Corunna, and will probably make a trip to Auburn before returning to her home in Pioneer, Ohio.

—The Presbyterian society will be entertained in the basement rooms of the church, on next Wednesday afternoon. Refreshments served at the usual hour. Everybody is invited to attend.

Mrs. J. E. Rose, Secretary.

—Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Swineford and Mrs. Emily Dills went to Fort Wayne on a shopping and visiting excursion last Thursday, the former returning same day and the latter remaining until Friday evening.

—The three fellows who were arrested and jailed last week, on suspicion of complicity in the Waterloo burglaries, were examined and discharged, there not being sufficient evidence against them to justify conviction.

—Number 4 of the Ft. Wayne & Jackson road, which goes south at 9:21 a. m., broke down Tuesday morning at Bankers. The accident consisted of a broken journal on the rear coach, and the train ran the balance of the distance to Ft. Wayne with but one car.

—Tuesday morning Mr. and Mrs. S. Hollister left for Huntington, Virginia, where they will spend three or four weeks visiting Mr. Hollister's sister. The restaurant, during their absence, is in charge of James Gilliland, who is an old hand at the business.

—Mrs. S. D. Mason, of Logansport, Mr. John Reed, of Indianapolis and Mr. J. S. Reed, of Fort Wayne, visited with the senior editor and family last week.

—During the absence of Miss Cleveland in Cleveland (how nice!), Miss Nettie Shaffer has been monarch of all she surveyed in the millinery establishment.

—In view of the fact that two papers are being issued from this office this week, besides a supplement, we are a trifle behind the usual time in getting to press.

—The Young Ladies' Temperance Union will meet in league at the residence of J. A. McKay, next Friday (tomorrow) evening. Refreshments at half past nine. An invitation is extended to all —The boys at the junction—agents, clerks, operators, target-men and all, including Joe Copper and Judge Picker,—are the jolliest and best natured gang within a radius of four hundred miles.

—Miss Alice McKay has just received a new stock of millinery goods, such as Tuscan hats, children's hats, laces, flowers, tips, etc. She does pressing and stamping at low prices and warrants satisfaction.

—If any murder was committed Monday at Corunna, as per special in the Chicago Times and Cincinnati Enquirer, our sheriff ought to know something about it; but he does not, and it is doubtless a canard.

—Four pairs of cotton socks for 25 cents; two pairs heavy seamless cotton socks for 25 cents; children's hose from 10 to 50 cents per pair. The best 10-cent white cotton stockings in the market, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—There is a new 5-cent cigar at Casebeer & Matheney's, called the "Moss Agate,"—in fact there are several boxes of them—for which any smoker would pay 10 cents each, without a grumble—if he didn't know they could be had for a nickel.

—The commissions for the numerous justices of the peace have arrived, and can be obtained by those dignitaries at the county clerk's office. When you come after them, don't forget to bring a dollar with which to pay the secretary of state for his signature.

—There is a dearth of school-mistresses, at last accounts there being twenty-eight needed to fill all vacancies. The greater number of them are wanted in the townships of Newville, Smithfield and Franklin. Wages range from $15.00 to $17.50 per month, for three months.

—Jack Little, the foreman in the Courier office, has been lounging around in idleness a portion of this week, at the earnest request of a selfish and aggravating "bile." He stands up when he takes his meals, and submissively devours the same from the mantle-piece.

—"The Helper," a neat little four-page paper, in the interests of the north-eastern Indiana branches of the Women's Baptist Home Mission Society, is now being printed at this office. The paper is edited and published by Mrs. M. A. Ehlers, at her own expense, which is proof sufficient that she is a charitable, christian lady.

—Frank Laramore, who will be remembered by many as having lived here some twelve years ago, was in town this week shaking hands with friends and greeting his old-time associates. He is now visiting his mother, who lives at St. Johns, but expects to go to Chicago soon and engage in the business he has pursued for several years—navigation of the lakes.

—Cosper Altenburg, who left here about two years ago for Little Rock, Ark., where he has since resided, arrived at home last night, having made the trip in thirty-five hours. He came in response to a telegram to the effect that his father, 'Squire Altenburg, was dangerously ill; but the latter, who has been sick for some two weeks, is much better to-day.

—A circular received at this office announces that arrangements have been completed for the opening of a summer normal school at Knightstown, beginning July 19th and continuing five weeks. The instructors names are Prof. C. W. Hodgin, of the State Normal; Prof. E. F. Brown, of the Indianapolis High School, and Prof. Seiler, of the Knightstown Academy. For further information write to Prof. M. Seiler.

—Joe Brackenridge, of Ft. Wayne, who was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary for embezzlement of the postoffice funds, and was conveyed there in June of last year, received his pardon last Saturday and left Michigan City Monday morning a free man, having served nearly one year of his time. His release has been the occasion of much rejoicing by relatives and friends in Fort Wayne.

—Another link has been severed from friendship's chain by the recent death of Mrs. Kate McLallen, wife of Henry McLallen, of Columbia City, Ind. The parties named have been very intimate acquaintances of the writer and his family for a number of years, during which time the warmest friendship existed. The deceased was greatly beloved by all who were so fortunate as to know her, and, as we believe, departed this life without an enemy. She was a true and faithful wife, a kind and loving mother and a warm friend. Our heartfelt sympathies are extended to the bereaved father and children.

—The Richland township Sunday school institute will meet Saturday, April 24, at 9 o'clock a. m. This organization has been in successful operation for the past seven years. We hope to make the coming session the best of all. All Sunday-school workers are invited to be present.

16-2w L. W. Treesh, President.

—Last evening, just after supper, a small congregation of Young Americas might be seen by the passers-by, on the bank near the Eagle mills, hugely enjoying a clandestine smoking match, totally oblivious to all else on earth. But vague recollections of days gone by, when a certain other fellow might have been caught in a similar situation—scared within an inch of his life lest the paternal ancestor might suddenly waltz around the corner—restrains us from personalities. If the boys never do worse than this, the parents may congratulate themselves.

Sincere Thanks.

I have suffered for five years with Rheumatism. Having been persuaded by friends to try the St. Jacobs Oil, I must acknowledge that it is the best remedy I ever used; in fact, it cured me entirely. Accept my sincere thanks.

Frank Schwarz,
98 Nineteenth st., Cincinnati, Ohio.

New Sunday School.

The citizens of Auburn Junction and vicinity, met at the school-house last Sunday at 9:30 in the morning, and organized a Sunday-school, with the following named persons as officers: John Sheffer, superintendent; J. Grube, assistant superintendent; Mrs. J. J. Martin, secretary; Miss Emma Grube, treasurer; Misses Eva Link and Mary Grube, choristers; Wm. Link and Miss Ada Grube, librarians.

J. J. Martin, Secretary pro tem.

Card of Thanks.

Auburn, April 20, 1880.

Editors Courier: Please allow us, through the columns of the Courier, to return our sincere thanks to our friends and neighbors for their kindness and consolation in our late bereavement, and especially to Rev. H. J. Norris, pastor, and Mrs. T. C. Mays, Miss Mollie Matheny and M. F. Long, members of the choir.

Maggie VanAuken,
Jay J. VanAuken.

Notice of Meeting.

The members of the Farmers' Mutual insurance company, of DeKalb county, will take notice that the annual meeting of the company will be held in Auburn, Saturday, May 29, 1880, for the purpose of electing officers, appointing township soliciting agents and for the transaction of such other business as may come up.

The directors of the company will meet Friday, May 28, 1880, to settle with the secretary.

17-4w Perry Fitch, Secretary.

A Nobby Place.

The above heading alludes to the jewelry store of Joe Abright, which has just been kalsomined a delicate tint and beautifully painted and grained, presenting the appearance of a little palace. The work was done by John Canon, to whom it does great credit, as a person need not draw on his imagination to say that the workmanship is artistic in every particular; and as for the goods in stock, we advise everybody to visit Mr. Abright's store and be assured of the variety, beauty and excellence of his watches and clocks, jewelry, musical instruments, etc. Mr. Abright is an enterprising business man, and he will always be on top in his line of business.

Surburban Improvements.

The hollow places in and around Auburn Junction are soon to be filled and leveled up, and the swamps and mud-holes will be moved away. The logs and debris scattered around the B. & O. depot, on the triangular little piece of real estate owned by Sherm. Hollister, will be cleared away this spring, while the grounds adjoining Chris. Baker's premises are to be generally overhauled. This announcement will be received with gratification by those interested at the junction and by the citizens of Auburn generally, for that place, heretofore, has been an eye-sore to everybody.

Over 1,500 Cases of Fits Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind.

Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-tf.

BUGGIES FOR SALE.

We now have on hand a large assortment of Buggies, which will be sold cheaper than any in the county; also a lot of platform spring wagons, manufactured by Studebaker Bros., of South Bend. We expect to sell these buggies and wagons on their own merits alone, and not by abusing and misrepresenting the stock of other dealers.

We guarantee every buggy that we have sold or offer for sale to be free from any and all encumbrance or royalty whatever.

16-2w Cool & Mader.

Messrs. J. F. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.—Dear Sir: Seeing a recomend of Hall's Catarrh Cure from Gen. P. S. Slevin, my wife was induced to commence the use of the remedy. She has been a sufferer from Catarrh for a good many years. We had tried most all known remedies, but they all failed to relieve her. She has been taking Hall's Catarrh Cure of late, and we consider her cured. We would gladly recomemnd it to any one who has the Catarrh. We consider it worth ten times its cost.

A. C. Henry.

For sale by all druggists. 16-4w

A House to Rent or Sell,

Containing five rooms. There is a good well and cistern on the premises, and also some small fruit.

17-3w W. H. McQuiston.

A MEDLEY OF MERIT.

A FINE DRESS SUIT.

Black Cloth Frock Coat	$10.00
Black Doeskin Pants	5.00
Black Cloth Vest	2.50

PANTS.

Men's Fine Rock or Harris	$5.00
Men's All-Wool	3.00
Boys' Very Durable	2.00

BOYS' SUITS.

Excellent Quality	$10.00
Strong and Durable	5.00

SAM, PETE & MAX,
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

EXAMINE OUR NOVELTIES FOR SPRING.

WATERLOO AHEAD!

The great business boom has reached Waterloo and struck the popular store of

J. KAHN & CO.

The following are a few of the many bargains we are offering:

300 pieces New-Style Calico, all pretty and Latest Patterns, at 7 cents per yards.
100 pieces nice Heavy Shirting at 11 cents per yard.
100 pieces Dress Goods from 10 to 25 cents per yard.
4 yards of fine Heavy Table Linen for $1.
15 yards of nice Heavy Toweling for $1.
5 yards of Heavy Jeans for $1.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!

We have the Best Selected Stock in Northern Ind.

150 suits at 5, 6 and 7 dollars.
100 suits, all wool, at 7, 8 and 9 dollars.
Good Heavy Pants at $1 per pair.
Good all-wool Pants at $1.75 per pair.
250 suits for boys at $2.50, 3.00, 4.00 and 5.00.

Our Spring and Summer Stock was contracted for before the advance, and we will sell them at prices to suit everybody. We are selling a splendid line of White and Fancy Dress Shirts at 75 cents.

We cordially invite everybody to call on us, examine our goods and learn our prices before buying elsewhere.

J. KAHN & CO.

AUCTION.

BY MRS. FANNIE STEELE MOORE.

Let us go to the auction hall to-night—
Toys show well by the pale gaslight;
It is decked with flowers rich and rare—
Music floats on the soft night air.
Over and around rests a Circean spell,
And human toys are selling well;
To the highest bidder they, one by one,
Are going! going!! going!!! gone!!!!
For miserly sums of glittering gold
Those beautiful toys to-night are sold,
Buyers regardless of the costly price
Paid for the toys that look so nice;
The winner must lose when he gains his prize,
Not for his heart—only his eyes—
A beautiful being to gaze upon;
A worthless thing when it is won.
'Tis a beautiful doll—a queer-made thing—
That can laugh and talk, dance and sing,
Can drape superbly, exquisitely fan,
And charm the eyes of brainless men.
Stroke gently—softly—the long curling hair,
"Smoothe out tenderly, touch with care;"
For a doll's pretty ringlets never grow,
They are only fastened on, you know;
Those waxen cheeks, with their roseate hue,
Must not be wet with morning dew;
For it is only a painted thing, you know,
Made not for use—only for show.
Those are beautiful hands, pink-tinted things,
Glittering with their jeweled rings—
Not a hand to labor, work and toil—
The sun would freckle, tan and spoil.
Brilliant eyes, filled with magic light;
Sparkling rays, enchanted with might—
Not might of the mind, nor might of the heart—
The soulless doll is acting her part.
On the auction-block in beauty she stands,
To sell herself for gold and lands.
It matters but little—the young or old—
So the purchase be made with gold.
Pale, and trembling with age, an old man stands—
Thinks of his wealth, and hoarded lands
He has once been a man, but twice a boy—
Gives his wealth for the useless toy.
Young man, with a head as soft as his heart,
Enters life with a golden start.
He lays it all down to win the fair prize
Whose dazzling charms bedim his eyes,
And with it dies ambition, fame and joy;
While, in disgust, he spurns the toy—
Scorns the beauty—arrayed in white,
He buys from fashion's sale to-night.
What a terrible thought to pierce the soul—
An awful feeling, beyond control—
To think of the numbers of women sold—
Selling themselves for meager gold.
Woman, did I say? The name is too pure,
No glittering sum can thee allure;
It is only the doll, in woman's form,
That fades away in life's rude storm—
Moth-like, sporting on butterfly-wing,
A brainless, heartless, useless thing—
Such are the beings that are sold to-night
Sold by the rays of pale gaslight;
Sold in the halls of gayety and pride.
All over our land, far and wide,
Those doll-like creatures are winging their [illegible]
To the highest bidder to-night.
She is sold on the block—a slave to gold—
Her living anguish is left untold.
It's enough to say of the bitter sight,
She sold herself for gold to-night.
Oh, manly hearts—if there's one can be Led astray by this gilded mock'ry—
A warning heed: Never in thy life
At fashion's auction buy a wife.

CORINTH, Miss.

MISS FYDGET'S MISTAKE.

"If you please, ma'am, won't you give me a drink of milk?"

Miss Fydget had just come in from a long and bootless search through the pasture for a wandering brood of young turkeys which had been missing since morning.

She was warm and tired; one boot was burst open on the side; her sun-bonnet hung limp at the back of her head; her gray curls were in true artistic confusion, and a vicious blackberry briar had torn her hands, until she looked as if she might have been in a skirmish with the Zulus.

"But I wouldn't have minded all that," was Miss Fydget's melancholy comment to herself, "if only I could have found my young turkeys! They do say that there is a company of tramps loafing about the country, and—"

Just then the mild voice of an old man, sitting on the well-curb, broke in upon the thread of her reflections—an old man, in a shabby gray coat, buttoned closely across his chest, shoes thickly coated with dust, and a rude cane, cut from the woods, upon which he rested his folded hands.

Miss Fydget stared at the old man; the old man returned her gaze, deprecatingly.

"Perhaps you're deaf, ma'am," said the stranger, elevating his voice a semitone or so higher.

"No more than yourself!" said Miss Fydget, naturally somewhat irritated.

"Would you have the kindness to give me a little milk?"

Miss Fydget bethought herself of the floating rumor she had heard. Perhaps this venerable vagrant was one of the very band now marauding through the vales and glens of Rochemont; perhaps even now he had a corps of bloody-minded coadjutors hidden behind the stone wall, or under the moss-grown roof of the ancient smoke-house. And Miss Fydget was possessed of several pieces of antique silver, and had $40 in an old tea-pot, on the uppermost closet shelf!

"Who are you?" curtly questioned she.

"A man and a brother," the old man answered, not without a covert smile.

"No, you're not," said Miss Fydget, incensed at what she deemed a piece of unnecessary insolence. "You're a tramp!"

The stranger smiled.

"Is a tramp, then, destitute of all the privileges of humanity?" he asked.

"Eh?" said Miss Fydget.

"Tramps must live as well as other people," pleaded the old man. "Now, look at me."

"Yes," said Miss Fydget, "I'm looking at you, and a dusty, shabby-looking figure you are, I must say."

"I've walked fifteen miles since morning, with nothing to eat or drink."

"That's what they all say," said Miss Fydget, incredulously.

"Would it be any great stretch to your hospitality to give me a slice of bread and a drink of cool milk?" he replied.

Miss Fydget stood for a moment pondering the petition in her mind.

"Look here, old man!" she said, at last, "I know perfectly well that you're a tramp; but I suppose that you're human, after all. There's a pile of knotty pine stumps under the shed; you may split a few for my cooking-stove."

"But, ma'am——"

"I knew how it would be," shrilly interrupted Miss Fydget. "You're a deal too lazy to work; you'd rather starve than do an honest day's work, any time."

"I beg your pardon," said the old man, mildly. "It is a good many years since I split a pile of wood."

"I'll go bail it is," said Miss Fydget, satirically.

"But if you will get me the ax I will try and do my best," he added, meekly.

"The ax is hanging up in the wood-shed, at the left-hand side of the door," said Miss Fydget.

And she went into the house, leaving her venerable visitor to do as he pleased about accepting her offer.

After she was within the four yellow-washed walls of her own kitchen, however, it occurred to her that she had done rather a foolish thing.

"I suppose he'd as soon split my head open as the sticks of wood," she thought to herself. "And of course he knows that I'm alone in the world—I mean in the house; but it's pretty much the same thing," with a deep sigh. "And who knows but that I may be murdered within the next five minutes?"

"Thud! thud!" came the sound of the ax, descending with slow, regular strokes upon the knotty stumps of yellow pine, and Miss Fydget listened with a sort of terrible fascination, wondering as she did so what sort of relation, in the matter of sound, the human tympanum might bear to the pine stumps.

"What a fool I was!" said she to herself.

And with noiseless movements she went across the kitchen floor, and took down a rusty musket, which had hung suspended over the old brick chimney ever since she was a little child.

"I don't know as I could fire it off," said she. "But I'll try, if I see any signs of mischief!"

It was unnecessary, however. She poured out a bowl of milk, first thriftily pausing to skim it, and then cut a good thick slice of rye bread, taking care to secrete the bread-knife when she was through. And then, seating herself by the window, her thoughts wandered back to the question of the missing brood of turkeys.

"He knows where they are, I'll bet anything!" soliloquized Miss Fydget. "And he shall tell me. Old man—old man, I say!"

The venerable wood-splitter paused at the sound of her summons.

"Come here!" she called.

The old man obeyed.

"You've done enough," said Miss Fydget, inwardly rejoiced that he had left his ax sticking in the last pine-knot, instead of coming toward her brandishing it in the air, Powhatan fashion.

"That is what I was just thinking myself," observed the old man, wiping his streaming forehead.

"And now," said Miss Fydget, sharply and suddenly, as if she fain would take him by surprise, "where are my turkeys?"

"Eh?" uttered the old man.

"My turkeys!" shrilly enunciated Miss Fydget. My brood of sixteen white turkey-chicks!"

"I am sure I cannot say," said the old man, with a puzzled countenance.

"That's false!" said Miss Fydget, imperially. "If you don't know, your gang does! And I insist on having my turkeys back again!"

The old man looked bewildered. Miss Fydget eyed him with a gaze calculated to strike dismay into the most obdurate heart.

"Madam—" he began, but Miss Fydget interrupted him.

"There's your milk," said she, "and your bread. If you can eat and drink with a good conscience, knowing that my turkeys are gone, do so."

Apparently Miss Fydget's turkey chicks rested but lightly upon the conscience of the wayfarer, for he ate and drank to the last mouthful.

"Madam!" he said, as he placed the empty bowl within the window-sill—Miss Fydget had taken the precaution to bolt and bar the door.

"Go," said the lady, curtly.

"But I wished to say to you—

By way of answer, Miss Fydget took up the rusty gun, placed it on her shoulder, and pointed the barrel full at her guest.

"If you don't take yourself off, I'll fire!" said Miss Fydget, resolutely.

And, upon this unmistakable hint, the old man took up his cap and trudged away as fast as he could go.

"The woman must be a maniac!" said he to himself.

While Miss Fydget made haste to take a dose of valerian to settle her "perturbed senses."

"I've had a narrow escape of it," said she. "But I must get rested as quickly as possible, and go to Lavina Thorpe's to tea. The Bishop is to be there, and I wouldn't miss the opportunity of meeting him for $1,000!"

And, between the stimulus of the valerian and the calm afforded by a half hour's nap, Miss Fydget managed to array herself in a stiff, black silk dress, with a white ribbon cap, and set out for Lavina Thorpe's, at a few moments past 4.

As she crossed her door-yard, a slowly-winding procession met her eye, returning down the rocky slopes of the pasture-meadow—the sixteen young turkeys!

"There they come now," said Miss Fydget, with a momentary twinge of conscience in regard to the tramp. "However, it's all over and gone now, and what's done can't be undone!"

The company was all gathered at Lavina Thorpe's; the best china and silver were out and great bunches of cabbage roses decked the mantel in gilt vases, that were at least a century old.

"Is he here?" nervously whispered Miss Fydget, as she removed her hat in the front chamber up-stairs.

"The dear man—yes!" said Miss Thorpe, enthusiastically clasping her hands. "Walked all the way from Simstown Station, and met with all sorts of interesting adventures. What do you think of his being taken for a——"

But here she was called away.

When Miss Fydget descended, serene and smiling, she was led up to a pleasant old man, with gray hair and a cordial blue eye.

"Miss Fydget," said Miss Thorpe, fussily, "let me make you acquainted with Bishop Playfair, of Chirita Territory."

"Bless my soul!" cried Miss Fydget, dropping her fan and smelling-bottle, "it's the tramp!"

The Bishop smiled serenely.

"Miss Fydget," said he, "you never can guess how deliciously cool that milk tasted to me. And, by the way, I met a brood of young turkeys in a stubble-field as I crossed from the highway, which I concluded must be yours."

Both joined in irresistible laughter, and in five minutes Miss Fydget, set at her ease by the Bishop's tact and kindness, was chatting cheerfully away regarding the Chirita missions.

"But to think," said Miss Lavina Thorpe, afterward, "that you mistook the Bishop of Chirita Territory for a tramp!"

"And set him to splitting wood, and pointed a rusty musket at him," said Miss Fydget.

"It only shows," said old Mrs. Martin, severely, "how easy it is to be mistaken in this world!"

HISTORICAL SKETCHES.

Trial and Execution of Charles I.

[From the Chicago Ledger.]

Charles I. was born at Dunfermline on the 19th of November, 1600, and was the second and favorite son of James I. By the death of his brother Henry, he became Prince of Wales in 1612. In 1624 negotiations were made by Buckingham for his marriage with Princess Henrietta Marie of France. In March, 1625, Charles came to the throne at 25 years of age. In the same year he was married. He was respected in advance, and his subjects were disposed to have confidence in him, but the foolish pretensions of his father—his religious tyranny, his bad and weak policy—had prepared the storm which was destined to burst upon the royal head of his much-loved son. The King was at the disposal of his favorite, Buckingham, who was full of great and warlike schemes which, however, were doomed to failure. Possessed of a proud, haughty spirit, he desired above all that his will should be the law supremely obeyed. Perhaps it was one of his greatest misfortunes to be unable to admit that a monarch owed to his subjects, however refractory, truth and fidelity. Cromwell said that "the King was a man of great parts, but so false that no man can trust him, for while he protests his love of peace he is in secret treason."

After a reign of nearly twenty-four years, it became evident that all negotiations for peace which would prove satisfactory to his subjects would be of no avail with the King.

On the 1st of January, 1649, the Commons voted the appointment of a High Court of Justice, "to the end that no chief officer or magistrate might presume for the future to contrive the enslaving and destruction of the nation with impunity." One hundred and thirty-two were elected, of whom about half took part in the trial. Bradshaw was elected Lord President, and Cook Solicitor against the King. On the 20th, the 22d and the 23d Charles was brought before the court, but with a calm and admirable dignity, due to a sincere belief in his own pretensions, he proudly refused to acknowledge the court, declaring that obedience to Kings is commanded by scripture; that by the law the King can do no wrong; that the Commons have no authority of themselves to erect a court of judicature, and had not received such authority from the people, whose power to confer it, he, besides, declined to admit. On the 24th and 25th of January the court heard the depositions of thirty-two witnesses. On the latter day, at the close of the sitting, and almost without discussion, the condemnation of the King as a tyrant, a traitor, a murderer and a public enemy was voted. Scott, Martyn, Harrison, Treton and three others were intrusted to draw up the sentence, which was adopted on the morrow with closed doors. On the 27th, at the sitting of the court, sixty-seven members were present. When the King entered the hall, a violent cry was raised among the soldiers of "Execution! Justice! Execution!" The tumult increased. The King endeavored to speak in his own defense, but a violent agitation spread throughout the court, and he was silenced. The soldiers murmured loudly, lighting their pipes and blowing the smoke in the King's face. Bradshaw now pronounced the sentence of death against Charles Stuart, and that on the 30th of January, 1649, the King should be beheaded in front of the Banqueting House, at Whitehall. At this time he was surrounded by soldiers, who violently dragged him to the spot where his close chair awaited him. On descending the staircase he was insulted; lighted pipes were thrown under his feet, and tobacco smoke was blown in his face. Whitehall being reached, the King regained his composure; he shrugged his shoulders at the cries of the soldiers. "Poor men," he said, on getting out of his chair; "for a little money they would do as much against their commanders." Having entered his apartment, "Herbert," said the King, to his faithful servant, "my nephew, the Prince Elector, will endeavor to visit me, and some other Lords that love me, whom I would see, but my time is short and precious. I am desirous to improve it the best I may in preparation. I hope they will not think it ill that none have access to me but my children."

He sent for the Bishop of London, Juxon. As he approached the King, he gave way to his grief. "But, my Lord," said the King, "let us leave that; we have no time to spare. I must resign myself to meet my God. We will not talk of those rogues, in whose hands I am. They thirst for my blood, and they will have it, and God's will be done. I thank God, I heartily forgive them."

He remained all day closeted with the Bishop, receiving no one. On the 29th his children were brought to him. The little Princess Elizabeth, who was 12 years of age, burst into tears at the sight of her father. The Duke of Gloucester, who was but 8 years old, cried with his sister. The King took them upon his knees and shared a few jewels with them. He endeavored to console his daughter by pointing out some pious reading for her. He enjoined her to tell her brothers that he had pardoned his enemies, and to say to her mother that the last moment he would love her as on the first day. Then, turning to the little Duke, "Sweetheart," he said to him, "now they will cut off thy father's head."

The child looked at him with a serious air.

"Mark, child, what I say; they will cut off my head, and, perhaps, make thee King, and thy head, too, they will cut off at last."

"I will be torn in pieces first," replied the child, greatly disturbed.

The King embraced him with delight, put him down, and kissed his daughter, and blessed them both, then, suddenly rising.

"Have them taken away," he said to Juxon.

The children went away in tears. Charles took them back into his arms, and blessed them once more; then, tearing himself from their caresses, he fell upon his knees and resumed his prayers with the Bishop and Herbert, the only witnesses of their sad farewells. While the King was thus tasting the bitterness of death, his Judges met to sign the warrant for his execution. Great difficulty was experienced in assembling the Commissioners. Nearly all were agitated and affected. Their signatures were scarcely ligible. Cromwell alone seemed gay and clamorous, and besmeared with ink the face of Martyn, who sat beside him, and seized the hand of Col. Ingoldsby, to compel him to sign. On the morning of the 30th the King had arisen early. "I have a great work to do," he said to Herbert, and he began his toilet. The hands of the faithful servant trembled in arranging his hair. "Take, I pray you, the same pains as usual," said the King, "although my head is not to remain on my shoulders long. I would be as trim to-day as a bridegroom." The Bishop arrived and opened the gospel, read the twenty-seventh chapter of St. Matthew. The King thought it particularly applicable to his case; however, it was the proper lesson for the day. The King was at prayers; it was 10 o'clock. A low rap was heard at the door; it was Col. Hacker. He was escorted, with the Bishop, traversing the park between two lines of soldiers drawn up along the passage, to Whitehall. His aspect was serene, his eyes bright, his step firm, walking even faster than the guard, and marveling at their slowness. He received the communion from the hands of the Bishop, saying, "I go from a corruptible to an incorruptible crown. I am ready for all that is about to befall me, and from the bottom of my heart I have forgiven them all." He traversed the banqueting hall behind the line of soldiers. He ate a piece of bread and drank a glass of wine. It was 1 o'clock. Hacker knocked at the door. Juxon and Herbert fell upon their knees. It was the King who raised them. At the extremity of the hall an opening made on the day previous led to the scaffold, level with it, and hung with black. Two men stood near the ax, each in a sailor's attire, and masked. The King arrived with head erect, and was calm and grave, even to coldness, maintaining that he had always been in the right in his conduct as King. Then he looked at the block. "Be careful that it is set fast," he said to the executioner. While he spoke some one touched the ax. He turned around and said: "Do not hurt the ax that may hurt me." He said: "I will offer a short prayer, and when I put out my hands this way (stretching them out)—then." He collected his thoughts, said a few words in a low tone of voice, raised his eyes to heaven and knelt down, placing his head upon the block. In the space of a moment the King stretched out his hands, and the head fell at the first blow. The coffin remained exposed for seven days at Whitehall, and, on the 8th of February, a few faithful servants accompanied the remains of Charles I., King of England, to the tomb in Windsor, St. George's Chapel, where the body of Henry VIII. reposed. The sky was cloudless, but suddenly, as the coffin crossed the court-yard castle, a heavy fall of snow took place, and the pall of black velvet was completely covered with white snow. The servants of the King saw therein a heavenly sign of the innocence of their unhappy master. The coffin was lowered in the vault, without any religious ceremony. Those who were present prayed in their hearts. Such was the fate of Charles I., King of England.

The Law of Trespass.

Those readers who are fond of hunting and fishing may be interested to know what the law of trespass is, as they are liable to break it while seeking sport. The following summary of the law is from a report on the subject made to the State Board of Agriculture of Pennsylvania:

Trespass is defined as "any transgression or offense against the law of nature, of society, or of the country in which we live, whether it relates to a man's person or property." This is its widest meaning.

Ordinarily, however, it has reference only to an entry on the property of another without authority, and in doing damage while there, whether much or little.

The law gives the owner exclusive control over his property. Any infringement of his rights without his permission or justified by legal authority therefore constitutes a trespass.

It does not need that the land should be inclosed by fences. The law supposes an imaginary inclosure, which answers every purpose, and the simple act of passing it constitutes trespass, although no harm should really result to crops, cattle, or aught else.

Even a person legally authorized to seize certain goods on a man's premises dare not break open door for that purpose; if he does, his authority avails him nothing, and he becomes a common trespasser.

Neither is a person justified in so arranging spouts as to discharge water on another man's land, even though he never steps off his own grounds; nor to permit filth to pass a boundary line without due permission.

When a spout first discharges on a man's own premises and the contents then find their way to a neighbor's premises it does not constitute a trespass.

Hunting and fishing, however, constitute the most common and annoying sources of trespass to which our farmers are subjected.

Custom has induced some people to believe they can hunt or fish on the lands or waters of other men with impunity. Nothing is wider of the fact than this.

Because there can be no property in rabbits, quail, squirrels, pheasants and other feral birds and animals, they think these may be pursued wherever they may be discovered.

It is hardly necessary to say that the same laws governing trespass in other cases prevail here. No matter that neither grass nor grain are trampled down, whether gates are left closed, bars left up and no rails broken, the pursuit of such game on the lands of another without permission is trespass.

To even enter an unclosed piece of wood, where there are no crops to be injured, in pursuit of game, which may have taken refuge there, is a violation of law—quite as much as if a wheat-field in ear had been trampled down.

Fox-hunts, which are again becoming common in certain sections of this and the neighboring counties, are all in violation of law, and every farmer whose acres are passed over by the hunters without his sanction having been previously obtained has recourse in the law against the sportsmen for trespass.

Two Cups of Tea.

"It blows, ma'am," said Mr. Bumble, turning up his coat collar, "enough to cut one's ears off."

Mrs. Corney looked from the kettle to the Beadle, and bashfully inquired whether—whether he wouldn't take a cup of tea.

Mr. Bumble turned back his collar, drew another chair up to the table, looked at the lady, coughed and smiled.

Mrs. Corney rose to get another cup and saucer from the closet, and again Mr. B. coughed louder than before.

"Sweet, Mr. Bumble?" inquired the matron, taking up the sugar-basin.

"Very sweet, indeed, ma'am," replied Mr. Bumble, and, if ever a Beadle looked tender, Mr. B. was that Beadle at that moment.

"You have a cat, ma'am, I see; and kittens, too, I declare! Very nice animals—so very domestic."

"Oh, yes," rejoined the matron, "so fond of their home, too."

"Mrs. Corney, I mean to say this, that any cat or kitten that could live with you, ma'am, and not be fond of its home, must be an ass, ma'am," and he hitched his chair a very little morsel farther from the fire.

The table was a round one; consequently, moving the chair little by little, soon began to diminish the distance between the Beadle and the matron. Now, if the matron had moved her chair to the right, she would have been scorched by the fire, and, if to the left, she must have fallen into Mr. Bumble's arms; so (being a discreet matron, and no doubt foreseeing these consequences at a glance) she remained where she was, and handed Mr. B. another cup of tea.

The Beadle drank his tea to the last drop, finished a piece of toast, whisked the crumbs off his knees, wiped his lips, and—deliberately kissed the matron.

"Mr. Bumble! Mr. Bumble! I shall scream!" Mr. B. made no reply, but, in a slow and dignified manner, put his arm around the matron's waist. As the lady had stated her intention of screaming, of course she would have done so, but a hasty knocking at the door had the curious effect of restoring her voice to its usual asperity, and the Beadle spread himself before the fire, with his back toward it, seeming to be engaged in taking an exact inventory of the furniture.—"Oliver Twist."

The Stopped Clocks.

The clocks were stopped at the banquet hour.

It was at the fete given by the Earl of Leicester to Queen Elizabeth.

The splendor of that reception has seldom if ever been equaled in English history.

The fete was a series of magnificent banquets and diversions. There were tilts and tournaments; the park was peopled with actors who represented nymphs, gods and goddesses, and who were prepared to offer some new surprise to the Queen wherever she appeared. There was continuous minstrelsy; ten oxen were slaughtered every morning, and many hogsheads of wine were consumed daily.

The fete lasted seventeen days.

The Queen, amid such pageants as these, did not like to be reminded of change, evanescence, death.

So the clocks were stopped at the banquet hour.

But time passed on.

The astrals went out in the halls at last, and the actors threw off the masks of Sylvanus, Pomona, Bacchus and Apollo. The seventeen days' fete was ended, faded and gone.

Time went on.

The Queen grew old and withered. One day she lay down on cushions to die. Attendants stood near in awe awaiting her wish and to do her bidding.

She is said to have desired one thing—one thing only:

"Time!"

But time went on.

A Chinese Lodge of Freemasons in New York.

Judge Lawrence, of the New York Supreme Court, lately granted a certificate of incorporation to a Chinese Masonic lodge, to be called "Long Wa Fong Eng We." The incorporators are five Chinamen, who were "raised" in their native land. Mr. Baptiste, one of the number, gave the following responses to the queries of a World reporter:

"If you are Freemasons, why don't you apply for a charter from the Grand Lodge of New York?" asked the reporter.

"We have had that under consideration for some time, and have taken the advice of several American Masons, who, however, are divided as to the advisability of such an application. To avoid any question being raised, we have decided to form a lodge of Chinamen and to do our work in our own lodge-room."

"When did you first become a Mason?"

"I was first made a Mason in China long before I came to America."

"Have you ever been tried by an American Mason?"

"Oh, yes, more than once. In China we have had both English and American Freemasons in our lodges."

"Is there any very great difference observable in the examinations by Americans of Chinese and vice versa?"

"No, none in the signs and grips. The great trouble is in the language, although both rituals mean the same thing, and our passwords, although different in sound, have the same significance."

"Have you any idea of the origin and antiquity of Masonry in China?"

"Oh, yes. I have studied the subject, but it is too much to discuss at this time and under these circumstances; but one thing I will tell you, and that is that the ritual used in China has been handed down unaltered for over 1,000 years."

"Can you produce any evidence to substantiate that assertion?"

"I can; and will be happy to do so if you will call at my house at any time," and, handing his card to the reporter, Mr. Baptiste passed on. His lodge is the first established among Chinamen of the Atlantic coast.

The Human Race Running to Brain.

If there is to be so much head work, what will become of us all? If both men and women are to develop more and more their brains, we shall soon be not far from the realization of the words of Diderot, who said: "We walk so little, we work so little, and we think so much, that I do not despair of man ending by being nothing but a head." Figure to yourself civilized man 100 or 200 years hence, when manual labor shall have been entirely replaced by machinery, and when the dreams of Socialists shall have been realized, and man, even in the lowest grade of society, shall be able to gain his livelihood by working say three or four hours out of the twenty-four. The tendency, you will observe, is constantly to reduce the hours of labor. In many parts of England, for instance, the hours of labor are little more than half what they were fifty years ago. Imagine, then, the movement spoken of by Diderot constantly progressing, and man walking less and less, owing to the increased facilities of communication and locomotion, and working less and less, owing to the constantly increasing use and perfection of machinery, and thinking more and more out of pure distraction and out of the ennui of civilization! Imagine woman, thanks to the realization of the projects of Mr. Camille See, and to the establishment of Girton Colleges all over the world, imagine woman walking even less than she does now, working less, and thinking more and more! What shall we come to, great Darwin? Does not the theory of evolution point to the inevitable realization of Diderot's words? Will not our legs wither away and return to the rudimentary stage like our tails? Will not our arms and bodies diminish, and muscles for which there is no longer any use dry up, and their elements be absorbed by the brain and head, which will acquire the phenomenal proportions of a caricature?—Parisian.

A Joke from the Judicial Bench.

One of the members of the bar in Saratoga, who thoroughly enjoys a good joke, relates the following, and applies the moral to himself: Not long since he was counsel in a case before Judge Pratt, referee, and during the progress of the trial became a little bit noisy, as he sometimes does, when the Judge looked up and said to him: "Mr. ——, did you ever hear of the man who was lost in the woods during a thunder-storm?" On being answered in the negative, the Judge continued: "A man, in attempting to pass through a piece of woods, lost his way, and while he was in that predicament a fearful thunder-storm came up. The woods grew awfully dark. The roaring of the wind and the crashing of the thunder was terrific. The man was frightened, and started to pray, but, not being used to that business, said: 'O Lord, give us a little more light, and a little less noise!' I don't mean you Mr ——," added the Judge. The counsel says that the audience supposed all the time the Judge did mean him, and, now that he thinks of it himself, he inclines to that opinion also.—Troy Times.

GOV. COLQUITT, of Georgia, is an active Christian worker, and very liberal in church subscriptions.

LONGINGS FOR HOME.

BY [illegible]

My spirit is yearning to-night with desire—
Unquenchable longing, [illegible]
[illegible]
The hopes of the present and joys of the past.

I'm longing, as only the homeless can long,
To list as of yore to the lullaby song;
To see my young sisters, in innocent glee,
At play with their dolls 'neath the old beechen tree.

Or, with my wild brother, to wade in the stream
That glided along by 'neath the sun's dying gleam;
Or to launch tiny ships, and send them to sea,
As eager as Captain and sailor could be.

I'm longing, I'm longing, for all the loved scenes
That come when the shadow of night intervenes,
And, silently, vigils o'er the wanderer keep,
As he softly murmurs in his home-dream sleep.

Oh, hours of wild rapture! breathe on me the spell
That brings me those pleasures with which I would dwell,
And give me the pinions of fancy to fly
To the home of my childhood, and there let me die.

Oh, stranger! whose bark is at rest on the sea
That foams in wild fury and chaos 'round me,
Light up your bright beacons of love, so the boat
May safely reach harbor, though fiercely storm-tossed.

For love is the beacon of light and of life,
The rapture of living, allayer of strife,
The key to the heart in humanity's breast,
The giver of joy and bestower of rest.
—Chicago Ledger.

PITH AND POINT.

ORIGINALLY woman was man's sequel.

BRIC-A-BRAC to be avoided—Family jars.

THE women who do fancy work don't fancy work.

ON board of a leaky ship everybody is "admitted to bail."

THE young man who wants to get up with the sun must not sit up too late with the daughter.

A FAMILIAR instance of color-blindness is that of a man taking a brown silk umbrella and leaving a green gingham in its place.

She was my idyl when I wooed,
My idol when I won;
My ideal when, in after years,
Ways idle she had none.

MOTHER (very sweetly) to her children, who have just had a distribution of candy—"What do children say when they get candy?" Chorus—"More!"

AN old widower says, when you pop the question to a lady, do it with a kind of laugh, as if you were joking. If she accepts you, very good; if she does not, you can say you were only in fun.

SOME one, who knows all about it, says that, "to ride a velocipede successfully a young man should see that his hair is carefully parted in the middle, having no more one side than on the other, in the way of balance."

"WHAT do you suppose we'll say when we meet in heaven, George?" said she. "Say? I know what you'll say, darling." "Me say! What?" "Why, you'll say: 'I told you so. I knew just how it would be up here.'"

A LADY engaged to be married, and getting sick of her bargain, applied to a friend to help her untie the knot, before it was too late. "Oh, certainly," she replied, "it is very easy to untie it now while it is only a beau knot."

AN Irishman remarked to his companion, on observing a lady pass: "Pat, did you ever see so thin a woman as that before?" "Thin!" replied the other. "Botheration! I seen a woman as thin as two of her put together, so I have

KATIE is a red-headed, black-eyed baby, just too cute for any use. The other night she closed her little prayer as follows: "Dod please mate me a dood little dirl"—and then, forgetting for whose sake, she added—"for pity's sake, amen."

"UNLESS you give me aid," said a beggar to a benevolent lady, "I am afraid I shall have to resort to something which I greatly dislike to do." The lady handed him a dollar, and compassionately asked: "What is it, poor man, that I have saved you from?" "Work," was the mournful answer.

A WRITER in the Boston Transcript thus relates a tale of woe: "The young lady came and tried to sell me a manuscript story. 'My teacher likes it,' she said when I repeated our usual formula of no space, no money, no time, and no anything to her. 'Teacher an editor?' I inquired mildly. 'No, indeed,' was the answer, 'she's a person of refinement and education.'"

TWO GRAMMARIANS were wrangling, one contending that it was only proper to say, "My wages is high," while the other noisily insisted that the correct thing was, "My wages are high." Finally they stopped a day-laborer, and submitted the question to him. "Which do you say, 'Your wages is high,' or 'Your wages are high?'" "Oh, off wid yer nonsinse!" he said, resuming his pick; "yer naythur of ye right—me wages is low, bad luck to it!"

"AM I tired of life?" said a cheerful old man, the other day, in reply to the question. "Not a bit of it. I remember landing in this town with a chip hat, hickory shirt and a pair of breeches. I've been away up and I've been flat on my back, yet I'd like to begin and go it all over again—chip hat, shirt, breeches and all. Why? Well, you see when you come to the end, you don't know what's beyond. I'm dead sure of this other thing, and, on the whole, this world just tickles me to death."

IT is no wonder that a miller soon gets gray, when on all sides he hears innuendoes about toll. Here is the latest one, paraphrased from one of Watts' hymns:

Teach me the measure of my grist,
Thou maker of my meal;
I would survey what I have missed
And learn how millers deal.
See the vile miller lifts the pole,
The mill begins to crawl;
He keeps the grist, sends home the [illegible]
And tells the boy that's all.
What can I look or hope for, then,
From miller's meal and dust,
Who keeps a portion of my grain,
And disappoints my trust.
Now all such millers I'll forsake,
My empty bags recall,
And give my custom to such men
As send me back my all.

A New England Romance.

Way back in the early part of this century, one of the loveliest girls of the town of Norwich became engaged to a dashing young Englishman, apparently of great wealth, who claimed to have been a naval officer. He went away ostensibly for a short visit to England and was never heard of in Norwich again, although tradition has it that he was a pirate by profession and that he was hung as such soon after leaving Norwich. However the truth may have been, his affianced bride was faithful unto death and believed in him to the last, when she faded away, a very sweet, gentle, sad old lady.—Springfield Republican.

SABBATH READING.

The Presence of the Savior.

The presence of the Savior,
How it brightens all my way,
How it helps me, how it strengthens,
How it cheers me day by day.

The presence of the Savior,
How it makes the darkness light,
How it brings the rays of sunshine
Into sorrow's dreary night.

The presence of the Savior,
How it fills the longing heart;
With a peaceful calm, sweet gladness
Nothing earth-born can impart.

The presence of the Savior,
How it chases every fear,
How it soothes the restless spirit
When faith feels that He is near.

The presence of the Savior,
And the knowledge of His love,
How it seems a sweet, bright foretaste
Of eternal joys above.

The presence of the Savior,
Surely it's a heaven begun;
For 'twill be the brightest glory
Of the life beyond the sun.

Tell God.

None of us should need to be reminded that a prayer to God needs no middle messenger. It goes of itself directly to Him. But there is something very touching in this suffering sailor's request—and remarkable in the seeming answer:

A curious story is told of the wreck of a large British coal-ship, which foundered far out at sea, last June, off the coast of California. The sole survivor was a Portuguese sailor named Lopez, who was picked up, lashed to a raft, as he drifted in the path of an inward-bound vessel for Puget sound.

He was taken to the Marine Hospital at Port Townsend, and, after a week of skillful nursing, became sensible so as to relate his extraordinary adventure. He had floated with a dozen companions helplessly in the Pacific for ten days without food or water.

One after another of his shipmates died from thirst, until he was alone with the last survivor, and, as he was dying, Lopez said to him:

"George, do you think you are going to God?"

On receiving an affirmative reply, Lopez added, with all the intenseness of despair, "When you get where God is, tell Him to send us some water."

The dying man promised that he would do so, and soon breathed his last. Shortly after, a copious shower fell, and Lopez was enabled, by its help, to hold out until rescued, as stated above, on the twenty-second day after the sinking of the ship.

The Gentle Face of War.

During our civil war, the depot of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad in Philadelphia was the frequent stopping-place for a few moments of regiments going South, and of large bodies of wounded men on their way home.

A good woman who lived near, whenever she heard of such an arrival, was in the habit of making a pot of coffee and taking it to the tired and wounded men. Some of her neighbors joined her in this good work.

After a few weeks, other persons, finding how grateful this simple refreshment was to the soldiers, asked leave to contribute to it. Then a mechanic who owned an enormous cooper-shop near the depot offered it for their use.

The kindly work grew. Money came in. Willing hands were ready. In the vacant shop great tables always stood laden with plates, cups, etc.; stoves, with fires always burning, were in the adjoining kitchen, and great stores of cold meats and bread were kept at hand for immediate use.

A cannon was fired ten minutes before a regiment arrived, and when the cars, full of the wounded and sick, rolled into the station, not only a comfortable meal awaited them, but there was a temporary hospital ready, and doctors, and tender, motherly women to dress their wounds.

"Nobody asked me," said a Southern soldier, "if I was a rebel. Nobody seemed to care for anything but that I was suffering. I had lost my arm, and I was on my way to prison. But when I said good-by to these women I almost forgave the North."

The death of one of these good doctors a week or two ago has recalled these facts. He had charge of several large hospitals in which were men from both armies. On every Sunday, different clergymen of the city came to preach, some of whom were thoughtless enough to take advantage of that occasion to try to convert the rebels to patriotism. The doctor interfered.

"This is not the place for politics," he said. "These wounded and dying men need Christ and Him crucified now. This, and nothing else, gentlemen."

On one Sunday the venerable Bishop Potter, who was very much beloved by the soldiers and prisoners, preached a sermon which drew tears from many of these rough men. One who, it is stated, was an old man of great learning, had become an infidel, and had drawn many others into skepticism. He heard, and with God's help was brought to see the truth. A few days later, knowing that he had but a few days to live, he sent for the Bishop and told him what he owed to him in the sermon he had heard. Soon after he folded his hands, and repeated in a clear but feeble voice a hymn which his mother had taught him fifty years before:

Not in my innocence I trust,
I bow before Thee in the dust.
Through my Savior's blood alone
I look for mercy at Thy throne.

He died that night.—Youth's Companion.

Mohammedan Indifference to Suffering.

I recollected having seen at Nikopolis or Sistova—I forget which—great piles of bones ready for exportation, among which were some human skulls. I also recalled to mind that two months previously, when I was visiting some chemical works in the North of Scotland the manager showed me his bone stores from the Black sea, and said that human bones were often found in cargoes from that quarter. Again, a few weeks after my visit to the Shipka, I saw a considerable number of men's skulls and other bones in shallow open holes in the Acropolis of Athens, which the local dragoman told me were the remains of Greeks and Turks who had fallen in the War of Independence fifty years ago. That Mohammedans and other rude races are indifferent about burying the bodies of those in whom they have no special personal interest I can well believe. With them the feeling of sympathy for physical suffering is almost non-existent. If so callous about the living, why should they care for the dead? Over and over again in India I have been disgusted by the cruel way they leave a dog, when disabled by a boar, to die a lingering death in the jungle—from starvation, or being eaten while still half alive by beasts of prey—when a prod with a spear would have ended the poor brute's misery. It is the same with baggage and other animals. Of the 70,000 camels which died during the 1878-9 Afghan campaign, I suppose a large majority died in one or other of the above horrible ways. Of those that did not, we may safely conjecture the happy dispatch was either due to the humanity of a British officer, or to the promptings of the Mohammedan stomach.—Blackwood's Magazine.

QUAINT STORIES FROM COLORADO.

Glimpses of the Amusing Side of the Miner's Life.

[From the Denver (Col.) Inter Ocean.]

It was nearly a year ago when Leadville was first showing what there was in her. There were several newly-made bonanza kings about Denver then, and among them was a man who had probably never had $20 in his pockets at one time previous to his strike. To him the possession of a watch was the natural evidence of the possession of a competence, and, as he had made more than a competence, he felt that the fact should be indicated by the purchase of several watches. These he had deposited in the Grand Central Hotel safe. One night he came into the office very much the worse for liquor, lurched up to the desk and hiccoughed out to the clerk: "Gimme a watch!" A timepiece was passed to his unsteady hands, but, in endeavoring to thrust it into his trousers pockets, he let it slip and fall upon the floor. Without casting a glance at the fallen watch, he lurched to the counter again, reached out his shaking hand, mustered all his faculties to the task of speaking, and then blurted out: "Gimme nuther!" Can the indifference of affluence go beyond this?

He was evidently a "tenderfoot," but, as he stopped before an old miner and held out a piece of micaceous granite for his inspection, he made a strong effort to look as if he had been born with a contempt for civilization, and that the feeling had been steadily growing on him ever since. "What do you make this out to be?" he asked, indicating the specimen with a nod. "Humph!" was the expressive answer. "Gold quartz or carbonates?" The "honest miner" turned it over in his hand indifferently, took out his knife and picked at it for a while, and then asked: "Got much of it?" "Thousands of tons," answered the other eagerly. "How much do you suppose she'll run?" "Can't tell nuthin' without an assay." "But you can guess, can't you; you can guess?" "Oh, yes," answered the barnacle, "anybody kin guess; but a guess is liable to be extravagant. Now, I shall say—but mind ye, I may go over the mark—I should s-a-a-y (turning the specimen over again and holding it up to the light), I should s-a-a-y that if you can save the gold in this, and catch the silver, and not waste the lead, that it might run about—well, about $2 to the county."

"Is this my train?" asked a traveler at the Kansas Pacific depot of a lounger. "I don't know, but I guess not," was the doubtful reply. "I see it's got the name of a railroad company on the side, and I expect it belongs to them. Have you lost a train anywhere?"

"Do you like your champagne dry?" asked A. of B., who didn't know how he liked his champagne, because he had only made his strike the day previous, and had never before seen any champagne to which he felt justified in applying a pronoun in the possessive case. "I dunno," replied B., "but I guess you'd better gimme some that's wet. I'm sort o' thirsty."

It was about Belford that the remark was made: "Jim has some right good points," it ran, "but the great trouble with him is that he is always about six lengths ahead of everybody's judgment, and gaining at every jump."

A Spoiled Man.

Most of us know what a spoiled child is. In Europe there is a spoiled man. He has been indulged and pampered to such an extent that it costs $11,000,000 a year to keep him in good humor.

This spoiled man is the Sultan of Turkey. His house is defended by thirty great guns and a guard of 3,000 men. His head servant, or Grand Marshal, has a salary of $100,000 a year. Five secretaries are employed to save him the trouble of writing. Four chief chamberlains live with him, who, when they march in procession, carry a great bunch of keys on their backs. He has twenty-three aids-de-camp, all of whom are persons of much consequence.

This spoiled man keeps five talkers to amuse him with anecdotes and gossip, gathered from all quarters of Constantinople by sixty spies. Five doctors live with him to take care of his health, and they are assisted by five apothecaries. Four Mohammedan chaplains attend to his spiritual interests. Five librarians nourish his intellect, and read the petitions that come in.

There is an officer whose duty it is to go with this spoiled man when he takes a walk in the garden. A band of music and a company of singers are part of the spoiled man's household. Five pianists give lessons to his wives and children. The black eunuchs who wait upon the ladies of his household are 120 in number.

In the spoiled man's kitchen there are 300 cooks and turnspits; and the food prepared by them is served by 200 waiters.

In short, the servants of this extremely spoiled man are about 4,000 in number, very many of whom are personages of high rank who keep great numbers of servants for themselves.

It costs, as we just said, $11,000,000 a year to keep house in this way, the most of which is earned by the hard labor of poor men and women, many of whom often go hungry that this spoiled man's servants may have more money to waste.

Spoiled children are very bad indeed, but, in all the world, there is no such terrible scourge as a spoiled man.—Youth's Companion.

PNEUMATIC clocks have been introduced in Paris by a company which furnishes the clocks and works them through pneumatic tubes from a central station. The patent has been purchased for America.

THIRD-TERM ALPHABET.

FOR YOUNG BEGINNERS.

A is the Acci-Dent, giving us Grant;
B—Babcock, Belknap—two Bull-pups we chant,
C is for Corbin and Colfax and Crime;
D—San Domingo and Drunk all the time,
E is Election—by seven to eight;
F is the Fraud and black Friday we hate.
G is the Grabs in which Grant took a hand;
H is for Harrington wearing the brand.
I—for Ignoring the ways of the past;
J is for Jesse who stuck the stamps fast.
K is for Kings on whom Grant loves to fawn;
L is for "Let us have peace"—in a horn.
M is for Murphy of "Lost-Stocking" case.
N—Nepotism and Naval disgrace.
O is poor Orville—now laid on the shelf;
P—Porter, Presents, Post-traderships, Pelf.
Q is the Quiet—so sweet to a slave;
R is for Robeson—of navies the Knave.
S—"Sylph," and Shepherd, the boss of the ring,
T the Third Term on the people to spring.
U is our Union that once seemed secure;
V is our Vengeance—slow-coming but sure.
W—Williams and Whisky not straight;
X is Xposures of wickedness great.
Y is Yourself, who must rouse up and act;
Z is the Zeal that no patriot e'er lacked.

What Hayes Costs.

In the multitude of items that make up the Deficiency bill, which passed the House of Representatives a few days ago, is one "for contingent expenses of the Executive office, including stationery therefor, $1,000," for the current fiscal year. There is no excuse for any deficiency in that office, and this loose practice of voting away the people's money on false pretences deserves the severest reprobation.

Before Gen. Grant became President the sum voted for contingent expenses was small, yet abundant for the object. Until the last year of the civil war $1,000 per annum was appropriated for Mr. Lincoln. In 1864 the appropriation was raised to $2,000, on account of exceptional demands on the Executive office.

The Republicans in the Forty-second Congress not only doubled Grant's salary, in violation of the precedent which had stood untouched from the foundation of the Government, but they increased the pay and emoluments of all his surroundings, and voted $6,000 a year for "contingent expenses of the Executive office," or three times as much as the highest sum ever received by Mr. Lincoln.

Last year Congress appropriated "for contingent expenses of the Executive office, including stationery therefor, $6,000." And now, before nine months have passed away, this money is all gone, and the fraudulent President asks for $1,000 more. We undertake to say, and all experience justifies the assertion, that $6,000 a year cannot be legitimately expended for proper contingencies of the Executive office, because the only expense to be incurred is for ordinary stationery and postage stamps.

This money is practically an addition to the salary of the Executive, and was so utilized, partially, by Grant. Hayes has turned fully three-fourths of it into the fund for maintaining his personal household, and in that way has saved so much of his regular pay. No man ever occupied the Executive Mansion heretofore who made a business of converting the office and its opportunities to money-hoarding, as Hayes has done, and that, too, by the meanest of contrivances. The cant about temperance is a mere dodge in the line of economy, for it is notorious that the scruple disappears when the expense falls on somebody else.

The cost of keeping up the Executive establishment has increased out of all proportion to any necessity that exists for the expenditure. It is not the dollars and cents alone that provoke criticism upon this extravagance, but the far more serious consideration that it is a departure from the simplicity of the fathers, and is an attempt to imitate the pomp and parade of monarchical Government.

Take the items of 1879 as an illustration:

Compensation of President	$ 50,000
Compensation of private secretary	3,250
Compensation of assistant secretary	2,250
Compensation of two executive clerks at $2,000 each	4,000
Compensation of stenographer	1,800
Compensation of steward	1,800
Compensation of messenger and usher	1,200
Compensation of furnace keeper	864
Compensation of night watchman	900
Compensation of one night usher	1,200
Compensation of two day ushers at $1,400 each	2,800
Compensation of two doorkeepers at $1,200 each	2,400
Compensation of one clerk	1,800
Compensation of one clerk	1,400
Compensation of one clerk	1,200
Compensation of one telegraph operator	1,100
Compensation of four messengers (to wait on the three clerks and telegraph operator nominally, but really servants) at $1,200 each	4,800
Two horses for messengers, to be furnished by the Secretary of War, nominally for use of messengers, but really for Secretary's carriage, cost not given. New item	....
Contingent expenses	6,000
Grounds of Executive Mansion	5,000
Refurnishing, repairs, and greenhouses	25,000
Total	$119,964

In addition to all these charges, fuel and light are supplied free; there is a large kitchen garden attached to the premises, and there are grounds that furnish hay for the horses. In fact, the occupant of the White House is at no expense but for the food and dressing of his family, and most of the former comes from the Commissary Department of the army, at wholesale prices for the choicest articles. This is the bill for one year of a fraudulent President, who is believed to have invested over $125,000 of his pay and perquisites since March 4, 1877.—New York Sun.

Dangers of Centralization.

During the discussion, in Congress, of the bill to define the jurisdiction of the Federal courts, Representative Townshend, of Illinois, delivered an able and logical speech upon the dangers of centralization, in the course of which he said:

> As I have already intimated, this question brings up the old issue, which has ever been the true line of demarkation between the Democratic party and its opponents—the question of home rule and of centralization; the question of the Government of the many as against the rule of the few; the question which divided Jefferson and Hamilton. The long life of the Democratic party is mainly due to the position which it has ever occupied upon that great question. In my judgment it has been enabled by its fealty to the true Jeffersonian principle on this question to survive so many disastrous defeats, and it will by means of its adhesion to this position live as long in the future as it furnishes brave and true men to lead in the battle for the freedom and happiness of the people.
>
> It is strange that while all Europe is now advancing toward constitutional liberty there is a strong party in this country seeking by desperate means, fair and foul, to turn this home of freedom back toward centralization and despotism. While the wires down under the sea bring us tidings that the Czar of Russia, the most absolute of the monarchies of the Old World, contemplates calling the notables of the empire together for the purpose of framing a constitutional form of government we find on this floor successors to John Hancock and Samuel Adams advocating a doctrine which is destructive of our constitutional form of government. When the old Federal party, the progenitor of the present Republican party, first advocated a strong centralized Government, we had strong, brave and true men, like Jefferson and Madison, who, by the help of the people, were able to crush it. Would to God we had such men in our midst to-day, in place of some of the timid time-servers who have neither the courage nor the inclination to denounce in fitting terms this treason against the constitution and the rights of the people of the States! We see the Federal judiciary stealthily marching upon the rights of the States, aiming a deadly blow at the republic, and, instead of arresting its progress, we find men cringing before it and talking about the temper of the opposition party being such that no attempt should be made to resist by legislation the impending disaster. Was this the language of Jefferson when he saw at its commencement the stream which has since swollen into such a volume as threatens to ingulf the constitution? No, sir. Let me read to those who lack courage the utterances of that fearless apostle of liberty. He said in 1821:
>
> It has long, however, been my opinion, and I have never shrunk from its expression, * * * that the germ of dissolution of our Federal Government is in the constitution of the Federal judiciary, an irresponsible body (for impeachment is scarcely a scarecrow), working like gravity by night and by day, gaining a little to-day and a little to-morrow, and advancing its noiseless step like a thief over the field of jurisdiction, until all shall be usurped from the States, and the government of all be consolidated into one.
>
> And again in 1822:
>
> The foundations are already deeply laid by their decisions for the annihilation of constitutional State rights and the removal of every check, every counterpoise to the ingulfing power of which themselves are to make a sovereign part.

INDIANA ITEMS.

MEASLES are prevalent among the students at Greencastle.

MICA has been discovered in paying quantities near Madison.

THE State House contractors laid the first stone of the foundation of the dome the other day.

MARTIN SOMERS, while lying drunk on the track, at Knightsville, was killed by a passenger train.

OVER eight miles of water-pipe have already been laid at Fort Wayne—almost one-third of the entire amount.

A BRIDGE near Crawfordsville, which was contracted for seven years at $7,000, has already cost the county $21,000.

THE Supreme Court of Indiana has decided that the sale of cigars on Sunday is lawful, on the ground that cigars are a necessity.

THE bridge of the narrow-gauge railway across White river at Worthington, which was washed away in January, has been rebuilt.

ANDREW WALLACE, of Indianapolis, a prominent mine speculator, has been shot and fatally wounded by his insane son, at Pennington, D. T.

ROCHESTER boasts of a baby spotted and striped with red. The parents have been offered $1,000 for the privilege of exhibiting it next summer, but refuse.

MISS ELLA ANGLETON committed suicide at Shelbyville, the other day, because the young man she loved was paying attention to another young lady.

FOR seventeen years each successive Grand Jury in Howard county has condemned the jail at Kokomo as unfit for use, and nothing more has been done about it.

THE Logansport Journal says: "The scarlet fever still prevails in the city to a dangerous extent, and new cases are reported almost daily to the Board of Health."

A PARTY of twelve in a wagon were thrown over an embankment two miles west of Terre Haute, a few days ago, drowning two ladies, a Miss Otterman and a Miss Hanna.

THE laying of the corner-stone of the new St. Vincent Catholic Church, four miles east of Shelbyville, took place last week. The building will be completed at a cost of about $25,000.

THE wife of John C. Prather, of Seymour, is making strenuous efforts to capture the man who obtained $167 from her last week by representing that Prather had sent him to get it.

THE ten-ton shaft of the steamboat Diana, at Indianapolis, which has been buried in the rolling-mill yard for more than ten years, has been dug up and will be molded into railroad bars.

PLYMOUTH'S new jail is now completed and approved by the Commissioners. Its cost was $17,000. The next day after it was approved the roofing on one of the cupolas blew off during a wind-storm.

A MICROPHONE has been placed on the pulpit of Rev. G. J. Darby, pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at Evansville, and connected through a telephone in the pastor's study with telephones in the houses of a number of infirm and aged members who are unable to attend church. By this means they are enabled to hear the entire service, organ, choir and preacher.

The 1880 State Fair.

The Executive Committee of the State Board of Agriculture have decided upon the following programme of races for the next State fair:

Tuesday—To runners 4 years old and over, there is offered a purse of $150; 1st, $75; 2d, $50; 3d, $25. Stallion trot, open to all stallions; purse, $100; 1st, $50; 2d, $30; 3d, $20.

Wednesday—A special attraction in the racing line will be provided hereafter, in addition to the following: Runners under 4 years of age, one mile and repeat, $200; 1st, $100; 2d, $60; 3d, $40.

Thursday—Trotters that have never beat 2:40; purse, $300; 1st, $150; 2d, $100; 3d, $50. Trotters under 5 years of age; purse, $100; 1st, $50; 2d, $30; 3d, $20.

Friday—Entries confined to horses owned in this State; purse, $150; 1st, $75; 2d, $50; 3d, $25. Runners' consolation purse, for horses that have been in the preceding races during the Fair—$150 is offered; 1st, $75; 2d, $50; 3d, $25.

Saturday—Free-for-all trot; purse, $500; 1st, $250; 2d, $150; 3d, $100. Runners' free for all, one-half mile and repeat; purse, $100; 1st, $50; 2d, $30; 3d, $20.

All the races are to be mile heats, the winner to secure the best three in five. There must be at least five entries, and three must start. Trotters and pacers to be in harness. The entrance fee will be 10 per cent. of the purse. The entry books will be kept open until 10 o'clock of the day the race is called, except the Saturday races, which must be made by noon of the preceding day. No time or distance flag will be held. With this exception the races will be governed by the rules of the National Association.

THE Consolidated Virginia mine did not pay the expenses of working until after the expenditure of $700,000. Then it yielded $80,000,000 dividends to its stockholders in four years.

STATE DEBTS.

Debts of the States in the Union in 1840 and 1879.

[From Bradstreet's Reporter, New York.]

Below we have compiled a table showing the debts of the States in the Union in 1840 and 1879. The figures of 1840 have been obtained from a statement published in 1841 by Albert Gallatin, and those of 1879 from the various State documents. At this time the table will be of peculiar interest:

	Total State Debt, 1879.	Total State Debt, 1840.
Alabama	$ 7,[illegible]	$ [illegible]
Arkansas	5,000,000	3,000,000
California	3,403,000
Colorado	123,000	[illegible]
Connecticut	4,967,000	None
Delaware	985,000	None
Florida	1,284,000	Not known
Georgia	10,600,000	Not known
Illinois	600,000	13,210,000
Indiana	5,000,000	11,890,000
Iowa	300,000	None
Kansas	1,180,000
Kentucky	1,820,000	3,700,000
Louisiana	11,724,000	23,730,000
Maine	5,848,000	550,000
Maryland	*10,750,000	11,[illegible]
Massachusetts	†33,000,000	5,390,000
Michigan	900,000	5,340,000
Minnesota	2,675,000	....
Mississippi	500,000	7,000,000
Missouri	16,000,000	2,500,000
Nebraska	500,000	....
Nevada	550,000	....
New Hampshire	3,450,000	None
New Jersey	2,300,000	None
New York	9,150,000	21,500,000
North Carolina	27,000,000	None
Ohio	6,475,000	12,940,000
Oregon	320,000	....
Pennsylvania	21,875,000	36,350,000
Rhode Island	2,535,000	None
South Carolina	[illegible]	[illegible]
Tennessee	[illegible]	3,150,000
Texas	5,073,000	....
Vermont	140,000	None
Virginia	29,350,000	[illegible]
West Virginia	Prohibited	....
Wisconsin	2,250,000	None
Total	$266,638,000	$188,610,000

*Maryland held $24,250,000 in interest-paying securities of corporations, besides $23,360,000 of unproductive securities.

†Massachusetts has a sinking fund of $11,268,000.

Forty years ago the various States of the Union owed $188,610,000; to-day they owe $266,638,000. At the first sound of alarm, in 1837-'40, the Southern States began repudiation, and, according to a recent estimate made by the New York Tribune, the losses sustained by the creditors under the various forms of repudiation adopted in these States amount in round numbers to about $272,000,000, the repudiation of past-due interest and the forced reductions in the rate of interest under certain "Readjustment" acts being included. In 1870, according to the census returns, the State debts of the Union were $352,866,698, and the decrease since then is almost wholly owing to the wholesale wiping out of lawful debts which has been going on in the South. On the other hand, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana, and, indeed, nearly all the Western and Eastern States, ignored the "Mississippi plan," and passed stringent laws against the further creation of debt, and set about the payment of their commercial obligations. So strict were these provisions that Illinois had to secure an amendment to its constitution to "stop the payment of its indebtedness." The collection of a certain tax to pay the debt was made a constitutional provision, and after the debt was all paid the tax had to be collected until the constitution was finally amended. Indiana is, comparatively speaking, out of debt; Iowa never had a State debt worth speaking of; Michigan only owes $900,000; Ohio only $600,000, and, indeed, Missouri is the only Western State that has a State debt of any size. The State debts of the Western States were $31,000,000 in 1840, and only $26,000,000 now. With an indebtedness so insignificant, and resources so vast, it is deeply to be regretted that the word repudiation should have tainted the credit of the Western States, and both Minnesota and Missouri should, while there is yet time, honorably announce the doctrine that "the binding force of a contract depends upon a law which neither Kings nor people enacted nor can repeal."

The Duck Hunter's Story.

"Speaking of duck-shooting on St. Clair flats," sighed an old citizen, as he took a seat in a gun store yesterday. "I don't think there are as many birds up there as there was ten or fifteen years ago. Why, sir, the channels used to be just black with 'em, and they were so tame you could knock 'em on the head."

Everybody sighed to think those good old days and ducks could never return, and the veteran hunter continued:

"I remember I was out one day in April. I got in among the bipeds, and how many do you suppose I counted?"

"Three hundred," ventured one of the audience, after a long interval.

"Three hundred! Why, I always killed over a thousand every time I went out! No, sir, I counted over 16,000 great big, fat, plump, delicious ducks, and then I had only counted those on one side of the boat!"

"How long did it take you?"

"I don't know, sir, I had no watch with me. Time is nothing to a man counting ducks. I counted aloud, and when the ducks were small I counted two for one. By-and-by I got tired of counting and got ready for the slaughter."

"How many did you kill?"

"Well, now, I suppose I could lie about it, and say I killed nine or ten hundred, but I'm getting too near the grave for that. No, I didn't kill a blasted one, and there's where the strange part of the story comes in. When I began to lift that gun up those ducks knew what I was up to just as well as a human being, and what did they do? Why, sir, about 200 of 'em made a sudden dive, swam under the boat, and all raised on her port side at once and upset her! Yes, sir, they did, and there I was in the north channel, in ten feet of water, boat upset, night coming on, and I in my wet clothes."

"Well?"

"Well, I climbed up on the bottom of the boat, floated five miles, and was picked up by two Indians. We towed that upset boat to an island, and here another curious thing comes in. Under the boat were 204 large, plump ducks. They had been caught there when she upset, and all we had to do was to haul 'em out and rap 'em on the head."

"Why, why didn't they dive down and get from under the boat?" asked an amateur duck-shooter.

"Why didn't they, sir—why didn't they? Well, sir, I might have asked 'em why they didn't, but it was late, a cold wind had sprung up, and I didn't feel like talking! All I know is that I counted over 16,000 ducks, was upset, captured 204, and have affidavits here in my wallet to prove everything I have stated. Does any man here want to see the documents?"

No man did. They all looked out of the windows and wondered if they could lie that way when they had passed three-score years.—Detroit Free Press.

THERMALINE
A Safe and Reliable substitute for Quinine
The only 25 cent
AGUE REMEDY
IN THE WORLD
CURES
CHILLS & FEVER
and all MALARIAL DISEASES.
Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York, for Circular [illegible] FREE on application.

MALTSEENS MATICO OINTMENT.
An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box
Gives Immediate Relief.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.
Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or [illegible]. The word Docuta is on every box. Price 50c. per box, with full directions. Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. [illegible] (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.
The above four preparations for sale by F. R. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers, druggists, Auburn, Indiana.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 Cents per box. All Druggists.
SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders, [illegible] to take as a glass of Lemonade. [illegible]

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES
Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
[illegible]
WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.
[illegible]
Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, overwork, mental shocks, and other causes.
Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhœa, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. [illegible]
H. H. Warner & Co., Proprietors, ROCHESTER, N. Y.
[illegible]

NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO. Battle Creek, Mich.
Established in 1848. ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE
"VIBRATOR"
Threshing Machinery and Portable and Traction Engines.
[illegible]
ASTONISHINGLY DURABLE [illegible]
PORTABLE, TRACTION, and STRAW-BURNING STEAM-ENGINES, [illegible]
CAUTION! The wonderful success and popularity of our Vibrator Machinery has driven other machines to the wall; hence various makers are now attempting to build and palm off inferior and mongrel imitations of our famous goods.
BE NOT DECEIVED
by such experimental and worthless machinery. If you buy at all, get the "ORIGINAL" and the "GENUINE" from us.
For full particulars call on our dealers, or write to us for Illustrated Circulars, which we mail free. Address
NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

WELLESLEY
WALTHAM, MASS.

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,
SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS,
Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains, Ladies Gold Chains,
Castors Everything in the Jewelry line.
Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions
V'olin Strings.
special ttentio n given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at
JOE. ABRIGHT'S,
Second door north of Postoffice Auburn, Indinaa,

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES

IMMENSE STOCK OF GOODS FOR 1880.

No Advance on Teas, Coffees, Syrups, Sugars or Tobaccos.

All of these goods, in consequence of the increased demand, have advanced in the east, but we were fortunate in laying in a full supply when the prices were way down and our customers shall have the benefit of our purchases at old prices.

TEAS! TEAS! TEAS!

The consumption of TEAS the last six months has been double to what it has been since the panic; this, coupled with the short tea crop, created a great speculation in them, so much so that some grades have advanced 20 to 30 cents per pound, but our method of purchasing is direct of the importers, thereby saving the profits of the speculator and jobber, and enables us to still continue to sell to our customers at the same low prices as last year.

Young Hyson Tea.	30, 40, 50 best 65c	Imperial Tea,	40, best 65c
Gunpowder Tea,	40, best 65c	Black Tea Oolong,	25, 40, best 60c

Uncolored Japan Tea, 40, best 65 cents.
All the above Teas are at least 25 per cent lower than sold elsewhere

SUGARS, YELLOW AND WHITE.

Cut Loaf, Crushed and Granulated, 10½c; Powdered, 10½ Coffee A. 10c; C. 9c; Choice Yellow Sugar, 7½ and 8c per lb.

RIO AND JAVA COFFEES.

Choice Rio, 15c per pound, Best Rio, 18c; Old Government Java Coffees, 25c; Roasted Rio. 15c, Best Roasted, 20c; Roasted Java, 30c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Choice Golden Syrup 45c per gallon, Extra Sugar Loaf Drips 60c; best 70c; Best New Orleans Molasses 50c per gallon.

TOBACCOS.

PLUG, FINE CUT, SHORTS AND SMOKING AT BOTTOM FIGURES.

Extra plug 30c; good, 50c, best 60c, fine cut tobacco, 40c, extra 60c, smoking tobacco 25c, good, 30c, best 32c, Killekenick best in market, 40c.

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL. LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 20c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 40.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies, Scotch Ale, Doublin and London Porter.

Pure Muscatel wine, $1.35 per gallon; Kelley Island catawba, $1.00 per gallon; port and sherry wine, $1.50 per gallon; Scotch ale, 20c; London porter, 20c; Dublin stout, 20c; wine in bottles, 35c, Old 76 Kentucky, $2.50 per gallon; good old rye, $1.40; Bourbon $1.00 per gallon.

FISH. FISH. FISH.

Mackerel, Smoked Herring, Cod Fish, Smoked Sturgeon, White Fish and Pickerel, 75c, $1.00 and $1.25 Per Kitt.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, LARD AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 7c, best, 9c, shoulders, 6c, pickeled pork, 7c; lard 8c;

CITRON, RAISINS, NUTS, CANDIES, STICK AND ASSORTED.

Pure stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 15c; cream candies, 20 and 25 cents.

30 Per Cent, on the Dollar Saved at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

A Poor Investment that Might Have Been a Good One.

[Finley (Ohio) Republican.

The following incident, occurring near Nevada, Ohio, aptly illustrates how certain investments, sometimes regarded with suspicion, or carelessly tossed aside as unworthy candid consideration, prove to be the only safe and prudent ones.

Mr. E. B. Welch, a vigorous, and healthy farmer of Wyandotte county, Ohio, applied for a loan of $3,000, to the Union Central Life Insurance Co., of Cincinnati, and proposed taking out policy for the term as protection. His application and title were approved and the mortgage sent to Upper Sandusky for signature, together with the policy and draft for the amount.

Mr. Welch failed to call for the money, and in the mean time, having as he thought, such certain prospects of good health, concluded to execute a mortgage to some certain capitalists and pay a commission of $150 for the privilege.

While the check and policy of the insurance company remained in the safe of the attorney, waiting for him to call, Mr. Welch died after a few days illness with inflammation of the stomach and bowels. Had he called and got his check and policy, the company would have canceled his mortgage and paid his widow and children nearly $2,000 additional, and this without one cent of outlay on his part. As the case now stands, the widow has a mortgage of $3,000, running five years at 8 per cent., to pay out of the estate, in addition to the $150 already paid for the privilege of making so poor an investment.

How long will it take farmers to discover the danger and imprudence of protecting everything but their lives, and suffering that which is most valuable to their dependants, and most hazardous, to go unprotected.

When men can insure, and get the amount of their policies to use during their lives, at current rates of interest, how much longer will it take them to realize the folly and absurdity of those ignorant and prejudiced advisers who recommend any and every other plan of getting money, no matter how costly, if only it be got without protection.

* * *

Rosa Bonheur.

The New York Times thus discribes Rosa Bonheur: She is rather short and squarely built, and her looks do not deceive her in respect of her vigor and endurance. Her grey hair is cut and parted like a man's, but it nearly touches her shoulders. Her dress, even when she is receiving visitors, carries out this suggestion of manliness. She wears a short, loose velvet jacket, buttoned up nearly to the throat, where it opens to show just a speck of linen, and a shortish skirt absolutely innocent of train, polonaise and every other contrivance for impending freedom of feminine movement. The face restores a perfect womanliness to the whole figure—small regular features, soft hazel eyes, and a dignified benignity of expression. The manner matches the face. She has a low, pleasant voice, and a direct sincerity of speech, most agreeably free from the artifices of compliment.

When she visits Paris or expects visitors at home, Rosa Bonheur appears in the uniform of her own sex; in her painting room and in her walks in the forest in the uniform of the other. This practice dates from the time of her girlhood. As an animal painter she had to go wholly out of the beaten track to find her subjects, sometimes to the great stables of Paris, sometimes to the abattoirs. The brutes were exceedingly well behaved; but the superior beings in charge of them, the slaughtermen and horseboys did not always imitate their example. The young girl, found herself exposed to frequent, if not very serious annoyance. There was besides the positive hindrance of public curiosity, the crowd of staring idlers formed around her the moment she took her sketch-book in hand. She soon saw that there was but one way to avoid all these inconveniences, by appearing as a youth; so she shortened her hair, exchanged the bodice for the blouse, and, perhaps, for the first time in feminine history, wore the breeches for culture, and not for control. Her work went on in peace and quietness from that time forth.

* * *

Greatest States for Corn and Wheat 1879

CORN.

Rank.		Bushels.
1.	Illinois	309,000,000
2.	Iowa	185,000,000
3.	Missouri	142,000,000
4.	Indiana	135,000,000
5.	Ohio	105,700,000
6.	Kansas	90,000,000
7.	Kentucky	65,000,000
8.	Nebraska	59,000,000
9.	Tennessee	51,000,000
10.	Pennsylvania	44,000,000
11.	Wisconsin	30,000,000
		1,228,000,000

WHEAT.

Rank.		Bushels.
1	Illinois	44,900,000
2.	Indiana	43,700,000
3.	Ohio	36,000,000
4.	California	35,000,000
5.	Iowa	32,787,000
6.	Minnesota	31,887,000
7.	Michigan	28,800,000
8.	Missouri	20,800,000
9.	Pennsylvania	22,300,000
10.	Wisconsin	20,600,000
11.	Kansas	18,100,000
		341,474,000

The whole country produced 1,545,000,000 bushels of corn, of which 11 states produced 1,228,000,000, while 27 states and 9 territories produced 316,400,000. Of wheat the whole country produced 449,000,000 bushels—341,500,000 in 11 states, and 107,500 in all of the other states and territories. The 11 states enumerated above produced 76 per cent. of the entire wheat crop, and 79 per cent. of the corn crop.

* * *

MEMORY.

A weird companion walketh by our side,
Who oft enchants us by her sorcery;
Where'er we go with us she doth abide,
The necromancer we call Memory.

We may have floated far down life's stream,
And yet, with Memory standing by our side,
Both time and distance vanish like a dream—
The Present by the Past is glorified.

The wanderer o'er the desert's dreary waste
Forgets the scorching heat, the arid sands;
The cooling water from the well he tastes,
Just taken from his mother's loving hands.

The Italian voyager to the artic zone
Sees from his ice-bound ship fair Italy,
The curling smoke from the volcano's cone
And Naples, queenly city by the sea.

An outcast walks the city streets at night,
Weary and wretched, full of sin and pain,
But Memory walks beside him and he feels
The innocence of childhood once again.

The dim reflection from the camp-fire's glow,
Falling athwart a rugged soldier's face,
Is to his mind the embers burning low
Upon the hearthstone of his native place.

Within a vast cathedral, old and grand,
A traveler kneels upon the Sabbath day;
But in the simple church his childhood knew,
He worships with his kindred far away.

O Memory! thou hast walked with us through life—
Through pleasant sunlit paths and gloomy shade—
And now at thy command we must retrace
The pathways which our wand'ring feet have made.

And in the future, from this very hour,
May we be careful what our lives shall be,
Remembering that thou hast the wondrous power
To make us live them o'er again with thee.

* * *

The Western Rural.

We call attention to "The Western Rural" of Chicago, as being one of the best and most enterprising agricultural and family papers in the country. It is pushing forward in commendable enterprise in demanding some reforms, which, when accomplished, will prove incomputable benefit to the public.

"The Rural" presents a healthy appearance, and is no doubt receiving, as it deserves, an extremely liberal support from the agricultural classes. Subscription price, $1.65 per year. Send for a free sample copy.

ECKHART Carriage Works

One-half mile east of Court House.

I have constantly on hand a large stock of the latest styles of

CARRIAGES, PHAETONS, & PLATFORM SPRING WAGONS.

I have recently built a large shop and now have the facilities for manufacturing

150 Buggies

PER YEAR.

All are invited to call and see my works whether they wish to purchase or not.
I employ the

BEST MECHANICS

I CAN GET.

All my work is fully warranted.

C. ECKHART,
Auburn, Ind., Jan. 22, '80. 4-6m.

WABASH St. LOUIS AND PACIFIC

The Great Through Car Route to

Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.		WEST.
Mail	12:34 p. m.	Mail	3:20 p. m.
Accom'n	12:57 a. m	Accom'n	6:57 a. m.
Local F't	4:45 p. m.	Local F't	6:38 a. m.
M'l tr'n arrives at Butler	1:00 p. m.	M'l tr'n arr. at Logansport	6:45 p. m

No Change of Cars From

TOLEDO OR FT WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison.

No Change of Cars From

St. Louis To Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the

Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific

Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

☞ Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West, Southwest, North or Northw'st

Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager, H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent, St. Louis, or LUDIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn, Ind.

MORE DIFFICULT THAN

THE 15 PUZZLE TO GET

A more Handsome Suit or Better Fit than can now be obtained of YESBERA, THE TAILOR.

A Splendid full line of

HATS AND CAPS!

Just received, embracing all the late fashions.

PIECE GOODS

Of numerous patterns to select a new and nobby suit from. Also a full line of

GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS.

3d door north of the postoffice,
15-tf. AUBURN, INDIANA.

THE ANDERSON BROTHERS'

Carriage Man'factory

AUBURN, INDIANA,
TURNS OUT THE BEST

Carriages, Phaetons, Buggies and Light Wagons

Ever offered for sale in this part of the Country.

The proprietors make no effort to compete with manufacturers of Shoddy Buggies, but use the VERY BEST MATERIAL, and sell the BEST WORK AT THE LOWEST PRICES—prices to suit the times.

Fancy Light Work a Specialty.

Painting Warranted Net to Scale.

☞ Repairing neatly done on short notice, at LOWEST RATES. ☜

Good sound work-horses taken in exchange for new work. Do not buy until you get price of

ANDERSON BROTHERS,
11 2m Opposite Eagle Mills.

Agricultural Implements!

THE

Latest Improved Farm Machinery

OF ALL KINDS.

The ThreeRivers "Invincible" VIBRATOR.

The Renowned Atlas Engine! For farm use.

THE PEERLESS Reaper and Mower!

Over 20 000 now in use.

The Steel-beam Red-Jacket Plow

And many other kinds. Also dealers in the

Archer Self-Dumping Hay-Rake.

Examine our samples carefully, and get our prices before you contract. We guarantee you a bargain.

J. N. MYERS & CO.,
Odd Fellows' Building, AUBURN, IND.

NORMAN STALLION

JOCK, Jr.

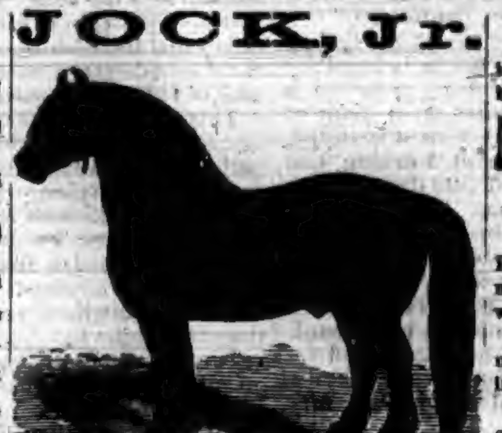
SIRED BY

Imported Jock!

Out of a thorough-bred

Norman Mare

Jock, Jr. will stand for mares during the season of 1880 commencing April 1st, at my barn in Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind.



This powerful horse is a bay-roan, 16 hands high, and weighs full

1,700 Pounds.

TERMS:

$10.00

Payable when the mare is known to be with foal.

Owners parting with mares are liable for insurance.

All accidents are at owners risk.

A. W. ALLEN, Auburn, Indiana.

G. R. & I. R. R. Co.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS,
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., April 1, '80.

To the Stockholders of the Grand Rapids & Ind. R. R. Co.:

Take notice that there will be a meeting of the stockholders of said company, at the general office, in the city of Grand Rapids, state of Michigan, on at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of said company to the sum of five million dollars; and it is proposed at such meeting to increase said capital stock to that amount.

THE NINTH (9th) DAY OF JUNE, 1880,

DIRECTORS:

W. O. Hughart,	C. A. Zollinger,
W. R. Shelby,	Thos. A. Scott,
H. J. Hollister,	Geo. B. Roberts,
S. S. Cobb,	Wm. Thaw,
J. G. Wait,	Thos. D. Messler,
Pitny Hoagland,	J. N. McCullough.

Rob't. B. Potter.

18-tf. J. H. P. HUGHART, Secretary.

ROBERT OGDEN,

Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,

IRON AND LEAD PIPE,

BRASS GOODS

OF ALL KINDS.

135 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1870, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACINTOSH,
Co. Sup't. of schools.

AUBURN COURIER SUPPLEMENT.

Biggest Bonanza on Earth

For Every Man Woman and Child in DeKalb County, that wear BOOTS AND SHOES!

$10.000 in Boots and Shoes

AT THE

"BOOT-UPSIDE-DOWN!"

For the Spring and Summer trade.

Our Goods were all bought direct from the Manufacturers before the advance in stock, and we will save our customers twenty-five per cent. on the same quality of Goods.

LOOK OUT FOR

BIG BARGAINS IN THE NEXT 90 DAYS!

WE ARE BOUND To SELL GOODS!

Large SALES and SMALL PROFITS are what we want!

READ OUR LIST AND SAVE MONEY BY COMING TO THE

"BOOT-UPSIDE-DOWN!"

The following are a few of our Prices:

Ladies' slippers, 25 cents to $1.00.
Ladies' Walking shoes, 85 cents to $1.75.
Ladies' Sandal slippers---beauties,---$1.25 to $1.75.
Ladies' Serge shoes, 75 cents to $1.00.
Men's and Boys' shoes, 75 cents to $2.00.
Men's and Boys' boots, $1.50 to $3.00.
All our goods are cheap and good, and no trouble to show them.

W. J. AUSTIN & CO.
"Boot-Upside-Down."

NEW DISCOV[illegible]

Making Wood from Straw—[illegible] Metalograph—[illegible].

H. S. Hamilton, a Bushnell, (Ill.) man, has discovered a process for making hard-wood lumber out of common wheat straw. All the [illegible] polish finish [illegible] of hard [illegible] out of [illegible] and [illegible] produced [illegible] as [illegible] manufactur[illegible] pine [illegible] process is given as follows: As many sheets are taken as are required to make the thickness of lumber desired. These sheets are [illegible] chemical solution, which thoroughly softens up the fiber and completely saturates it. The whole is then passed through a succession of rollers, dried and hardened during the passage, as well as polished, and comes out of the other end of the machine hard, dry lumber, ready for use. [illegible] the chemical properties [illegible] entirely prevent water-soaking, and render the lumber combustible only in a very hot fire. The hardened finish on the outside also makes it impervious to water. The samples exhibited could hardly be told from hard-wood lumber, and, in [illegible] it, the difference could not be [illegible]. [illegible] very high polish, and [illegible] tion of marble, [illegible] shown which might [illegible] experienced eye.

An instrument called the metalograph has just been invented by a Bostonian. It is claimed that the metalograph can do things that the electric pen cannot accomplish. Its motive power is compressed air instead of electricity. The instrument consists of a hardened steel point, which when in use, is moved up and down within a metal tube very rapidly by means of a cam and [illegible]. The cam is on a little metal shaft, which is revolved by a wheel, which is connected by a rubber tube with a pair of bellows under the table, and can be worked by hand or foot. Holding the instrument perpendicularly upon a thin sheet of metal, and setting the bellows in motion, a person may write with it upon the metal, making what appears to be a continuous line, but really a dotted line. The letters are [illegible] bossed upon the metal. [illegible] of metal is then to be placed in a small press and covered by a suitable piece of carbon paper, [illegible] over the [illegible] paper to be written upon is placed. The press is then set in motion, and copies of the writing or composition can be produced very rapidly. No liquid ink, acid, or electricity is [illegible]. The little machine can be used [illegible] manifold writing.

Recently a little girl living in Paris was bitten on the hand by a mad dog. She soon exhibited signs of hydrophobia. Two Russian physicians, Schmidt and [illegible], made the little patient inhale three cubic feet of oxygen. By this means in an hour and a half all the symptoms disappeared and the child remained calm. Two days afterwards the malady returned in all its distressing characteristics, difficulty in breathing and swallowing. A fresh inhalation of oxygen was tried and at the end of forty-five minutes the attack subsided, never to return.

Experiments with the Jablochkoff candle at Billingsgate, the celebrated fish market of London, were a complete failure. The light was literally too good. Business at Billingsgate begins between 3 and [illegible] in the morning, most of the bargains between salesmen and customers being made by gaslight. In the vivid rays of the electric light soles that would have [illegible] Billingsgate [illegible] a pound by gaslight [illegible] [illegible] general and irresistible outcry against [illegible].

M. Peyroy has invented an apparatus for distilling water at sea which has received a prize of 3,000 francs from the French Academy [illegible] been adopted by the French navy. The steam from sea water passes [illegible] where it is aerated [illegible] condensed [illegible] current. It is then purified by circulation through animal charcoal. The result is fresh, well aerated, inodorous, [illegible].

A [illegible] inventor proposes to make boots [illegible]. He mixes [illegible] glue [illegible] quantity of clean quartz sand, which is spread on the thin leather sole employed as a foundation. These quartz soles are said to be flexible and almost [illegible] while they enable the wearer to [illegible] over slippery [illegible] pavements.

A BLIND MAN'S DUEL.

It is doubtful if any theater ever offered such volumes of romantic incident as the deck of the old-time Mississippi steamer. In the old days, before railroads [illegible] continent [illegible] West was a wilder[illegible] [illegible] was the Mecca of [illegible] wave-borne palaces carried thousands [illegible] to the South. It was then that life was a carousal, and men and women gave themselves up to [illegible] and courage an instinct. Men were as prone to brawls as the sparks to fly upward. Conspicuous among the fierce and rollicking habitues of the [illegible] was Capt. West, a notable duelist. One day he engaged in a controversy with a gentleman whom he met on the deck, whom he accused of staring at him [illegible].

"Why do you look at me so intently?" demanded the Captain.

"I was not looking at you, sir," calmly replied the stranger, his eyes meanwhile fixed in a stony glare upon the duelist's face.

"But you are, sir!"

"I am not."

The Captain turned away, but [illegible] [illegible] were again upon him, and following all his movements with pitiless ferocity. [illegible] insufferably annoying, and the Captain at last determined to make an end of it. Stepping up to the stranger he [illegible] sion:

"[illegible] you [illegible] as look?"

"[illegible] I [illegible] tried it. [illegible] however [illegible] and I will do my best."

The singular conduct of the stranger had by this time attracted universal attention, and whispered conferences regarding his remarkable appearance agitated little groups of persons all over the boat. In a short time, however, the vessel rounded to at a landing for wood, and then the parties to the impending duel went ashore. The stranger was led off by a negro friend, who [illegible] picked his way. Indeed, from the intense interest [illegible] manifesting in the encounter, [illegible] servant was apparently more deeply interested in the affair [illegible] but the time allotted in preliminaries was brief, and the men were [illegible] position, and pistols placed in their hands.

The word was given, and two ringing reports flashed [illegible] on the [illegible]. West fell pierced to the heart. The stranger stood erect, calm and dignified. His seconds rushed up to him.

"Are you [illegible] sir?" [illegible] hi[illegible]

"No; I am unable to see."

"You can't see?"

"No; I am blind."

And he was. The tragedy [illegible] make up an incident in the dark and bloody memories which made famous the olden time.

[illegible]

Walpole, the statesman whose brains and bribing established the House of Hanover on the British throne, used to say of the pretended patriots who supported him, "All men have their price." [illegible] age, and [illegible] more persuasive than arguments and patriotism. This fact made him cynical.

But Lord Melbourne, who served for many years as a leader in English politics, used to say that his long tenure of [illegible] politics him.

We do not believe in this "All-men-have-their-price" theory of political human nature. Yet, on the other hand, we know that few men are without their weaknesses. These may provoke a smile from the unthinking, who have not observed what powerful factors little things are in determining success or failure.

Men's vanity, or their self-consciousness, or their love of approbation, not infrequently bear the [illegible]. We had this fact recalled while running through [illegible] entertaining book on "Oratory and Orators."

Erskine, the most eloquent of English advocates, being a very vain man, was morbidly sensitive to any appearance of inattention from the court, or even from the spectators in the courtroom. An opposing attorney once used this weakness of the orator for the advantage of his (the attorney's) client.

[illegible] case was of such [illegible] that Erskine would make one of his thrilling addresses to the jury. The shrewd [illegible] attorney hired a sleepy-headed man to plant himself beneath the Judge's seat and directly opposite where the eloquent lawyer would stand while speaking to the court and jury.

The fellow had received his instructions, [illegible] Erskine was working up a most impassionate climax the hind made a [illegible] expression of weariness. Erskine was confused, hesitated, stammered, [illegible] the climax [illegible] ruined.

Recovering himself, the advocate [illegible] to make [illegible] impressive pauses, so effective in oratory [illegible] the [illegible] fellow destroyed its effect by [illegible] down. [illegible] The [illegible] jury, and spectators listened in breathless silence. Suddenly [illegible] staggered by a snore so loud that the [illegible] in [illegible] last attack was too much for the vain, self-conscious orator. He abruptly sat down, [illegible] his [illegible] ed.

A worse failure ruined Erskine in the House of Commons. Again its cause was the man's vanity, a weakness which [illegible] little fox that has spoiled many [illegible] an oratorical and political vine.

[illegible] sudden [illegible] and took up a pen, as if to make notes for a reply. Listening intently for a few minutes, he suddenly threw pen and paper [illegible] the floor, and with a contemptuous [illegible]

Erskine's [illegible] and, though [illegible] stammered [illegible] speech [illegible] and sat down—a failure. He never recovered from Pitt's real or feigned expression of disdain.

The moral of these two conspicuous failures should not be overlooked by the youthful aspirants after oratorical power. If Erskine had, on either of these occasions, been more possessed by his subject than by his vanity, he would have rushed over the malicious obstacles which tumbled him flat on the ground. [illegible] anxious to impress [illegible] with [illegible] fame as an orator, a statesman less nervous about the reception of himself than about the adoption of his ideas, would in their headlong earnestness have swept away such petty obstacles, as the avalanche sweeps away a village which b[illegible]

[illegible]

"That reminds me [illegible]" is what [illegible] over and over again [illegible] been jogged by somebody's telling a good story. When good stories and ready repartees are going on, one little thing is sure to suggest another. Thus we thought, a day or two since, when reading in an evening paper that Charles Sumner was no musician, and that a lady friend once told him [illegible] a music-box set to "Old Hundred," she did not believe that he could make it play "more than seventy-five." It was doubtless something in the same vein that prompted old Mrs. Rothschild, when 97, to say to her physician, "Doctor, you must keep me up for these years more at least; it would be [illegible] for a Rothschild to go off under par."—"Editor's Drawer," in Harper's Magazine.

[illegible] orations.

Last summer our dog Towser was lyin in the sun trine to sleep, but the flies was that bad that he cuddnt, cos he had to catch em, and bime by a bee lit on [illegible] about [illegible] dog was then. Towser he held [illegible] still, and when the bee was close to his [illegible] Towser [illegible] he sed you see what this buffer is doin', he think[illegible] the lily of the valley, which isn't open [illegible] I blossom [illegible] sure until Towser opened his mouth very slowly, so as not to fritten the bee, and the bee went into Towser's mouth. Then Towser he shut his eyes dreamy and his mouth too, and had begun to make a peaceful smile when the bee stung him [illegible] valley sck so in your life.

With energy, any one can make a [illegible] and [illegible] always find appreciation and help, and [illegible] to make themselves all the [illegible] persons, [illegible] can be, and should [illegible] self [illegible]

Ohio produced [illegible] tons of butter [illegible] 1877, [illegible] of the amount being furnished by the [illegible] four counties immediately adjoining it, in Northeastern Ohio.

By a new law the French postoffice undertakes the collection of small bills in the provinces.

Recorder's Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, APRIL 29, 1880. Number 18.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

EDITORS,

THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will b inserted under this head for $5.00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company.

PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. W. S. Allen,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store, Auburn, Ind.

Dr. J. Miller,

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gonsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET, EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross, Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MONEY TO LOAN

By the Union Central Life Insurance company, from 1 to 5 years at 8 per cent secured by first lien on real estate worth at least double the amount of the loan (exclusive of improvements). We charge no commission, and your mortgage is held here within a few hours ride of your home. If you live, you are here to look after it yourself; if you die, you have made provisions to pay the debt just where you contracted it. For further particulars, apply to Theo. H. Sprott, Auburn Indiana.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else. The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 23-1y

$1500 TO $6000 A YEAR, or $5 to $20 a day in your own locality. No risk. Women do as well as men. Many make more than the amount stated above. No one can fail to make money fast. Any one can do the work. You can make from 50c to $2 an hour by devoting your evenings and spare time to the business. It costs nothing to try the business. Nothing like it for money making ever offered before. Business pleasant and strictly honorable. Reader, if you want to know all about the best paying business before the public, send us your address and we will send you full particulars and private terms free; samples worth $5 also free; you can then make up your mind for yourself. Address, GEORGE STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-1

A. J. BAXTER, Attorney.

Notice to Non-Residents.

STATE OF INDIANA, }
DeKalb County. }

In the DeKalb circuit court, May term, 1880. In matter of the estate of Joseph Albright, deceased, Charles Albright, administrator of said estate, is hereby notified that an action has been commenced against him in said court, for his removal, by Mary May, an heir of said decedent, and the same will be heard and determined on the second juridical day of the next term of said court, which commences May 24, 1880. Witness, the clerk of said court, this 8th of April, 1880.

16-3 JNO. W. BAXTER, Clerk.

Attachment Notice.

Before Jacob Walborn, justice of the peace in Union township, DeKalb county, Indiana.

Alexander H. Phillips,
vs.
Ephraim Rockwell.

Whereas, the Plaintiff in the above entitled cause has filed with me his affidavit and bond in attachment, and a summons having been issued and returned not found, and a writ of attachment having also been issued thereon and property of the said defendant having been attached by virtue thereof, and it also appears that the defendant is a non-resident of the state of Indiana. Therefore, the said defendant and all persons interested are hereby notified that said cause is set for trial on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1880, at 9 o'clock a. m., before me, the undersigned justice of the peace, at my office, in the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind.

16-3 JACOB WALBORN, J. P. [SEAL.]

The Situation in New York.

The following editorial, which appeared in the Cincinnati Enquirer the day following the democratic state convention in New York indicates what may be expected if Tilden's name is not withdrawn as a presidential candidate. The Enquirer says:

The New York democratic convention, which met at Syracuse yesterday, may not finally determine the fate of any candidate for the presidential nomination at Cincinnati in June. It will, however, have some bearing, and an unhappy one, upon the candidacy for the Cincinnati nomination of one distinguished democrat. It will lead the thoughts of democrats in other states toward candidacies that are not involved in such hopeless wrangles in so commanding a state. The Syracuse convention will have indicated the temper of the democrats of the state of New York in this presidential year. The democrats of the empire state have become accustomed to assume the right to teach the democrats of the Union in manners and in doctrine. They have also acquired the habit of furnishing presidential candidates for the democracy of the United States. This is an important period in the affairs of the national democracy. Democrats in other states can stand off and look at the example set by New York democrats in this critical time. A large amount of democratic harmony is needed this year. The democrats of the Empire state are furnishing a very small amount. There are thirty-seven states in the Union outside of New York. The democrats of these states will not be encouraged by the temper at Syracuse yesterday to move that wrangle into the Cincinnati convention or into the days between the Cincinnati convention and the November election.

Mr. Tilden controls the majority of the democrats of New York; but whether he has the support of his party in his own state to such an extent as to command confidence in his candidacy outside of his state is quite another question. The democrats of the country have looked to the democrats of New York for greater harmony than the proceedings at Syracuse yesterday indicated. They have looked for a warmer, a more spontaneous, a more united, support of Mr. Tilden in his own state than was evident yesterday. Mr. Tilden has a strong hold upon the regular democratic organization in the state of New York—he commands the most of it, but not all of it for his own candidacy. We are not now speaking of the violent and irreconcilable opposition to him outside of what Tilden and Robinson call the regular organization, of which Mr. Tilden stands as the representative. Mr. Tilden controlled the regular convention yesterday at Syracuse, but it was quite evident that the regular organization was much stronger than he, and that the devotion to the "regular organization" was far greater than the devotion to his candidacy. The convention he controlled was appearently not in favor of his nomination. The support even of his friends was not of that spontaneous and inartificial character that scatters enthusiasm for a candidacy beyond the lines of the state of the candidate. The democratic opposition in New York to the candidacy of Mr. Tilden, other than the Tammany John Kelly opposition, is considerable. The democrats of New York are historic bolters and wranglers, but there is no law commanding the national democracy to become the victims of the dissensions in one state.

The selection of Mr. Hewitt as candidate for an electorship at large is not favorable to Mr. Tilden. There was no resolution of "instructions." A resolution was offered speaking in complimentary terms of the character, fitness and ability of Mr. Tilden, and alluding to the fact that he was once elected president. It mentioned the great wrong done when an unelected president was inaugurated. It declared, however, that the wrong was not aimed at Mr. Tilden, but at millions of voters behind him who were defrauded. The resolution respectfully suggested that such action be taken by the party in national convention as would best present this great issue to the people. This resolution was made a part of the platform of the convention.

The opposition to Mr. Tilden's candidacy represented by John Kelly was formidable, well organized, bitter, relentless, and of vicious and unexpected magnitude. It left no hope of peace, of harmony, among New York democrats under the candidacy of Mr. Tilden. The fight is to be regretted, but it exists. The friends of Mr. Tilden say that the John Kelly-Tammany fight is against the "regular organization;" but this assumes that Mr. Tilden is the regular organization, for the fight is against no one else than Mr. Tilden. The faction represented by John Kelly gathers about it wealth, character, tirelessness, votes. It is remorseless and irreconcilable. The fact that Mr. Tilden's candidacy means a hopeless quarrel in New York stares the democrats of the other thirty-seven states in the face; but the more hostile fact to the candidacy of Mr. Tilden is that his own friends in his own state seem to despair of his nomination, or success after nomination, in melancholy numbers.

No Compromise.

It is generally conceded that a democratic president cannot be elected without the electoral vote of New York; it is also conceded by all political reasoners that New York cannot be carried without the aid of Tammany; and the following from the Star, John Kelly's paper, of the 21st inst. ought to satisfy all reasonable men that no compromise can be hoped for. The Star says:

"The fight is forced upon us, and to the bitter end will it be fought. The democracy has two objective points in view, the salvation of the nation and the vindication of own honor, and neither can be achieved but by vigorous, active, continued war against the insolent faction that would endanger both. It cannot be too often repeated that the nomination of Tilden would involve the election of Grant. Better that a thousand times than the elevation of Tilden. The undisguised tyranny of a military despotism might come to be respected for its boldness; the sneaking selfishness of a coward traitor could never win respect or command approval."

The Old Nest of Arkansas Carpet-Baggers.

[St. Louis Times.]

Clayton and Dorsey alone, of all the gang of adventurers that seized Africa, bridled, saddled and rode it into power in Arkansas, remain in that luckless state. Poker Jack, who was chief justice, sometimes called McClure, because he lured Nat Hill and other like innocents into quiet little games o' nights at the Metropolitan, of Little Rock, has departed. Nat Hill, a rare genius in letters and politics, lingers in Washington. Tom Bowen and Tankersley of most "winning ways," turned up in Colorado, and are hard to turn down in any country. Clayton and Dorsey, both ex-United States senators, remain citizens of Little Rock. They will be conspicuous in welcoming Grant, and newspaper men will note the assiduity of their devotion to the coming man on horseback as a measure of their desire for the restoration of the terrible Clayton-McClure dynasty in Arkansas. Baxter, for a time associated with these adventurers, cultivates his broad fields on White river. Poor old Brimstone Brooks, fanatical in religion and politics, after life's fitful fever, sleeps well, and Clayton and Dorsey alone survive.

Mr. Tilden and the South.

[Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.]

The Constitution has ceased to regard Mr. Tilden as an available candidate for the democratic nomination; but the fact that his nomination does not seem just now to be either wise or practicable is due to circumstances that have their origin in the humiliating contest between democratic factions in New York state, and in the astounding indifference with which the public opinion of the north is disposed to regard the great political spoliation of 1876.

The Constitution is not the partisan of Mr. Tilden. We have demonstrated that he has no opposition in Georgia, and a canvass among the people would show that he has no opposition worthy of the name in any portion of the south but at the same time it is clear to us, as it must be clear to any thoughtful democrat, that he is not an available candidate for the nomination at Cincinnati unless he can demonstrate his ability to harmonize the powerful faction led by John Kelly. If he cannot do this, the result of the election in New York last fall is an evidence that Mr. Tilden cannot carry his own state, and if the democrats lose New York, they lose the country. It needs no argument to establish this fact. Our opinion is that when Mr. Tilden is convinced that he cannot restore harmony in the party in his own state, he will withdraw from the contest in favor of some gentleman upon whom the opposing factions may unite.

* * *

Governor Hendricks is daily gaining in strength, and when the Cincinnati convention is held he will be found a much stronger man than expected. The Tilden-boom is not increasing, and will probably die out entirely before the election, at least effectually. If the convention will only use a little judgment and nominate Hendricks, a man whom all democrats, and a large number of republicans would be too glad to vote for, he could be elected against any man the republicans can put up. Give us Hendricks and Seymour, or Seymour and Hendricks.—Ft. Wayne Journal.

Noah Brooks, author of "The Fairport Nide," the serial base-ball story which is to be begun in the May St. Nicholas, is one of the editors of the New York Times. He will be remembered on the Pacific coast as "Castine," the Washington correspondent of the Sacramento Union in war times, and as managing editor for some years of the Alta California. Boys and girls will know him best as the author of "The Boy Emigrants," which appeared as a serial in St. Nicholas for 1876.

Mr. Brooks was born and reared in Castine, Maine, on the shore of Penobscot Bay; and therefore it is not impossible that the "Fairport" of his new story may prove to bear some likeness to that favored town.

* * *

The St. Louis Republican says that the rate for delegates and others attending the national republican convention at Chicago, June 2, will be $12 from St. Louis to Chicago and return by the Vandalia and Illinois Central lines. The rate to the national democratic convention at Cincinnati, June 22, will be $10 from St. Louis to Cincinnati and return. An arrangement has been made to sell tickets one way by the Vandalia line and back by the Ohio and Mississippi, or one way by the Ohio and Mississippi and back by the Vandalia line. Tickets will be sold only in this manner, that is, in order to secure the benefit of the $10 round trip rate, passengers who go to the Cincinnati convention by the Vandalia line must return by the Ohio and Mississippi, and vice versa, passengers who go to Cincinnati by the Ohio and Mississippi must return by the Vandalia line.

* * *

The Huntsville (Tex.) Item has only one candidate for the presidency, and that candidate is Thomas A. Hendricks. It says, "One would think, from the number of 'booms' being got up, these United States had at least a dozen presidents to select and elect. The fact is, there is but only one, Tom Hendricks. The sooner the people and press recognize that fact, and act as one sensible man on it, the better. Bayard belongs to the bondholders, and that particular class will go to the wall in convention. Jewett, Hancock, Fields, Tilden Seymour—all must bow to the Jeffersonian action of the Locofocos—the great unwashed—the mudsills—the unterrified of our land. Hendricks fills every requirement; a pull, a strong pull, a long pull, and a pull altogether, and all the leather and cheek this side of Hades shall not prevail against him. Wait until next November, then you shall hear the story of the resumption of our country's almost destroyed glory."

Governor Hendricks.

[Georgia Madisonian.]

Had Governor Hendricks been the nominee in 1876 instead of Tilden, he would have not only carried the states which the latter carried, but also Illinois, Oregon and possibly California. Had he only received the electoral votes which Tilden secured, he had taken his seat or died in the effort. The "strong man" might have marshaled his host, planted his canon, and issue his imperial blasts from his dictatorial trumpet, but Hendricks, conscious of right and backed by the western men who were the controlling factors in the conquest of the south, would have been inaugurated president. Such is our belief, and this is one of the reasons why we now urge his nomination at Cincinnati.

Several democratic papers are inclined to sneer at Governor Hendricks' persistency in refusing to take the second place on the ticket, forgetting that he reluctantly assented to this arrangement in 1876, stating at the time that he only thus assented because he was satisfied that his party would be strengthened thereby. He was then in a position that, had he refused, his motives had been impugned and the success of the ticket imperiled. No such considerations now obtain, and as true a democrat as he is and as truly has he made devotion to his party the paramount consideration, he would be wanting in self-respect were he to consent to take the second place on a ticket headed by a man who felt it condescension to even confer with him as to the proper line of conduct after the ticket had been elected.

Love and Labor.

Love lives to labor; it lives to give itself away. There is no such thing as indolent love. Look within your heart and see if this is not true. If you love any one truly and deeply, the cry of your heart is to spend and be spent in your loved one's service. Love would die if it could not benefit. Its keenest suffering is met when it finds itself unable to assist. What man could see the woman he loves lack anything, and be unable to give it to her, and not suffer? Why, love makes one a slave! It toils night and day, refusing all wages and all reward save the smile of the one unto whom it is bound, in whose service it finds its delight, at whose [illegible] it alone discovers its heaven. There is no danger that language can be too strong or too fervently used to portray the service of love. By cradle and couch, by sick-bed and coffin, in hut and palace, the ministries of love are being wrought. The eyes of all behold them; the heart of all are moved at the spectacle.

* * *

There is a tale told by a good man—a minister—of a very profane man becoming converted. He was an excitable being and in his new profession he was the most enthusiastic person in the congregation. He soon became noted for his long and loud orations. He would especially pray for the poor, having implicit confidence in the promise of the Lord to answer such prayers in a substantial manner. At one time, during a protracted effort when everything was lovely, and the house seemed to be transformed into a little heaven, this new convert was called upon to pray. He commenced. "Oh, Lord, help the poor, everywhere the land over. Send Mr. A. a barrel of flour, send Mr. B. a barrel of meat, send C. a barrel of sugar, send Mr. D. a barrel of pepper—Oh Jesus Christ that's too much pepper." The prayer ended and the congregation was dismissed.

Mr. Jones' Misapprehension.

It was only two days ago that Jones, painfully aware of his enebriety, endeavored to conceal it from the public, by buttoning his coat up very closely, imparting an abnormal stiffness to his knees, and tripping over on his own heels. He stalked up to a street car, walked briskly in just as the horses started forward—and instantly tumbled out backwards without unbending a muscle. Straightway he recovered the upright; splashed with mud, and entered the car and seated himself beside an acquaintance, making no sign of his mishap. Presently he turned to this individual and queried:

'Kilishn ?'

'No.'

He considered a moment and then asked.

'Offitrack ?'

'No.'

More reflection—sleepily, then again

'Runoverprecipice ?'

'No.'

'Splozhn ?'

'No.'

Somnolent cogitation.

'Any accident ?'

'Not at all.'

He took in this piece of information and concluded that he must be very drunk indeed. Anxious to cover up the fact and turn the matter off respectfully, he shortly turned again with the bland observation;

'Well, if I'd anone that I woodent got out.'

He blinked off into an unconscious state after awhile, then 'woke up' with his eyes wide open, to show that he had only been thinking. He rode on about a mile beyond his street, and was finally taken home in a hack.

Carr's Corners.

[Last Week.]

—Tell Elson had a runaway last week; no damage done, however.

—John Barrett and wife are happy. It's a young dish-washer.

—Miss Laura Swisher has been sick for a few days past, but is now convalescent.

—The B. & O. company has recently put up new telegraph wires along that line. That makes five for the road.

—An entertainment was given at the residence of Mrs. Miller last week, which was decidedly the best of the season.

—There is talk of organizing a Sabbath-school. All turn out and help to make this a good school. C. O. D.

G. R. & I. R. R. Co.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS, }
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., April 1, '80. }

To the Stockholders of the Grand Rapids & Ind. R. R. Co.:

Take notice that there will be a meeting of the stockholders of said company, at the general office, in the city of Grand Rapids, state of Michigan, on at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of said company to the sum of five million dollars; and it is proposed at such meeting to increase said capital stock to that amount.

THE NINTH (9th) DAY OF JUNE, 1880,

DIRECTORS:

W. O. Hughart,	C. A. Zollinger,
W. R. Shelby,	Thos. A. Scott
H. J. Hollister,	Geo. B. Roberts,
S. S. Cobb,	Wm. Thaw,
J. G. Wait,	Thos. D. Messler,
Pliny Hoagland,	J. N. McCullough,
	Rob't. B. Potter.

16-tf. J. H. P. HUGHART, Secretary.

ROBERT OGDEN,

Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,

IRON AND LEAD PIPE,

BRASS GOODS

OF ALL KINDS.

125 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana

Read This.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county who is authorized to sell the Singer sewing machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Headquarters at the Central House. 14-tf.

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1876, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MacIntosh,
Co. Sup't. of schools.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
8-tf Auburn, Ind.

COMBS, MORRIS & BELL, ATTORNEYS.

Notice to Non-Residents.

STATE OF INDIANA, } ss.
DeKalb County. }

In the DeKalb circuit court, May term, 1880. Andrew Stern and Susanna Stern, (his wife), Benjamin King and Martha S. King, Charles E. Smith and Joseph Smart, are hereby notified that an action has been commenced against them in said court, by Jonathan Edwards, trustee, for foreclosure, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 13th juridical day of the next term of said court, which commences May 24th, 1880.

Witness, the clerk of said court, this 8th day of April, 1880. JOHN W. BAXTER, Clerk.
16-3w

EOKHART
Carriage Works

One-half mile east of Court House.

I have constantly on hand a large stock of the latest styles of

CARRIAGES, PHAETONS, & PLATFORM SPRING WAGONS.

I have recently built a large shop and now have the facilities for manufacturing

150 Buggies

PER YEAR.

All are invited to call and see my works whether they wish to purchase or not. I employ the

BEST MECHANICS

I CAN GET.

All my work is fully warranted

C. EOKHART,

Auburn, Ind., Jan. 22, '80. 4-6m.

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE.

INDIANAPOLIS, LOUISVILLE,
And all Points SOUTH.
ST. LOUIS, KANSAS, TEXAS,
And all Points WEST.
SHORT AND QUICK ROUTE TO
DETROIT, LANSING AND SAGINAW.
And all Points in Michigan and Canada.

Time-Card takes effect April 11, 1880.
(CHICAGO TIME.)

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No 2. Ex.	No. 4. Acc.	No. 6. Acc.
Jackson	12 25pm	5 00am	6 45pm
Wilsons	12 40	5 33	7 06
Baldwins	12 49	5 50	7 15
Hanover	12 57	6 05	7 30
Stony Point	1 02	6 15	7 37
Mosherville	1 08	6 26	7 47
Jonesville	1 21	6 50	8 05
Bankers	1 35	7 15	8 21
Reading	1 46	7 45	8 45
Montgomery	1 58	7 58	9 10
Ray	2 06	8 07	9 25
Fremont	2 15	8 17	9 43
Angola	2 30	8 34	10 15
Pleasant Lake	2 40	8 44	10 35
Summit	2 50	8 55	10 50
Waterloo	3 08	9 10	11 10
Auburn	3 1[illegible]	9 21	11 30
Auburn Junction	3 20	9 25	11 50
St. Johns	3 31	9 36	12 10am
New Era	3 36	9 41	12 20
Stoners	3 46	9 50	12 38
Huntertown	3 51	9 55
Carroll's Crossing	3 55	10 00
Academie	4 00	10 06	1 00
Fort Wayne	4 15	10 20	1 20

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No. 1. Ex.	No. 3 Acc.	No. 5. Acc.
Fort Wayne	11 30am	2 00am	5 00pm
Academie	11 46	2 30	5 15
Carroll's Crossing	11 51		5 20
Huntertown	11 56		5 25
Stoners	12 01pm	2 59	5 30
New Era	12 10	3 10	5 40
St. Johns	12 16	3 20	5 45
Auburn Junction	12 28	4 00	5 55
Auburn	12 31	4 10	5 59
Waterloo	12 42	4 40	6 11
Summit	12 52	5 10	6 25
Pleasant Lake	1 01	5 30	6 36
Angola	1 21	6 20	7 05
Fremont	1 39	6 45	7 30
Ray	1 48	7 00	7 50
Montgomery	1 56	7 15	8 07
Reading	2 10	7 35	8 25
Bankers	2 20	7 50	8 55
Jonesville	2 35	8 12	9 20
Mosherville	2 50	8 26	9 43
Stony Point	2 58	8 30	9 56
Hanover	3 03	8 42	10 08
Baldwins	3 12	8 50	10 13
Wilsons	3 22	9 02	10 25
Air Line Junction
Jackson	3 40	9 25	11 05

No. 1, daily. All trains daily except Sundays.
For information as to routes and connections, apply to
M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Supt.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Fr't. & Pass'r Agent.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, APRIL 29, 1880.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

TWO ENGLISH merchants arrived in New York, put up at a hotel, and, on retiring for the night, blew out the gas. They were found insensible next morning, and one of them will die.

MILLIONS of dollars' worth of property has been consumed by the recent wide-spread forest fires in New Jersey.

A SON of Stephen M. Pillsbury, of Chelsea, Mass., has guillotined himself. He constructed the machine, a very ingenious affair, without assistance, and it did its work well....The Western file works, at Beaver Falls, Pa., have been burned. Loss estimated at $400,000.

WHILE a fair in aid of a hospital fund was in progress in the Madison Avenue Garden, New York, the entire Madison avenue front of the structure fell outward, burying several persons who were standing or passing on the sidewalk. A moment later a portion of the roof collapsed, the ruins covering a gay throng of dancers and spectators. Seven or eight persons were killed, and many others received injuries more or less serious. Aside from the loss of life the destruction of property was very great. The building was filled with rare paintings and other works of art, most of which are ruined.

THE WEST.

THE passenger agents of Western and Eastern railroads have established a schedule of cheap rates from all points to Chicago and Cincinnati during the National Conventions and the reunion of the Knights Templar.

A GANG of five highwaymen, composed of convicts who recently escaped from the Wyoming Territorial prison, are now engaged in stopping stage coaches and robbing passengers in that region....While the jailer of the Frankfort, (Ind.,) jail was opening a cell door he was knocked down by one of the prisoners, pushed into the cell and locked up. Six prisoners then made their escape.

THE giant powder-works situated at Berkley, on the bay of San Francisco, exploded with frightful effect, a few days ago. The packing-room, magazine, and everything connected with the works were blown into the bay. Twelve white men and an equal number of Chinamen were at work about the premises, and all that could be found of them was disjointed fragments which were gathered up and piled into wooden boxes....A fire at Indianapolis destroyed an undertaker's establishment, a livery stable and twenty-eight horses....The boarding-house of the Empire mine in California, was crushed by a land-slide and several inmates are reported killed and missing....At Delphos, Ohio, a victim of mania a potu bit off his fingers and tongue before death came to his relief....The recent gales on the lakes were unusually severe, and resulted disastrously to shipping interests. On Lake Michigan a small lumber schooner was struck by the blast and her Captain washed overboard, leaving a sailor as the sole occupant of the frail craft. For four days he drifted around at the mercy of wind and wave, without sleep, and for forty-eight hours was lashed to the mast. Finally, exhausted nature yielded, and he slept in that perilous position for twelve hours, when he was rescued by a passing vessel.

THE great musical event of the season in Chicago is the production of a new opera at Haverly's, which is the product of native talent in the music, libretto and score. The work is called "The Rival Cantineers," and was executed, the text by Mrs. Alexander Kirkland, and the music by Mr. James Gill, in the performance of which a well-appointed orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Louis Falk, and a large and efficient chorus, assist. The solo artists are among the best-known musicians of the Garden City.

GEN. GRANT arrived at his home in Galena on the 19th of April. He was welcomed at the depot by a few old citizens, but there was no public demonstration. After a brief rest, he will go to Colorado.

TWO NEGROES, charged with the murder of a man of their own color, have been lynched by a mob at Moberly, Mo....Seven men, who left Port St. Ignace, Mich., in a sailboat to go up the north shore of Lake Michigan, were all drowned in the recent gale....A charivari party came to grief in Manitowoc county, Wis. The father of the bride happened to have a shot gun, and when the tin-pan artists commenced their concert he opened on them. Three of the serenaders were wounded, two of them seriously.

BY concentrating his forces Gen. Hatch recently surrounded, captured and disarmed the whole band of Mescalero Apaches, in New Mexico, numbering 460 persons. Just as the troops were preparing to escort the savages to a place of safety about thirty of the prisoners made a break for liberty, but a well-directed volley brought down fourteen of them, only sixteen of them making their escape....It is estimated that not less than 200 persons were killed and $5,000,000 worth of property destroyed throughout the West by the recent tornadoes.

THE SOUTH.

EXTENSIVE forest fires in the Wilderness region of Virginia have done serious damage. Two or three persons have been burned to death.

LEWIS county, West Virginia, is excited over the doings of some unknown miscreant or miscreants, who commit mysterious murders.

THE town of Fayetteville, Ark., has been partially destroyed by a cyclone. The track of the tornado was only thirty feet wide, but it swept everything clean as a pin wherever it went. Some thirty houses were wrecked, two or three persons killed outright, and many injured, some of them fatally.

GENERAL.

THE dimensions attained by the traffic in petroleum is indicated by the official figures from Washington. These show that the export for March amounted to nearly $2,000,000 in value, and that for the past nine months it was little short of $27,000,000.

HANGED for murder: Bill Walker (colored), at Calvert, Texas; William S. Bates, at Barnwell Court House, S. C.; Jake Muldrow, and Nathan Fawcett (both colored), at Mexico, Mo.

IMMIGRANTS continue to arrive on our shores in large numbers every day. They come from Ireland, Germany, Scandinavia, Finland England, and now it is reported that 5,000 Magyars have left their homes in Hungary for this country.

MONTREAL is excited over a report of an encounter between the mounted police and Indians in the Northwest, in which twenty-five of the former are said to have been killed.

IMMIGRATION to this country from Canada continues at such a rate that the Dominion Government is becoming seriously alarmed, and is discussing preventive measures. Over 3,000 persons left Montreal during March for the United States....About 350 dwellings were destroyed by fire at Hull, opposite Ottawa, Canada, last week. The occupants of the houses were mostly poor people, who will suffer much because of their losses.

POLITICAL.

A MASSACHUSETTS Republican Convention appointed delegates to Chicago favorable to Edmunds as first and Sherman as second choice....A large mass meeting, called in the interest of the candidacy of Gen. Grant, was held in Chicago last week. Robert T. Lincoln presided, and Stephen A. Douglas acted as Secretary. The speakers were Emory A. Storrs, John A. Logan, Messrs. Douglas and Lincoln, and Leonard Swett.

PARTY conventions have been called as follows: Vermont Greenback, May 8; Maine Democratic, June 1; Maine Greenback, June 1....Lee Crandall, of the National View, and Thomas J. Durant have been chosen as delegates from the District of Columbia to the National Greenback Convention....A Washington dispatch says: "The result of the Massachusetts Convention is looked upon here as favorable to Gen. Grant. This is owing to Edmunds' known preferences, who will, it is claimed, deliver his delegates over to Grant."

THE Democratic members of the Senate Committee on Rules and of the Senate select committee on the subject of counting the electoral vote held a long private meeting at Washington, last Saturday, with a view of agreeing to some recommendation for action in regard to the electoral count this session. It was substantially decided to recommend that the two houses of Congress shall adopt a new joint rule providing that in case only one certificate of the electoral vote of a State be presented to Congress, it shall not be rejected except by affirmative vote of the two houses, and that in the case of dual returns neither shall be counted unless the two houses agree that one of them is the true and valid return.

THE New York Democratic State Convention assembled at Syracuse on the 20th of April, and completed its work on the same day. It was organized in the interest of Tilden, the delegates being favorable to his claims by a large majority. Resolutions indorsing him were adopted without much opposition, and the delegates to the National Convention, although not instructed, are known to be firm Tilden men. A resolution in favor of the retention of the two-thirds rule in the national body was adopted. Seymour's name was mentioned during a discussion, and was received with mingled cheers and hisses. A proposition from the Tammanyites for a reconciliation was returned with a chillingly courteous but evasive answer, indicating no disposition to harmonize with the bolters.—The Tammany anti-Tilden John Kelly Democrats also held a State Convention at Syracuse at the same time. Lieut. Gov. Dorsheimer, Erastus Corning, John Kelly and Amasa J. Parker were the shining lights of this convocation. The latter presided. They adopted resolutions protesting against the one-man power as undemocratic, and stigmatizing Tilden's career as selfish, treacherous and dishonorable. Delegates to the Cincinnati Convention were chosen.

THE Louisiana, Texas and Vermont delegations to the National Democratic Convention are solid for Hancock....The Connecticut Prohibitionists have nominated State and electoral tickets and appointed delegates to the National Prohibitory Convention to be held at Cleveland.

THE Illinois Greenbackers held their State Convention at Springfield April 21. Delegates were appointed to the National Convention to be held at Chicago, Presidential Electors chosen, and the following ticket for State officers placed in nomination: Governor, A. J. Streeter, of Mercer; Lieutenant Governor, Andrew B. Adair, Chicago; Secretary of State, J. M. Thomson, of Will; Auditor, W. T. Ingram, of Jackson; Treasurer, G. W. Evans, of Jefferson; Attorney General, H. G. Whitlock, of Jacksonville.

WASHINGTON.

SPEAKER RANDALL thinks Congress will certainly adjourn before the 15th of June....Washington telegram: "President Hayes is given to taking long walks before breakfast. This morning he appeared at the Patent Office about 7:30 o'clock and asked to be shown through the building. There was a stampede among the watchmen, but a messenger appeared with presence of mind enough to show the distinguished visitor around, even at that unusual hour."

THE Treasury Department has been victimized by a sharp swindler. A short time ago a man, securing the numbers of certain bonds, informed the treasury officials that the original owner was dead, and that previous to his death he gave the bonds to his brother, who embarked for Europe on a vessel which went down with all on board. The swindler showed letters of administration, asked and received duplicates of the bonds, and, presenting them at once for redemption, received his money and fled. It turns out that the genuine bonds are still in the hands of their rightful owner, and that the Government will have to redeem them again.

FOREIGN.

A VESSEL loaded with arms and ammunition for the Chilians took fire while lying in the river Elbe, near Hamburg, and was scuttled to prevent an explosion....The distress in the famine-stricken districts of Ireland is said to be on the increase.

THE medical men of Hungary are reported to be greatly exercised over a case of resuscitation which is said to have occurred at Raab, about fifty miles from Pesth, Hungary. A criminal who was hanged until life was pronounced extinct was then subjected to an electro-galvanic current, which completely restored him. The convict thereafter suffered intense agony, and died in the course of the night....It is believed that the advent of a Liberal Ministry in England will put an end to the project for erecting a monument to the Prince Imperial in Westminster Abbey....Dr. Kenealy, celebrated as the attorney of the Tichborne claimant, is dead.

SOUTH AMERICAN advices report that Callao has been blockaded by six steamers of the Chilian navy. A great panic has arisen there and at Lima, and the inhabitants are fleeing from those cities. The Peruvians have been completely defeated in Los Angeles, near Moquequa....There are now in Russia awaiting transportation to the penal establishments of Siberia some 20,000 persons, mostly political offenders.

THE theory of the chief engineer of the Tay bridge, that the cars leaped the track before it gave way, seems to be confirmed by the nature of the breaks in a piece of latticework which has just been discovered....A British post between Chaman and Candahar, garrisoned by native levies, has been captured by the hill tribes, almost all the defenders, including a Major, being killed.

PISCATORIAL material, weighing 250 tons and valued at $50,000, has arrived at the International Fishery Exhibition at Berlin from the United States....Advices from the island of Jamaica, in the West Indies, report that the pastures are burned up, and cattle are being driven from one point to another in search of water. In high lands water is being sold at 6 cents per four gallons, and has to be carried for miles on the heads of the purchasers. There is an epidemic among the cattle on the estates and pastures, and many have died. A succession of fires have destroyed many cornfields.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

A bill for the relief of the owners of the Grapeshot passed the Senate on the 15th inst., after which the Geneva Award bill was taken up and discussed without action. Mr. Baldwin introduced a bill to authorize the purchase of a site to enlarge the present Government building in Detroit and for the purchase of a site and erection of a Government building in said city. Bills passed granting pensions to a number of persons....In the House, an evening session was ordered for Thursday next for the consideration of the Immigration bill. The regular order being demanded, the Speaker announced the pending question to be upon the passage of a bill reported last night from the Committee of the Whole providing a construction fund for the navy. Without debate the bill was passed, as also a bill to equip an expedition to the Arctic seas. The Indian Appropriation bill was discussed all day, no conclusion being reached. In the evening a session was held, at which a number of bills reported from the Naval Committee were passed.

Mr. Edmunds reported adversely to the bill against allowing locations for unsatisfied private land claims, sending them to the courts, and it was indefinitely postponed, on Friday, April 16. The pension claim of Jesse Pharez, a scout, was discussed. A report from the Secretary of State in reference to awards of Mexican claims was laid before the Senate. The Geneva award was discussed all day, and then the Senate adjourned till Monday....In the House, the Senate bill removing the political disabilities of Roger A. Pryor passed. Mr. Cox, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported a resolution requesting the President to take steps to abrogate the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. Mr. Wilson, from the same committee, reported a joint resolution for the disposal of the Chinese indemnity fund. On motion of Mr. Bouck, the Senate joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to loan the flags, tents and camp equipage for the soldiers' reunion at Milwaukee in June next passed. On motion of Mr. Tilbrell the bill passed authorizing the Secretary of War to turn over certain condemned cannon to the Government of South Carolina. On motion of Mr. Valentine, the bill passed for the relief of settlers on public lands. It provides that when a pre-emption, homestead, or timber-culture claimant has filed a written relinquishment of his claim in the local land office, the land covered by such claim shall be open to entry without further action. The Indian Appropriation bill was under discussion all day.

The Senate was not in session on Saturday, April 17....In the House, the bill passed providing for the reapportionment of the members of the Legislatures of the Territories of Montana, Idaho and Wyoming. A joint resolution passed authorizing the Secretary of War to furnish artillery, etc., to the soldiers' and sailors' reunion in Columbus, Ohio, in August next. Mr. Calkins introduced a bill amending the laws relative to internal revenue. The Indian Appropriation bill was then passed. Mr. Manning offered, under instructions from the Committee on Elections, a resolution for an investigation into the facts relating to the reception by Mr. Springer of the anonymous letter relating to Donnelly vs. Washburn, and it was adopted. The balance of the day was spent in committee of the whole on the Special Deficiency bill.

In the Senate, on Monday, April 19, a bill providing that whenever Circuit and District Courts of the United States are held at the same time and place, there shall be but one grand and petit jury summoned to attend said courts at one and the same time was passed. A bill was introduced by Mr. Hamlin authorizing the President to make the necessary arrangements to carry into effect any convention between the United States and Nicaragua for the adjustment of the claims which may be duly concluded between the two Governments. The discussion of the Geneva Award bill then proceeded, Messrs. Carpenter and Blaine indulging in considerable personality, though not descending to abuse. The contest closed by Mr. Thurman remarking that the two Senators had set themselves right on the third-term question, which elicited a general laugh. Mr. Wallace submitted a majority report of the select committee on frauds in elections in regard to their investigations in Massachusetts and Rhode Island....In the House, bills were introduced as follows: By Mr. Herbert, providing that the President of the Senate shall submit to the Senate and House, when assembled to count the votes for President and Vice President, all packages purporting to contain electoral votes; by Mr. Warner, declaring that the option of tender in payment of moneys from the treasury belongs to the Government alone; by Mr. Weaver, asking whether or not the Treasury Department has at any time anticipated the payment of interest on the public debt; by Mr. Sanford, donating public lands to the several States and Territories which may provide colleges for the education of girls; by Mr. King, providing for the appropriation of the lands necessary in the improvement of the Mississippi river; by Mr. Clark (Mo.), donating twelve condemned cannon to aid in the erection of a monument to the late Gen. Shields; by Mr. Hutchins, to limit to two years from the time tax is payable the time within which suits or prosecutions for violation of the internal-revenue laws may be brought; by Mr. Finley, to reduce to $14 a ton the duty on steel rails; by Mr. Shellabarger, appropriating $150,000 for the purpose of beginning work on the public building in Pittsburgh, Pa.; by Mr. Culberson, for the discontinuance of the system of national banks; by Mr. Martin, of West Virginia, to declare forfeited to the United States certain lands conditionally granted to the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company; by Mr. Gibson, appropriating $150,000 for the erection in the public squares of Washington city statues of Madison, Jefferson, Hamilton, John Adams, Randolph, Pinckney, Webster, Clay, and Calhoun. The bill for an international exhibition in New York passed, as did the bill for a public building at Pittsburgh. The bill to pension the Mexican war veterans was laid over, after debate.

At the request of Mr. Beck, the House amendments to the bill for an exhibition in New York in 1883 were concurred in by the Senate, on the morning of April 20. Mr. Farley, from the Committee on Pensions, reported adversely on the bill to increase the pensions of wounded soldiers of the War of 1812, and one bill in relation to the compensation and expenses of Pension Agents, and they were indefinitely postponed. A bill for the extension of the Government building at Cleveland was passed. The Vice President appointed Mr. Allison a member of the special joint committee on the evasion of the stamp tax on tobacco, in place of Mr. Voorhees, who had requested to be relieved. Mr. Williams introduced a joint resolution for the erection of a monument over the grave of Zachariah Taylor, situated near Louisville, Ky. The bill for the erection of a public building at Denver was passed. On motion of Mr. Harris, a bill providing for a marine hospital at Memphis was passed. The debate on the Geneva award occupied the day, no vote being had....In the House the entire day was consumed in filibustering upon a question of allowing debate upon concurring in the Senate amendments to the Immediate Deficiency bill. The Republicans demanded two hours to debate the bill, while the Democrats limited the time to half an hour, whereat the entire day was wasted in dilatory motions. In the evening a number of pension bills were passed.

The bill as amended, to grant the pension of enlisted privates, was passed by the Senate on the morning of April 21. After a little miscellaneous business the Geneva Award bill was taken up, and, after debate, indefinitely postponed. The President nominated for Supervisor of the Census for Ohio Meredith R. Willet, of Bryan, for the First district; John H. Little, of Springfield, for the Second district; Cyrus Cado, Sr., of Pleasantville, for the Fifth district; and William A. Hunt, of St. Clairsville, for the Seventh district....In the House, the Senate amendment to the House bill to repair and extend the public buildings at Cleveland, Ohio, was concurred in. Several speeches were made upon a resolution directing the Committee on Agriculture to report what can or ought to be done by the Government to better advance, encourage and foster agricultural interests. The wrangle over the Deficiency bill was continued, the Republicans leaving the House without a quorum when the previous question was ordered, so that the matter was left at night as it was in the morning. An evening session was held for consideration of a bill to establish a code for the District of Columbia.

The Barking Puppies.

Some time ago I kept in town a bitch and three of its puppies; the former had a strong pair of lungs and a weakness for letting the passers-by know it; when the latter became of age they exhibited all the hereditary peculiarities of the mother, and when the four animals joined in chorus, which was their favorite amusement at night, the result was anything but agreeable. Some of my friends hinted to me that if that state of things continued I should probably be indicted for causing a nuisance, and I therefore determined to explain to my four animals that they really mustn't bark. One night I remained late in town, and, having provided myself with a stick, I waited till I heard one of them bark, and I immediately afterward went out and chastised him, or rather the one I thought had made the noise. I was, however, soon met by a difficulty; although I could recognize the bark of the old one, I could not discriminate well between those of the puppies; and, while the old one was silenced after a few chastisements, the puppies were not; probably in mistake I had thrashed the wrong puppy. I, therefore, hit upon the plan of making the whole four responsible for each other, and as soon as I heard any one of them bark I applied my stick freely to the whole four, the one after the other. When this had been done two or three times, I heard one of the puppies bark, and the next moment it gave a pitiful squeal; the mother had it by the neck. I went out and patted her, thus explaining that she had done well. She wagged her tail, as much as to say she understood me perfectly, and the dogs never barked again, except upon the most provoking occasions.—Nature.

DIRE DISASTER.

The Most Destructive Storm That Ever Visited the West—Towns and Farm-Houses Swept Away Like Chaff—Two Missouri Villages Extinguished, and Nearly 100 People Killed.

One of the most destructive cyclones on record visited the little town of Marshfield, the county seat of Webster county, Mo., at about 7 o'clock in the evening of Sunday, April 18. Marshfield is situated on the line of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad, about 218 miles from St. Louis. It is located on a plateau of the Ozark mountains. Its population is estimated at about 1,000. It was a thriving little place, containing a bank, two grain elevators, two newspapers, two hotels, etc.

From the accounts of this dire calamity telegraphed to the daily press we glean the following particulars:

A cyclone, coming from the vicinity of Springfield, passed through Green and Webster counties between 6 and 7 o'clock last evening, leaving a trail of desolation and death in its wake. Its course continues northeasterly all the way to the Gasconade river, a distance of 110 miles. Thus far, reports from it show that on no former occasion in this Western country have the furious elements accomplished such a sum total of misery and distress. There are wrecked homes all the way from the starting-point, six miles south of Springfield, to the Gasconade. Marshfield lay in the path of the terrible whirlwind, and a sadder scene than is presented here could not be imagined. It was not until 8 o'clock to-night that telegraphic communication was restored. All is confusion yet, and the people are in such an excited state that it is almost impossible to get any intelligible report. Many families are homeless, and have taken refuge in the cars standing at the station. The front rooms of the Court House are still standing, and have been converted into a morgue. The school building is used for a hospital. Up to 7 p. m. we have a death list of seventy-eight, and prospects of increasing it before morning. Many are yet missing, and a number of people have been hurriedly buried and no record kept. But fourteen buildings are left standing, and not a house in town but is more or less damaged.

One case of a house being visited in search of victims resulted in the finding of two children killed outright, and one other lying with its leg under the fallen timbers and shattered so as to require amputation. The elder members of the family were nowhere to be found. In another case a woman was lost, and no trace could be found of her at all. These are only two of a great many instances similar in character, and to write a description of the horrible suffering of all would be an utter impossibility. The violence of the storm was such that trees three feet through were for a space of several hundred yards wide lifted entirely out of the ground, limbs twisted off and split into kindling-wood, and the bark of trees peeled off as if struck by lightning. Telegraph poles were twisted off at the ground as if they had been nothing. Wires were carried hundreds of rods into the timber, and knotted along the limbs, as if they were made of cotton yarn. No idea can be formed of the looks of the country except by actual observation. Everything is being done by the people of neighboring towns to relieve the distressed people. It is truly a terrible and most heart-rending calamity, one which will not soon be forgotten, and which will leave its mark on these two counties for years.

Dan Good and James Kinney were conducter and baggage-master, respectively, on the train that passed through the ill-fated town shortly after the calamity. "What we saw of Marshfield," said Mr. Good to a reporter, "can give you no definite idea of the damage done, but it was the most terrible scene my eyes ever rested upon. Our depot is about 300 yards from the square, and, when we came in, the few persons around it were mad with excitement. The passengers caught the fever, the ladies beginning to scream and the gentlemen to rush around as if they were demented. The storm was still raging, and I myself did not feel justified in keeping my train longer than was necessary. As I looked out through the darkness, only reached by the light of buildings burning everywhere, I could distinguish or make out little except that where a short hour before there had been a flourishing town of 1,500 inhabitants, there was nothing but a chaos of wrecked houses. The lightning was blazing over the whole in almost continuous flashes, and I could hear the noise and confusion made by shouts, screams, and groans. I never saw or heard the like before, and, please God, I never want to again. As for particulars, I could only learn that the storm struck the town at the southwest corner and went through, taking everything before it—churches, Court House, business houses and private residences—until the extreme northwest corner was reached.

The loss of life must have been terrible, and there is many and many a person who will never be heard from again. It being Sunday afternoon, the people were at their houses, and the fires were all right for supper. The tornado came and overturned the houses on the heads of the occupants. Many of the buildings caught fire, and in the confusion which followed no one knew what to do or how to act to save himself or any one else. Numbers of the wooden buildings began to blaze almost immediately, and the wrecks of bricks probably caught before morning. Of many of the people who were in their houses there will be nothing left but charred bones. The storm crossed our track four times, the first time six miles west of Marshfield; then again at Marshfield, the third time at Conway, fifteen miles this side, where it blew down a house and killed two children. This side of Dickson, 132 miles from St. Louis, it crossed the track for the fourth time. There was a section-house standing there on the edge of the bluff, which, when the wind struck it, contained a dozen persons. There is not a thing to show that it ever stood there, except a platform. The house was carried 300 feet bodily and set down in the hollow. The force of the shock tore it all to pieces, and, strangest of all, no one in it was hurt seriously. A little child had its leg broken, and that was all. Thirty miles from here, at Cuba, a new Catholic church, which had just been erected, was blown down, but it was empty at the time, and no lives were lost.

The storm which wrought such frightful havoc at Marshfield was of almost unexampled scope and severity. It extended with more or less violence from Kansas and Nebraska across Missouri and Illinois, and north into Wisconsin. In the James river valley, in the vicinity of Marshfield, some fifteen persons were killed, and houses and fences were swept away as if they had been chaff. The town of Granby, Mo., was very seriously damaged.

The town of Barrettsville, Moniteau county, was badly shaken up by the cyclone—nearly every house in the place being wholly or partially demolished, and several persons killed. North Moreau, a small hamlet in the same county, was nearly extinguished, and ten or eleven people killed.

Rock county, Wis., suffered severely from the storm. Dwellings, barns, fences and orchards were mowed down relentlessly by the cruel storm-king; and, while the loss of life was light, the destruction of property was greater probably than marked the course of the storm in Missouri. Other sections of Wisconsin also suffered, though in a somewhat lesser degree.

The gale was one of the severest, as well as most wide-spread in its extent, that ever visited the Western country, and it would require far more space than is at our command to follow it in its work of destruction, and record even a fraction of the disasters left in its wake. On Lake Michigan many disasters to shipping are reported.

Additional Accounts.

THE APPROACH OF THE STORM FIEND UPON THE DOOMED TOWN OF MARSHFIELD GRAPHICALLY DEPICTED.

Additional reports from Marshfield, Mo., place the killed at eighty-one, and the seriously injured at about the same figure. The survivors were entirely destitute, but charitable people in the neighboring towns are doing everything in their power to alleviate the suffering.

The same day, but a few hours earlier than that on which Marshfield was annihilated, a tornado of scarcely less violence swept through Christian county, Mo. Twenty-one houses were destroyed in one settlement, and several people killed. Pierceville, Caseville and other small towns were partially wrecked, and a number of persons killed and wounded. Licking, in Texas county, a hamlet of a few hundred inhabitants, was struck by a cyclone a few hours later, and half the village laid in ruins. Twenty-five of the citizens were killed or wounded. The storm extended away down into Arkansas, and reports received from that State indicate that it lost none of its force and destructiveness by the expansion. The little town of El Paso, White county, was leveled to the ground, and eight or ten people killed. From many other points in the State come reports of loss of life and damage to property.

A correspondent at Marshfield, Mo., gives the following graphic picture of the awful storm king as he bore down upon the ill-starred town:

"About 5 p. m. a heavy bank of black clouds gathered in the southwest, and, as they concentrated, it was evident a storm was imminent. But none supposed that results so horrible were to follow. Within a few minutes of 6 p. m. many were startled by a loud roar in the southwest, and, upon looking, a cloud was seen, funnel-shaped, revolving from west to east with terrible velocity. The base of the cloud was black as night, the center being lighted up as by electricity, causing many at first sight to think it a burning building. This awful besom of destruction came on with great rapidity, struck the town at the southwest corner, widening and branching in its course, and within thirty seconds, where stood our beautiful little city there was nothing but a mass of ruins filled with the dead and resounding with the cries of the wounded, and the lamentations of the survivors. The cyclone proper was preceded a few minutes by three mild shocks resembling an earthquake, which was quite apparent to those who observed the phenomenon closely. The few minutes that preceded the coming of the storm after its character was apparent gave an opportunity to many to seek places of as great safety as possible, but the majority were unaware of the proximity of danger until it was upon them, or were so struck with terror as to be unable to help themselves. The cyclone occupied about ten seconds in passing a given point, its most terrible havoc being at the immediate base, covering a surface from 250 to 300 yards wide, but drawing into and spreading devastation over a much wider surface. As soon as the survivors were assured of their safety the energies of all were turned to the saving of the wounded and the recovery of the dead, and the horrors attending this search words are inadequate to express. Whole families were buried under the ruins of their late happy homes, crushed and mangled beyond the semblance of human beings; others, maimed and wounded, shrieking or moaning over the dead bodies of their kin, or in speechless agony caressing the mangled forms of those they loved. To add to the horrors of the scene, a few moments after the storm passed fire broke out in a portion of the ruins, but, fortunately, it was confined to buildings from which the inmates had fled, so far as known. A cold rain set in a few minutes after the cyclone passed, and added much to the labor of search for the victims of the calamity, the darkness being intense except as the weird and horrible scene was lit up by the flames from the burning ruins. Every house in the town that was left with a roof was turned into a hospital, and the Court House, of which the walls of the lower story were left standing, into a morgue.

"One young man was taken out who had passed the entire night beneath a network of beams and rafters. His legs were beneath a heavy iron post, and a large log lay across his chest. His head was free, and he could see about him. Once the ruins took fire, and the young man saw before him a fate most horrible, and he shrieked with the energy of despair. Several men hurrying by in search of missing friends were attracted by his cries, and stopped long enough to put out the fire by tearing the burning logs away. They tried to extricate the young man, but found it impossible, and were forced to let him remain until morning. One of his legs was broken, and he complained of a terrible pain in his chest where the log had lain. His must have been a night of terror. Some say this visitation was a tornado and not a whirlwind. It was unaccompanied by rain or electric phenomena. The tops of timber in the county for three miles west of the town are twisted off. Dead horses, cows, hogs and dogs are found all along the path of the storm, and fowls were killed. Some of the bodies of lighter animals were blown a great distance. Young trees are barked completely, either by the force of the wind or the contact of the debris that filled the air. The path of the tornado averaged about a quarter of a mile in width. It was an immense cloud of a conical shape, looking much like the smoke from burning oil. It was densely black in the center, but lighter on the edge. It rolled along with a roaring noise, and by its centrifugal force scattered the debris of the wreck it was creating on either side. The air was fairly filled with billions of pieces of plank. One man who saw it said that it was in shape like the little funnel whirlwinds which are frequent in March, carrying little pieces of paper and wood round and round. The rolling motion of the cloud is shown by the trees, the tops of which are not broken, but actually twisted off."

Women in Afghanistan.

The dress of Afghan women, especially those whose husbands have rank or wealth, is extremely picturesque. A short, tightly-fitting bodice of green, blue, or crimson silk confines the bust, but buttons so closely up to the throat that one can only guess at the proportions of shoulders and bosom. The bodice is generally embroidered with gold, and then becomes so stiff and unyielding that it is virtually a corset. In cold weather the short arms of the sari are continued down to the wrist, and the vest itself is padded with wool for the sake of warmth. Trousers, a la Turc, baggy and flowing as Fatima's, and tightly fastened at the ankles, a broad silk kummerbund of almost endless length, with the ends so disposed that they become skirts, dainty white socks, and tiny slipper or shoe, gold embroidered—such is the indoor dress of a Cabulese lady, while covering all, save feet and ankles, is the voluminous white garment drawn over the head and face, and falling to the heels. These veiled beauties have jewelry scattered over their forehead, hands, wrists, arms, and ears; while handsome gold loops secure the yashmak at the back of the head; the hair being lightly drawn from the forehead, and tied tightly into a knot, Grecian fashion. The length of a silk kummerbund which encircles a lady's waist is sometimes astonishing; one I saw must have been twelve yards long by eighteen inches broad, and the end was even then not forthcoming.

The slippers and shoes are of Cabulese make, and are very pretty. On a pale green background beautiful patterns are worked with gold and silver thread and parti-colored silk, until the effect is more like that of a fairy slipper than one for daily use. But a stout leather sole is put on, with high heels rudely bound with iron, and then the work of art is complete. The stalls in which their slippers and shoes are made are the gayest in the whole bazaar. A Cabulese lady's foot is small, almost to deformity, and the baggy trousers by contrast make them appear exceedingly petite. From the few faces seen and those chiefly of old or passee women, it is difficult to judge of the famed beauty Cabulese are said to boast of. The children are certainly, as a whole, the prettiest I have ever seen. Their complexions are red and white, with a tinge of olive pervading the skin, eyes black and lustrous, well-shaped features, teeth to make western beauty envious, and bright, intelligent looks.—Calcutta Pioneer.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

Report of the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Representative Cox's report from the Committee on Foreign Affairs relative to the Interoceanic canal and Monroe doctrine, lately submitted to the House of Representatives, quotes at length from the President's message upon the subject (of March 8, 1880), and severely arraigns the policy of Clayton in seeking to induce Great Britain to abandon her own unfounded claim upon the territory of an independent Spanish-American State, and inviting her to share with us the duty and privilege peculiarly our own of protecting an interoceanic communication of infinite interest and concern to this country. Having blundered thus at the outset, the report says, he went into the most complicated and ill-arranged series of transactions, the final outcome of which was the treaty with Great Britain of April 19, 1850, known as the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

The report continues: "Fortunately for the country, the Clayton-Bulwer treaty had scarcely come into operation before its fundamental provisions were violated by Great Britain by the firing upon the American steamer Prometheus, Nov. 21, 1850, while she was going out of the port of San Juan de Nicaragua, by the English brig of war Express, then lying in the port to enforce a British dominion over that part of Nicaragua." Other similar infringements followed, the most conspicuous of these being the deliberate establishment by Great Britain, on the 17th of July, 1852, of a "new colony" in Central America, off the coast of Honduras, under the name of the Colony of the "Bay islands," by and on account of which Mr. Cass, in the Senate in January, 1856, declared the treaty to have been virtually nullified by Great Britain.

The report then details the negotiations and controversies between this Government and Great Britain growing out of these occurrences, and the ineffectual efforts to negotiate a new treaty, coming down to 1860, and continues: "The outbreak, soon after this, of our unhappy domestic troubles and great civil war diverted public attention from Central American questions, and the ill-advised Clayton-Bulwer treaty was gradually suffered on both sides to lapse into an oblivion from which it has but recently been evoked by persons disposed to controvert the policy and purposes of the United States with regard to any protectorate of life and property over any part of the Central American states on the isthmus. The circumstances in which this treaty was originally negotiated have been profoundly modified by the lapse of thirty years, and it appears to your committee to be entirely clear that, as an obstacle and possible peril in the way of a complete and pacific assertion of the sound, necessary, and vigorous American policy laid down in the President's message of March 8, 1880, this treaty should now be finally and formally abrogated. It has been shown to have led only to great misunderstandings and controversies with the power with which we were unwisely led to make it. It has always been equally inoperative either to guarantee the independence of Central American states or to advance the general interests of commerce. So long as it has even a formal shadow of existence it cannot but tend to cloud and obscure the perfectly simple, just and equitable policy of the United States in regard to interoceanic transit. Your committee, therefore, recommend the passage of the following resolution:

"Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives assembled, That the President of the United States be and he is hereby respectfully requested, if the same in his opinion shall not be incompatible with public interest, to take immediate steps for the formal and final abrogation of the convention of April 19, 1850, between the United States of America and her Britannic Majesty, commonly called the 'Ship-Canal Treaty,' or 'Clayton-Bulwer Treaty.'"

Latitude of European Cities.

In reading dispatches relating to the temperature and storms in Europe, perhaps additional interest would be given them if we bore in mind the relative latitude of the places mentioned as compared with places in this country. The following statement is near enough correct for this general purpose:

Rome in latitude a little to the south of Detroit.

Vienna, Paris and Strasbourg as Isle Royal, Lake Superior.

Berne as Keweenaw Point, Lake Superior.

Frankfort and Brussels as Cape St. John, Newfoundland.

Berlin and Amsterdam as Manitoba lake.

London and Dresden as the northern extremity of Lake Superior.

Prague as Vancouver island.

Milan as Ottawa, Ontario.

Lisbon as Baltimore.

Edinburgh as Sitka.

Dublin as Strait of Belle Isle, Newfoundland.

St. Petersburg as center of Hudson Bay.

Madrid as Columbus, Ohio.

A BERKS COUNTY (Pa.) cat caught seventeen young chickens in one day, and was shot with the eighteenth in its mouth.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
BEEVES	$8 50	@10 25
HOGS	5 50	@ 6 00
COTTON	12	@ 12¼
FLOUR—Superfine	3 65	@ 4 50
WHEAT—No. 2	1 27	@ 1 30
CORN—Western Mixed	52	@ 53
OATS—Mixed	41	@ 46
RYE—Western	92	@ 95
PORK—Mess	10 25	@10 50
LARD	7	@ 7¼
CHICAGO.
BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	4 70	@ 5 25
Cows and Heifers	2 60	@ 4 00
Medium to Fair	4 10	@ 4 35
HOGS	3 90	@ 4 40
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter Ex.	5 90	@ 7 00
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 00	@ 5 75
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 07	@ 1 08
No. 3 Spring	93	@ 94
CORN—No. 2	34	@ 35
OATS—No. 2	28	@ 30
RYE—No. 2	70	@ 71
BARLEY—No. 2	79	@ 80
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	24	@ 26
EGGS—Fresh	8½	@ 9
PORK—Mess	9 25	@ 9 60
LARD	6½	@ 6¾
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—No. 1	1 06	@ 1 08
No. 2	1 02	@ 1 03
CORN—No. 2	34	@ 35
OATS—No. 2	27	@ 28
RYE—No. 1	70	@ 71
BARLEY—No. 2	65	@ 66
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red Fall	1 05	@ 1 06
CORN—Mixed	30	@ 31
OATS—No. 2	28	@ 29
RYE	69	@ 70
PORK—Mess	10 00	@10 10
LARD	6½	@ 6¾
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT	1 12	@ 1 13
CORN	40	@ 41
OATS	34	@ 35
RYE	79	@ 80
PORK—Mess	9 50	@10 00
LARD	6½	@ 6¾
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—Amber Michigan	1 13	@ 1 14
No. 2 Red	1 09	@ 1 10
CORN—No. 2	37	@ 38
OATS—No. 2	33	@ 34
DETROIT.
FLOUR—Choice	5 65	@ 6 75
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 09	@ 1 10
No. 1 Amber	1 10	@ 1 11
CORN—No. 1	42	@ 43
OATS—Mixed	35	@ 36
BARLEY (per cental)	1 30	@ 1 50
PORK—Mess	11 75	@12 00
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	1 10	@ 1 11
CORN	35	@ 36
OATS	32	@ 33
PORK—Clear	12 25	@12 50
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
CATTLE—Best	6 00	@ 6 25
Fair	4 60	@ 4 80
Common	3 10	@ 3 60
HOGS	4 25	@ 4 75
SHEEP	4 75	[illegible]

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED,
ROB. J. LOWRY | Editors.

John Fetrie, aged 51 years, of Baltimore county, Maryland, married a young lady of 22. Three days afterward he went out in the garden and blew his head off with a shot-gun.

Two months ago the remains of an old citizen of Carthage, N. C., were buried at the foot of a tree which had long been, to all appearances, lifeless. It now shows signs of great vitality, and leaves are coming out on it.

Shakespeare M. Laughlin, of the East Liverpool, England, firm of Laughlin Brothers, is about to establish at Philadelphia the most complete pottery in America. Skilled workmen will be brought from England and France to superintend the making of the higher grades of decorated ware.

They had an old-fashioned row in Edgefield, S. C., the other Sunday. Mr. Bland struck Mr. Clisby on the head, fracturing his skull. Clisby shot Bland in the bowels. Bland's brother shot Clisby in the kidney. Glover, Clisby's father-in-law, attempted to shoot the Blands, but one of the latter got the drop on him and perforated him twice.

Woman suffrage seems to have encountered some drawbacks in Massachusetts. Ten years ago there were sixty-eight members of the lower house in favor of woman suffrage, and last year the number had grown to eighty-two, but now it is down again to about sixty. The movement seems to be doing as well as could be expected, however, in other parts of the country.

On the 1st of January the gold in the treasury was $146,194,000; on the 1st of February, $143,340,000; on the 1st of March, $136,995,000. This is a decrease of $9,200,000 in a quarter of a year. During the same period the silver has increased from $52,718,000 to $58,104,000, or $5,386,000. It will thus be seen that silver is gradually taking the place of gold as the reserve of the country, just as is the case in France.

The United States Senate has passed a bill to amend sections 2,262 and 2,301 of the Revised Statutes, in relation to settlers' affidavits in pre-emption and commuted-homestead entries. It permits affidavits required by those statutes to be made before County Clerks, instead of before the Registrar or Receiver of the land district, thus equalizing the provisions in this respect of the Homestead and Pre-emption laws.

There is a marked increase in railroad traffic. The earnings of the Erie road for March show a gain of $250,000; St. Paul, $267,677; those of the Northwestern, $290,000; St. Paul and Minneapolis, $25,400; Lake Shore, $583,000; St. Louis and San Francisco, $112,100, and the North Wisconsin, $9,700. The earnings of the Canada Southern for March were $300,000, being the largest month's business on record.

William H. Heath, formerly County Auditor at St. Louis, has been found guilty of embezzling a large sum and sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of ten years. It was the old story. He speculated with public funds expecting to make money, instead of which he lost. The trouble with too many public officials is they seem to have no conception of the sacredness of their trust. The official who uses a dollar of public money as if it were his own has taken the first step toward becoming a defaulter.

The brigands that lately captured Col. Singe have now seized Dr. Marulis, a German naturalist, who was traveling through Albania and Bessarabia for scientific purposes. The ransom demanded for the prisoner is $5,000, beside a full assortment of trousers, waistcoats and jackets. The letter forwarded by he brigands to the German Consul at Salonica threatens to put the prisoner to death if their demand is not immediately complied with, and promises, on the other hand, that a new suit of clothes will be presented to the doctor if the ransom be paid forthwith.

A dramatic story comes from St. Petersburg to the effect that Lord and Lady Dufferin, together with several persons belonging to the imperial Court, were hunting in the forest, the other day, when suddenly a ferocious bear, which had been concealed in the underbrush, sprang upon Lady Dufferin. She would undoubtedly have been killed, the report says, had it not been for the gallantry of Lord Hamilton, an attache of the Embassy, who came to the rescue. After firing several shots from his revolver, he succeeded in dispatching the brute.

Woman's inhumanity to woman is as real, if not as proverbial, as man's to man. If we were to credit the advocates of woman suffrage, there is a great wrong in voting for, as well as in voting ty, miles alone. Yet, at Concord, Mass., the other day, only twenty votes were cast for members of the School Committee, and the voters were all women. But when the votes were counted it was found that three men had been elected, all for the long term of three years, while the only woman receiving a majority of votes was elected for the short term—one year.

Prince Bismarck's present illness is, by a Berlin paper, attributed to a strange cause. One of the Prince's favorite pastimes has, for several years, been to attract wild boars to his park at Varzin by feeding them with all kinds of delicacies. All the boars for miles around accordingly migrated to Varzin. One of the Prince's neighbors, an enthusiastic hunter, couldn't stand this sort of thing, and made repeated forays on the Prince's domain, where, in a few days, he killed twenty-five boars, always eluding the grasp of the game-keepers. Bismarck flew into such a rage at this intelligence that he became seriously ill. It is said that he meditates building a line of forts around his park.

How street railroads make money is exemplified in the case of the New York Sixth Avenue road. It was organized in 1851; in 1853 it divided 6 per cent. of its capital, leaving an undivided revenue of 3 per cent. more; this from the carriage of 5,120,000 passengers. In 1859 it divided 12 per cent. on 6,479,129 passengers. In 1874 it carried 15,000,000 passengers; in 1875 nearly 16,000,000, paying dividends of 10 per cent., beside distributing the monstrous dividend of 100 per cent. in so-called certificates of indebtedness. This was to escape paying $20,000 in taxes to the city. It paid 10 per cent. upon this indebtedness also. In 1876 the company carried 17,674,437 passengers. Yet, in spite of these facts, the company lately had the audacity to proclaim before a Judge in court, when resisting the Gilbert elevated railway, that the loss of 1,000,000 passengers in one year would take away all their profits. How much dependence can be placed upon even the sworn statements of Presidents and Directors of such companies, when it is certain that they are "cooked up" for the use of civic or judicial bodies?

A Spiritualist professor named Hansen, who has acquired considerable notoriety at Vienna and Pesth, recently undertook to mesmerize any one against his will. The challenge was accepted by a young man named Fisher, and the professor, despite his artistic passes, failed to produce any effect upon him. Fischer began to banter the professor, and told him that he was only a "vile impostor," for the use of which expression he was summoned before the district magistrate and fined 100 florins. The professor, however, did not look upon this as a sufficient reparation for his injured honor, and commenced a fresh suit in order to prove that he was really capable of doing what he professed to do. He called as a witness a young man who had always appeared an excellent medium upon the platform, and who at the bidding of the professor was in the habit of falling into a trance and of holding communication with spirits from the other world; but when he came to be cross-examined by the counsel for the defense he confessed that he had only been shamming temporary death, and, to the great amusement of the court, proceeded to demonstrate how the trick was done. Prof. Hansen lost his suit.

A Blind Man's Pleasures.

Prof. Fawcett, the blind Member of Parliament, says that when at 25 he lost his sight there were many things of which he was passionately fond, and he resolved that those pursuits which he could follow he would. No one enjoyed salmon-fishing in the Tweed or the Spey more than he did; no one more enjoyed throwing the fly in some quiet stream in Hampshire or Wiltshire. He enjoyed it as much as any one did a gallop over the turf in company with some friend. He appreciated all the health-giving vigor of a long row from Oxford to London; and, although the late severe frosts nipped up a great many people, no one in the whole country enjoyed better than he with a friend did a fifty or sixty-mile skate on the fens. He referred to these facts in no spirit of egotism, but as showing that there was still for the blind a store of happiness and pleasure if only they had the courage and determination to avail themselves of it.

False Teeth in Court.

A very funny thing happened in Judge Thayer's court yesterday. A lawyer asked for a rule to bring a lady into court to let a jury see that her false teeth—which her husband wouldn't pay for because he said they don't fit—do fit. He didn't want the lady to say anything, because that might be testifying against her husband; he just wanted her to stand in front of the jury and take out her teeth and put them back again, and perform a few similar tricks, just to show what a perfect job the dentist had made of it. Judge Thayer very sensibly and very promptly took the conceit out of the whole business, by deciding that this would be testimony against her husband; that it would be torturing the lady, and he had no power to do anything of the sort. Almost all kinds of exhibitions occur in courts, but the line must be drawn somewhere, and Judge Thayer draws it at false teeth.—Philadelphia Times.

FARM NOTES.

Plant Peach Orchards.—My advice to Kansas farmers is to plant orchards, peach in abundance (seedlings) add to them every year. When they cease to bear, the trees make good fuel.—H. C., St. Clair, Belle Plaine, Kan.

Flax on Sod.—My experience two seasons, one wet and the other dry, is that prairie sod, no matter how early turned, rots better, is more free of weeds and grass after a crop of flax than uncropped sod broken in May or June.—D. W. B., Grinnell, Iowa.

Tillering of Wheat.—My experience and observation, as well as experiments, all lead to the conclusion that wheat does not tiller; that one grain brings to perfection only one stalk bearing from twelve (the lowest I ever counted) to eighty-six perfect grains found on one stalk last season.—W. W. T., Shelbyville, Ill.

Insects on House Plants.—Place the pots on a table or platform on which there is an inch or two of sand. Cover them with any inverted vessel, the sand making the edges fit closely. Or place over them a light frame or a support, and cover them with a cloth. Then burn tobacco under the cover, and let the smoke remain fifteen minutes. This is better than syringing, because the smoke penetrates every corner and crevice. When the open soil is infested with insects, caused by a free use of fertilizers, a good remedy is to cover it when dry with a fourth of an inch of soot and water liberally, which kills the insect and leaves the plants.

Seeding for Immediate Pasture.—On land plowed last fall, or in cornstalks, we would advise sowing, as soon as the land is in order in spring, a bushel of oats per acre, with a peck of timothy, ten pounds of red clover, two of white, and a few pounds of blue grass. Keep off the cattle till the oats have covered the ground; then, if you do not stock too heavily, you will have pasture continuously. Seeding down on spring plowing is uncertain, if the season is dry. The increased interest in cattle-growing will demand a largely-increased acreage in grass, and many farmers, we find, are needing pasturage the coming summer who have made no move so far toward it. We have tried the above plan and succeeded very well. The oats disappear in July, but the timothy will then be abundant.—Hon. James Wilson.

The Lily in Gardens.—The Gardener's Monthly says that as a general thing the lily is not a success in most gardens. This is, however, chiefly from improper soil being used, or their being placed in improper situations. The plants rather like the open sunlight, but the roots abominate hot ground, especially when stiff or clayey. In Prof. Sargent's grounds at Brookline, Mass., they are planted with the rhododendrons, and are a magnificent success. Here the rhododendrons shield the bulbs from the hot sun. It is beside an excellent idea, as a mere matter of garden taste, for the rhododendrons are all over blossoming before the lilies flower, and so the flowering of the beautiful evergreens seems to be prolonged till late in the summer, when the lilies disappear.

Sheep Sheltered and Exposed.—Lord Ducie had 100 sheep placed in a shed, which ate twenty pounds of Swedish turnips per day per head; another 100 in the open air ate twenty-five pounds per head per day for a certain period. When they were weighed the former lot averaged a grain over thirty pounds per head over the latter. In another experiment five sheep were fed in the open air between the 21st of November and the 1st of December, at a mean temperature of 44 degrees. They consumed ninety pounds of food per day. At the end of this time they were weighed and had lost two pounds each. In a shed five other sheep were placed and allowed to run at a temperature of 49 degrees; they consumed at first eighty-two pounds of food, but fell off to seventy pounds per day, and increased in weight twenty-three pounds.—American Agriculturist.

To Make Cider Vinegar.—The Ohio Farmer gives the following: To make good vinegar the cider need not be pure. One-fourth water, one-fourth good vinegar, and one-half cider, if placed in casks partly filled and kept in a warm place, will make good vinegar in a short time. Where vinegar is not convenient, put a piece of dough or lean meat in each cask. The rapid process is to fill a cask—set on end, with upper head removed—two-thirds full of beech shavings which have been previously scalded and saturated with vinegar. Then compel the cider to drip through these shavings, by means of numerous small holes filled with bits of thread. A process rapid enough for home manufacture is as follows: Place the cask in a warm place, with a gallon or more of vinegar in it; add a pint of cider for each week till the cask is full. If you put in a gallon of vinegar at first, add a pint of cider, then, in a week, a little more than a pint, the third time about a pint and a half, and so on, the addition becoming larger each week.

Save the Coal Ashes.—It is not generally appreciated how much heavy soils can be benefited by the use of coal ashes, now generally wasted or applied to the roads. Vick says, in his estimable monthly magazine, that it is quite satisfactorily shown that coal ashes, though not having manurial value sufficient to warrant any expense for carriage or long hauling, may with advantage be spread upon the ground where they are produced. Mixed with heavy soils, their mechanical effect is to lighten it and make it porous and friable. A number of experiments with coal ashes, publicly reported within the last year or two, leave no doubt that they have at least some slight value as manure, and that mixed with heavy land their effect is very beneficial. Upon this subject a practical cultivator, through the columns of a late number of a British journal, gives the following advice and corroborative testimony: "A third part of ashes to two-thirds of soil will not be too much. You will very likely not have enough to do this at once, therefore use what you have and repeat the dressing again and again, till the soil, however wet it may be, parts readily from the tool. It may require three or four years to accomplish this if you have only the ashes of an ordinary household at your disposal. But pray remember that once well done it will give you no further trouble; for not only do ashes lighten a heavy soil, but they also render material assistance to its drainage, and it becomes so porous that the passage of rain water is secured; hence it is comparatively dry, and warm, it is open to the action of the air and is therefore sweetened and made more fertile."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Poor Man's Pudding.—Three cups of flour, one cup of molasses, one cup of milk, one cup of suet, one cup of raisins, one teaspoonful of soda, spices to taste; boil two hours; use with a sauce.

Cream Pie.—To one pint of milk put two even table-spoonfuls of corn starch, two of sugar, one egg, a small pinch of salt, and flour to taste, with extract of lemon and orange mixed. Bake in a rich paste.

Blanc Mange.—Boil one and one-half ounces of isinglass, three ounces of sweet and six bitter almonds, well pounded, in a quart of milk; let it boil until the isinglass is dissolved; then strain it through a napkin; stir it until nearly cold, and put it into the mold.

Fig Pudding.—Three-quarters pound grated bread, half pound figs, six ounces brown sugar, one teacupful of milk, and grate a little nutmeg. Chop figs and suet together; then mix in the bread, sugar, and milk, and lastly, one egg well beaten. Boil in a mold for four hours; eat with a sweet sauce.

Canary Pudding.—The weight of three eggs in sugar and butter, weight of two eggs in flour, rind of one lemon, three eggs; melt the butter but do not let it boil, add to this the finely-minced lemon peel, and gradually mix in the flour, stirring well all the time. Beat up the egg well, blending the material perfectly; put in a buttered basin and boil for two hours. Serve with a sweet sauce.

Potato Pudding.—Beat well together fourteen ounces mashed potatoes, four ounces of butter, four ounces of fine sugar, five eggs, and the grated rind of one small lemon; a pinch of salt; add one-half glass of brandy; pour it in a mold or dish well greased, and bake it. Be careful to mash the potatoes as smoothly as possible, and adding a little butter at first helps to make them smooth.

English Arrow-root Blanc Mange.—Mix a teacupful of arrow-root, with a little cold milk, rub it smooth; boil a pint of milk with ten sweet and four bitter almonds, having pounded them smooth first, and having blanched them; sweeten this milk to taste with pulverized sugar; strain carefully; then pour this milk gradually into the arrow-root, stirring all the time; boil for five minutes, and pour into a mold to cool.

Calf's Foot Jelly.—Take two calf's feet, and add to them one gallon of water; boil down to one quart; strain, and, when cold, skim off the fat; add to this the white of six or eight eggs, well beaten, a pint of wine, half a pound of loaf sugar, and the juice of four lemons, and let them be well mixed. Boil the whole for a few minutes, stirring constantly, and then strain through flannel. The wine may be omitted or added, according to choice.

Calves'-foot Jelly of 1780.—Put four feet into two gallons of cold water; let it boil down to one gallon, strain it, and set away until cold; then take off the fat from the top and the sediment from the bottom; put the jelly into a kettle with a pint of white wine, the juice of four lemons, and the peel of one; beat the whites and shells of six eggs and add to it; sweeten to your taste; let it boil for a few minutes; pour into the jelly-bag, and repass until quite clear. If needed for an invalid, add a cup of pale brandy.

Marriages in England at Night.

No marriage of this kind can take place in England except under the signed fiat and special license of the Archbishop of Canterbury, first petitioned for and obtained. The grant or refusal rests entirely in the discretion of the Primate, who is said to enter into every detail himself. By No. 102 of the "Constitution and Canons of the Church of England" of 1603 (now in force) it is ordained that all ordinary marriages shall be celebrated between the hours of 10 and 12 in the forenoon, and the same canon law has since been confirmed by various acts of Parliament, and is to be found reaffirmed by the Marriage act of George IV.'s reign. The collective wisdom of Parliament from time to time deemed it wise to provide against the accident of foolish young or old men, of all classes, being persuaded to celebrate marriage late in the day, after, perhaps, partaking of the bottle freely at banquets and suppers. Also the debates in Parliament show that it was held that the marriage service was not a thing to be thoughtlessly and lightly entered upon. It is likewise generally understood that the canons cannot be altered without royal license from the Queen issued to the Canterbury and York Convocations, who must be unanimously agreed as to any change.

How Wood-Pulp is Made.

So much is said about the wood-pulp which is extensively used in the manufacture of paper that a brief description of the process of making it will be interesting. Any white, soft wood may be used. The bark is taken off, the knots and dark and decayed spots cut out. It is then put into a large cauldron and boiled, which extracts all the glutinous matter and resin, and renders it soft. It is then put on a large stone grinder, with water pouring on it all the time. The grindstone wears off the fibers until they are finer than sawdust, which float away into a receptacle. The water is drained off by means of a fine sieve, leaving the pulp, which consists of a fine fuzz or splinters of wood. It is white, and requires no bleaching, but is ready to be mixed with rag-pulp, or anything else that has a strong fiber, and receive the proper constituents to make paste, after which it is run off into paper sheets; whereas rags have to be washed and bleached with chloride of lime, soda ash and alum, and such strong chemicals, to take out the color. Then they are picked to pieces and made into pulp. The process by which wood-pulp is made is purely mechanical. It can be made very cheap—say at about 1 cent a pound.—Portland (Me.) Press.

Trees and pigs must root for their living.

BANKS' BABIES.

BY MAX ADELER.

I was detained over Sunday in Barnsbury, and on Sunday morning I resolved to go to church. The first church I came to, a small frame structure with a wooden steeple, had the doors and windows tightly shut, but there was a man on the front steps whittling a stick, and I said to him:

"Are you connected with this church?"

"Yes," he said, "I'm the sexton."

"What is it closed for?"

"Well, mostly on account of Banks' babies."

"Babies?"

"Sit down, and I'll tell you about it. You know Banks; he come to this town to live a few weeks ago, a perfect stranger, and he rented a pew in this church. It seems that Banks had three little bits of babies, triplets, not more'n 2 months old, and then, besides these, he had twins about a year old. So nobody knew about the babies, but Banks wanted to have the little darlings baptized, and he allowed to Mrs. Banks that to rush the whole five babies into church on one Sunday morning might excite remark, you understand. So he settled that he'd have 'em christened gradually, so to speak. Accordingly, the next Sunday he fetched little Jimmy, one of the triplets, and all went off well enough. On the followin' Sunday he came a promenadin' up the aisle with George Washington, another triplet, and Dr. Binns, our preacher, he fixed him up all right. People thought it was queer, but when, on the next Sunday mornin', Banks and his wife come into church with another baby, William Henry, crying like a Pawnee war-whoop, some of the folks couldn't help snickerin'.

"Howsomdever, nobody complained, and all might have been well if Banks hadn't come along the Sunday after with Elijah Hunsiker Banks, one of the twins. Everybody laughed, and Mr. and Mrs. Banks they were furious—mad as anything, you know; and when Elijah Hunsiker Banks hauled off, accidentally, with his hand, and hit Dr. Binns, who was holding him during the ceremony, a whack in the face, and the doctor dropped him in the water, the congregation just fairly roared with laughter. Mrs. Banks turned as red as fire, and looked as if she would like to murder somebody.

"Well, you know, we all thought this was the last, and public feeling kinder simmered down on toward the end of the week, when who should come booming up the aisle on Sunday morning but Mr. and Mrs. Banks with Tecumseh Aristotle Banks, the remaining twin. Well, you ought just to have heard that congregation laugh! I never seen nothin' like it in all my experience. Even Dr. Binns had to smile. And the Bankses they were perfectly wild with rage. Anyhow, they baptized Tecumseh; and after meeting some of the elders got to jokin' about it. One said they'd have to apply to the Town Supervisors for an extension of the waterworks; another allowed that arrangements ought to be made to divert Huckleberry creek, and run it down the middle aisle of the church; another made some kind of a joke about business being good because so many banks were in town; another said that Banks would need about twelve pews when his family grew up.

"Somebody must have told Banks about it, for what does he do to avenge himself? He sends down to Clarion county, to his two sisters, to come and bring their children. So they had a couple of babies apiece, and, as soon as they arrived, Banks he begins to bring them to church gradually, like the others. You never seen such meetings as them! The church was jammed full, and people just roarin'. And when Banks come in on Sunday, with the fourth and last of his sisters' children, the trustees thought it was time to interfere. Gettin' to be a farce, you know.

"So Deacon Smith he stepped up and said something to Banks, and Banks, quick'n a wink, laid down the baby and banged the deacon with his fist. And so, I dunno how it was, but in a minute there was Banks and Deacon Smith and Deacon Hubbard and Banks' sister's baby and me all a-rollin' and a-bumpin' over the floor, hittin' and kickin' and whoopin' in a manner that was ridiculous to behold.

"And when we all come to and got straightened out, Banks picked up the battered baby of his sister and quit, and the trustees held an informal meetin', and agreed to close the church for a month, so's to kinder freeze Banks out, so now we've shut up; but I reckon it's no use, for I hear Banks has got his back up, and gone and joined the other church.

So I said good-day to the sexton, and went in search of another sanctuary.

Learning to Write.

We believe there is no single system of mechanique for writing, and that a child belonging to the educated classes would be taught much better and more easily if, after being once enabled to make and recognize written letters, it were let alone, and praised or chidden, not for its method, but for the result. Let the boy hold his pen as he likes and make his strokes as he likes and write at the pace he likes—hurry, of course, being discouraged—but insist strenuously that his copy shall be legible, shall be clean, and shall approach the good copy set before him, namely, a well-written letter, not a rubbishy text on a single line, written as nobody but a writing-master ever did or ever will write till the world's end. He will make a muddle at first, but he will soon make a passable imitation of his copy, and ultimately develop a characteristic and strong hand, which may be bad or good, but will not be either meaningless, undecided, or illegible. This hand will alter, of course, greatly as he grows older. It may alter at 11, because it is at that age that the range of the eyes is fixed and short sight betrays itself, and it will alter at 17, because then the system of taking notes at lecture, which ruins most hands, will have cramped and temporarily spoiled the writing, but the character will form itself again and will never be deficient in clearness or decision. The idea that it is to be clear will have stamped itself, and confidence will not have been destroyed by worrying little rules about attitude and angle and slope, which the very irritation of the pupils ought to convince the teachers are, from some personal peculiarity, inapplicable. The lad will write, as he does anything else that he cares to do, as well as he can, and with a certain efficiency and speed. Almost every letter he gets will give him some assistance, and the master's remonstrance on his illegibility will be attended to, like any other caution given in the curriculum.—London Spectator.

A Senatorial Tap-Room.

Visitors to the United States Senate, who sit in the galleries and look down upon the grave law-makers, are kept in blissful ignorance of many side-scenes which take place on the floor, and in the lobbies and cloak-rooms of that historic chamber. During the last few sessions, many convivial little meetings have taken place in the Democratic cloak-room around a blazing coal fire, in that section known as the "corner." This is the place where, in a very meek and unassuming little wardrobe, is kept many choice brands of the article which statesmen are much given to imbibing in order to brace them up and add eloquence to their elocution, preparatory to making "the greatest effort" of their lives, and, if they should gauge the number of these efforts by their drinks, the country would, indeed, be filled with the echoes of their noble words. The beverage is bought by funds raised on subscription from the different Senators, and the key to the "private desk" is kept by one of the prominent officers of the Senate; and when a Senator feels like taking something he taps one of his colleagues on the shoulder and winks at the custodian of the wardrobe, who goes out one door while they go out another, and in a few moments the sound of clinking glasses is heard in the region of the "corner." The "corner" is a great place for healing over the tender spots of partisanship, and it was no unusual sight, last Congress, to see Bayard and Stanley Matthews, Voorhees and Don Cameron, and Eaton and Jones of Nevada, walking arm-in-arm to take a drink to the health of things in general. Thurman and Edmunds, leaders of their different parties in the Senate, and often engaged in a most bitter debate, will, at its conclusion, calmly smile at each other. Edmunds will then slip out one way, Thurman another, and in two minutes they will be enjoying themselves together in a committee-room over three-fingers of "66." When Dennis of Maryland was in the Senate he was very generous in keeping the "corner" supplied with all the choice brands, and in 1877 had some old peach brandy brought from his farm in Maryland that was 40 years old, and so thick that it was taken from the bottles with a spoon. Dennis was not much on statesmanship and heavy oratory, but he was an authority on terrapin and peach brandy.—Washington letter.

The Chinese Cuisine.

The shark's fin is a delicacy which is rarely omitted from the menu of a Chinese feast. It is one of the "great classic dishes" forming the pieces de resistance of an official banquet, and is eaten either in the form of a joint, garnished with crabs, or served up in small pieces in cups placed before each guest. The consumption of rats, though it seems to be somewhat on the decline, is the cause of a very important traffic in the principal towns of certain districts, and especially in a street in Canton called Hing-Loung-Kai. Here these animals may be seen in enormous multitudes hanging up in the shop windows among chickens and ducks and geese. They are for the most part dried and salted, and when in that state are esteemed a sovereign recipe for those whose hair is getting thin.

Beside the dishes peculiar to the Celestials alone, there are a variety of differences in their mode of eating and cooking food unknown to our cuisine. Hams, for instance, are kept for a year, or even two years, buried in heaps of sawdust, which imparts to them a taste of wood much appreciated by the gourmets. Broad beans are fermented, and, after being mixed with salt, form a very favorite sauce eaten with all sorts of viands. Finally, the habit of eating "rotten eggs," which sounds so strang to European ears, is explained by showing that the so-called rotten egg is only a duck's egg preserved for a long time in an air-tight envelope made of ashes, chalk, tea-leaves, and a number of other strange substances, until the yelk turns first to a green color, and then to a fine black, when it is considered fit to be eaten.

Poisonous Fishes.

A study of poisonous fishes has been made in France by M. Leon Fournol. He finds that there are four classes of these animals: (1) Those that are harmless at some seasons, but poisonous at others; (2) those that are wholesome when young, but become poisonous after attaining a certain age; (3) those which are poisonous only occasionally; and (4) those that are invariably poisonous. To the third class belong the barbel, the conger eel, and, if we include mollusks, the mussel and the oyster. M. Fournol thinks that the cases on record of poisoning by mussels and the oysters are attributable to the fact that these shell-fish had eaten the eggs of star fishes, which are known to be powerful irritants, so that when handled they occasion a violent eruption on the skin.

Paper Boxes.

By a recent invention paper boxes are made in Boston directly from paper pulp. The boxes are turned out of any size or shape perfectly seamless and uniform thickness. After drying the boxes are run through a second machine at the rate of sixty per minute, receiving, under a pressure of 4,000 pounds, such embossing as may be necessary. From the time the paper stock is taken from the bales until the perfect box is turned from the machine manual labor is entirely avoided. By the use of one set of these machines 30,000 boxes can be produced per day, at less than one-third of the lowest market price of hand-made goods, and doing the work of 200 hands as the process is ordinarily conducted.

Robert Heath, of West Groton, Vt., was recently attacked by a hog while attending to a litter of pigs, and was trampled upon, his clothes torn, and one hand frightfully chewed. His life was probably saved by his son-in-law, who beat the infuriated animal away.

To prevent ingrowing toe-nails: Cut or scrape a groove down the center and pare the ends off square; never cut the sides.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., APRIL 29, 1880.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

"NO SOLID SOUTH, NO SOLID NORTH, BUT A SOLID UNION."

Democratic County Central Committee

OFFICERS.

Wm. L. Blair, Chairman.
Theo. Reed, Secretary.
J. J. Van Auken, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Wm. L. Blair, Jas. A. Barns, J. Wm. Wagner, T. F. Jordan, Guy Plumb.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEEMEN.

C. M. Merica, Butler township.
J. J. Walter, Jackson township.
T. S. Murray, Concord township.
Geo. A. Munn, Newville township.
Jacob Christoffle, Stafford township.
Geo. W. Maxwell, Wilmington township.
M. Houston, Auburn precinct.
D. Y. Husselman, Waterloo precinct.
W. J. Frederick, Keyser township.
L. D. Britton, Richland township.
J. M. Brumback, Fairfield township.
Fred. Waterman, Smithfield township.
T. H. Tomlinson, Franklin township.
B. F. Cornelius, Troy township.

Democratic Convention.

The democracy of the town of Auburn, is requested to meet at the old jail building, on next

Friday evening, April 30, 1880, at 7 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of nominating five trustees, one clerk, one treasurer and one marshal, to be voted for at the annual corporation election, on Monday, May 3, 1880. Every democrat and citizen who favors economy and good management of town affairs, should be present.

F. E. DAVENPORT,
THOS. D. GROSS, } Com.
THEO. REED.

Go to the election next Monday and vote the democratic ticket without a scratch.

Attend the democratic caucus to morrow evening and help to nominate a strong ticket.

Elect democratic officers next Monday and the town will be well managed during the next year.

The management of the affairs of the town by a democratic board of trustees, during the last year, gives excellent satisfaction. The citizens will elect another democratic board next Monday.

J. C. Rohm, who was elected trustee of Smithfield township at the recent election by the democrats, has resigned, and a republican has been appointed to fill the vacancy; but it will require several such changes to get a majority of the trustees this year.

The Larwill Blade is at hand marked "P. X.," and finding the name of C. T. Hullis at the head as editor and proprietor, we concluded that about the best thing we could do would be to comply with Charley's request, or forever stay away from Larwill. Yes, Chawls, mark us on your slate.

The people of Auburn would like to see a complete showing of the finances and financial standing of the town corporation. Will the proper officers accommodate them?—Republican.

The people of Auburn can "see a complete showing of the finances and financial standing of the town corporation," in another column of the COURIER. The showing will be very satisfactory to the people as citizen taxpayers. Viewing the showing from a political standpoint, it is liable to make average republicans very sick at the stomach.

A remarkable literary production occupied fifteen pages of the Congressional Record of the 22nd inst. It is an argument in blank verse, delivered in the house of representatives by Hon. Stephen Downey, delegate from Wyoming territory, in support of his bill providing for the appropriation of $500,000 to decorate the walls of the capitol of the nation with a series of suitable paintings illustrating the birth, life, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, as told in the four Gospels of Mathew, Mark, Luke and John. The poem is entitled "The Immortals," and is dedicated to the congress of the United States.

Later reports from New York go to show that Tilden's strength at the Syracuse convention was overestimated. It is said by those who know, that if Kelley had remained in the regular organization up to the time of the last convention, the opposition to Tilden would have been in the majority, as it was, the anti-Tilden men in the regular convention had no leaders and failed to show their full strength. Tilden intended to have the convention instruct for him by name, but such opposition was manifested that his friends were afraid to press the measure. The final adoption of the resolutions was delayed until about eleven o'clock at night, the resolutions were then submitted to an almost empty house and put through without opposition. That a Tilden delegation will be sent to Cincinnati from New York there is doubt, but, Tammany will also send a delegation to Cincinnati representing 100,000 democratic voters who can never be induced to vote for Tilden. It is folly to even think of ever again electing Tilden. IT CANNOT BE DONE.

To Democrats.

EDITORS COURIER: I have acted in a humble capacity for more than a quarter of a century in political matters, and always had an interest in the result of elections, because of the interest those results have on the people and their rights. I have lived in this state nearly fifty years, and have never held nor run for an office. My democracy has never been questioned. Now, may I be permitted to make a few suggestions to the active, working, managing men of our party, which, I hope, may do them some good during the coming campaign?

First, let me say that DeKalb county since 1860 has been essentially at all times a democratic county. And whenever the opposition has carried any offices, there has been a good and substantial reason for it; and to define the reason in general terms, it was because we had too many candidates wanting office, urged on by indiscreet friends who, in their zeal would before the nominations estrange the party by the tales of untruth, and sometimes truth, of the man who would be nominated. Such conduct is most reprehensible, and absolutely beneath any man fit for any office, and it should be set down by every democrat, that any man who will peddle tales and charges against a candidate is a disorganizer, a false democrat, and unfit for office. If a man is a true, sensible democrat, and has the good of his party at heart, instead of heralding to the world some fault of another who is a candidate, he will in a quiet, silent way speak of the matter to the interested one and advise him to not jeopardize the party by asking a nomination. He will by kind words persuade the man and his friends to withhold his name, and not permit him to go into a convention and be chagrined by defeat, thereby producing fancied injuries and insults. We have now in our county a number of men who thus feel hurt,—some who have been defeated at conventions and some who have been defeated at the polls; and this feeling extends to their friends. Therefore, how much better for the man, to save this chagrin and the expense of being a candidate than it would have been had the course been pursued that I speak of. If a man has points, either in character or record, that are assailable, plead with and urge him and his friends to forego placing him on the track. A great many do not know their weaknesses; do not "see themselves as others see them," and when once before the convention or on the ticket it is then too late to recede. Do not let any one say that "A" is entitled to the office and shall have it. Do not let any say that even if there is some little thing against "A" that it will be overcome and explained away before the people. We have plenty of good men from which to make our selections;—men competent, honest, and against whom not a word can be spoken. And above all, do not make nominations to suit the republicans. First suit yourselves. When you hear it said as a reason that a man should be nominated, that "he can get republican votes," set it down either as false or that he will lose more democratic votes than he will gain republican ones. Set down the man who is urged by republicans to be a candidate, advised by them, pushed by them, as a weak man, easy to defeat. They know it, and therefore they urge him on, and if defeated at the convention they will make him think he is a terribly abused man, thereby producing distraction, ill feeling and soreness, and afterwards bolting of the nominees. Lately the active, energetic republicans of the county have been doing this very thing. They have already got several men running for offices in the democratic party, urging them to go in, that their chances are best, that the other candidates are scallawags, that the party owes them the office, etc., etc.; and yet the candidates do not know the reason these lies are told them. They want to produce just such a state of affairs as we witnessed in the campaign of 1878. It can be proven that money was offered by republicans to democratic delegates to nominate men who were in fact nominated and defeated. Let the simple question be asked, why did republicans then want and now want certain men nominated? Why would they give money to get democrats nominated? Any man of judgment ought to know. And yet we have some democrats who are foolish enough to listen to these "tempting devils," when if they would think a moment they would know that their object was a bad one for our party.

But I have already made this too long, and must stop.

A JACKSON DEMOCRAT.

The republicans of Auburn (37 in all) met at the sheriff's office last Monday evening for the purpose of nominating a ticket to be voted for at the town election next Monday. The meeting organized with C. Beugnot as chairman and R. H. Weamer as secretary. The leaders present at the meeting concluded to sacrifice the following persons for the good of the cause, next Monday:

THE TICKET.

Trustee, 1st ward—James E. Pearce.
Trustee, 2d ward—John Lobmiller.
Trustee, 3rd ward—Geo. A. Porter.
Trustee, 4th ward—Henry Wolf.
Trustee, 5th ward—John W. Shaffer.
Clerk—Geo. H. Yesbera.
Treasurer—Sherman Hollister.
Marshal—D. K. Houghton.

How They Are Regarded.

[Fort Wayne News.]

Two years ago, Hon. Robert Lowry, for the sake of party success, was willing to forget past grievances and support William Fleming for the state treasurership. Saturday last, Fleming went into the Fifth ward and made a personal fight against Lowry's election as a delegate to the senatorial convention. The election of Judge Lowry despite Fleming's opposition, shows how the two men are regarded by the democrats of their own ward.

To-day, representatives of the democracy of the several counties constituting this congressional district will meet in Auburn to nominate a candidate for congress. There being but one candidate in the field—Hon. W. G. Colerick—his nomination will no doubt be made by acclamation. Mr. Colerick has been a faithful guardian of the people's interests; always at his post to contend against fraud and trickery; ever ready to look after matters referred to him by his constituents, and an ardent advocate of reform in the management the affairs of the goverment. He deserves a re-nomination because he is worthy and well qualified for the position; because he has served the people faithfully and honestly, and because he can be elected by a large majority over any candidate the republicans can name.

Greenback Convention.

WATERLOO, April 26, 1880.

EDS. COURIER:—I submit the following report of convention, hoping it may find a place in the columns of your paper: In compliance with notice, the national greenback party of DeKalb county, met in convention at this place on the 24th inst., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the state convention which meets at Indianapolis on the 29th. The convention was called to order by Dr. A. B. Darby, chairman of the central committee, and an organization was effected by appointing R. N. Crooks, chairman, and J. S. Holly, secretary. Notwithstanding the bad condition of the weather, the convention was well attended, representative men from nearly all portions of the county being present. A motion by E. R. Shoemaker was carried, requesting the chair to appoint a committee of three to select and present to the convention names of suitable persons as delegates. A. D. Goetschius, John W. Shoves and Dr. Darby were appointed. The reports of the committees were received and adopted—with some modifications. The following gentlemen were appointed to attend the state convention: R. N. Crooks, A. D. Goetschius, Wm. Jackman, Jason Beard, E. R. Shoemaker, Enos Vian, Dr. A. B. Darby, J. C. Veeley, J. S. Holly, J. R. Duncan, L. S. Stoner, R. Points, Henry Williman and M. E. Chapman. A county organization committee was created and the convention adjourned.

J. S. HOLLY, Sec'y.

A Candidate.

The democrats of northeastern Indiana, especially those of the old congressional district composed of the counties Steuben, LaGrange, Elkhart, Marshall, Kosciusko, Noble and DeKalb, will remember the congressional fight in 1874, when the hopeless task of overcoming a republican majority of 2,000 to 3,000 in the district was undertaken by one of DeKalb county's wideawake democratic farmers, who canvassed the district against Hon. J. H. Baker and came within 45 votes of being elected. That man was Hon. Freeman Kelley, who in 1876 made the same fight, against the same odds and the same man, and though defeated the second time had the satisfaction of knowing that his own people in his own county gave him an increased majority. In view of his valuable services to the party in the campaigns named, more particularly during the last presidential campaign, and in view of his ability as a public speaker, the democracy of northeastern Indiana desire to present the claims of Mr Kelley to the democrats of the state in convention assembled as a candidate for the office of Lieutenant Governor. Mr. Kelley will be remembered by those who attended the democratic state convention at Indianapolis in 1876 as having made a rousing speech from the balcony of the Palmer house during the evening after the nomination of Gov Williams. Mr. Kelley is a great reader, an energetic, hard-working farmer, a man of excellent judgment and a powerful speaker; he has a way of presenting his arguments that seldom fails to convince his hearers of the correctness of his theories. We are authorized to say for Mr. Kelley, that if nominated he will make a thorough canvass of the state, and speak in every county if possible.

Notice of Meeting.

The members of the Farmers' Mutual insurance company, of DeKalb county, will take notice that the annual meeting of the company will be held in Auburn, Saturday, May 29, 1880, for the purpose of electing officers, appointing township soliciting agents and for the transaction of such other business as may come up.

The directors of the company will meet Friday, May 28, 1880, to settle with the secretary.

17-4w PERRY FITCH, Secretary.

A House to Rent or Sell.

Containing five rooms. There is a good well and cistern on the premises, and also some small fruit.

17-3w W. H. MCQUISTON.

This Spring!

We are making some extraordinary efforts to do about two-thirds of the

CLOTHING BUSINESS

of this city. Heretofore we have, probably, done one-half of it. With our increased facilities, and having bought largely before the advance, etc., our belief remains unchanged, and we shall act upon it, that the best time to sell cheap is when others sell dear; and that more fortunes have been made by selling at low than high prices. Call and see the most complete stock of

Men's Clothing,
Boy's Clothing,
Children's Clothing,
Hats and Caps,
Gents' Furnishing Goods

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.
C. O. D.

One-price clothiers and displayers of the best goods for the least money.

Opposite North Door Court House.

ANNUAL REPORT

Of the Trustees and Treasurer of the Incorporated Town of Auburn.

TRUSTEES REPORT.

Report of the trustees of the incorporated town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind., for the year commencing April 28, 1879, and ending April 26, 1880:

Amount of tax duplicate 1879	2,595 42
" " collected	1,673 19
" " delinquent	$922 23
" received from licenses	108 50
" of orders issued	2,009 73

Outstanding Orders:

Of 1874	14 00
" 1875
" 1876	20 00
" 1877
" 1878	333 72
" 1879	528 47
" 1880	80 68
Total	$ 984 87

Bonds Outstanding:

Ward school bonds	2,000 00
Fire bonds	2,000 00
School-house bonds	10,000 00
Total	$14,000 00

A. C. WILSON, Pres't. Town Board.
Attest: THOS. H. SPROTT, Town Clerk.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

To the Honorable Board of Trustees of the incorporated town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind:

The undersigned, treasurer of said town, would respectfully show and report the following statement of receipts and expenditures for the year commencing April 28, 1879, and ending April 24, 1880.

Road Fund:

Amount on hand April 28, 1879	21 17
" received of county treasurer	441 09
Total receipts	$462 26
Redemption of orders	384 90
Balance on hand	$ 77 36

School Fund:

Fund for the redemption of bonds and coupons issued for the construction of school houses.

Amount on hand April 26, 1879	295 19
" received of county treasurer	2,188 70
Total receipts	$2,483 89
Redemption of bonds and coupons	2,065 00
Balance on hand	$ 418 89

Sinking Fund:

Amount on hand April 28, 1879	595 52
" received of Marshal Scott	183 52
Total receipts	$ 778 04

Interest Fund:

Balance overpaid April 28, 1879	1 50
Redemption of coupons	200 00
Amount expended	$ 201 50
Received of Marshal Scott	182 52
Balance overpaid	$ 21 98

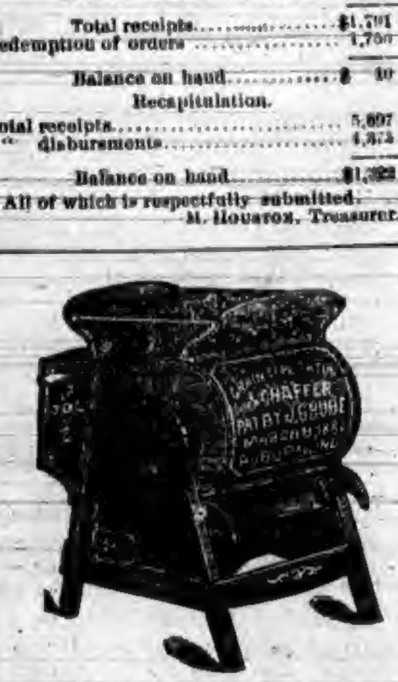
Municipal Fund:

Amount on hand April 28, 1879	427 41
" received of Marshal Scott	1,363 66
Total receipts	$1,791 07
Redemption of orders	1,750 71
Balance on hand	$ 40 36

Recapitulation.

Total receipts	5,697 76
" disburements	4,373 11
Balance on hand	$1,322 65

All of which is respectfully submitted.
M. HOUSTON, Treasurer.



SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1, the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer
IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

☞ For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

LAWNS.

250 pieces of new and choice styles Summer Lawns in side bands, figures, stripes and plain colors, 10 cents, 12½ cents and 15 cents per yard; also new Linen Lawns, Organdies, Jaconets, Momie Cloths, Foulards, Zephyr Ginghams, Seersucker Stripes, Scotch, Canton and Madras Ginghams. An elegant line to make early selections from.

ROOT & COMPANY.

MATTINGS.

This week new arrivals of China Mattings in fancy styles; white and check Mattings, all widths. Also Napier, cocoa and cane mattings for offices and public buildings in different grades at close prices. Also opening a new lot of Tapestry and Velvet Rugs and Matts, all sizes, in new and choice designs at old prices.

ROOT & COMPANY.

BROCADE.

SILKS, in black and fancy colors. Rich goods at very moderate prices. Also a large stock of Spring Silks, 50 cents, 60 cents and 75 cents per yard. Fancy Trimmings, Satins and Silks, in all colors and combinations, probably the largest collection in the state, at popular prices.

ROOT & COMPANY.

CREPES.

We keep a full line of Grout's and Courtauld's English Crepes, in all widths and grades, from 60 cents to $3 per yard, and cut them on the or anyway to suit. Also Crepe and Love Veils, hat and arm Crepes. Our stock of Mourning Dress Goods is large and complete in all fabrics; also have full stock of Mourning Hankerchiefs, Gloves, Black Ruchings, etc.

ROOT & COMPANY.

WHITE

GOODS DEPARTMENT full and complete with stripe, check and plain Nainsooks, Victoria and India Mulls, Lace Stripe Piques, soft Cambrics, Terry Cloths, Swisses, white Wells, cord Piques. Also a large and choice stock of the new Swiss Trimmings and Hamburg Edgings in new designs.

ROOT & COMPANY, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

KIBLINGER & CO.

We are always busy behind the counters, in the ware-house, and on 1st, 2d and 3rd floors, selling Hardware, Nails, Doors, Sash, Glass, Paints and Oils by the wagon-load. Call on us when in want of anything in the Hardware line. We will sell you cheaper than the lowest. Thanks for past patronage.

KIBLINGER & CO.

The Auburn Fruit-House.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

Sugars Down.

Ligh Brown, 8 cents; Light yellow, 8 1 2 cents; Extra Yellow C, 9 cents; Coffee A 10 cents; Granulated, 11 cents.

Coffees Down.

Good Rio, 15 cents; Best Marraicabo, 20 cents; Fancy Rio, 22 cents.

South Carolina Rice, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; New Prunes, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; A No. 1 Fine Cut Tobacco, 40, cents; Extra Fine Cut Tobacco, 50 cents; Plug Tobacco of all brands very cheap; Parlor Matches, 7c., or 4 for 25 cents, the very best of Syrups, 70 cents; Splendid Teas at from 30 to 75 cents.

The new stock of Salt Fish will come in next week, and will be sold at the very Lowest Prices.

Crocks and Jars of any size at 7 cents a gallon.

Entrance on Seventh or Eighth Streets

Frank A. Hoff

MESSRS. J. F. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.—Dear Sir: Seeing a recomend of Hall's Catarrh Cure from Gen. P. S. Slevin, my wife was induced to commence the use of the remedy. She has been a sufferer from Catarrh for a good many years. We had tried most all known remedies, but they all failed to relieve her. She has been taking Hall's Catarrh Cure of late, and we consider her cured. We would gladly recomemnd it to any one who has the Catarrh. We consider it worth ten times its cost.

A. C. HENRY.

For sale by all druggists. 15-4w

The use of ST. JACOBS OIL is indeed followed by the most wonderful results. More than a dozen cases have come to my knowledge, where ST. JACOBS OIL effected speedy cures, but I will only mention one instance. A man suffering for twenty-four years from Rheumatism was induced to try the ST. JACOBS OIL. He used a few bottles of this truly wonderful remedy, and is now entirely well once more.

W. REINHARDT, Elmore, Wis.

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator, with the will annexed, of the estate of Joseph Bowman, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

ELIJAH S. McDOWELL,
GEORGE O. DENISON,
Administrators, with the will annexed.

April 22, 1880. 18-3w

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK AT AUBURN, IN THE STATE OF INDIANA, AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS, APRIL 23, 1880.

RESOURCES:

Loans and discounts	$67,300.98
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	50,000.00
U. S. Bonds on hand	500.00
Due from approved reserve agents	2,706.24
Due from other National Banks	2,000.00
Due from State Banks and bankers
Real estate, furniture and fixtures	12,651.03
Current expenses and taxes paid	733.96
Profit and loss	78.20
Checks and other cash items	232.47
Bills of other banks	5,000.00
Fractional currency, including nickels	9.38
Specie, including gold Treas'y certificates	2,870.15
Legal-tender notes	12,657.00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer	2,250.00
Due from U. S. Treasurer
Total	$147,070.59

LIABILITIES:

Capital stock paid in	$50,000.00
Surplus fund	3,500.00
Undivided profits	2,153.05
National Bank notes outstanding	45,000.00
Individual deposits subject to check	29,434.91
Demand certificates of deposit	13,482.73
Time certificates of deposit	3,500.00
Profits & Loss
Total	$147,070.59

STATE OF INDIANA, County of DeKalb, ss.

I, W. McIntyre, cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

W. MCINTYRE, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 27th day of April, 1880. JOHN W. BAXTER Clerk, DeKalb Circuit Court.

CORRECT Attest:

GUY PLUMB,
ISAAC H. GOOD, } Directors.
J. WALBORN,

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

—MORTGAGES,
—WARRANTEE DEEDS,
—QUIT CLAIM DEEDS,
—GUARDIAN'S RECEIPTS, (bound),
—ADMINISTRATOR'S RECEIPTS(bound,)
—For sale in large or small quantities at the COURIER office. tf.

—Wall paper cheap at Davenport's drug store. 14-tf.

—Dr. Cowan is the happy father of a nice new ~~horse~~.

—Boys' hats, THREE for 25 cents, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Did you ever see a hoe handle ? If so, what did it handle ?

—Dr. J. J. Littlefield started Tuesday for Concord, Mich.

—Patronize home trade by purchasing the Eckhart buggy.

—A 46-piece set of dishes for $3.75 at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Mrs M. B. Willis is recovering from a severe attack of rheumatism.

—Six-button kid gloves, and Josephine kid gloves at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—One dozen one-gallon milk crocks for 85 cents, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Harry Yesbera's man appears in this week's paper. Look him up and hear him talk.

—Spring shawls, linen dresses and ladies' linen dusters at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—The road-scraper is indeed doing some noble work on our streets—assisted by a man and two horses.

—It will pay you to see Davenport's patterns before you purchase wall paper and window shades. 14-tf.

—Those subject to costiveness should at once try "Sellers' Liver Pills." 25c. per box. Sold by all druggists.

—The handsomest patterns in wall-paper and window-shades are to be seen at Davenport's. Cheap, too.

—P. J. Lockwood went to Ft. Wayne Tuesday afternoon to "monkey around a little ;" he said so himself. Oh, P. J.!

—Fred. Clark left on the noon train yesterday for Detroit, and will return probably to-morrow. We say probably.

—A large lot of one, two and three-button kid gloves at from 30 to 60 cents per pair, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—The proprietor of the Eckhart carriage works can hereafter be found at Mr. Ensley's store, when not at the works.

—With the increasing warmth in the rays of the sun, the annual setters have commenced to cover their favorite goods boxes and whittle.

—Don't buy your embroideries, trimming silks, fringes, beaded gimps and tassels, veilings, etc., till you go to McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—The bottoms on the east side of town have been completely inundated for several days past. Fine opportunity there for boat racing.

—Never let a cough, cold, or croup go too far. On the first symptoms send to your druggist for "Dr. Sellers' Cough Syrup." 25c. per bottle.

—Mrs. Work, wife of Wesley I. Work, of New Era, has been quite ill during the past week, but is now much improved. Dr. Spooner attended.

—The son and daughter of Mrs. Fox, of south Main street, have been afflicted this week, the former with malarial fever and the latter with rheumatism.

—Choice coffee at from 16 to 23 cents per pound. New Java coffee 25 cents per pound. Arbuckle's Ariosa roasted coffee, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-2w

—J. J. Martin and wife contemplate a western trip next week, and expect to be gone about three weeks. Amongst other places, they will visit Kansas City.

—The largest assortment of dress goods, such as cashmeres, alpacas, bunting, brocades and cheap suitings in the city, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Miss Rosa Shaffer resumed her school-teaching duties last Tuesday. She is now located at Sugar Grove, a pretty little school-house two miles west of town.

—By a wire connection made the first of this week at Auburn Junction, communication by telegraph can now be had direct with Chicago and all the principal cities.

—Charles Emanuel lost a small memorandum-book recently, containing some citations of cases, etc., for the return of which he will be under obligations to the finder.

—For an outline of the elegant summer goods now to be had at the mammoth store of Messrs. Root & Co., Ft. Wayne, see their new advertisement elsewhere in the COURIER.

—The largest stock of bleached and brown muslin, shirtings, cottonades, ticks, ducks, denims, towellings, table-linens, hats, etc., etc., in the city, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Mrs. A. J. Little will go east next week for the purpose of attending the summer opening, and purchasing a stock of millinery goods. Those desiring hats of the very latest style, should await her return before purchasing. She also has a fine line of goods in stock at present, which are being sold at very low prices to make room for her summer invoice.

—Hank Mader came up from Fort Wayne Monday morning with a whole armful of "store clothes" from the establishment of Sam, Pete & Max. Says he saw their "big talk" in the COURIER.

—Our well-known townsman, J. C. Henry, has now got a perfect little notion-store on wheels. His new wagon, costing $500, is a beauty and hard to beat.

—Do you want a carpet this spring? If you do, go to McQuiston & Ralston's at once. They have already closed out several pieces. Those who go early will get the bargains. 17-3w

—The Presbyterian social will be entertained at the Presbyterian church next Saturday afternoon. Refreshments served promptly at six o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

MRS. J. E. ROSE, Sec'y.

—Four pairs of cotton socks for 25 cents; two pairs heavy seamless cotton socks for 25 cents; children's hose from 10 to 50 cents per pair. The best 10-cent white cotton stockings in the market, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—In addition to his father's team and wagon, Jim Rhodenbaugh has branched out with another outfit with which to divide up the hauling business. Doubtless the opposition will break them both up.

—The new historical atlas of DeKalb county has been delivered, and has given very general satisfaction. As a whole, it is a creditable work. Messrs. J. H Beers & Co., of Chicago, are the publishers.

—Dr Jared Spooner takes his residence in Peru next Monday, that is to say, he leaves Auburn that day. His family will remain here for the time being, while the doctor goes to prepare the way.

—Frank P. Copper and the junior editor of the COURIER, both residents of Auburn, one married and the other like Barkis—willin' to be—went down to Fort Wayne yesterday after some asparagus and a loaf of bread.

—The M. E. society will meet at the lecture room Wednesday afternoon, to which all are respectfully invited. Refreshments served at the usual hour.

MRS. J. ANDERSON,
Secretary.

—A car-load of Dutch emigrants came up as far as the junction, on the Jackson road last Monday morning, and went to Butler on the Wabash. They will probably locate at Butler and start a sauer kraut foundry.

—W. H. Kiblinger and wife will move into their new home, corner of Jackson and Seventh streets, some time next week, the house having just been vacated by Dr. Spooner and family. It is a neat and desirable place.

—Miss Mattie Ralston, of Weston, W. Virginia, has been in town since last Friday, visiting at the home of G. C. Ralston, on Seventh street. She leaves to-morrow for still farther west—Illinois—where she expects to prolong the visit.

—Dave Caruth, of Chicago, formerly in the employ of the B. & O. company, but now in the service of the Western Union, stayed over Sunday in Auburn. His wife, who has been residing here, will remove with him to Chicago next week.

—Jos. Abright says he's "lonely now since Freddie has gone," or words to that effect; which reminds us, by the way, that Fred. Yesbera left for West Unity, Ohio, his old home, last Saturday. He will return Monday with(out) Mrs. Yesbera.

—A little boy whose name we did not "catch on to," was thrown out of a wagon by the sudden jerking of the team, at the Jackson depot Tuesday evening, and suffered some painful though not serious injuries, the wagon wheel passing over one of his legs.

—Dave Hampton hasn't very much cheek. No, it's a man in Waterloo. Anyhow, Dave went out in the country after a young lady, last Friday night, and had the face to ask the young lady's father to let him take his horse and buggy for that purpose. He took it, too.

—As stated in last week's COURIER, Cosper Altenburg came all the way from Little Rock, Ark., to see his father die ; but 'Squire Altenburg, fortunately, wouldn't do it just at this time, and the former returned to his home in the "sunny south" last Tuesday afternoon.

—List of letters remaining unclaimed in the postoffice at Auburn, Ind., for the week ending April 24, 1880 :

Elizabeth Cobb,	S. A. Musser,
Will. Clouse,	Wm. A. G. Smith,
G. B. Loveless,	Jas. C. Symonds,
John W. Leeper,	A. Thomas,
James McQuire,	George Simons,
Elizabeth Myers,	F. M. Wolford.

JOS. RAINIER, Postmaster.

—Rob. McClellan and Howard Griswold, two Auburn boys who left here separately, the former some time since and the latter recently, have run across each other in Colorado, and are now together at Gold Hill, where they say they have "struck something fat." They are both popular boys here, and their friends would be glad to see them come back with a large accumulation of health and wealth.

—These Auburn young folks shook their feet last night at the Waterloo dance, all of whom had a ga-lorious time; Misses Maud Allen, Frankie Ryan, Jennie Cowan, Ida Bell and Mrs. Mattie Birdsell; and Messrs. Dave Hampton, "Pete" Eldridge, Harry Yesbera, Ezra Shaffer and a COURIER pencil pusher. The final grand wind-up of the Neoterics comes off one week from to-night (Thursday) at Ensley hall, and you don't want to miss it.

—The following Auburn folks went to Fort Wayne Monday morning, some of whom took part in, and others went to see, the grand Odd-Fellows' parade and celebration which went off that day: John Robbins and lady and Mrs. Dr. Spooner, H. C. Peterson, T. D. Gross, Sim. Tarney and G. A. Porter. They saw the show, had a big time, and came home on the evening train—all but Sim. Tarney, who staid to see his cousin.

—While up in his hay-mow Tuesday night taking in the evening installment of eggs, Hank Little made a miscue and went down to see what was going on in the basement. He struck across a manger, on the middle of his back, and came near breaking himself in two pieces. The eggs were broken but the manger was uninjured, while Hank mopes around with a lame spine, thinking of the good luck he is in to have a spine at all.

—The lady readers of the REPUBLICAN will be glad to know that they can get the latest styled shoes and slippers at I. Hough's store, north side of public square. The patterns are perfectly splendid, and prices are reasonable.—Republican.

The lady readers of the COURIER are anxious to know who this "I. Hough" is. The only boot-and-shoe house known to them on that side of the square is the popular establishment of Mr. Isaac Hague. Evidently the proof reader on the Republican needs a more powerful pair of glasses.

Treasurer's Notice.

Notice is hereby given that I am now ready to redeem all outstanding county orders that were protested prior to June 1st, 1879, and interest will cease on the same after May 9th, 1880.

DANIEL GONSER,
April 28, 1880. Treasurer DeKab Co.

A Sad Case.

His face was like the sear and yellow leaf ; in fact, of such a golden hue 'was the man's countenance that it was evident he had resumed specie payment on a gold basis. It was a sad case of indolent liver. He was advised to try Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative, and acting upon this advise he is now happy, enjoys his food, and feels that he has taken a new lease on life. For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug store. 17-2w

Sound Logic.

When a man backs his statements by his own money, you may generally rely on them. No reputable firm will stake their reputation and fortune on any medicine unless it has proved itself to possess extraordinary remedial value. This stands true with regard to Thermaline, substitute for quinine. The high standing and character of Dundas Dick & Co., New York, as one of the leading manufacturing chemists, who prepare this remedy, bespeaks for it merit and large success.

Pioneers' Association.

The executive committee of the DeKalb county pioneers' association met Saturday, April 24, 1880, at the office of J. E. Rose. On motion it was unanimously resolved, in view of the several political conventions of both parties, to be held at Auburn and Indianapolis, and the national conventions occurring from the fifth to the twenty-third of June next, that the old settlers' annual meeting be held on Thursday, May 27, instead of the third Thursday in June, as heretofore.

Thereupon the following committees were selected : On orators, chaplain and railroads—Dr. I. H. Ford, Wm. Carr and J. E. Rose. On music—Levi Treesh, F. M. Bacon, J. W. McKay and Mrs. Dr. Swarts. On grounds—George Ensley, John Sugars, Wm. Carr, D. K. Houghton and J. C. Somers. On programme—T. D. Gross, W. H. Dills and R. Culbertson.

The committee then adjourned.

W. H. DILLS, Secretary.
(Other county papers please copy.)

CLOSING EXERCISES
Of The Auburn Public Schools.

To-morrow (Friday) evening, at Ensley's hall, an entertainment will be given by the Auburn public schools, to which the admission will be twenty-five cents and the doors will be open at 7 o'clock. It is altogether probable, judging from the attendance last year, that the hall will be crowded, and those who are there will be entertained by the following

PROGRAMME :

Address, Addie McCord ; "I'm a man," dialogue ; "Tree-top troubles," recitation, Lillie Grosh ; "Afternoon calls," dialogue; "Pussy's class," recitation, Libbie Hale ; "The new quarters," dialogue ; "Thoughts during service," recitation, Rilla Hollopeter ; "Keeping store," dialogue ; "A sketch," recitation, Nannie Peterson ; calisthenics, by D Primary ; "She would have chewing-gum," recitation, Mabel Hartman ; music, "Come where the lilies bloom," quartette; "Quarrel among the flowers," dialogue ; "To-morrow," recitation, Alza Ralston ; "News boy," tableau, 3 scenes ; "The razor man," recitation, Frank Davenport ; "The flower children," dialogue ; "The maiden martyr," recitation, Mary McKay ; "The glad new year," dialogue with tableau ; "Antony over Cæsar's dead body," (parody) recitation, John Zimmerman ; music, "My home in the dell," quartette ; "Aux Italiens," recitation, Flora Hoffman ; "Bluebeard," tableau, 3 scenes ; "A family one wouldn't care to pattern after," play ; "Artemus Ward's lecture in London," Bertie Robbins ; music, "Swallows," Sadie Hare ; "Joan of Arc," tableau-vivant, Louie Henry ; "Conscience," graduating essay, Frank McDowell ; presentation of diplomas to graduates ; closing song, "Good Night."

And then you can all go home.

—The editors of the COURIER acknowledge a short but sweet call from Miss Mollie Matheny and Miss Sadie Hare, two of Auburn's most popular and entertaining young ladies. It is these "angels' visits—few and far between"—that keep our locks from turning white.

"Crooked Heartel."

Accept a thousand thanks for that Golden remedy. I suffered for many years with Rheumatic pains in my limbs, my legs were drawn together, and people called me "Crooked Heartel." I used ST. JACOBS OIL, and was cured, and now feel so well that I think I could dance as in my young days.

John Heartel, Fremont, Ill.

Henry Lear, Patroit, Ohio, writes : I was taken sick last Wednesday with a very severe Rheumatic pain in my left shoulder ; I was so unwell that I could not even turn myself around in bed. Having heard of the curative qualities of ST. JACOBS OIL, I concluded to try it. The first application brought relief, and on the subsequent day I was able to go to work. I therefore recommend this excellent remedy to all sufferers with Rheumatism.

"Foster"

KID

GLOVES
(PATENTED JUNE 19TH, 1876.)
FOR SALE BY
McQUISTON & RALSTON,
18 3w AUBURN, IND.

$100
Reward
For any case of
CATARRH
That cannot be cured with
HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an INTERNAL REMEDY ACTING UPON THE BLOOD, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION :

If any person, after taking one dozen of HALL'S CATARRH CURE is NOT CURED OR BENEFITED more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

PRICE 75 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists.

Over 1,500 Cases of Fits Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind.

Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-tf.

S. B. HARTMAN, D. D. S.

DENTIST,

98 Calhoun st. Fort Wayne, Ind

Artificial TEETH on Gold, Silver, Porcelain or Rubber Plate.

A MEDLEY OF MERIT.

A FINE
DRESS SUIT.

Black Cloth Frock Coat	$10.00
Black Doeskin Pants	5.00
Black Cloth Vest	2.50

PANTS.

Men's Fine Rock or Harris	$5.00
Men's All-Wool	3.00
Boys' Very Durable	2.00

BOYS' SUITS.

Excellent Quality	$10.00
Strong and Durable	5.00

SAM, PETE & MAX,
Fort Wayne, Indiana.
EXAMINE OUR NOVELTIES FOR SPRING.

New Hat Man!

Hats.

and Caps.

New Hat Man!

C. H. YESBERA,
Auburn, Indiana.

WATERLOO AHEAD!

The great business boom has reached Waterloo and struck the popular store of

J. KAHN & CO.

The following are a few of the many bargains we are offering:

300 pieces New-Style Calico, all pretty and Latest Patterns, at 7 cents per yards.
100 pieces nice Heavy Shirting at 11 cents per yard.
100 pieces Dress Goods from 10 to 25 cents per yard.
4 yards of fine Heavy Table Linen for $1.
15 yards of nice Heavy Toweling for $1.
5 yards of Heavy Jeans for $1.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!

We have the Best Selected Stock in Northern Ind.

150 suits at 5, 6 and 7 dollars.
100 suits, all wool, at 7, 8 and 9 dollars.
Good Heavy Pants at $1 per pair.
Good all-wool Pants at $1.75 per pair.
250 suits for boys at $2.50, 3.00, 4.00 and 5.00.

Our Spring and Summer Stock was contracted for before the advance, and we will sell them at prices to suit everybody. We are selling a splendid line of White and Fancy Dress Shirts at 75 cents.

We cordially invite everybody to call on us, examine our goods and learn our prices before buying elsewhere.

J. KAHN & CO.

A SUMMER'S NIGHT.

The day is drawing to a close;
The golden curtains in the west
Speak of a night of calm repose,
And tired nature sinks to rest.

O'er the edge of silvery clouds,
Far in the western horizon,
In silvery lined and golden shrouds,
Slowly lowers the setting sun.

Now the dew of eve is falling
O'er nature's carpet soft and green,
One by one the stars appearing
Lend rays of light upon the scene.

The starry banners of the sky
Shed o'er earth their radiant light,
And Luna, from her throne on high,
Essays to make the darkness bright.

In the soft moonlight, cool and still,
Dewdrops glisten on the flowers;
Over the falls and near the mills,
Runs the water in wavy showers.

Now weary brother seek thy rest,
While angels are fondly watching
O'er the weary and o'er the blest;
As the hours of night are passing.

Now we feel no care nor sorrow;
On this side the river we rest;
re the dawning of the morrow
We may be resting with the blest.

A fairer morn for us is coming,
When all sorrow will fade away;
And joyful, too, will be the singing,
At the dawning of that bright day.
—Chicago Ledger.

PERILS OF READING DARWIN.

One Sunday afternoon, my maid-servant having gone out to vespers, and the heat of the day toward 3 o'clock being overpowering, I fell asleep reading Darwin.

My window opened upon the Charterhouse garden; the rustling of the leaves came vaguely to my ears; a light breath of air caressed my cheeks. Suddenly, in a dream, I saw myself transported to the banks of the Ganges, not far from Benares.

I was sitting in the shade of a great tamarind tree; the sacred river rolled before me like a lake, white with light, and upon its banks an immense forest of palms, bananas and other exotic plants spread itself, whose lances, parasols and fans mingled together as far as the eye could reach.

And while I contemplated in wonderment this splendid landscape a slight noise in the leaves over my head drew my attention. I looked up and saw . . . Guess what I saw!

I saw myself, Nicholas Poirier, Professor of Philosophy at the College of Saint Suzanne, in the form of a chimpanzee, hanging by one of my paws to the lower branch of the tamarind tree, and making faces at myself.

Judge of my astonishment!

Comprehending directly that my body had dissevered itself from my soul, and was capering about in the lonely forest, I was in consternation.

"If it wanders off into the depths of the wood," I said to myself, "it will never return, and I shall remain here alone, with my metaphysics and nothing else to console me."

The thought made me shudder. I wanted to summon my Not-Me to resume immediately its accustomed place, but the fear of frightening it modified my ideas, and with a conciliatory tone I said to it:

"Come! come! my dear Nicholas, consider. Does that posture suit the dignity of your character? Ought a professor of philosophy to suspend himself from the branch of a tree? Is it proper? Come, my friend, come back to propriety!"

But the chimpanzee, after replying to me by two or three grimaces and scratching his hams, said to me:

"Ah! now, do you take me for a fool, proud and stupid spirit? I descend from my tree to seat myself again in your old arm-chair, and wear out my eyes in deciphering silly stories! Ah, you know me little if you reckon on that. No, no! I am very well on my tree, and here I stay * * * until the fancy takes me to get down and munch a few almonds, or treat myself to a cocoanut. That's what suits me. You! do what you like, discuss, dream, babble; that is your affair. I have had enough of it."

At this impertinent answer I had a mind to be angry, but, for the second time reflecting that this would not be a good way to bring back the Not-Me, I resolved to convince it by the force of logic, and in softened accents cried:

"I comprehend, my dear Nicholas, the wish for liberty which has taken possession of you; the desire to stretch yourself was natural enough, after being thirty years at rest. But this once is enough. You should listen to reason. Come, my friend, come."

"Hear me," interrupted the chimpanzee. "For a long time I have known what you keep in store for me; that you distinguish between yourself and me, who are your own body and your own life; that you propose to survive me, after having made me work and sweat to satisfy your vanity. You have told me so a hundred times, while we were together under the same envelope. You have said to me, 'You, body, shall die; you shall turn to dust, after being buried ceremoniously, but I, spirit, I am of another essence than yours; my essence is one and indivisible; it is immortal, outside of space and time; time cannot affect it. You, you were made to be eaten by worms.' Is it true? Did you say so?"

I could not deny it, my body having lived with me fifty years in the most intimate confidence, and, beside, I had taught the thing professionally in the lecture-room, according to the programme of the university. I could not, therefore, dispute the fact, and the chimpanzee, seeing me embarrassed, recommenced making faces at me, giving forth peals of laughter with an air of triumph.

I lost patience.

"Are you coming down directly?" I cried. "I am tired of all this talk. It is I who command, I the spirit; and matter ought to obey."

"You have told me so a hundred times," said the ape, sneeringly, "and I was stupid enough to believe you. But times are changed. Stay in your armchair. I am going to skip away, swing on the vines, and try to find some pretty monkey to beautify my existence."

At this threat a shudder of horror seized me, and, softening my voice, I said:

"Well, then, yes! I have said what has been repeated for 6,000 years: It is clear that the body turns to dust, but that is not my fault; it is a fact, and every reasonable animal must submit to positive material facts. What is the use of struggling? That is evident to the senses. But the spirit, invisible, impalpable, is necessarily immortal."

On hearing this my chimpanzee burst into endless roars of laughter, chattering his teeth and repeating:

"The spirit is immortal! immortal! Ha! ha! ha! that's a good joke! immortal!"

He slapped his thighs and went into such contortions that I was afraid of seeing him fall from the tree, and began to cry out:

"Hook yourself on, animal! Hold yourself faster. With your extravagances you will end by breaking your neck, and I—I here, without a body, what will become of me? How shall I get up before my scholars and make them recognize me?"

These reasons appeared to affect the ape, for he was interested in his preservation as much as I. Then, having calmed himself, he continued:

"You are immortal, and I must disappear! Yet we have but one 'I.' For fifty years we have been working together for the development of this 'I,' both of us. I have suffered as well as you the privations which were needed for your greatness. Haven't we had to pass day and night digging into Latin, Greek, Hebrew and Sanscrit, without speaking of living languages, to get your chair of philosophy. And now I must perish, while you will survive me in an existence of unalterable satisfaction and felicity forever and ever? Come, now, that is contrary to common sense. Where would be the eternal justice of which you are always talking?"

My spirit, having no other answer to make, cried: "Shut up." But directly, feeling the necessity of wheedling this subtle animal by some sort of reasoning, I added:

"Your physical sufferings were nothing in comparison with my intellectual and moral sufferings. Besides, they were compensated by a host of pleasures suited to your nature. I never refused you anything. As soon as my means permitted I put on you a fine brown suit of clothes, patent-leather shoes, according to the taste you have always shown; waistcoats, fashionable cravats; the latest trousers were not lacking to you, for your vanity was as great as mine. You had to have white linen, ornaments to your watch-chain, things which I could have done without but for you. And your love of good living—I never saw the like. Haven't we shouted and sung and feasted at the Prado, at the Chaumiere? How many sausages with sauer kraut, slices of ham, and crawfish haven't you swallowed at the Strasbourg brewery, La Harpe street? Have I ever reproached you in the least? Even when my pockets were empty and I had to go on tick, did I hesitate? I do not speak of the innumerable pints of beer which have gone down your throat; they would make thousands of kegs if you would reckon them up. And the cigars, and the music, and the theater—and all the rest."

My chimpanzee half shut his eyes, impatiently. "Good!" said he; "you never refuse anything to yourself, either, and a thousand times you have deprived me of the greatest necessaries in order to adorn your library with some new book and satisfy your vain curiosity. In the early days, especially, I had to pass winters without fire, my fingers numb with cold and my stomach empty."

"I suffered from it more than you. Your privations enfeebled me, and the fear of losing you gave me a fever."

"Ah!" cried the rascally ape, "to be so afraid you must have been not quite sure of surviving me. Say what you will, we shall end together; you will not survive me a second. When I sleep we both lose the sense of the 'I;' when I begin to wake up you dream, you babble; when I open my eyes you revive; when I am sick, and you suspect the slightest dangerous injury in me, you do not know what saint to pray to. Go! your case is as clear as mine; soothe yourself with your darling illusions, we shall none the less depart arm-in-arm."

He stopped, and, seeing me reduced to silence, the animal went on with redoubled insolence:

"Formerly, in the time of the Egyptians, I was embalmed after my death, and remained hundreds of years in the condition of a mummy. It was a just tribute rendered to my services; the honor of being enveloped in consecrated bandages and stuffed with rare perfumes consoled me a little for my loss of life. But at present you disdain me; you think to elevate yourself by despising your body. For all that, it is only a comedy on your part. Do you remember our rheumatism in the stomach, when Dr. Boniface gave us both up? I could hardly help laughing, in spite of the sadness of the moment, at your looks when you received the last consolations of this terrestrial world; the big Latin words served out to you had not the appearance of reassuring you much as to your final lot, and for the sake of keeping me only two or three years more you would not have hesitated a moment to sacrifice your eternal life. Come, own up; be honest to yourself. Is it true?"

I was confounded at his impudence; then, with a movement of indignation and as a last resource, striking my breast, I cried: "I think; therefore I am."

And the chimpanzee, imitating my gesture and caressing his stomach, jeeringly cried: "I digest; therefore I am." He dared even to add ironically:

"One can doubt everything except that one digests; for to doubt, one must digest, doubt being a phase of good digestion."

So much audacity deserved chastisement. I rose to bring the rascal to his senses, when I perceived in the deep shadow of the leaves a moving object. Looking closer, I recognized the flat head of one of those enormous serpents of the Ganges marshes, with whom apes are a favorite dainty. His tail loosed itself from the tip of the tamarind tree, and his scaly belly glided undulatingly in silence down to the lower branches. A cry of horror burst from my very bowels: "Look out!"

And the chimpanzee, perceiving from the corner of his eye the fearful reptile, made a prodigious leap.

It was too late; the python had followed him like a dart, and I heard his bones crackling, when my maid servant, returning from vespers, opened the door, asking: "Did you call, sir?"

What luck! I seemed to feel all the hairs on my body stand on end, and I stammered: "Nothing, Jeannette, nothing; I only sneezed."

See, for all that, the emotions to which a man is exposed in reading Darwin.

INTERESTING LEGAL POINT.

A Husband Not Liable for Debts Contracted by His Wife Against His Wish.

[From the New York Times.]

Wives will pout, husbands will rejoice, and tradesman will, we fear, swear at a very recent decision of the Common Law Division of the English Court of Appeals, which the lawyers of our own country will do very well to make a note of. Mrs. Mellor purchased of the plaintiffs, Debenham & Freebody, various articles of dress suitable to her rank in life, and which, by her orders, were charged to her husband, at fair prices. When the bill was sent in, however, he declined to pay it. He made his wife an allowance, he said, and had directed her not to pledge his credit. The plaintiffs replied that they knew nothing of his private arrangements with his wife, and that they should certainly hold him responsible. The tradesmen's case seems an exceedingly strong one, and, with such counsel as Mr. Benjamin, whose career at the English bar has been as brilliant as brief, might be deemed well-nigh impregnable. The only question left to the jury, however, was the sole one: "At the time these goods were ordered had Mr. Mellor withdrawn from his wife authority to bind his credit, and forbidden her to do so?" The jury found in the affirmative, and the case was adjudged against the tradesmen. The decision on appeal is very vigorously reasoned. There is, Lord Justice Bramwell said, neither general usage nor convenience in favor of having articles of dress on credit, nor can the courts take judicial cognisance of any practice of wives to pledge their husbands' credit for such articles. Doubtless, the husband may give the wife power to run up such bills, but why should the law give such power to her against his will? Tradesmen should inform themselves as to the wives' authority. It is, doubtless, true that to ask questions of their lady customers would offend them, and that is a strong reason why such questions should not be asked; but it is no reason why the husband should be made liable in default of the shopman's choosing not to inform himself. Lord Thesiger added that there was, indeed, a presumption that the wife had authority to pledge her husband's credit, but the presumption was one liable to be rebutted, and had, in fact, been rebutted in this case by proof of the limitation of the wife's expenses. It was hard upon the tradesmen, but it would be yet haredr upon the husband to lay upon him a burden of liability against his will, and from which he would be unable to relieve himself except by public advertisement not to trust his wife, which advertisement the tradesman might, after all, plead he had not seen. The Judges disputed over a case [Manby against Scott] similar to this several years in the reign of Charles II., and fifteen years ago the Common Pleas made a similar decision in Jolly against Rees. But Justice Byles then dissented, and Sir Alexander Cockburn himself has since questioned the case. Debenham against Mellor is the first time the question has been passed upon in a court of appeal.

A Detective's Ruse.

A man was wanted by the police, says the London Sporting and Dramatic News, and his skill in the arts of "making up" and dodging his would-be captors was so considerable that, for a long time, he escaped detection. At length a clever detective was put on his track, and first of all he began to inquire about his associates. One of the most intimate of them was, it appeared, a certain young woman, and about her he first of all found out everything. He had reason to suspect that she was acquainted with the fugitive's hiding-place. So the first thing to be done was to follow her on a Saturday afternoon, when she was free from her employment. An innocent young detective in the guise of a carpenter, was told off to watch, and endeavored to strike up an acquaintance, in which design he was not very successful, though he ascertained that Kingston was her destination that afternoon. To Kingston he went, and traced her to a house occupied by an old man, about whom the neighbors knew no more than that he was an old man. He was an elderly invalid, never went to the door, never went out, saw nobody; and how was he to be caught and examined? There was nothing known about him to justify the police in entering the house, and the detective walked round the place, in company with the "carpenter," wondering what to do next. At the back of the house was a garden, in which was a kennel containing a big dog, or rather not containing him, for he was lying out in the sun at the end of his chain. No sign of life was visible in the house. "Jump over the wall and kick that dog; then hide behind the summer-house," said the detective to the "carpenter." In a moment the young man was over the wall, and the dog was howling from the effects of a kick in the ribs. Neighboring dogs joined in the chorus, and at the window appeared the old gentleman. No one was about; the dog continued to howl, and incautiously the owner came down the garden to see what was the matter. Beneath the well-made gray wig the detective's keen eyes recognized the object of his search, and in a moment the arrest was made.

Macaroni.

Macaroni, vermicelli, sea-biscuit, pilot bread, plain crackers, and common bread are all about alike in composition and nutriment. Macaroni and vermicelli differ only in the size of the tubes, both being made alike, and both are simply dried dough made of flour and water only, the same as pilot or sea-bread and plain crackers. The wheat grown in Southern Europe contains more gluten and less starch than any other, and therefore makes better macaroni. This gluten is nitrogenous, like lean meat, casein, or curd of milk (cheese), etc., and strengthens one's muscles more than the more starchy northern flour. Starch is carbonaceous, supplying material for producing fat and for promoting warmth in the system. Millions of people in Italy use macaroni as their chief, if not their sole food for the year round—the gluten answering for the lean meat consumed by other people to produce muscular strength or working power. Sea-biscuit, pilot bread, and plain crackers, those without the "shortening" of butter or lard, are simply flour and water worked into tough dough and baked instead of being air or sun-dried as macaroni and vermicelli are. They are usually made of northern-grown wheat, containing more starch and less gluten than macaroni.

ENGLISH ELECTIONS.

Their Enormous Cost—How Wilberforce Won His Seat in Parliament.

[Paris Letter to Chicago News.]

For my part, I don't see how a poor man ever gets into Parliament, so vast are the expenses assessed on the several candidates at a general election. The members are without any sort of recompense whatever, and yet it often costs the successful candidate as much as $50,000 to $80,000 to be elected. At the late Liverpool election it cost both candidates not less than $2,500 each in the single item of postage incurred by them in their appeal for his vote to each of 60,000 electors. They also had heavy traveling expenses to pay, and now the successful candidate, after being in for only about a month, has to do it all over again. A general election is a godsend for the railroads as well as for the post-office. "Out voters" for counties may have their traveling expenses paid, that is to say, any person having a vote for a county but happening to be at the time of a contested election at a distance from this qualification, may legally be brought to vote and sent back again at the candidate's expense. This may be done even though the elector may be in America or Australia, and in closely-contested elections large sums are spent in this way.

The earliest instance of the payment of election traveling expenses in England is recorded as having occurred at the general election in 1679. Macauley, the historian, says the contest continued for weeks, and over the whole country it was fierce and obstinate beyond example. Vast sums were expended and new tactics were resorted to. It was noted as a most extraordinary fact that "horses were hired at a great charge for the conveyance of voters." Wilberforce, in his "Memoirs," furnishes us with more definite information on this question of election expenses. It cost the saintly Wilberforce between $40,000 and $50,000 to be elected for Hull when a young man, of which the sum of $15,000 was for traveling expenses alone. This same distinguished Wilberforce came out victor in what has always been quoted as the most costly election that has ever taken place in the United Kingdom. This was his famous struggle in 1807 for the representation of Yorkshire There were three candidates, and it is said that that election, altogether, could not have cost less than $2,300,000. The expenses incurred by Wilberforce's two opponents—one of whom, Lord Harewood, declared he was ready to spend his whole Barbadoes property to secure the seat—in bringing up suppotrers from all parts of the kingdom, as well as from abroad, were estimated at $500,000 apiece. The polling continued fifteen days, and, notwithstanding the wealth opposing him, Wilberforce headed the poll from the beginning to the end of the struggle. Fortunately for the winner, the enthusiasm of his victorious supporters induced them to raise a public subscription and reimburse him his extravagant expenses.

The cost of the famous Yorkshire contest that I have just referred to dwarfs all others in the matter of total expenses; but I can mention some other very large amounts. An election for the Northern District of Durham cost the successful candidate $73,000; one in South Lancashire cost $85,000; one in South Shropshire cost $60,000; one in South Warwickshire, $65,000, and one in the North Riding of Yorkshire, $135,000. This was within the last fifteen years, and it was claimed that all the sums were legitimately expended. Quite a respectable amount of money for a man to pay for the honor of serving his country at his own expense; but there are in quite recent times instances of far greater prodigality. Not very long since there was an election at Norwich which cost one enterprising and patriotic Briton $350,000 to secure; but so glaring were the acts of bribery, so barefaced did the honorable electors of the mother country sell their franchises for golden guineas, that the successful candidate was refused his seat in Parliament, and Norwich has been without representation ever since.

What a Crow Is Worth.

A gentleman giving evidence before a Parliamentary committee said that in some districts the number of crows upon a farm would average at least fifty; that the birds were of great service in destroying wire-worms, and where they did not exist the farmer was obliged to hire boys to do the work of the crow, paying them at the rate of 3 half-pence per 100 worms.

Mr. Bright inquired how much a boy could earn worm-killing, and was told 9d.; but when asked if a boy made 9d. a day at the rate of 3 half-pence 100 wire-worms, how many of those noxious creatures he destroyed in a day, the witness, turning restive, replied that he did not come there to answer arithmetical questions. Mr. Bright, however, was not to be put off in that way. He asked if a boy did the work as well as the crow. "A crow is worth fifty boys!" was the rash reply. Then, quoth Mr. Bright: "If a boy is worth 9d. a day, a crow worth fifty boys, how much is the crow worth to the farmer in money?"

Not unnaturally, the gentleman lost his temper, but in vain. Paper, pen, and ink were handed to him, and, after battling with the figures awhile, he announced that a crow was worth just 37s. 6d. a day to the farmer. He was then asked to inform the committee what, at that rate, was the yearly value of the bird, and, of course, could not make it less than £684 7s. 6d. His persecutor next reminded the badgered man that he had given fifty as the average number of crows on a farm, and desired him to find the aggregate annual value to the farmer of his proper quota of the useful aids, thereby eliciting the startling information that the farmer must be a gainer of over £34,000 per annum by his half-hundred crows. Thus was the gentleman taken at his word, with a vengeance.

Choked to Death by a Tree.

Perhaps the most extraordinary death ever occurring by accident on Long island happened at Half Hollows, in the town of Huntington. Morris Bartow, 50 years of age, was cutting down trees and chopping them in the woods on the farm of Jacob Baylis. A tree that he had felled was partially upheld by an adjacent tree, and Bartow, instead of cutting the felled tree and laying it safely on the ground, proceeded to cut down the tree that upheld it. When he had cut part way through it the weight of the other tree broke it off and in the descent of the first tree Bartow was knocked down. The blade of his ax became imbedded in the earth, with his neck across the head and the weight of the tree resting on the other side of his neck. He was unable to remove the weight or help himself in any way, and before he was discovered by a boy whom he hired to pile the wood he had been choked to death.—New York Herald.

A HORRID MONSTER.

Theebaw, the Inhuman King of Burmah.

King Theebaw, of Burmah, who is reported to have caused 700 men, women and children to be burned alive as a sacrifice for his restoration to health, is but 20 years old. Selected over his elder brothers to rule, he paid the Ministers who advanced him by imprisoning them. "Instead of these advisers of his father he surrounded himself with men, or boys of his own age and tastes, and the palace became the scene of orgies conducted absolutely without restraint." An article lately published regarding him says: "Another of Theebaw's acts, immediately after his accession, was to secure himself against palace plots by the simple process of killing all his relatives. A better idea of what this means may be gained by considering that the gay old monarch had fifty-three wives and 110 children, of whom thirty-seven wives and fifty-nine children survived him. It is impossible to say how many of these brothers, sisters and step-mothers—so to speak—were killed, but eighty is a fair compromise estimate. It must not be supposed that they were disposed of with any sentimental tenderness. At first the victims were led from their cells in twos and threes to shekho to the King; then their heads were tied to their respective pairs of ankles, and blows with a heavy club on the backs of their necks ended their misery. But this soon proved too mild a spectacle for the fiendish malignity of Theebaw. One of his elder brothers professed utter scorn for what could be done to him, and was flogged to death. Another, who had looked upon foreigners as the dirt beneath his feet, and as utterly unworthy to crawl between heaven and earth, was taunted and driven to madness before receiving a half-fatal blow, and his writhing body was then thrown into the gigantic trench dug to receive the dead. A former Governor of Rangoon had his nose and mouth filled with gunpowder, a match was applied, and he was also flung into the trench to be stifled by the succeeding bodies. One young girl of 16 was pitched into the same heaving grave after having suffered every outrage which could be devised by eight soldiers of the guard. The massacre was carried on in this leisurely fashion until Theebaw and the executioners wearied of the sport; then the women were simply battered over the head, and the children were swung against the palace walls. At last the victims were all killed, and the revolting spectacle was over, but Theebaw's plan—one not unusual in Burmah—was not successful, for the reason that at least three of his blood escaped, and one of them will probably succeed him. The area of Burmah (a country in the Southeast of Asia, between India and China, and south of Thibet) is 192,000 square miles, and its population is 3,500,000. The revenue of the King is £800,000, with perquisites enough to make out the even million."

Hired Dresses.

To what shifts will women resort who are really fond of dress! In our large cities it is quite customary for ladies to hire costumes in which to attend balls. "We have various kinds of customers," said one of these costumers. "Sometimes a lady from another city, staying at a hotel, wants to go to a ball, and she comes to me. Some of my customers are ladies who tend stores. They don't go to big balls often, but when they do go they want to go right, and they save their money for it. White satin brings the highest price; then white silk, and then light corn color. The easier the dirt and the stains come on 'em, the more we get. The blue and the green don't bring so much, and the slate color and dark red we hire out cheap. Dressmakers never hire out dresses, but second-hand dealers do. They buy them of rich ladies who get tired of them. The dresses cost a high price when they are new, and the ladies won't be seen in them more than two or three times, and when they sell them they let them go cheap. As a rule, they come back to us in good order; and, as they are all well made, and we obtain a good price for them, the business pays very well."

Sand-Showers in China.

Every year witnesses curious sand-showers in China when there is neither cloud nor fog in the sky, but the sun is scarcely visible, looking very much as when seen through smoked glass. The air is filled with a fine dust, entering eyes, nostrils and mouth, and often causing serious diseases of the eye. This dust, or sand, as the people call it, penetrates houses, reaching even apartments which seem securely closed. It is supposed to come from the great desert of Gobi, as the sand of the Sahara is taken up by whirlwinds and carried hundreds of miles away. The Chinese, while sensitive to the personal discomfort arising from these showers, are resigned to them from a conviction that they are a great help to agriculture. They say that a year of numerous sand-showers is always a year of large fertility. The sand probably imparts some enriching elements to the soil, and it also tends to loosen the compact alluvial matter of the Chinese valleys. It is possible that these showers may be composed of microscopic insects, like similar showers which have been noticed in the Atlantic ocean.

Ira Curtis, an oysterman of New Haven, Ct., has taken more than sixty drowned and drowning persons from the water. He makes a careful study of currents and eddies for the purpose of seeking bodies. He has received almost no compensation for his services.

TEMPTED.

Only a plunge, a quiver, a plash;
A circling eddy, a little clash
Of the troubled waves, and I'll be free
From this cruel world and its misery.

Here there is nothing for me but contempt;
Nothing but scorn on my poor head is heaped.
Clasp me so close in your kind arms, oh, sea!
Bear my tired soul to eternity.

Out 'neath your waves I know there's a bed
Softer than earth's for my weary head.
There are fairy shells; and the sea-grass will twine,
With mosses, a shroud for this body of mine.

The wild birds' song will my requiem be,
As I lie 'neath your crystal depths, oh, sea!
Bright coral sprays I will have for my bier,
And earth's verdict will be: "Slipped from the pier."

They never can know how you beckoned me
To your peaceful depths, oh, friendly sea,
For you'll tell no tales, as you lap the beach,
Of the friendless creature that's out of their reach—

Out of the reach of the world's cruel sneers,
Out of the reach of their pitiless jeers,
Glad to clasp arms with the deep, wide sea
Rather than trust harsh humanity.

Ah! lack of the grace that suffereth long,
That should be tender with those who do wrong,
Is cursing our world, that should be so fair,
And sinking sad souls in sin and despair.
—Chicago Ledger.

PITH AND POINT.

The age of a policeman cannot be told by his rattles.

A wag says of a toper: His nose has passed the rubicund.

Women resemble flowers. They shut up when they sleep.

An undertaker gets his living where another man dies.

The selfish man cares for No. 1, and often no one cares for him.

The hen knows the man who robs her nest. She is always laying for him.

"Deer at any price!" yelled the hungry traveler who ordered venison for dinner.

The placidity of expression worn by a man who is "next" in a full barber-shop cannot be counterfeited.

When you have got through using your puzzles give them to the poor. We might get rid of the poor some way.

The hornet and the mule are too tender-hearted to look upon suffering. They always turn their back when they strike.

He married a maiden named Eva,
And said that he never would leave her,
"Do you really mean never?"
"Well," said he, "hardly Eva."

A familiar instance of color-blindness is that of a man taking a brown silk umbrella and leaving a green gingham in its place.

The little bit of a baby has his burdens—all the good-looking girls kissing him. He kicks against it now, but in after years—well, let him do his own anticipating.

The leading Methodist Church in Toronto dismissed the choir because they had been singing "Pinafore." Only "dismissed" them! Why didn't they kill 'em?

Patti gets 99,000 marks for singing in Berlin nine nights. We remember getting about that number at a boarding-school once for singing one night—and we didn't sing long, either.

M., aged 4 (her kitten being dead)—"Has pussy gone to heaven, papa?" P.—"No, darling." M.—"Why not?" P.—"They don't want cats in heaven." M.—"Would they scratch the angels?"

A stranger asked a resident in Milford, Del., "Are you always troubled with mosquitoes here?" "Mosquitoes!" was the answer, "swing a pint measure around all day and you'll catch a quart of them."

A lady said to a little boy, aged 4: "Don't stand up in the carriage, because you might tumble out, and then there would be no Harry." "Oh, yes," replied he, "there would be Harry on the road."

In a certain Massachusetts normal school the word "Eucharist" was given out not long ago to be spelled and defined. More than three-fourths of the gir—beg pardon—young ladies wrote "eucherist, a person who plays euchre."

Mother, newly bereaved of a baby, to surviving child, aged 6—"Tommy's an angel now, Mary." "Like the angels in my picture-book, mamma?" "Yes, dear." "With white wings, too?" "Yes, dear." "Has he got fleas in them, like my pigeons?"

The cooks employed by the clubs of New York receive larger salaries than a large majority of the New York editors. But the cooks don't get free passes to the circuses and minstrel shows, and the "inside matter" they prepare don't mold public opinion, as it were.

A 4-year-old Sunday-school girl did the best she could with a question that was asked of the infant class. Said the teacher, reading: "'And it came to pass, when King Hezekiah heard it, that he rent his clothes.' Now what does that mean, children—he rent his clothes?" Up went a little hand. "Well, if you know, tell us." "Please, ma'am," said the child, timidly, "I s'pose he hired 'em out."

No doubt it is unpleasant to be excessively obese, says the London Lancet, but the morbid dread of fat which has in recent years become fashionable, has no foundation in physiological fact. Fat answers two purposes: It acts as a non-conducting envelope for the body, and protects it from too rapid loss of heat, and it serves as a store of fuel. In the course of exhausting diseases it not unfrequently happens that the life of a patient may be prolonged until the reserve of fat is exhausted, and then he dies of inanition. Fats supply the material of the heating process on which vitality mainly depends. In great excess it is inconvenient; but the external layings-on-of-fat is no certain measure of the internal development of adipose tissue; much less does a tendency to grow fat imply, or even suggest, a tendency to what is known as "fatty degeneration." It is time to speak out on this point, as the most absurd notions seem to prevail. Again, it is not true that special forms of food determine fat. That is an old and exploded notion. Some organisms will make fat let them be fed on the leanest of food; while others will not be "fattened" let them feed on the most "fattening" of diets. The matter is one in regard to which it is supremely desirable and politic to be natural, adapting the food taken to the requirements of health rather than substances, simple food, sufficient exercise and regular habits, with moderation in the use of stimulants, compose the maxim of a safe and healthy way of life.

SABBATH READING.

The [illegible] Grieving.

An end, O soul, to thy poor yearning sadness!
Christ liketh not to see thee bathed in tears;
The Spirit's song is one of trust and gladness,
Not dirgeful moans of melancholy fears.

Hast thou not lived here in thy earth, not heaven?
And not earth now, but heaven, is in thy soul;
Let songs, exultant o'er thy sins forgiven
Through all its corridors and arches roll!

For what is gone weep not, 'tis gone forever;
Nay, 'tis not gone, but by the Lord redeemed;
For what is now, or may be, weep thou never,
Thy spectral ills to Christ have safely [illegible].

Think not by tears to wash out sins; thy Savior
Poured forth not only sacred tears but blood;
Dost think thou wilt be doing Him a favor
To add thy tears to the rich blood of God?

Nay, nay, poor heart! by thy continuous weeping
Thou blindest thee to richer gifts in store;
Lo! while thou agonizest thus, thou'rt keeping
Grace-burdened Christ from entering thy door!

Soul! thou hast had thy cold and cheerless winter,
Thy spring with storm of penitential tears;
Now let the sun and song of summer enter—
So with rich autumn fruits to crown thy years!

Good Out of Evil.

God is kinder to bad men than they are to themselves. Often He surprises their evil intention with unexpected good, and shames them into repentance with a blessing.

An Arabian vine-dresser in a time of war was drafted into the Turkish army, and forced away from his peaceful home in the mountains to a life of hardship and violence. Rough experience and example soon made him like all the rest of the Mussulman soldiers, ferocious, reckless, and insensible to any higher duty than fighting and plundering.

While the troops with which he served were out on one of their destroying expeditions, they entered a district inhabited by people whom the Turks considered their political enemies, and attacked a Christian village. The terrified families fled, and the invaders ransacked their houses seizing everything they could carry away. The Arabian soldier was fond of books, and took care to secure several with his other booty, paying no particular attention to what they contained.

It happened that one of the books was a Bible. He found little opportunity to read till the excitements of camp and field were over; but when he was allowed to go home he took the stolen Bible with him, and as soon as he had examined it felt interested enough in it to read it through.

No doubt the rightful owners, while they mourned their other losses, prayed that the Good Book might reform the thief who took it away. Certainly such a wish could not have been more happily realized.

The man continued to read with increased attention, and as he went on he said, "This book is better than the Koran." From wondering at the book he began to wonder at himself. His conscience was awakened, for he learned all about his own heart. The Bible showed him his guilt and led him to penitence; and then it taught him to pray, and to whom to pray. He bowed to the Redeemer revealed in the New Testament, and acknowledged Him as the Friend whom he needed.

His family were enraged when they knew that he had "turned Christian," and their reproaches and persecutions made his home a house of torment. His neighbors hated him for an "apostate," and insulted and denounced him, and even mobbed him in the street, and destroyed his vineyard and fruit trees. The poor man was a social outcast; but it was for the sake of a religion whose blessings more than paid him for all earthly spoiling and shame. Nothing could shake his heroic faith. When he was in his extremity the kindness of an English Protestant minister gave him employment, and a refuge which no Mussulman dared to violate.

At the writing of this sketch—three years from the time when he began to read that stolen Bible—the persecuted Arabian vine-dresser is a Christian preacher in a Syrian village on Mt. Lebanon, and pastor of a church which numbers among its members many of those who were once his bitterest revilers. —The Watchman.

The Quiet Worker.

Doubtless these are skeptical days. The hearts of many good men fail them. They fear what may come to pass. In this they err. Their fears blind them. They do not see that faith is contending against unbelief, nor that goodness is working to overcome wickedness.

There is an old Hebrew saying as stimulating to those who take it into their hearts as mountain air to the dweller in the valley. It affirms that, "when the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him."

One of these standards stood erect in the city of New York for sixteen years. It was a small flag, but it was bravely borne aloft in the thickest of the battle against evil.

He who carried it was a policeman, but he was of the stuff out of which martyrs and heroes are made. His brother policemen and the roughs knew him, and they, half in jest and half in praise, dubbed him with a knightly title—"The Missionary Policeman."

In 1862 he was a Methodist preacher somewhere in Connecticut. Suddenly he resigned his charge and stopped preaching. He went to New York, joined the police force, and was appointed, at his own request, a patrolman in the vilest part of the city.

He was no longer a preacher in the technical sense of that official term, but there were few clergymen in the metropolis who preached as effectually as he.

His congregations were made up of three or four children, young in years, old in wickedness, or a half-dozen reckless "roughs" and more reckless women.

He won the children by his kindness. They came to love him and heed his words. Not a rough in the district knew him as a "reverend," but many had learned to revere him.

He did good to his brother policemen. When they were in distress "the missionary" always had a little money to lend them. That softened their hearts, and he dropped a seed-word therein.

So he went on, day after day, doing all the good he could, and making no fuss about it. His plan was a simple one—the great forces of nature are very simple in their working—to do what his hand found to do.

One day, after he had been working in his quiet way for sixteen years, he was walking his "beat." Suddenly a pain smote him in the head; in a few minutes he was unconscious. Loving hands carried him to a hospital. There he died, with neither wife nor child near him.

But was he alone? His funeral was a plain one, but some of the few who followed the body to the grave thought of that other funeral procession, when the angels carried the body of Lazarus to Abraham's bosom.

What cared that policeman for skepticism, except to relieve its woes and warn against its fruits? He believed, therefore he worked.—Youth's Companion.

A Quiet Neighborhood.

A remarkable community is described as perched up among the Swiss Alps—a new Andorra in its primitiveness. The name of the place is Ablandschenen, which, being interpreted, signifies an out-of-the-way locality. Its people have no standing army, and, therefore, never go to war. They have no fleet, being hundreds of miles away from the sea in every direction. They have no publicans, and consequently their elections, if they have any, are completely pure. They have no doctors, and there has not been a death among them for several years. They possess no newspaper, are vexed by the postman only once a week, do no trades, and occupy themselves with little industry. The place is tormented by neither the ring of the blacksmith's hammer, the fumes of the baker's oven, the clatter of the wheelwright's shop, nor the importunities of shopkeepers. Nor does a notary spoil parchment, or an advocate confound justice, or a policeman tarry the night in all that mountain Arcadia. A cheap jack once a fortnight brings the good folk all they want in the shape of sundries, their own herds, flocks and poultry-yards supplying them with the rest. The Ablandscheneners, having little money, are not blessed with a bank, but they have a church, with a single bell, which is tinkled like a railway signal at the birth of a boy, but goes into ecstasies at that of a girl. It was wrong to reveal the secrets of this Alpine Utopia, because tourists will be finding it out and vulgarize it, as they have vulgarized Engadine. But, as the French say, "Nothing is sacred to a sapper," and so nothing can be kept out of the guide-books now. Hence the Ablandscheneners may before long have to establish an hotel and even a policeman.

The National Militia.

The Militia bill, as reported to the national House of Representatives, provides that every able-bodied citizen between 18 and 45 years of age shall be enrolled. The militia is to be divided into the active class, or the National Guard, and the inactive, or reserve militia. The National Guard is to consist of uniformed companies organized under State law, the term of enlistment to be for not less than three years, and in case the company is in service not to expire until the expiration of the service. In time of peace the duties of the organization are to be defined by the Legislatures, the organization to conform as nearly as possible to that of the regular army. When called into the service of the United States the National Guard may be organized into regiments, and brigades, and commanders assigned by the President. The active militia is to be trained according to the regular army tactics. The present independent companies are to retain their privileges, subject to all other duties required by law. States and Territories complying with this act are to be allowed equipments for the regularly enlisted active members, provided that the number does not exceed 700 for each Representative or Delegate the State or Territory is entitled to in Congress. The bill contains several sections about the care of arms, and requires that every organization in the active militia shall go into camps of instruction for at least five consecutive days in each year, and shall assemble for instruction not less than once a month. There shall also be an annual inspection, and the President shall detail an officer to accompany the State Inspector. Each State is to equip a rifle range, and the Government is to offer a prize for team shooting. The President can order out the National Guard for not over twelve months during war or an invasion or insurrection, and when ordered out the pay shall be the same as in the regular army. As soon as practicable after the passage of this act, a board of seven officers, to be appointed by the President, is to prepare a system of rules and regulations to be submitted to the next session of Congress. The bill appropriates $500,000.

Testing Signatures in the Dark.

The contest of the will of the late Cynthia A. Hendra, a colored woman, who died about a year ago, leaving property valued at about $80,000 to her husband as sole legatee, was on trial again yesterday before Surrogate Calvin. The contest is made by nephews and nieces of the dead woman, who allege that the will is a forgery, and the day was occupied yesterday in taking the testimony of Dr. Charles H. Cresson, of Philadelphia, an expert in handwriting. The doctor produced a megascope in the record-room of the court, which was darkened for the purpose, and by the aid of electric light thrown on the lens projected reflections of the signature to the will on a sheet of ground glass. The reflections were magnified about 100 times by the lens, and were contrasted with other admittedly-genuine signatures of the testatrix, and the signature of James W. Canfield was similarly examined and compared, he being a witness to the will. As Mr. Canfield is dead he could not be called to prove his signature, and this method of comparison had to be resorted to, the claim being made that his signature to the will is also forged.—New York Times.

When Prince Bismarck goes to Varzin for rest he will not open any letter unless it bears the visa of Vice Chancellor Stolberg. Even the Prince Imperial had to secure that functionary's mark when he wished to enter into correspondence with the Chancellor.

The Kentucky triplets have been beaten. Daniel, William and Martha Grant were born and are now living in Torrington, Ct. They are in the 59th year of their age.

There are six ex-Governors of Georgia now living, and all reside within the State.

TROOPS AT THE POLLS.

Attitude of the Democracy—Able Argument of Gen. Ewing in Reply to the Republican Speeches.

The following is a synopsis of the speech of Hon. Thomas Ewing, of Ohio, in the House of Representatives, defining the position of the Democracy upon the question of placing riders upon appropriation bills:

The House resumed consideration of the Army Appropriation bill, and was addressed by Mr. Ewing. He said the Democratic side had been severely criticised for not having taken part in this discussion. He was surprised at that. The pending amendment was practically a Republican proposition, as at the extra session only twelve Republicans had voted against it, and the Republican leaders had crowed over the fact that more Republicans than Democrats had voted for it. It was practically their thunder, and the Democratic side had not supposed that it was expected to answer their prepared tirades against the very amendment which they had so unanimously and emphatically supported. Now their objections come in a Babel of cries. All were distressed at this amendment, from the vacant chair on the Republican side (Garfield's), which was an eloquent protest against the sudden somersault of his party, down to the gentleman from New Jersey (Robeson), who, having been absent at the time of the previous adoption of the amendment, was uncommitted, and free to dip his pencil into the blackest of colors in attempting to paint the effect of the amendment. In twelve years the Republican party had placed on appropriation bills 387 political riders. The gentleman from Connecticut (Hawley) arraigned the Democratic party for placing riders on appropriation bills. That gentleman had been a member of the Forty-third Congress, which had tacked forty-four political riders on appropriation—bills forty-four rebellions in one Congress. He (Ewing) was not much of an advocate of riders on appropriation bills, but he did not tremble at the idea that the Republican party would arraign the Democracy before the people this fall for putting riders on appropriation bills. What were the riders? In whose interest? In the interest of monopolies or tyranny? No, the Democracy had put on three riders. The first had been the prohibition of the degrading use to which the army had been put, of dispersing it into little squads all over the country, and putting each squad at the beck and call of Deputy Marshals. The next rider had been a proviso, that as long as Marshals were to be used to invest the polls, they should at least be chosen by United States Judges, whose high character would give the country assurance that the Marshals would not be used as mere instruments of party triumph. Many Republicans had voted for the rider. Their most distinguished leader had framed it with his own hand, and declared he would vote for it if he was the only man who did so. But, under the pressure of party exigency, when he felt that his party must get up a little political clap-trap and sectional agitation, that gentleman, when the roll had been called, had been found voting against the amendment which he had framed and swore to stand by.

The third rider was contained in the pending amendment. He quoted from the speech made by Robeson, to the effect that this amendment "bound our defenders hand and foot and sawed the flagstaff of the country." There was a law on the statute books in the very words of this amendment. The party of the gentleman from New Jersey had cast more votes for that law than the Democrats had. Where had the gentleman been when his party had been binding "our defenders hand and foot?" He could not have been off junketing, certainly, at such an hour of peril.

Mr. Robeson—I was paired with the leader of the opposition, F. Wood, of New York.

Mr. Ewing—That pair did not save "the flagstaff of the country." What a spectacle, he continued, the Republican party binding "our defenders hand and foot." It was a case very much like Whittaker, at West Point. The suspicion was that the party complaining had bound itself. Some gentlemen on the other side had said that the Democratic party ought not to assume that Hayes would use the army unlawfully. If George Washington were President he (Ewing) would not be willing that he should have power to use troops at the polls. Possibly Hayes might not make bad use of that power. Another President might come in after him, who would not be quite so goody goody as Hayes. He might be a man of ambition, and of willfulness. It might be Gen. Grant—[slight applause on the Republican side, and cries of "It will"]—who had said in 1876, in a message to the House, that it was well understood that the presence of United States troops at polling places never interfered with the franchise of any citizen. Over 100 years after independence had been fought for and won, the gentleman from Iowa (McCoid) had stated that American troops at American polls had no alarm for him. He (Ewing) would be ashamed of the other side of the House if he believed it could calmly utter and feel such a sentiment as that. Had the love of liberty died as arts and sciences progressed? Had this wonderful advance of the country in the arts and sciences, this power which enabled the people to explore the hidden depths of the universe and to use latent and invisible powers of nature, been accompanied with the decay of love of liberty in the American heart? If he felt that it had, he would pray to God that the people might give up steam and lightning and go back to the wooden plow and hewed-log cabin of their liberty-loving sires. He did not know but that the Republican party might succeed in breaking down all the safeguards of our liberty, and in handing over term after term to a gentleman whom it was pleased to call (ignoring 1,500,000 soldiers who had done the fighting) the savior of his country. But whether it could or could not succeed in that, those who believed that the use of troops at the polls should not be permitted could not excuse themselves for failing to make this fight; and he could tell the gentlemen on the other side that, if they proposed to carry it before the people on the stump, and put themselves in a position of opposing that prohibition, the Democratic party would meet them upon it and it might be that they would not come off with quite as flying colors as they had last fall.

Mr. Humphrey—If we do not succeed, we will not turn the Government over to you with a war and a rebellion on your hands.

Mr. Ewing, in conclusion, declared that, on whatever side troops might be at election precincts, bayonets would become the base instruments of the petty despots who sent them to the polls.

The question then recurred on the bill and amendments.

The minor amendments were adopted without division, and that relative to troops at the polls by a strict party vote—yeas, 116, nays, 95.

The bill then passed—yeas, 115; nays, 95—another strict party vote, with the exception of Nicholls, who voted in the negative.

How About a Fourth Term?

The question of the expediency of a third term directly involves the expediency of a fourth term also. Gen. Grant had scarcely retired from the Presidential chair before his closest personal and political friends began the demand, which has since grown so loud, for his return to the office. During all the years that have followed the American people have been kept wondering whether he desired or would accept a third election. A single word from him would have shown them just what they had to expect, but he did not choose to speak it. They know now that he is a candidate, because he makes no effort to check the efforts of his friends to nominate him. The silence of years remains unbroken.

Let us suppose Gen. Grant nominated, elected, inaugurated. Does any one doubt that history would repeat itself? Can any one doubt that the men who began the present agitation for a third term would, in due time, begin another for a fourth term? We should be told that the emergency he had been placed in office to meet was not yet ended; that his work would be left unfinished if he were compelled to retire at the end of one term. The absurd claim that he is the only "strong man" in a nation of freemen would be revived. Let any one who doubts this reflect that many men who are now in office, and will be in office until March 4, 1881, owe their places to Gen. Grant. (This is the secret strength of the third-term movement.) Let it be remembered also that every man who is in office after March 4, 1881, would owe his continuance in office to President Grant. It would be astonishing, under these circumstances, if, with the precedent of a third term already set, there were not a loud cry for a fourth. Gratitude has been defined on high authority to be "a lively sense of favors to come."

Who can doubt that, if all this should come to pass, Gen. Grant would maintain the same absolute silence he has preserved for the past three years? Who can doubt that the American people would be allowed to speculate for years about his intentions, only to find at last that he would not refuse a re-election if he could possibly secure it? Is any friend of Gen. Grant authorized to say now that, if he is elected for a third term, he will not be a candidate for a fourth? Will Gen. Grant himself say so? We think not.—New York Tribune.

Eight Years Ignored.

The men who are running Grant for a third term and an empire present the record of their candidate's career in two chapters. The first begins with Vicksburg and ends with Appomattox. It deals with his military operations in the field. The second chapter begins with Grant's departure by Red Star steamer from Philadelphia in 1877, and contains the history of his wanderings over the face of the earth down to date. It records the honors said to have been paid him abroad, follows him around the globe, and enters minutely into the particulars of his appearance, behavior and conversation in Europe, Africa, Asia and the West Indies. The third-term men would like to have the country believe that their record in two chapters is complete.

But there is another and a more important chapter which they leave untold. From 1869 to 1877 Gen. Grant was President of the United States.

What sort of a President did he make? Did he turn his opportunities to good purposes or to bad? Was his administration honest or dishonest? Did he call around him honorable men or scoundrels? Was the history of the eight years during which Grant held the office of President a history upon which good men dwell with pride or with shame?

The third-term shouters are silent about these eight years. But the people have not forgotten them.—New York Sun.

The Chances in Ohio.

Ex-Gov. Bishop, of Ohio, arrived here to-day. He is not at all willing to concede Ohio to the Republicans next fall. He says that the status of the State has not yet been precisely determined. "It can be considered," he said, "fair fighting ground for all parties. The politics of the State for the last seven years demonstrates the correctness of my views. In 1873 Allen carried the State by 800 majority. Up to that time it had been unbrokenly Republican for fifteen years. In 1874 the State was carried by the Democracy by 17,000. Then, next year (1875) Hayes was made a candidate for Governor against Allen, and was elected after one of the hardest-fought contests ever had in the State, by something over 3,000. In 1876, the Presidential year, the Republican State ticket was elected by about 6,000, and Hayes received the same majority. In the following year Bishop was elected by 22,000. In 1878 the Republicans recovered the State by about 3,000, and in 1879 Foster carried it. In these seven years the Democrats have had one majority which goes ahead of anything the Republicans have had. A majority of 800 made a gain of about 20,000 votes." These figures, Mr. Bishop said, induced him to believe that there was nothing reliable about the State, and that, with a good ticket that will harmonize all conflicting elements and proper zeal and work, the State can be carried by the Democracy.—Washington Cor. Chicago Times.

An Idea for Ingersoll.

Col. Robert Ingersoll, in addition to being a good many other things, is also a hero worshiper. But there are heroes and heroes in this world. His appear to be altogether of the earth, earthly. There was Blaine, his plumed knight, his paladin, his archangel with a flaming sword in his hand, guarding forever the delicious recesses of his party's paradise. Do you know Blaine? He wrote some damaging letters once to a man and had desperate need one day to have them back. First he sought them with the abject fervor of a guilty pleader. Next he borrowed them to read and kept them as though he had borrowed a horse and buggy and held on to both. Then he read such of the mass as hurt him least, suppressed the balance that told of absolute crime, fell fainting in the arms of his party, and was justified and glorified. Ingersoll's exultation over him amounted to almost positive idolatry. He threw about him the arms of his rhetoric and embraced him as though he had the beauty of a Madonna and the holiness of a Christ.—Sedalia (Mo.) Democrat.

Forty-Three Days in a Mine.

After being shut up in a mine for forty-three days and nights, a Devonshire (England) dog still lives. In accompanying his master on a shooting excursion he fell into a shaft sixty-six feet deep, and was supposed to be killed. After more than a month a howl was heard to proceed from the pit's mouth. A miner was sent for and lowered, and the dog rescued in an emaciated condition. He had lost twenty-six pounds in weight.

Pennsylvania retains on its statute-books a law taxing watches, but the returns seem to show that there are very few watches owned in the State. In some wealthy towns the Assessors do not know a person who owns a watch of any kind.

INDIANA ITEMS.

The Boonville jail at present is without a single occupant.

The Cannelton cotton-mill has received four new looms the past week.

The Palace Theatre, burned a year or more ago, at Columbus, is being rebuilt.

Evansville has voted, by a large majority, to give $125,000 as aid to the Peoria and Evansville railroad.

Diphtheria has been raging among the female patients at the insane hospital, two cases of which have proved fatal.

J. S. Coleman's hardware store, at Morgantown, burned down the other night. Loss, $15,000; insurance, $5,000.

William Glover, a colored preacher at Jeffersonville, has been sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary for stealing a wagon and harness.

Some unhung scoundrel gave to a horse owned by Richard Smith, of Madison, feed mixed with broken glass, causing its death in a few hours.

There are now 120 live applications for pardons in the Governor's office. Sixteen have received executive clemency this year. During the entire term there have been 243 petitions out of more than 600 that received favorable consideration.

Chauncey, a 4-year-old son of Frank Jarret, of Fall Creek township, Marion county, was burned to death by a fire kindled to keep him warm while his father was mending the fence on his farm, the little fellow watching him from a distant part of the field.

The County Commissioners of Grant county have refused to award the contract for the Court House. When the plan was adopted it was upon the guarantee that the building would not cost over $112,000. The amount asked by the contractors was $136,000.

Lee Morgan, a notorious rough, who was sent to the Southern penitentiary a short time since, for murdering a young Irishman from Crawfordsville, named Patsy Carroll, in the "Fort Wagner" brothel at Cambridge City, on the 4th of July, 1879, was shot and killed by his keepers while escaping.

Henry Newby, of Greenfield, who has just passed his eightieth winter, after marrying all the marriageable widows in his own county, went down into Rushville, the other day, and married Mrs. Sibbie Beckner, of Arlington. Mr. Newby has been married seven times. The bride, who is about 60, has planted three good and true men.

A day or two ago Mrs. George Paul, the mother of the victim of Merrick, the wife-murderer, who was hung last year, was fatally burned at her home, south of Indianapolis. Being insane, she was confined to a chair, and while alone a draught of air carried the blankets in which she was wrapped against the stove, igniting them. When discovered she was fatally burned.

As one of the newly-adopted constitutional amendments in Indiana changes the date of elections from October to November, a large number of Judgeships and county offices will need to be filled at the election in the fall of the present year, in consequence of the term of the present occupants expiring on or before the date of the next election in November, 1880.

Northern Indiana Conference.

Following are the ministers' appointments made by the recent meeting of this conference:

Fort Wayne district—Abijah Marine, presiding elder. Fort Wayne—Berry street, G. G. Hudson; Wayne street, A. E. Mahon; Centenary, [illegible] Wharton; Third street, to be supplied; Huntertown, D. P. Hartman; Harlan, J. H. McMahon; Auburn, H. J. Norris; Garrett, to be supplied; Leo, J. A. Lewellen; Fremont, E. S. Preston; Angola, E. Holdstock; New Haven, P. S. Cook; Churubusco and Coesse, B. Tully; Arcola, to be supplied; Decatur, J. B. Carro; Monroe, L. J. Bicknell; Geneva, B. Sawyer; Sheldon, Joseph H. Slack; Monroeville, W. H. Wones; Oaklon, Newton Burwell; Bluffton, S. E. Erwin; circuit, H. C. Myers; Roanoke, Y. B. Meredith; Markles, James Wolpert; Huntington, M. Mahan. W. G. Yocum, President of Fort Wayne College, member of Wayne Street (Fort Wayne) Quarterly Conference; Cadis Albro, professor in Fort Wayne College, member of Berry Street Quarterly Conference.

Goshen district—A. Greenman, presiding elder. Goshen, W. O. Pierce; Mishawaka, A. Cone; Osceola, J. H. Jackson; Middlebury, J. T. Blackmore; Elkhart, M. H. Mendenhall; circuit, W. S. Stewart; Bristol and Van Buren, M. H. Lampert; La Grange, C. E. Disbro; circuit, J. G. Sinsor; Lime, J. K. Waltz; Orland, W. M. Van Slyke; Waterloo, H. J. Lacey; Butler, C. H. Wilkinson; Hamilton, J. W. Pascall; Corunna, J. Johnson; Kendallville, J. Green; Wolcottville, C. King; Wawaka, H. C. Klingler; Ligonier, C. W. Church; New Paris, G. B. Work; Milford, W. Lash; Napanee, O. P. Downs; Albion, J. W. Smith; missionary to Mexico, A. W. Greenman.

Muncie district—E. F. Hasty, presiding elder. Muncie, F. T. Simpson; North Muncie, T. Sells; Winchester, P. Corland; New Burlington, A. J. Lewellen; Dunkirk, P. J. Allbright; Pennville, J. W. McDaniel; Montpelier, D. F. Stright; Hartford City, N. Gillam; Albany, D. C. Woolpert; Eaton, J. L. Ramsey; New Corner, R. H. Smith; Jonesboro, C. E. Bacon; Alexandria, H. C. Smith; Anderson, A. W. Lamport; Perkinsville, C. Harvey; Anderson circuit, to be supplied; Fishersburgh, T. H. C. Beale; Pendleton, A. F. Bremington; Fortville, J. S. McCarthy; McCordsville, T. J. Elkin.

Richmond district—C. Skinner, presiding elder. Richmond—Pearl street, W. J. Tigus; Grace Church, H. A. Buchtel; Centerville, L. M. Woolverton; Cambridge City, O. S. Harrison; Dublin, E. S. Fresnan; Lewisville and Ogden, W. S. Boston; Knightstown, H. H. Phillips; Charlotteville, James Leonard; Greenfield, J. F. Rhoades; Philadelphia, W. Anderson; Williamsburg, G. W. Howe; Hagerstown, J. M. Mann; Newcastle, Thomas Stabler; Spiceland, Newton Wroy; Middletown, M. Wayman; Cadiz, J. Thomas; Whitewater, J. S. Carns; Fountain City, W. H. Pierce; Winchester Circuit, to be supplied; Trenton, W. Peck; Union City, H. J. Meek; Ridgeville, T. E. Madden; Portland, P. J. Parrett; circuit, to be supplied; J. Earp, professor in Indiana Asbury University, member of Grace Church Quarterly Conference; W. P. Walker, J. H. Pike, Chentachung Tejni, missionaries to China.

Warsaw district—J. W. Welsh, presiding elder. Warsaw, R. A. McKaig; Silver Lake, J. J. Smith; Wabash, C. W. Lynch; Wabash circuit, to be supplied; Marion, W. S. Birch; Lafontaine, N. E. Tinkham; North Manchester, B. A. Kemp; South Whitney, F. A. Robinson; Columbia City, W. H. Daniel; Leesburg, M. H. Smith; Pierceton, W. E. McCarty; Leesburg, A. B. Shackelford; Webster, R. S. Reed; Bourbon, J. W. Lewellen; Inwood, H. Woolpert; Lincoln, A. C. Gerard; Perrysburg, J. W. Miller; Mexico, J. H. Ford; Palestine, M. Swadner; Akron, J. B. Alleman; Lagro, H. M. Mott; Antioch, E. P. Church; Warren, J. T. Fetro; Mount Ætna, to be supplied; Marion circuit, to be supplied.

Kokomo district—R. D. Robinson, presiding elder. Kokomo, L. A. Betts; Miami, J. W. Lowrey; Peru, C. H. Brown; New Waverly, J. B. Cook. Logansport—Broadway, D. M. Brown; Market Street, C. P. Wright; Wheaton, A. S. Wooten; Walton, John Harrison; Jerome, Y. M. Deamer; Xenia, A. H. Currier; Santa Fe, J. S. McElwee; Tipton, M. G. Metz; Russiaville, M. G. Brown; Sharpsville, D. D. Howell; Westfield, W. D. Parr; New Brittan, R. B. Powell; Boxley, A. M. Patterson; Alto, T. J. Cooper; Cicero, W. C. McKaigh; Noblesville, F. Craft; Point Isabella, N. Baker; Elwood, C. E. White; Kempton, L. J. Naftzger; Shielville, S. M. Hathorn; Big Springs, J. M. Howard; Windfall, A. G. Mendenhall; G. N. Campbell, conference helper.

THERMALINE
A safe and Reliable substitute for Quinine
The only 25 cent
AGUE REMEDY
IN THE WORLD
CURES
CHILLS & FEVER
and all MALARIAL DISEASES.
Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & Co., 35 Wooster street, New York, for [illegible] mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT
An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box
Gives Immediate Relief.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS
[illegible]
of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.

The above four preparations for sale by F. R. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers, druggists, Auburn, Indiana.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 cents per box. All Drug Stores.

SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant to take as a glass of Lemonade. 7 cents each. All Drug Stores.

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES
Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)
A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.
Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.
For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.
For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.
It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.
It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.
Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, over-work, mental shocks, and other causes.
Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhea, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. No other Pills require such small doses for thorough work. Price 25 cts. a box.
Warner's Safe Remedies are sold by Druggists & Dealers in Medicine everywhere.
SAFE KIDNEY & LIVER CURE
SAFE DIABETES CURE
SAFE BITTERS
SAFE NERVINE
SAFE PILLS
READ! SAVE THYSELF
H. H. Warner & Co.,
Proprietors,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.

NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO. Battle Creek, Mich.
Established in 1848.
ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE
"VIBRATOR"
Threshing Machinery and Portable and Traction Engines.
THE STANDARD of excellence throughout the Grain Raising World.
MATCHLESS for Grain-Saving, Time-Saving, Perfect Cleaning, Rapid and Thorough Work.
INCOMPARABLE in Quality of Material, Perfection of Parts, Thorough Workmanship, Elegant Finish, and Beauty of Model.
MARVELOUS for vastly superior work in all kinds of Grain, and universally known as the only successful Thresher in Flax, Timothy, Clover, and all other Seeds.
ASTONISHINGLY DURABLE and wonderfully simple, using less than one-half the usual gears and belts.
PORTABLE, TRACTION, and STRAW-BURNING STEAM-ENGINES, with special features of Power, Durability, Safety, Economy, and Beauty entirely unknown in other makes. Steam-Power Outfits and Steam-Power Separators a specialty. Four sizes of Separators, from 6 to 12 horse-power; also 2 styles Improved Mounted Horse-Powers.
32 Years of Prosperous and Continuous Business by this house, without change of name, location, or management, furnishes a strong guarantee for superior goods and honorable dealing.
CAUTION! The wonderful success and popularity of our VIBRATOR Machinery has driven other machines to the wall; hence various makers are now attempting to build and palm off inferior and mongrel imitations of our famous goods.
BE NOT DECEIVED
by such experimental and worthless machinery. If you buy at all, get the "ORIGINAL" and the "GENUINE" from us.
For full particulars call on our dealers, or write to us for Illustrated Circulars, which we mail free. Address
NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES

IMMENSE STOCK OF GOODS FOR 1880.

No Advance on Teas, Coffees, Syrups, Sugars or Tobaccos.

All of these goods, in consequence of the increased demand, have advanced in the east, but we were fortunate in laying in a full supply when the prices were way down and our customers shall have the benefit of our purchases at old prices.

TEAS! TEAS! TEAS!

The consumption of TEAS the last six months has been double to what it has been since the panic; this, coupled with the short tea crop, created a great speculation in them, so much so that some grades have advanced 20 to 30 cents per pound, but our method of purchasing is direct of the importers, thereby saving the profits of the speculator and jobber, and enables us to still continue to sell to our customers at the same low prices as last year.

Young Hyson Tea, 20, 40, 50 best 65c Imperial Tea, 40, best 65c
Gunpowder Tea, 40, best 65c Black Tea Oolong, 25, 40, best 60c
Uncolored Japan Tea, 40, best 65 cents.

All the above Teas are at least 25 per cent lower than sold elsewhere

SUGARS, YELLOW AND WHITE.

Cut Loaf, Crashed and Granulated, 10½c; Powdered, 10½ Coffee A. 10c; C. 9c; Choice Yellow Sugar, 7½ and 8c per lb.

RIO AND JAVA COFFEES.

Choice Rio, 15c per pound, Best Rio, 18c; Old Government Java Coffees, 25c; Roasted Rio, 15c, Best Roasted, 20c; Roasted Java, 30c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Choice Golden Syrup 45c per gallon, Extra Sugar Loaf Drips 60c; best 70c; Best New Orleans Molasses 50c per gallon.

TOBACCOS.

PLUG, FINE CUT, SHORTS AND SMOKING AT BOTTOM FIGURES.

Extra plug 30c; good, 50c, best 60c, fine cut tobacco, 40c, extra 60c, smoking tobacco 25c, good, 30c, best 32c, Killekenick best in market, 40c.

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 20c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 40.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies, Scotch Ale, Doublin and London Porter.

Pure Muscatel wine, $1.35 per gallon; Kelley Island catawba, $1.00 per gallon; port and sherry wine, $1.50 per gallon; Scotch ale, 20c; London porter, 20c; Dublin stout, 20c; wine in bottles, 35c, Old 76 Kentucky, $2.50 per gallon; good old rye, $1.40; Bourbon $1.00 per gallon.

FISH, FISH, FISH.

Mackerel, Smoked Herring, Cod Fish, Smoked Sturgeon, White Fish and Pickerel, 75c, $1.00 and $1.25 Per Kitt.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, LARD AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 7c, best, 9c, shoulders, 6c, pickeled pork, 7c; lard 8c;

CITRON, RAISINS, NUTS, CANDIES, STICK AND ASSORTED.

Pure stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 15c; cream candies, 20 and 25 cents.

20 Per Cent, on the Dollar Saved at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16–tf. ISAAC HAGUE

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

WM. ELLERY
WALTHAM, MASS.

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE, SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS, Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains, Ladies Gold Chains, Castors Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions
Violin Strings.

special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at

JOE. ABRIGHT'S,
Second door north of Postoffice Auburn, Indinaa,

Agricultural Implements!

THE
Latest Improved Farm Machinery
OF ALL KINDS.

The ThreeRivers
"Invincible"
VIBRATOR.

The Renowned
Atlas Engine!
For farm use.

THE PEERLESS Reaper and Mower!
Over 20 000 now in use.

DEERING'S WIRE AND TWINE BINDER,
The only successful TWINE Binder in this or any other market. Greatly improved for 188.

LEADER ONE-WHEEL HARVESTER,
Which created so much excitement amoung the farmers last year.

ELLWOOD CULTIVATORS.
Riding or Walking, with four, six or nine blades. They have more good points and are less complicated than any other cultivator made.

The Steel-beam Red-Jacket Plow
And many other kinds. Also dealers in the

Archer Self-DumpingHay-Rake.
Adjustable Bar Spring Tooth Harrow.
And The Harris' Double
Harpoon Hay-Fork.

Examine our samples carefully, and get our prices before you contract. We guarantee you a bargain.

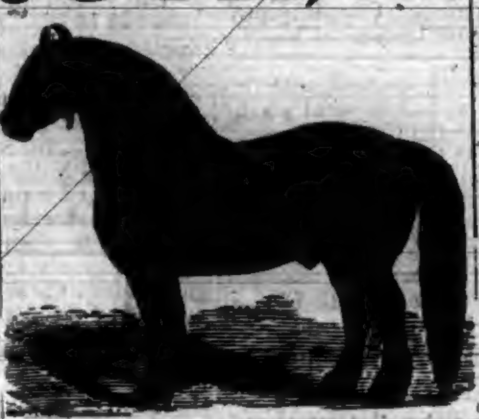
J. N. MYERS & CO.,
Odd Fellows' Building, AUBURN, IND.

NORMAN STALLION

JOCK, Jr.

SIRED BY
Imported Jock!
Out of a thorough-bred
Norman Mare

Jock, Jr. will stand for mares during the season of 1880 commencing April 1st. at my barn in Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind.



This powerful horse is a bay-roan, 16 hands high, and weighs full
1,700 Pounds.

TERMS:
$10.00
Payable when the mare is known to be with foal.

Owners parting with mares are liable for insurance.

All accidents are at owners risk.

A. W. ALLEN, Auburn, Indiana.

THE BIGGEST BONANA ON EARTH

For every Man, Woman and Child in DeKalb County that wear

BOOTS & SHOES

$10.000 IN BOOTS AND SHOES

AT THE

"BOOT·UPSIDE·DOWN!"

For the Spring and Summer Trade.

Our Goods were all bought direct from the Manufacturers before the advance in stock, and we will save our customers 25 per cent. on the same quality of Goods.

LOOK OUT FOR

BIG BARGAINS IN THE NEXT 90 DAYS!

We are BOUND to SELL GOODS; larges sale and small profits are what we want! Read our list and save money by coming to the "Boot-Upside-Down!"

Ladies' slippers, 25cts. to $1.00. Ladies' Walking shoes, 85 cts. to $1.00
Ladies' Sandal slippers---Beauties,---$1.25 to $1.75.
Ladies' Serge shoes, 75 cts. to $1.00 Men's and Boys shoes, 75 cts to $2.00.
Men's and Boys' boots, $1.50 to $3.00. All our goods are cheap and good, and no trouble to show them.

W. J. AUSTIN & CO.

Recorder's Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, MAY 6, 1880. Number 19.

The Auburn Courier
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY
THE COURIER COMP'Y,
EDITORS,
THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will b inserted under this head for $5,00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. W. S. Allen,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store, Auburn, Ind.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gausenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET, EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross, Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MONEY TO LOAN

By the Union Central Life Insurance company, from 1 to 5 years at 8 per cent secured by first lien on real estate worth at least double the amount of the loan (exclusive of improvements). We charge no commission, and your mortgage is held here within a few hours ride of your home. If you live, you are here to look after it yourself; if you die, you have made provisions to pay the debt just where you contracted it. For further particulars, apply to Thos. H. Sprott, Auburn Indiana.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 23-1y

$1500 TO $6000 A YEAR, or $2 to $20 a day in your own locality. No risk. Women do as well as men. Many make more than the amount stated above. No one can fail to make money fast. Any one can do the work. You can make from 50c to $2 an hour by devoting your evenings and spare time to the business. It costs nothing to try the business. Nothing like it for money making ever offered before. Business pleasant and strictly honorable. Reader, if you want to know all about the best paying business before the public, send us your address and we will send you full particulars and private terms free; samples worth $5 also free; you can then make up your mind for yourself. Address, GEORGE STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-1

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator, with the will annexed, of the estate of Joseph Bowman, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

ELIJAH S. McDOWELL,
GEORGE O. DENISON,
Administrators, with the will annexed.
April 22, 1880. 18-3w.

G. R. & I. R. R. Co.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS,
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., April 1, '80.

To the Stockholders of the Grand Rapids & Ind. R. R. Co.:

Take notice that there will be a meeting of the stockholders of said company, at the general office, in the city of Grand Rapids, state of Michigan, on at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of said company to the sum of five million dollars; and it is proposed at such meeting to increase said capital stock to that amount.

THE NINTH (9th) DAY OF JUNE, 1880,

DIRECTORS:

W. O. Hughart,	C. A. Zollinger,
W. R. Shelby,	Thos. A. Scott.
H. J. Hollister,	Geo. B. Roberts,
S. S. Cobb,	Wm. Thaw,
J. G. Wait,	Thos. D. Messler,
Pliny Hoagland,	J. N. McCullough,
	Rob't. B. Potter.

16-tf. J. H. P. HUGHART, Secretary.

Newville.

[Last Week.]

—The St. Joe is on a bender, the water being higher than it has been before this season.

—Married, Sunday, April 25, at the church, Mr.—Husselman and Miss Edith Platter, Rev. O. Q. Oviatt officiating.

—School commenced in Newville last Monday, for a term of two months, with Oliver Beggs as teacher.

—The following transfer of real estate has recently been made: Henry Maxwell to Wm Simonton and Wm Simonton to Henry Maxwell, both of Concord township. They will exchange farms this week.

—Last Sunday morning the youngest child of Lucas Loveland, of Stafford township, fell into a ditch near the house and was drowned before assistance could be given. The little one was about two years old.

St. Joe.

[Last Week.]

—Hon. S. S. Shutt was in town Saturday.

—The St. Joe river at this point is having a high old time.

—Geo Johnson is the elated father of a ten-pound boy bady.

—Dr. W. P. Andrews, of Orangeville, was on our streets Saturday last.

—Morris headley, of King's Corners, has the best poultry house in the county.

—The hardest rain storm ever known here passed over the place last Friday night.

—Wheat in this vicinity is looking splendid, and the outlook could not be more promising.

—The farmers, seeing that the prospect for any advance in prices is slim, are beginning to sell of their surplus wheat as fast as possible.

—Case and Olds and Mitchell have each put up fine awnings in front of their stores, which adds immensely to the appearance of the same. A few more would do well to follow their example.

—The dedication of the Lutheran church at this place will take place May 9th, or the second Sabbath in May. Rev. E. W. Erick, formerly in charge of the Spencerville pastorate, and other ministers of the church, have been invited and will undoubtedly be in attendance.

—Chief Engineer Hathaway, of Newville, was in town Saturday, looking up the interests of the "Fort Wayne, St. Joe & Butler" railroad. He reports prospects good, and thinks there will be no trouble about the road running through Newville, providing it is not built by way of Maysville and Hicksville. The capital subscribed by Newvillians reaches the sum of $5,000, with fair chances of a few cents more.

The Butter We Eat.

[Indiana Farmer.]

Not all the butter we eat is manufactured by the ingenious city dealer, whose only and best cow is the pump, which furnishes the water to wash the dirty grease. The creameries furnish quite a limited quantity of really choice butter, and during most of the year our country friends send in liberal supplies. Much of the country butter is of excellent quality, and finds a ready market at high prices among the wealthier classes. A good portion of it though is poor stuff, which finds its way to market via country merchants, hucksters and commission houses. The country merchant with an eye to business buys almost any kind of butter his customers offer. His best customers may be the poorest of butter-makers, but to refuse to buy the sour, cheesy and frequently dirty butter they bring, would be to lose otherwise valuable customers. So the greasy compound, which has run the gauntlet of dirty, sweaty hands, filthy pails and pans, musty and noisome cellars, accumulating fresh odors, dirt and hair at every stage of its existence until its originality, excepting the hair of the cow, is totally lost, finds a ready purchaser in the genial merchant, who, with a full appreciation of its merits, pitches the nasty conglomeration, as likely as not, into an empty fish kit or soap box in proximity to rags, kerosene, tar and feathers. When the accumulations are sufficient the ancient and unsavory mass is shipped to the city, where after further mixing, working and coloring, it is placed on the market as creamery butter. Of course not all of the butter the country merchant buys is of such detestable quality. Almost every locality is blessed with some choice butter-makers, tidy housewives, under whose clever and cleanly manipulations, the thick yellow cream is transformed into delicious, crisp, golden butter. These customers are well known to the country merchant, and the butter they bring is carefully saved for his own table, for his village customers, the ubiquitous drummer and favorite train men. The supply of strictly choice butter very rarely exceeds the wants of these favored few, so only the refuse stuff at which any decent housewife, if aware of its true character would elevate her nose in disdain, is left to ship to the unfortunate citizens of the large cities.

NEVER SAW THE SUN.

The Remarkable Story of Margaretha Richter, the St. Louis Damsel, Nineteen Years Old.

[New York Mercury.]

In St. Louis there is a young lady of nineteen summers who has never seen the light of day; has never been beyond the threshold of her father's house, and for the past four years years has not been permitted to leave the room in which she sleeps. The cause of this singular state of affairs is told as follows: Henry Richter and his wife were married in the old country about thirty years ago, and in succession they lost four children, each of whom came to the age of two or three years, and died of something which seemed like inanition. They faded away, and the best medical talent in the Grand Duchey—they are Badenese—could assign no cause for the deaths. Richter and his wife came to America and settled in St. Louis, where they lost two more in the same way. Shortly before the birth of the present girl, Richter met the Baron Von Michaelofsky, who was stopping in St. Louis at the time, and to him told the story of the blight which had fallen upon his family. The baron was a member of a number of musical societies. I believe he belonged to some lodge of Rosicrucians, which the great Liebnitz adorned; and touched by the tale that the father had told him, he cast the horoscope of the child at the moment of its birth, carefully noting the aspect of the planets, and making a chart of the future of the baby, which at the moment was crying in the nurse's arms. Just what that horoscope was has never been told to any one but Richter and his wife, and the result was they have never moved away from the house in which they then lived, and have carefully kept the girl out of the sunlight ever since. Henry is a wealthy man, and can gratify ever whim, which an idle fancy could conceive, but he has chosen to live always in a mean neighborhood, surrounded by people with whom he has not a thought in common, all for the reason of preserving the daughter whom he idolized.

A friend of the father, who is also a friend of the reporter detailed to investigate the case, arranged for a visit to the house where the damsel is immured. The father and mother were induced upon plausible pretext to be elsewhere at the chosen time, and the servants were duly bribed. The reporter was to personate a doctor, who had been sent for, and was informed that the name of his patient was Margaretha. This he did successfully, and was introduced to the room of the girl by a negro servant. This is his story.

Without more ado he stepped into the bed chamber of the mysterious young lady, and, motioning the negro to remain in the room, walked over and sat beside Margaretha, who was reclining in an easy chair before the grate, in which a rather large fire was burning. The room was also lighted by gas, and every detail was very apparent. There was no windows in the room, and the furniture was of the most costly character, but it may easily be imagined that the scribe had eyes for nobody but the pale girl by the fireside. She looked fully her age—nineteen—but her face was blanched and white; not a tinge of red could be made out in her cheeks, although it was evident enough in the rather full lips. Her eyes were blue almost to blackness, and her hair, which rolled off the cushion back of the chair and fell in masses on the floor, was black as night. There was not a feature or tint to suggest German origin in her face or lithe form, and she looked rather sweet and amiable than pretty, although her features were regular enough. She was attired in a laced and frilled white wrap, gathered about the waist by the strings of an old-fashioned sontag of white wool, the only bit of color in her dress being a blue silk kerchief wrapped negligently about her throat. On the whole she resembled nothing but a crayon picture brought to life. She seemed all black and white.

"I did not know you were coming to-day, doctor," she said, smiling languidly. "Papa is so thoughtly, and Cathie here never opened her mouth about anything. Won't you sit down?" and she indicated a sofa, which almost touched the chair upon which she was sitting.

"Thanks," sententiously remarked the suppositious physician, and taking the thin white wrist in his hand the reporter marked the fluttering pulse of the unprisoned lady. She was either feverish or she was excited, probably a little of both, and after a few seconds he put down the wrist and seated himself beside her. "Let me see your tongue, please," continued he, going through all he could remember of the leaches mummery, and the tongue was obediently exhibited and closely scanned. "Ah," sagely observed he at last. "I see."

"Am I going to be sick?"

"Oh, no, my dear, I think not; we will have you all right in a day or two. I'll have a prescription made up at the drug store and sent round. But you ought to have had exercise. You never leave the room?"

"Never, and will not until after I am twenty-one. Then I can go out into the sunlight like everybody else. Oh! dear, sometimes I think I will never be twenty-one."

"But why then and not now?"

"I don't know. It is in the paper papa reads all the time, that after I am twenty-one there will be no more danger for me. I don't exactly understand it, but papa and mamma both tell me that if I once stand in the beams of the sunlight I will die surely within a year. I don't care though; I would just as soon die, and tried to get out. It is four years ago now, and since then they have kept me locked up in my room so that I can't."

"Have you ever had any companions?"

"Nothing but books, and I'm tired of books; I'm tired of myself; I wish I could quit living; indeed, indeed I'd rather."

"How do you pass your time?"

Oh! I sleep and I read and I eat, and then for hours and hours I walk around this room and wonder what is beyond. Are there many whom the sunlight hurts? I never read of any, except the old stories, who were cooped up as I am."

"You poor child——"

"Tell me what is beyond these hard walls; just near, you know, where I could go if they would only let me."

The reporter told the girl, as nearly as he could, just what was outside of her own house, and in her eager questioning it was easy to see how the bold recital made her spirit flutter for freedom.

"And there are trees in that park," she said, "but they are not green now. No! This is yet winter, and the leaves do not come until later. I know that—I know that!" And so she prattled on, telling her singular ideas of what the great world was, and how the people lived, and what a queer melange it was! Fairyland and Rome and Greece jostled the locomotive and the telephone in her bewildered mind, and her artless talk made the bigoted superstition which changed her in the darkness more revolting than it would otherwise have been. Nearly an hour was passed in conversation, most of which was on the reporter's part, the lady, or girl, rather, for she was only a child, a baby in everything but age, hanging upon every word that was spoken, and anxiously demanding new facts. It was only prudence absolutely demanded his departure that the reporter rose to leave.

"You will come again, will you not?" she cried, artlessly catching his hand and pressing it. "Please come; no one talks to me, no one tells me anything—

You will come won't you? I will not tell papa that you were here, and then he will send you again. Promise that you will not tell him you were here."

"I promise that much at any rate, my dear. I certainly will not tell him if you do not wish it."

"But you will come again?"

"Maybe."

"If you will come I will show you the paper you asked about—the one he reads and cries over."

"If I can come, Margaretha, I will, you may depend upon that," and with no further leave-taking the reporter made his way as quietly as could be out of the house; nor was he a moment too soon, for hardly had the street gate slammed behind him when Mr. Leffert and a couple whom the reporter knew intuitively to be Mr. and Mrs. Richter, turned the corner and passed the reporter. Leffert, of course, made no sign of recognition.

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACINTOSH,
Co. Sup't, of schools.

Woman Suffrage.

[Wyoming Herald.]

A woman at Medicine Bow, just as she was depositing her vote last election day, was surprised to hear a rough say:

'I challenge that woman's vote.'

'On what ground, sir?'

'She hasn't been long enough in the territory.'

Did the woman sit down and cry over it? It is not to be recorded. Her dainty little hands glided back into the folds of her pull-back, and the next thing that audacious cuss knew he was gazing into the muzzle of a derringer, while the fair voter said:

'How long have I been in the territory, sir?'

'Look out, madam—don't. That cussed thing might go off—take it away; I beg your pardon, I—don't touch the trigger—I'm mistaken in the woman. Please point that the other way. I'll lick the lyin' sheep thief who says you haven't lived in this town for ten years. I sw'ar I will.'

He scooted around the corner, and she smilingly passed in her ticket.

A Feeling Tribute to "Pub. Docs."

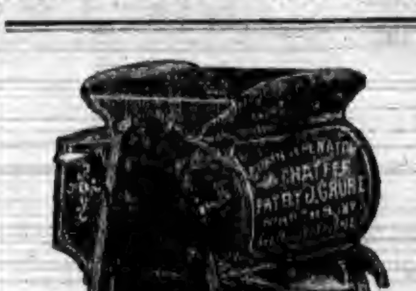
A Philadelphia editor thus relieves his mind on a subject familiar to all newspaper offices, the inevitable Pub. Docs.:

"We owe our thanks to Judge Kelley for the latest patent offices reports. We already have sixteen hundred of these volumes in our little library, but they have been read and re-read so many times that we know every page of them by heart. This new volume came opportunely and gratefully on Christmas morning and that night we gathered our little family around the fire and read it through to them. That effectionate tale entitled 'Improvement on Monkey Wrench,' seemed to touch every heart, and when we came to the climax of the little story about 'Reversible Pie-boards,' there was not a dry eye between the front door and the stable. During the reading of the piteous narrative entitled 'Gum Washers for Carriage Axles,' the whole family gave expression to boisterous emotion, and the hired girl was so much excited that she lost her presence of mind, and went to her mother's inadvertently with six pounds of sugar and a butter kettle full of flour, and came home at midnight intoxicated. We can never sufficiently thank Judge Kelley for the innocent enjoyment thus furnished us. The memory of that happy evening will linger in our minds much longer than the hired girl lingers when she lights on a substance which she thinks will suit the constitution of her aged parents."

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
8-tf Auburn, Ind.



SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Be it known, that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1, the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

Notice of Meeting.

The members of the Farmers' Mutual insurance company, of DeKalb county, will take notice that the annual meeting of the company will be held in Auburn, Saturday, May 29, 1880, for the purpose of electing officers, appointing township soliciting agents and for the transaction of such other business as may come up.

The directors of the company will meet Friday, May 28, 1880, to settle with the secretary.

17-4w PERRY FITCH, Secretary.

WABASH
St. LOUIS AND PACIFIC R'Y.

ROBERT OGDEN,
Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,
IRON AND LEAD PIPE,
BRASS GOODS
OF ALL KINDS.
125 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indian

The Great Through Car Route to
Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.		WEST.
Mail	12:34 p. m.	Mail	2:20 p. m.
Accom'n	12:57 a. m.	Accom'n	0:57 a. m.
Local F't	4:45 p. m.	Local F't	6:58 a. m.
M'l tr'n arrives at Butler	1:00 p. m.	M'l tr'n arr. at Logansport.	6:15 p. m.

No Change of Cars From
TOLEDO OR FT WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison.

No Change of Cars From
St. Louis To | Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the
Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific
Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West, Southwest, North or Northw'st

Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

—For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager, H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent, St. Louis, or
LOUIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn Ind.

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE.
INDIANAPOLIS, LOUISVILLE,
And all Points SOUTH.
ST. LOUIS, KANSAS, TEXAS,
And all Points WEST.
SHORT AND QUICK ROUTE TO
DETROIT, LANSING AND SAGINAW.
And all Points in Michigan and Canada.

Time-Card takes effect April 11, 1880.
(CHICAGO TIME.)

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No 2. Ex.	No. 4. Acc.	No. 6. Acc.
Jackson	12 55pm	5 05am	6 45pm
Wilsons	12 40	5 39	7 06
Baldwins	12 49	5 50	7 18
Hanover	12 57	6 06	7 30
Stony Point	1 02	6 13	7 37
Mosherville	1 08	6 28	7 47
Jonesville	1 21	6 50	8 05
Bankers	1 35	7 15	8 21
Reading	1 46	7 45	8 43
Montgomery	1 58	7 58	9 10
Ray	2 06	8 07	9 25
Fremont	2 15	8 17	9 42
Angola	2 30	8 34	10 15
Pleasant Lake	2 40	8 44	10 18
Summit	2 58	8 55	10 50
Waterloo	3 08	9 10	11 10
Auburn	3 1.	9 21	11 30
Auburn Junction	3 20	9 25	11 50
St. Johns	3 31	9 30	12 10am
New Era	3 36	9 41	12 20
Stoners	3 40	9 50	12 30
Huntertown	3 [illegible]	9 55
Carroll's Crossing	3 55	10 00
Academie	4 00	10 05	1 00
Fort Wayne	4 15	10 20	1 20

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No. 1. Ex.	No. 3 Acc.	No. 5 Acc.
Fort Wayne	11 30am	2 05am	5 00pm
Academie	11 46	2 30	5 15
Carroll's Crossing	11 51		5 20
Huntertown	11 56		5 25
Stoners	12 01pm	2 52	5 30
New Era	12 10	3 10	5 40
St. Johns	12 16	3 20	5 45
Auburn	12 24	4 00	5 55
Auburn Junction	12 31	4 10	5 59
Waterloo	12 42	4 40	6 11
Summit	12 59	5 10	6 25
Pleasant Lake	1 01	5 30	6 30
Angola	1 21	6 20	7 06
Fremont	1 30	6 45	7 30
Ray	1 46	7 00	7 50
Montgomery	1 58	7 15	8 07
Reading	2 10	7 20	8 25
Bankers	2 20	7 50	8 55
Jonesville	2 35	8 13	9 20
Mosherville	2 50	8 25	9 45
Stony Point	2 56	8 36	9 52
Hanover	2 59	8 42	10 05
Baldwins	3 05	8 56	10 15
Wilsons	3 14	9 08	10 25
Air Line Junction	3 22
Jackson	3 40	9 25	11 00

No 3, daily. All trains daily except Sunday.
For information as to routes and [illegible] apply to

M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Sup't.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Fr't. & Pass'r Agent.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1880.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

A SERIOUS break has occurred in the Erie canal, near Utica. The country is flooded, and considerable damage has been done to lumber yards, residences and farm property. It is estimated that it will take from two to four weeks to make necessary repairs.

THE United States Court for Connecticut has decided the long-pending suit of R. Hoe & Co., against Cottrell & Babcock, sustaining the former's patent for delivery mechanism of cylinder presses....Frank Crill, who was hanged at Newton, N. J., last week, for the murder of his own daughter, was rather fastidious as to the manner of his taking off. He asked permission to examine the gallows, and requested to have the noose warmed before being tightened round his neck. A brass band discoursed music under the jail walls immediately before the execution. ....Three hundred families have been made destitute by the forest fires in New Jersey.

THE five men—ex-Treasurer Kemble, Representatives Rumburger and Petroff, ex-Representative Salter and Jesse R. Crawford—who were recently convicted of having bribed members of the Pennsylvania Legislature in connection with the passage of an appropriation to pay for damage done and property destroyed in Pittsburgh by the railroad rioters in 1877, were arraigned at Harrisburg for sentence last week. Each of the culprits was sentenced to one year at hard labor in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $1,000. The Judge, in passing sentence, dwelt at some length upon the enormity of their crime and its shameful frequency in Pennsylvania.

THE WEST.

THREE men were killed by the explosion of a boiler in a mill near Memphis, Mo. ....Advices from Western Kansas report drought and unfavorable weather, a totally-destroyed wheat crop west of Salina, and that there will be a partial failure of the crop for hundreds of miles north and south of Topeka. Many farmers in the western part of the State are suffering and appealing to the Executive office at Topeka for help.

A GOVERNMENT life-saving crew at Huron City set out, a few mornings ago, to rescue the crew of an unknown vessel which had gone ashore during the night a few miles south of that place, but soon after leaving port the surf boat was swamped, and all but the Captain, six in number, were drowned. The crew was a gallant one, and had a record for bravery and success second to none on the great lakes.

A SINGULAR disease, resembling St. Vitus' dance, has broken out among the young ladies attending school at the Brown county (Ohio) convent. It has spread so rapidly that studies have been dispensed with, and many of the girls have left for their homes....Mr. Charles De Young, senior proprietor and editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, was shot and killed in his office on the evening of the 23d of April, by I. M. Kalloch, son of Rev. I. S. Kalloch, Mayor of San Francisco.... Two murderers, Redemeier and Nugent, were hanged at St. Louis on Friday, April 23. ...An epidemic of sore eyes prevails among the inmates of the Soldiers' Orphans' Home at Normal, Ill.

A SEVERE cyclone visited a large section of Central Illinois on the evening of the 24th of April. At Taylorville, in Christian county, four persons were killed and twelve seriously injured. Considerable damage was done to property at Rockbridge, Sharpsburg, Carlinville and other points.

IT is believed in San Francisco that the Kalloch-De Young feud is not yet ended. Michael De Young, the surviving brother, will, it is thought, avenge Charles' death....A wealthy citizen of Milwaukee has presented his daughter with $500,000 as a wedding present.

RAINS extending all over the State are reported in Kansas. There had been neither rain nor snow in some sections since last November, and the farmers in some parts of the State had almost abandoned hope of a harvest this year. ....Hoover, a murderer in jail at Fairplay, Col., has been lynched by a mob....The Coroner's inquest on the body of De Young, at San Francisco, resulted in a verdict of willful murder against Kalloch.

THE SOUTH.

SERIOUS loss of life has been occasioned by fires in the swamp regions of North Carolina. One entire family was overtaken by the flames and burned to death ...A sad occurrence is reported from Kentucky. While a young man named Graham Ormsby was on his way, in a carriage, to the house of his affianced bride to be married, his horses ran away, and plunged into the Kentucky river. The young man escaped with his life, but his mother, sister, and another lady, who were in the carriage with him, were drowned.

A VIOLENT cyclone swept over the town of Macon, Miss., on the night of the 25th of April, brushing away all obstacles like mere cobwebs. It was attended with sad loss of life and wholesale destruction of property. Nearly every building in the town was wholly or partially wrecked. Eighteen persons were killed, and many injured more or less severely.... Mr. Joseph Seligman, the well-known New York banker, died in New Orleans a few days ago. He leaves a private fortune estimated at $5,000,000.

THE destruction by the tornado at Macon, Miss., says a telegram from that point, is indescribable. "Pieces of timber have been found fifteen miles from the town. The night was very threatening. A storm was expected by many. Two ominous, inky clouds approached each other just north of the town; another was seen whirling and spinning between them, as if gathering from them the material of which it was composed. Great bands of fire played between them, darting from one to another, while the whole heavens were a dazzling constellation of lightning. The clouds seemed to meet just over the fatal spot. The shock that laid the town in ruins was instantaneous. At this storm focus every building was torn into splinters and scattered all over the country in the radius of a mile.

AN insane woman in Texas undertook to kill her five children by running knitting-needles through their heads, but was discovered before she had completed the job.

POLITICAL.

THE Vermont Democratic Convention appointed Hancock delegates to the Cincinnati Convention, and instructed them to vote as a unit and to support the two-thirds rule.

The Georgia Republican State Convention, composed mainly of negroes, wrangled nearly three days before they got down to the business in hand—the appointment of delegates to the National Convention at Chicago. Fourteen of the twenty-two delegates chosen are colored men. No instructions were given, but it is said they stand eight for Sherman, an equal number for Blaine, and six for Grant.

THE Oregon delegation to the Chicago Convention was last week instructed for Blaine....Advices from Connecticut are to the effect that the delegation from that State to Chicago, heretofore divided between Washburne, Blaine and Edmunds, will go for Grant if it appears on the eve of meeting that he is to be nominated.

THE Savannah News, a Democratic paper, has been making a canvass of the Georgia delegation to the Chicago Convention, and reports that it stands 10 for Grant, 8 for Blaine and 4 for Sherman.

THREE Republican and two Democratic State Conventions were held on the 28th of April. The Ohio Republican Convention met at Columbus, and was organized in the interest of Sherman. In the vote for delegates-at-large the Sherman candidates received about 400 and the Blaine candidates about 200 votes. Resolutions were adopted requesting the district delegates to Chicago to support Sherman for President, indorsing the administration of President Hayes, and pledging the support of the Republicans of Ohio to the nominee of the Chicago Convention. The following ticket for State offices was nominated: For Secretary of State, Charles Townsend, of Athens; Judge of Supreme Court, Geo. W. McIlvaine, of Tuscarawas; Clerk of the Supreme Court, Dwight Crowell, of Ashtabula; Member of the Board of Public Works, S. R. Hosmer, of Muskingum.——The Pennsylvania Democrats met in convention at Harrisburg, but did nothing during the day beyond organizing and caucusing for the settlement of the differences between the Tilden and anti-Tilden men, led respectively by Speaker Randall and Senator Wallace, both of whom were present as delegates. A compromise was finally effected satisfactory to all parties, committees appointed, and an adjournment for the day voted.——In the Connecticut Democratic Convention, held at Hartford, a delegate offered an anti-Tilden resolution, which caused some confusion, and a good deal of warm talk. Thomas W. Waller, President of the convention, took the floor, moved the indefinite postponement of all resolutions and the adoption of one pledging the support of the Cincinnati nominee, then quickly regained the platform, put the question himself, and carried the motion by acclamation unanimously. It is said a majority of the delegates chosen to the Cincinnati Convention are favorable to Tilden.——The South Carolina Republican Convention met at Columbia and adopted, with but few dissenting votes, a resolution "instructing and solemnly pledging" the delegates to the National Convention to "vote as a unit to the end of the contest for the world-renowned and most available candidate, Gen. U. S. Grant, and that, upon all questions arising in said convention, they are earnestly recommended to vote in like manner."——The Republican Convention of Arkansas, held at Little Rock, was quite as emphatic for Grant as that of South Carolina. It adopted a resolution instructing the delegates to Chicago to vote for Gen. Grant, and use their individual and collective efforts to secure his nomination as long as his name is before the convention.——The Democrats of the District of Columbia held a convention at Washington to nominate delegates to the National Convention, Cincinnati. Wm. Dickson and A. A. Wilson were chosen, and resolutions adopted instructing them to insist upon recognition by the convention.

GENERAL.

LATER accounts of the great fire at Hull, Canada, report that seven people were burned to death and $2,000,000 worth of property destroyed....A bookkeeper for a firm of Montreal contractors, who had started for Buffalo with $15,000 in a valise, left the money under his seat in the car while he stepped to the platform to squeeze the hand of his senior employer's daughter. When he returned to his seat the gripsack had disappeared.... Burned: Several buildings at Boudhead, Ont., loss $50,000; a number of dwellings in Brookhaven, Long Island, loss $30,000; Flippen & Walker's foundry, at Danville, Va., loss $45,000; thirteen houses at Forest City, Ark., loss $20,000; a large manufactory of sash, doors, furniture, etc., at South Shaftsbury, Vt., loss $125,000.

SPENCER PETTIS, a forger, and R. Hoyle, a defaulting tax collector, both in prison, one at Concord, N. H., and the other at Los Angeles, Cal., have committed suicide.

A STEAMER which arrived at Baltimore from Bremen last week brought 1,914 emigrants from Germany, Austria, Sweden, and Norway. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company furnished four trains to transport this large lot to the West, their destination being Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Nebraska.

WASHINGTON.

A COLORED woman has just died at an asylum for the aged, in Washington, who is said to have been 117 years old. She was the widow of a sailor who was killed in the war of 1812, and has been drawing a pension for over sixty years, being the oldest pensioner on the widows' roll....The King of Siam, who is to visit this country in the spring, has his own notions of what he wants to see in America. In his letter to Secretary Evarts, he says he wants to visit New York, Washington, Richmond, Appomattox, and Chicago.

CAPT. E. M. WRIGHT, of the Ordnance Corps, committed suicide at Washington, owing to domestic difficulties and ill health.

PENDING the action of Congress on the treaty of Washington, it is said the United States men-of-war Vandalia and Alliance will be sent to Canadian waters to protect American fishermen against a recurrence of the Fortune bay outrages.

POSTMASTER GENERAL KEY is being strongly urged for appointment to the United States District Court Judgeship for Tennessee, made vacant by the death of Judge Trigg.... Gen. Sherman has been interviewed regarding the case of Cadet Whittaker, at West Point, and the proceedings connected therewith, especially the press comments thereon. He denounced the press in bitter terms for its attacks on West Point and its administration, and declared such attacks unwarranted and indefensible. He hoped, and had no doubt, that the investigation would be thorough, and ridiculed the idea that West Point was under Southern influence.

A WASHINGTON dispatch announces the death of the Hon. D. W. Middleton, who was well known to the bar of the country as Clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States.

FOREIGN.

QUEEN VICTORIA formally accepted Lord Beaconsfield's resignation of the British Premiership on the 23d of April....Nineteen fishermen have been drowned on the Scotch coast during the prevalence of a storm....The investigation of the Tay bridge disaster shows that the tie bars were weak; that the rivet holes were too large; that the nuts were defective, and that the pier columns were cracked and patched in several places.

A DISPATCH for Cabul, in Afghanistan, announces that the English soldiery, under command of Gen. Stewart, had captured the city of Ghuzni, after a desperate battle with 15,000 natives.

THE summons of the Queen to Mr. Gladstone, in response to which he has undertaken the formation of a new Ministry, marks the consummation of the Liberal triumph in Great Britain. It is a full recognition of the significance of the result of the Parliamentary elections, and denotes the abandonment of any effort to give an evasive, half-way acknowledgment of the reversal of policy demanded by the nation.

IT has been decided that in the new British Cabinet Earl Granville shall be Secretary of State for the Foreign Department; the Marquis of Hartington, Secretary for India; Mr. Childers, Secretary of War; Lord Selbourne, High Chancellor; W. E. Forster, Chief Secretary for Ireland, and Lord Northcote First Lord of the Admiralty....A dispatch from Calcutta says: "While the reports of King Theebaw's death are not confirmed, official intelligence has reached India that he is suffering from some dangerous malady, and attempts are being made to stay the disease by sacrificing virgins."... Advices from Afghanistan report that Gen. Stewart has again defeated the natives, 8,000 strong, near Ghuznee, and that the British now regard the campaign as virtually ended....The inhabitants of Kurdistan and Mesopotamia in Asiatic Turkey are starving by the thousands, and appeals in their behalf are made by the Christian missionaries in their midst.

THE cable furnishes us with a brief outline of the Gladstone policy. The forthcoming session of Parliament, it is stated, will be for the transaction of routine business only, and, unless continental complications should arise, Gladstone's programme will be one of quiescence, his great desire being to secure peace abroad and tranquillity and prosperity at home.

THE Marquis of Ripon, who was Chairman of the High Joint Commission of 1877 at Washington, will be the successor of Lord Lytton as Viceroy of India....A St. Petersburg dispatch announces the arrest of the missing workman who had been lodging in the basement under the guard-room of the Winter Palace until the day of the explosion. His name is Shevitch. He is a Lithuanian, and his uncle is Governor of the Province of Kalonga. He was placed in the palace by the Executive Committee six months before the explosion. He has confessed the deed. Three other arrests of persons of higher rank have been made.... At Yokohama, on the 22d of February, there occurred the most violent earthquake shock that has been felt since the opening of Japanese ports to foreign trade. Nearly every building on the bluff was more or less damaged, and among them the United States Naval Hospital.... Famine and pestilence are raging throughout many of the Russian provinces, and hundreds of the peasantry are dying daily. The granaries in some districts are all empty, and there is neither money nor food.... Georgaki Bey (Aristarchi), brother of the Turkish Minister at Washington, charged with conspiracy against the life of the Sultan, has been sentenced at Constantinople to exile for life.... Bismarck's health continues to be a subject of alarm in Germany. He suffers intensely from neuralgia, and only awaits the passage of certain important measures by the Reichstag before retiring to a quiet retreat in Luxembourg.

THE Duke and Duchess of Marlborough have left Ireland for London. Thousands of enthusiastic admirers of the worthy couple escorted them to the dock at Kingstown, and bade them farewell. They have endeared themselves to the people by their charities, and the parting is said to have been very affecting....A Berlin dispatch announces that, in concluding all extradition treaties with other powers, Germany now insists upon clauses providing for the surrender of regicides....The resumption of diplomatic relations between France and Mexico is announced. The two nations will simultaneously nominate representatives.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

A resolution was introduced in the Senate by Mr. Morrill, on the morning of April 22, in regard to the "poem" of the Delegate from Wyoming, printed in the Record, but withdrawn on notice of the matter being taken up in the House. Mr. Baldwin introduced a bill authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Detroit river. Mr. Harris presented a petition of the German Society, of New York, praying for protection to emigrants. The Senate then took up the Army Appropriation bill, and passed it in the shape it was received from the House, voting down all amendments, and the Republicans doing all the talk. The vote on the passage of the bill was 28 to 18. Jefferson's desk was presented by Mr. Dawes. The Senate rejected the nomination of John B. Stickney as United States Attorney for the Northern District of Florida. The President nominated Edgar M. Marble, of Michigan, to be Commissioner of Patents, and Joseph K. McCammon, of Pennsylvania, to be Assistant Attorney General, vice Marble.... In the Record is the speech in blank verse, entitled "The Immortals," which is copyrighted by Downey, of Wyoming, and which purports to be in support of his bill providing for the painting of Biblical pictures on the walls of the Capitol. Mr. Garfield called attention to this fact, and moved that the speech be referred to the Committee on Rules to inquire whether it is competent for a member to copyright his speech. The motion was agreed to. The Speaker laid before the House a message from the President, informing Congress that the Coolidge heirs, of Massachusetts, desired to present the desk on which the Declaration of Independence was written by Thomas Jefferson, and transmitting a letter from R. C. Winthrop expressing the wish of the donors to offer it to the United States, that it might have a place in the Department of State in connection with the immortal instrument which had been written on it. Mr. Crapo then offered a resolution thanking the donors for their patriotic presentation, and it was adopted. The Naval Appropriation bill was passed. The House refused to concur in the Senate amendment to the Fortification bill, and a committee of conference was ordered. The Deficiency bill was then taken up, and an hour given the Republicans for debate. An evening session was given up to discussion of the bill to regulate immigration.

In the Senate, on the morning of Friday, April 23, the Post Route bill was taken up and passed. Mr. Ransom reported the Texas Pacific Railway Extension bill without recommendation. The bill authorizing a retired list of non-commissioned officers after thirty years' service was debated. On motion of Mr. Cockrell, the House joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to lend tents to the Governor of Missouri for the use of sufferers by the recent tornado in that State was passed. The Kellogg-Spofford contested-election case was debated all the session. Adjourned till Monday....In the House, Mr. Cox, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported back a joint resolution for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, as the unanimous report of the committee. Mr. Waddell alluded to the terrible tornado which had swept over the town of Marshfield, in his district, and which had left quite a large number of persons homeless and destitute, and introduced a joint resolution directing the Secretary of War to furnish the Governor of Missouri with 500 tents for the benefit of the sufferers. The joint resolution was passed. The Speaker announced the appointment of the following members as a select committee to investigate the alleged corruption in regard to the contested-election case of Donnelly vs. Washburn: Messrs. Carlisle, Bicknell, Reagan, Lounsberry, O'Neill, Updegraff (Iowa), and Butterworth. The Special Deficiency bill was passed, the Senate amendment being non-concurred in. The bill was sent to a conference committee. The House then took a recess until 7:30, the evening session being for consideration of the bill establishing a municipal code for the District of Columbia.

Discussion occupied the morning hour in the Senate on Monday, April 26, upon a proposition directing the President to appoint colored cadets to West Point. After the expiration of the hour, debate upon the Kellogg-Spofford election case took up the whole day....In the House, bills and resolutions were introduced: By Mr. Brewer, amending the statutes relating to the erection of public buildings; by Mr. Dunnell, placing chains, trace-chains, and halter-chains made of wire or rods, wrought bound nails, spikes, rivets, cut nails, and spikes, cast-iron butts and hinges and horseshoe nails on the free list; by Mr. Cox, a resolution calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for information as to the number of persons connected with the life-saving service disabled, or who have lost their lives; by Mr. Vance, to relieve the distillation of fruit from the taxes now imposed by law; by Mr. Bayne, for the erection in Washington of a statue of Gen. Custer; by Mr. Thomas, to tax the manufacture of oleomargarine; by Mr. Loring, a resolution calling for correspondence relative to the interference with American fishermen in Fortune bay, Jan. 6, 1879; by Mr. Singleton, for the relief of Maj. Reno; by Mr. Morse, a resolution directing the Committee on Naval Affairs to inquire whether any officer of the navy is on the active or retired list without having been legally appointed. Mr. Blackburn was appointed Speaker pro tem., Mr. Randall leaving the city for three days. The bill passed for the relief of certain homestead and pre-emption settlers in Kansas. Mr. Coffroth, Chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back the resolution calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for information as to the cause of the delay in paying bounties and back pay. Adopted. The District of Columbia Appropriation bill was considered in committee of the whole. The amount appropriated in the bill is $3,432,697, of which one-half is to be paid out of the treasury of the United States and the other half out of the revenues of the district. The bill was passed, but, no quorum being present, was laid over. Messrs. McMahon, Cobb and Monroe were appointed a committee of conference on the Special Deficiency bill, and Mr. Claflin was appointed on the Springer-Manning committee in place of O'Neill. Mr. Deuster introduced a resolution for a special committee on the revision of the Naturalization laws.

The joint resolution authorizing the President to reappoint Stephen A. McCarty Lieutenant Commander in the navy, at the foot of the list, was passed by the Senate on the 27th of April. The House bill to authorize and equip an expedition to the Arctic seas, to establish a temporary station for the scientific observation of Lady Franklin bay, etc., was passed. When the morning hour expired, the Kellogg resolutions were temporarily laid aside and the Indian Appropriation bill was taken up and discussed until adjournment. The President nominated Felix Coste Marshal of the Eastern District of Missouri.... In the House, the resolution calling for information upon the Fortune bay outrages was adopted. The session of the 12th of May was set aside for the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Education and Labor, particularly the bill to restrict Chinese immigration; to enforce the Eight-Hour law, and to apply the proceeds of the sale of public lands to education of the people. The District of Columbia Appropriation bill was passed. A bill for a commission of seven upon orthography in public documents and schools of the District was introduced. This bill was introduced at the instance of the spelling reformers. The bill for the registration of trade-marks was then passed.

In the Senate on the morning of April 28, Mr. Davis, of West Virginia, presented a report of the select committee to investigate the accounts in the Treasury Department, and submitted some remarks thereon. Mr. Ingalls presented a report of the minority. Mr. Blaine submitted a resolution calling on the President for copies of the correspondence between the United States and Great Britain relative to the outrage on American fishermen at Fortune bay. Adopted. Bills were introduced and referred: By Mr. Maxey, for the relief of D. C. Burnett; by Mr. Morgan, to enforce the observance of the constitution in regard to the election of President and Vice President; by Mr. Vest, for a public building at St. Louis. After the morning hour, the Indian Appropriation bill was taken up and discussed till adjournment....In the House, bills were reported from the Committee on Public Buildings, and referred to the committee of the whole, for the erection of public buildings in the following cities: Marquette, Mich.; Leavenworth, Kan., and Frankfort, Ky. A resolution was adopted appropriating $3,000 to defray the expenses of the Committee on Mississippi Levees. A bill was passed authorizing the Secretary of War to lend certain arms, etc., to the Soldiers' Reunion Committee of the Northwest. The House then went into committee of the whole upon the bill amending the internal revenue law, known as the Carlisle bill. This measure was discussed all day, no action being had. The House met in the evening, and immediately went into committee of the whole on the bill establishing the municipal code for the District of Columbia. No action was taken.

AN EDITOR MURDERED.

Particulars of the Killing of Charles De Young, of the San Francisco Chronicle, by the Son of Mayor Kalloch.

At 8 o'clock on the evening of Friday, April 23, Charles De Young, senior proprietor of the San Francisco Chronicle, entered the business office of the paper, at the corner of Kearney and Bush streets, in that city, and engaged in conversation with Edward Spear and E. B. Read, who had been transacting some business. He stood with his back to the counter, facing the Kearney street door, and had been so standing for a few minutes when the swinging door was rapidly pushed open, and Rev. Isaac M. Kalloch, son of Rev. Isaac S. Kalloch, Mayor of the city, pushed rapidly in, raising a revolver as he entered. Mr. De Young, upon catching sight of the pistol and the man, turned and ran to the brass gate leading behind the counter outside. Kalloch then fired, and a second afterward fired again as Mr. De Young was passing through the gate. A third shot followed immediately. As Mr. De Young turned to the left and passed through the gate, he stooped so as to protect himself behind the counter and tried to draw a pistol. While he was in this position, Kalloch leaned over the counter, placed the pistol close to his face, and fired again. This was the fatal shot; but, in spite of it, Mr. De Young stepped back to the cashier's desk, Kalloch firing a fifth shot as he stood next it. Mr. De Young partly raised his pistol, but was unable to fire, the blood gushing in a stream from his mouth, over the desk as he raised it. Kalloch turned and ran to the door, and Mr. De Young, shaking his head and staggering, fell backward into the arms of Elias De Young, his half-brother, who laid him down on the floor. He was unconscious, and remained so for ten minutes afterward, when, medical effort being unavailing, he breathed his last. By this time a tremendous throng had gathered in front of the office, blocking up Kearney and Bush streets. Kalloch was received at the door by two officers, and gave himself up. He was taken to the city prison and locked up. He had nothing to say, and refused to make any statement whatever, though he was as cool and composed as if nothing had transpired. No words passed between the two at the time of the shooting. The deadly act had been threatened by Kalloch in a public speech during the late election campaign, but it was supposed that the bravado of his speech had been forgotten. Mr. De Young was at the time about to go to trial for his shooting of Kalloch, Senior, for the foulest possible slanders of his mother, and there was very little doubt that he would have been acquitted.

Young Kalloch, when arrested, was perfectly cool. He still carried the smoking pistol in his hand, which he surrendered to the officer on his way to the station-house. He observed strict reticence, and, on being shown to his cell, positively refused to have any intercourse whatever with the representatives of the press.

An autopsy was held on the body the following morning by physicians. One ball was found which entered the mouth, breaking two teeth, and finally lodged in the interior of the jugular, which was not entirely severed, the bullet lying in the vein partly flattened. The cutting of this vein almost instantly exhausts the blood from the brain, producing insensibility.

One of the immediate causes of the tragedy is believed to be the recent appearance of a pamphlet entitled the "Only Full Report of the Trial of I. S. Kalloch, on the Charge of Adultery." This pamphlet contained a portrait of Kalloch and the woman with whom he was said to be intimate, and pretended to give a full history of the affair, the doings of his church, Kalloch's pulpit experience, arrest, arraignment, trial and result. Its imprint was "Boston: Ederiam & Co., 1857," but it was generally regarded, with how much truth it is now impossible to say, that its reappearance was due to De Young, who was known to have gone East some time ago to hunt up the facts in the career of Kalloch. The pamphlet was extensively circulated, and the Kalloch party was wrought to quite a state of desperation. De Young continued his vigorous assaults on Kalloch, and, as the time for his trial for the shooting of the Mayor drew near, he became more aggressive, and Kalloch's friends became correspondingly exasperated.

The funeral of De Young occurred on Sunday, the 25th. The remains of the murdered man were followed to the grave by a large concourse of people.

Why Chinamen Never Naturalize.

The penal code of China contains a provision which is correctly translated as follows:

"All persons renouncing their country and allegiance or devising the means thereof shall be beheaded, and in the punishment of this offense no distinction shall be made between principals and accessories. The property of all such criminals shall be confiscated and their wives and children distributed as slaves to the great officers of state. * * * The parents, grandparents, brothers and grandchildren of such criminals, whether habitually living with them under the same roof or not, shall be perpetually banished to the distance of 2,600 leagues. All those who purposely conceal or connive at this crime shall be strangled. Those who inform against criminals of this class shall be rewarded with the whole of their property. * * * If the crime is contrived but not executed, the principals are to be strangled and the accessories punished with blows and banishment."

This provision, which has only lately become known, explains why John has no particular desire to naturalize, cut off his queue and become a real "Melican man." The law-maker who devised it conferred a more incalculable blessing on California than any Caucasian in the State has ever done or ever will do. John may Christianize (four or five centuries hence), but he will be in no haste to naturalize while that section of the penal code of his native land remains unchanged.—San Francisco Chronicle.

ROBERT BROWNING, the poet, has a full, white, peaked beard, and has all the appearance of an athlete.

THE RED RIVER VALLEY.

A Glimpse of the Great Wheat Region of the Far Northwest.

[Henry J. Van Dyke, Jr., in Harper's Magazine.]

Dismiss from your mind all the associations that are called up by this word. Understand that in the West a valley is not necessarily "a hollow between hills or mountains." That is a narrow Eastern conception. As we looked out of the car window for the first time upon this famous valley, we saw a broad level plain covered with short grass, and flooded by the rising sun with red and golden light. Doubtless there were hills somewhere in the world, but they were invisible. Far away on the left a dim blue line of timber marked the course of the Red river, and another line far in front of us indicated the approach of a tributary stream. This was all that broke the lake-like expanse. We realized at once what we had heard before, that it was, in fact, a lake without any water in it.

A few words will explain the character and probable formation of the Red river valley. It is about 300 miles long and fifty miles wide—a flat prairie, extending northward from Lake Traverse, in Minnesota, until it passes by a gentle slope beneath the water of Lake Winnipeg. About thirty miles north of the southern and higher extremity of the valley the Red river comes meandering in from the east. It is a sluggish stream, flowing in a ditch in the middle of the prairie, and is altogether inadequate in size and force to have made the valley which bears its name. When we seek an explanation of this vast alluvial plain, we must find a much larger body of water to account for its formation, and this is done by the theory which connects it with the great Mississippi system. There are many indications that the whole drainage of this region was at one time southward. The valley of the Mississippi, with its true line of continuation along the Minnesota, must have formerly contained a vastly larger body of water than now flows through it. This valley, beginning at Big Stone lake, is separated only by a slight barrier from Lake Traverse. Now imagine that a few thousand years ago the level of the continent was a little different from what it is now, a few hundred feet higher at the north, and lower at the south, then this barrier would be overcome, and all the waters of the Winnipeg basin would flow southward through the Red river and Minnesota valley into the Mississippi. The present northward outlet through the Nelson river would be stopped. There would be a mighty stream draining the whole central region of the continent into the Gulf of Mexico. Now imagine, again, that the continent is gradually depressed at the north, and elevated at the south—a change which we know from observation is still continuing along the sea-coast; the result of such an oscillation will be to diminish the slope and velocity of the great southward river. It will have less and less power to cut its way through obstacles. It will be dammed by the granite ledges near Big Stone lake. It will spread out into a vast lake larger than Superior and Michigan put together. The waters of this lake will be shallow and muddy, and the deposit of alluvium very rapid. As the northward depression continues, the outlet toward the south will become more and more feeble. It will degenerate into a mere driblet. And at last the great body of water will cut a new channel northward into Hudson bay. The Nelson river, with its rocky channel and numerous rapids, bears all the marks of an outlet thus recently formed.

This is but a rough and hasty outline of the theory which has been advanced by Gen. G. K. Warren, of the United States Engineer Corps, and supported by him in a series of admirable reports. It may seem dry, but it offers an explanation of two very important facts—the immense fertility of this ancient lake bed, which is now called the Red river valley, and the impossibility of a route from Manitoba, through the Nelson river and Hudson bay, to England. These facts have a direct bearing on the commercial welfare of the United States, for they put the transportation of the products of the rich Northwest into the hands of our railways and steamboats.

More than two-thirds of the Red river valley lies in Minnesota and Dakota; the remaining third is the British province of Manitoba. Two railroads have been opened into the valley within the past six years—the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba, which now runs parallel with the river to St. Vincent, on the British border, where it connects with the Pembina branch of the Canadian Pacific to Winnipeg, and the Northern Pacific, which crosses the valley at right angles and opens up the wonderfully-fertile land lying on the west side of the river, in Dakota. Into this territory a great flood of immigration is now pouring. The rapid influx began in 1877. In the last quarter of that year the Government land offices disposed of more than 400,000 acres in Minnesota, and during the same period the railways sold over 500,000 acres. In all over a million acres were taken up by settlers in those three months, mostly in the Red river valley. Since 1872 the Northern Pacific railway has sold 800,000 acres of Red river lands. In the land districts traversed by this road the Government has assigned 1,323,416 acres in the year ending June 30, 1878, and 1,964,644 acres in the year ending June 30, 1879. Together with the lands sold by the railway during the same time this makes the astounding total of 4,500,000 acres disposed of in two years. Embracing the same territory present statistics show the following: Present population, 69,600; increase in past year, 19,900. Area in wheat, 1879, 281,430 acres; increase, 96,000. Area in other crops, 79,470; increase, 20,660. Total area in cultivation, 360,900; increase, 16,660. New breaking, 1879, 133,600.

Circumstantial Evidence.

Many innocent men have suffered for the crimes of others. About forty years ago, a gentleman was tried and convicted upon circumstantial evidence of the murder of his niece. She was heard to exclaim, "Don't kill me!" and that instant a pistol or fowling-piece was fired off. Under these circumstances the gentleman was convicted and executed. Near twelve months after, the niece, who had eloped, arrived in England, and, hearing of the affair, elucidated the whole transaction. It appeared that she had formed an attachment for a person of whom her uncle disapproved. When walking in the fields, he was earnestly dissuading her from the connection, when she replied that she was resolved to have him, or it would be her death; and therefore said: "Don't kill me, uncle! don't kill me!" At the moment she uttered these words, a fowling-piece was discharged by a sportsman in a neighboring field. The same night, she eloped from her uncle's house; and the combination of the suspicious circumstances occasioned his ignominious death. For the mischief she had wrought the poor girl had her whole after life to repent it.

Instinct of Animals.

Much is said and written, nowadays, about the reasoning power of animals. But did you ever hear of a leech reasoning? Says a medical man: "I had occasion lately to keep some leeches and water beetles; they were put into round open glass vessels, about six inches high, and about two-thirds full of water. A medical leech which was put into one of these vessels got out, and within an hour after it was found on the table, and replaced in the water. Now, although the vessel was left uncovered as before, this leech never again tried to get out. A horse-leech and two beetles treated in the same way did the same thing once, and once only; each preferred the water to the dry table; and on being replaced they never tried to get out again; therefore they had been taught by experience. Is this not a high order of intelligence?"

THE Russian Government has delivered to the Porte its bill of expenses for the maintenance of Turkish prisoners during the last war. The sum to be reimbursed amounts to $4,700,000. Immediate payment is asked; whence the money is to come no one knows.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.

BEEVES	$8 50	@10 25
HOGS	5 80	@ 6 00
COTTON	11¾	@ 12
FLOUR—Superfine	4 00	@ 5 00
WHEAT—No. 2	1 30	@ 1 32
CORN—Western Mixed	51	@ 55
OATS—Mixed	40	@ 42
RYE—Western	93	@ 95
PORK—Mess	10 75	@11 00
LARD	7¼	@ 7⅜

CHICAGO.

BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	4 50	@ 5 00
Cows and Heifers	2 00	@ 4 [illegible]
Medium to Fair	4 00	@ 4 [illegible]
HOGS	3 75	@ 4 [illegible]
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter Ex.	5 75	@ 6 25
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 00	@ 5 75
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 13	@ 1 14
No. 3 Spring	1 00	@ 1 01
CORN—No. 2	36	@ 37
OATS—No. 2	30	@ 31
RYE—No. 2	73	@ 74
BARLEY—No. 2	78	@ 80
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	23	@ 24
EGGS—Fresh	8½	@ 9
PORK—Mess	9 90	@10 00
LARD	6¾	@ 7

MILWAUKEE.

WHEAT—No. 1	1 17	@ 1 20
No. 2	1 10	@ 1 11
CORN—No. 2	36	@ 37
OATS—No. 2	29	@ 30
RYE—No. 1	72	@ 73
BARLEY—No. 2	73	@ 78

ST. LOUIS.

WHEAT—No. 2 Red Fall	1 10	@ 1 11
CORN—Mixed	33	@ 34
OATS—No. 2	30	@ 31
RYE	73	@ 74
PORK—Mess	10 25	@10 50
LARD	6¾	@ 7

CINCINNATI.

WHEAT	1 15	@ 1 19
CORN	40	@ 41
OATS	35	@ 37
RYE	81	@ 83
PORK—Mess	10 00	@10 25
LARD	6¾	@ 7

TOLEDO.

WHEAT—Amber Michigan	1 17	@ 1 18
No. 2 Red	1 17	@ 1 18
CORN—No. 2	39	@ 40
OATS—No. 2	34	@ 35

DETROIT.

FLOUR—Choice	5 65	@ 6 75
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 13	@ 1 14
No. 1 Amber	1 12	@ 1 13
CORN—No. 1	41	@ 42
OATS—Mixed	36	@ 37
BARLEY (per cental)	1 30	@ 1 80
PORK—Mess	11 50	@12 00

INDIANAPOLIS.

WHEAT—No. 2 Red	1 11	@ 1 12
CORN	36	@ 37
OATS	32	@ 33
PORK—Clear	11 75	@12 00

EAST LIBERTY, PA.

CATTLE—Best	5 00	@ 5 25
Fair	4 40	@ 4 90
Common	3 25	@ 3 95
HOGS	4 85	@ 5 00
SHEEP	4 75	@ 5 50

CENTAUR LINIMENT

always Cures and never Disappoints The world's great Pain-Reliever for Man and Beast. Cheap, quick and reliable.

PITCHER'S CASTORIA is not Narcotic. Children grow fat upon, Mothers like, and Physicians recommend CASTORIA. It regulates the Bowels, cures Wind Colic, allays Feverishness, and destroys Worms.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Billious Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite—they will tell you by taking

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Billious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c.

IT HAS NO EQUAL.

This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

PURELY VEGETABLE.

If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

It is given with safety and the happiest results to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED, ROB. J. LOWRY, } Editors.

PENNSYLVANIA is about to add another to the many monuments of her beneficence by the erection of a State hospital for injured persons of the anthracite coal region.

MR. WILLIAM CHAMBERS, of New Jersey, took a long pull at a bottle containing corrosive sublimate, thinking he was getting something a little milder, and is no more.

THE gavel to be used by the Chairman of the Chicago Convention will be made of a piece of wood taken from the house in Springfield once occupied by Abraham Lincoln.

IT is reported that Jay Gould now controls, either directly or indirectly, 7,774 miles of railroad, to be soon increased to 8,078 miles. This is about one-tenth of the aggregate mileage of the railroads in the United States.

A WEALTHY business man of Minneapolis, named Cole, left that city last January with the intention of making a trip to Europe, and nothing has been heard from him since his arrival in New York a few days after. The books of the various steamship lines fail to show that a passage ticket was sold to any such person. Grave doubts are entertained as to the safety of Mr. Cole. It is feared that he has been foully dealt with.

HAVING got Ireland fixed with a Liberal Parliament and a Home Rule representation, we are now called upon to relieve a famine in Armenia. We hope that we shall never be deaf to the cries of the suffering, from whatever distance they come, but Armenia does seem rather far away. The British have a protectorate over Armenia. Why should not they protect the people from starvation? If they want to boss the universe, let them do it.

EVERY item of intelligence from Constantinople indicates that Turkey is on the verge of dissolution. The administration is weak and ineffective, official corruption and official inefficiency are observable everywhere, and it is beyond question that the last Oriental form of government will soon come to an end in Europe. The scramble which will be sure to take place as to how the Sultan's European possessions shall be divided bodes no good to the peace of Europe.

DANIEL CONROY, the stone mason of Erie, Pa., who went crazy some weeks ago over the fifteen puzzle, and has since been confined in the Dixmont Asylum, near Pittsburgh, is now cured, and will soon be released. He was violently insane, and it was necessary to put the jacket on him most of the time. Three men were required to take him to the asylum. During his confinement the Superintendent received many letters and suggestions from all parts of the country concerning his cure. One man in Michigan sent a solution of the puzzle, which he thought would have the desired effect.

VARIOUS statements, more or less erroneous, have been current recently respecting the Pope's health. The truth is that, though no notable malady exists, the Holy Father's medical advisers are not satisfied with his condition. Every cause of moral trouble that arises throws him into a state of nervous prostration. Overwork and want of the exercise and salubrious air to which he has been accustomed are telling upon him disastrously, and those who are around him assert that his health is failing visibly. His medical advisers are very anxious that he should have change of air this summer, but it seems that the threats and pressure brought to bear upon him by those who would fain chain him to the stake have hitherto availed to prevent him from taking any such decision.

A SHARP colloquy recently occurred on the floor of the United States Senate between Messrs. Carpenter and Blaine, during a discussion of the Geneva Award bill, in which, according to the regular report, "many personal thrusts were given and parried." It began by Senator Blaine reading an extract from a letter of Secretary Fish's in such a way as to convey a false impression of its meaning. Senator Carpenter read a further extract and explained its true significance. This nettled Blaine, who read what purported to be an extract from a letter of Caleb Cushing, tending to sustain his view of the Fish letter. Senator Carpenter several times extended his hand for the letter, but unsuccessfully, until, having concluded his comments, Blaine thrust it toward him with the remark that he would "give it to the Senator to chew on." Senator Carpenter responded that he knew of no authority by which the Senator from Maine sent him cuds to chew, and recognized no obligation to chew such cuds as the Senator sent him. Blaine subsequently accused Carpenter, who questioned the authenticity of the Cushing letter, of arguing the case as if he were in the Court of Common Pleas. Mr. Carpenter retorted that nothing in the demeanor of the Senator from Maine indicated that he had ever been in the court of common decency, and nothing he had said indicated that he had ever opened a law book, and for his part he did not believe he had ever been in the one or done the other.

THE owners of American petroleum deposits will before long have to encounter a considerable amount of opposition, in view of the discoveries of this valuable oil on the continent of Europe, and especially in Hanover and Russia. The beds in the latter country are comparatively boundless, extending for a distance of 1,500 miles along the Caucasus range, from the Caspian to the Black sea. At the present time, however, there are but two districts in this large area where any systematic efforts are being made to obtain the petroleum. One is in the valley of the Kuban river (which flows into the Black sea), where two wells have been sunk by a French company under the superintendence of an American manager; this company has a refinery at Taman. The other and most-productive district is near Baku, on the Caspian sea. Many wells have been sunk here to the depth of 300 feet, having a daily yield of 28,000 barrels of crude petroleum. An extraordinary amount of sand flows out with the oil, and is heaped up near the orifice of the wells in banks at least thirty feet high. Large refineries exist at Baku, though the refined oil at present produced there is not as good as the American oil.

DR. C. H. THOMAS, of Philadelphia, has been making a study of the various new devices for helping the deaf to hear. All of them, he says, depend for their action upon the principle of acoustics that solids vibrate in unison with the sound waves produced in the air near them. In these instruments the vibrations are of sufficient force to be audible when conveyed to the internal ear through the medium of the teeth and cranial bones, independently of the ordinary channel of hearing. He says that a simple and excellent instrument for the purpose "consists simply of a rod of hard wood about two feet long and a quarter inch thick, one end of which is placed against the teeth of the speaker, the other resting against or between the teeth of the person hard of hearing. If the speaker articulates in a natural tone of voice, the vocal vibrations will be transmitted in great volume through the teeth and thence to the ears of the deaf person. It will also convey the voice distinctly when placed against the forehead or other portions of the skull of the hearer. It will also convey perfectly audible speech from the skull of one to that of the other, or such sounds may be conveyed by simply bringing the heads themselves in contact. Again, instead of the speaker holding it against his teeth, he may place it against the upper part of his chest, when, upon using his voice, the sound will be conveyed as before, of course independently of the teeth of either person."

Thrilling Adventure With Indians.

Just below Kanawha falls, in West Virginia, is an overhanging rock of immense size jutting out about 100 feet over the seething whirlpool, and about the same height above. This was once the scene of a remarkable adventure. The Indians were in hot pursuit of Van Bibber, a settler and a man of distinction in those early times. He was hard pressed, and, all access to the river below and above being cut off, he was driven to this jutting rock, which proved to be the jumping-off place for him. He stood on the rock, in full view of the enemy above and below, who yelled like demons at the certainty of his speedy capture. He stood up boldly and with his rifle kept them at bay. As he stood there he looked across the river—saw his friends—his wife with her babe in her arms, and helpless to render assistance. They stood as if petrified with terror and amazement. She cried at the top of her voice: "Leap into the river and meet me!" Laying her babe on the grass, she seized the oars and sprung into the skiff alone. As she neared the middle of the river her husband saw the Indians coming in full force and yelling like demons. "Wife, wife," he screamed, "I'm coming; drop down a little lower." With this he sprung from his crag and descended like an arrow into the water, feet foremost. The wife rested on her oars a moment to see him rise to the surface, the little canoe floating like a cork, bobbing about on the boiling flood. It was an awful moment; it seemed an age to her; would he ever rise? Her earnest gaze seemed to penetrate the depths of the water, and she darted her boat farther down the stream. He rose near her; in a moment the canoe was alongside of him, and she helped him to scramble into it amid a shower of arrows and shot that the baffled Indians poured into them. The daring wife did not speak a word, her husband was more dead than alive; and all depended on her strength being maintained till they could reach the bank. This she did, just where she had started, right where the babe was still lying, crowing and laughing. The men pulled the skiff high up on the sand, and the wife slowly arose and helped to lift Van Bibber to his feet. He could not walk, but she laid him down by his babe, and then, seating herself, she wept wildly, just as any other woman would have done under the circumstances. That babe is now a grandfather, and that rock is called "Van Bibber rocks," to this day.

WEBB C. HAYES is at Fremont, Ohio, superintending the building of an addition to his father's house there.

FARM NOTES.

PIGS need dry beds as well as other animals.

FEED the sheep well, give them fresh, pure water, and keep them out of the wet.

AMERICAN honey in the comb has become a popular article of diet in England, and very large shipments are made.

OF all the products of the soil, none are so prolific in seed as weeds; 60,000 seeds have been counted upon one mullein stalk.

A VERMONT dairy farmer says that, when he feeds meal to his cows, seventeen pounds of milk make a pound of butter. But, when no meal is fed, it takes twenty-three to twenty-six pounds.

THERE is contained in the corn cobs raised in the United States from 115,000,000 to 120,000,000 pounds of carbonate of potash, which is the third most valuable article required in agriculture.

MIXED husbandry is what we need. The farmer who grows something of everything adapted to his locality will be safer, and, in the long run, will save more than he who devotes his energies and land mainly to one or two crops.

THE leaf cases of the leaf crumpler may be easily found at this season, and should be searched for and destroyed. It multiplies rapidly and is sometimes very destructive, entire orchards being rendered nearly worthless by its presence.

J. W. MYERS, of Hampton, Iowa, says that, after many trials, there are two trees which have endured the ordeal of Northern hedging, and have not been found wanting in any particular. These are the honey locust and the white willow.

A PENNSYLVANIA farmer cured ringbone of four years' standing on his horse by using four ounces of saltpeter in a quart of good vinegar. Dissolve well and apply by bath or mop. About a dozen applications cured this case in six months.

THE St. Patrick, one of the new varieties of potatoes recently introduced to the attention of our farmers, is said to be most excellent and well worthy of extended culture. It has a smooth, white skin, few and shallow eyes, producing but few small tubers, maturing early and compact in its habit of growth. It bids fair to become a popular market variety.

A LITTLE oil cake or meal given to the farm team about the time when shedding the winter coat will be of great advantage. It will act as a gentle laxative and stimulant, and render more active the various secretive organs of the system, and better fit them for the arduous labors of the season. An occasional teaspoonful of spirits of nitre will not come amiss to act as a diuretic.

THE winters in Russia are becoming colder every year, and the summers hotter, more dry and less fruitful, owing as is clearly stated by Livingstone, to the destruction of the woodlands which formerly abounded in the southern districts. The clearing of these lands has caused such enormous evaporation that many once capacious water courses have become mere swamps, or are comparatively dry.

ROUP in poultry is only a fatal disease when, like many others, it is neglected till passed all remedy. If, when first attacked, a mixture of cayenne pepper and lard, about the size of a bean, be given to the fowl about twice a day, a cure will be effected in a few days. We keep from fifty to 100 fowls, and have never lost by this disease, but have effected a cure in large numbers by the mixture described.—Exchange.

YOUNG stock, especially calves and colts, frequently become infested with stock lice, in winter, which greatly multiply toward spring and, nearly suck the life's blood out of them. They should be looked after, and if found infested with this species of vermin, should be treated for it. A moderately strong solution of carbolic soap applied liberally to the neck and back will soon effectually rid them of these troublesome pests.

W. A. ARMSTRONG, Elmira, N. Y., said at a recent meeting of the Elmira Farmers' Club: "I have tried raising Alsike clover on as much as 100 acres of land in various conditions. I sowed thirty acres of new land with Alsike alone, and I have sowed the seed mixed with timothy and with common red clover. As the result of all my observation, I have concluded that Alsike clover is not a profitable crop to raise. It makes good pasture and for cattle good hay, but it will not stay in the land so well as red clovers, and when the first growth is cut or grazed off that is the end of it for that year. I cannot say what influence is exerted by it toward enriching the land, but if I may judge by the character of the roots I must say it is inferior to red clover as a fertilizer. The roots do not penetrate so far and they have less substance. Cattle are extremely fond of Alsike pasturage, but cows grazing on it make butter of light color. Farmers who keep bees may find it profitable to have a field of Alsike near by, for it affords a great deal of honey if the plants are not grazed, and it will continue to blossom a long time. The best use I have had of it has been when mixed with the ordinary grasses, and in this condition it has remained longer in the ground than when sowed alone."

Bee Ranching.

California is a famous country for bees and the making of honey, and at many a breakfast-table in distant Europe to-day the waffle is spread with sweets that have been filched from the hearts of a thousand California flowers. In the mouth of almost any canyon there is a bee ranche or apiary, whose owner grows indolent and prosperous from the labors of his industrious subjects. Here there are no long winters, with dearth of flowers, through which the patient workers must be nursed and fed in order that they may live until the opening of the next field season. These bee ranches are models of neatness and domestic comfort, and the profession of bee-keeping is rapidly becoming popular among persons of little physical strength or small financial capital, or both—such as maiden ladies, broken-down ministers, bachelor students, and those dilettante farmers who fancy that the royal road to bucolic happiness lies through the flowery beds of a bee-pasture. Their expenses are as light as those of a hermit in his cave, and what stores of honey are laid up are so much clear gain, as the bees board themselves while they work, and work unceasingly in preparation for the winter which never comes. When the hives are full, the cakes of comb are removed, the liquid is strained from the cells, and the empty ones are replaced, to be filled again and again. This economical process prevents a waste of labor and time in the gathering of wax and the building of new bins in the storehouse.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

NEW linen may be embroidered more easily by rubbing it over with fine white soap; it prevents the thread from cracking.

TO REMOVE grease from wall-paper, lay several folds of blotting-paper on the spot and hold a hot iron near it until the grease is absorbed.

TO TAKE ink out of linen, dip the ink spot in pure melted tallow; then wash out the tallow, and the ink will come out with it. This is said to be unfailing.

IF brooms are wet in boiling suds once a week they will become very tough, will not cut a carpet, will last much longer, and always sweep like a new broom.

TO REMOVE rust from a stove-pipe, rub with linseed oil (a little goes a good way); build a slow fire at first till it is dry. Oil in the spring, to prevent it from rusting.

TO CLEAN brass, immerse or wash it several times in sour milk or whey. This will brighten it without scouring. It may then be scoured with a woolen cloth dipped in ashes.

BOSTON COCOANUT PIE.—Take one cocoanut and grate; add the milk and two eggs, till the mixture is as thick as custard pie. One nut makes two pies.

TO CURL plumes, put some coals of fire on a shovel, sprinkle some brown sugar on the coals and hold the plumes in the smoke. One application will be sufficient to make them as nice as new. Another way: Take a little salt and sprinkle it upon the hot stove and hold the plume over the smoke a few minutes.

A TABLE-SPOONFUL of black pepper will prevent gray or buff linens from spotting if stirred into the first water in which they are washed. It will also prevent the colors running in washing black or colored cambrics or muslins, and the water is not injured by it, but is just as soft as before the pepper was put in.

MARY HUFF'S BREAD AND BUTTER PUDDING.—Butter the bottom of your pudding-dish and strew with currants, then a layer of bread, cut very thin and buttered; repeat until the dish is nearly full; make a custard of one quart of milk, two eggs, seasoned with vanilla and salt; pour on the bread and let it stand one hour, and bake.

OLD-FASHIONED TAPIOCA PUDDING.—Two eggs, one quart milk, one cup tapioca; spices of nutmeg and cinnamon to taste; also sugar and a bit of salt, and small teaspoonful of butter melted. Wash and soak the tapioca in very little water till rather tender; then put it in the milk, and place on back of the stove and soak one hour; then melt butter in dish and pour in the beaten eggs, milk well sweetened, and spice; bake one hour quite slowly.

Sleeping a Life Away.

Nathan G. Vrooman, an employe of the Central Hudson railroad, residing near the city of Schenectady, is sleeping his life away. Six years ago he received a sunstroke and ever since has complained of dizziness. On the 15th of February he was compelled to quit his work and take to his bed on account of severe pains in his head. He at once fell asleep and continued in this condition almost without interruption, day and night, for three weeks and two days. His sleep appeared to be natural, and his breathing was not labored as in certain diseases of the brain. When aroused he seemed very morose and disinclined to converse, so that it was with the greatest difficulty any information concerning his feelings could be drawn from him. He desired above all things to be let alone and not disturbed. His appetite during this time was very fair. He ate, on alternate days, enough to support life in an inactive state. But each time, as soon as his food was disposed of, he would at once relapse into his former apathy. What is a little singular in his case, there was at no time any symptom of fever or inflammation or delirium, nor of any material increase of the temperature of the body which would indicate any deep-seated disease, nor any paralysis or disturbance of vision. At the end of the twenty-three days he woke and became communicative. He was not suffering from any pains, but was weak. His appetite was voracious, and it was then supposed that he would soon recover his strength and return to his work. Ten days later he became sleepy and again took to his bed, where he is at present in about the same condition as at first. Day and night he sleeps without any fever, and refuses to take any food. When he awakes from his sleep, it is with the greatest difficulty he can be make to talk. It is only by perseverance in questioning that a "yes" or a "no" can be got out of him in reply. He desires to be allowed to sleep. His friends are getting anxious about him, as it is now two weeks since he tasted food, and still his sleep continues, with no material change in his condition or symptoms. He is a single man, aged about 35 years, hard-working, sober, and industrious, and the main support of a widowed sister, with whom he resides. Death must ensue in a short time, but the case is so remarkable as to excite the wonder and interest of the physicians in that section. The doctors are unable to give an explanation of the man's somnolency.—Syracuse Courier.

AN Illinois gentleman counts among his treasures, and very rightly, too, a quaint old ambrotype of Abraham Lincoln. It shows a gaunt and awkward man of 37 seated in an old rush-bottomed chair, and dressed in well-worn dark clothes, with an old-fashioned stock, and his uncombed hair standing out in all directions.

AN ANT-BEAR.

A Brazilian Curiosity Which Has Arrived in New York.

An ant-bear, the first of the kind to be brought to America alive, lately arrived at New York from Brazil. A reporter of the World describes a visit to the animal, as follows:

The bear rose on its legs, showing a wonderfully-elongated and narrow head. It is thickly covered with long, coarse hair, which on the tail is half-way between the filaments of a heavy plume and the sticks of a fan. The tail is used by the bear with commendable ingenuity as a blanket, being for that purpose brought around a half-circle and spread just sufficiently to entirely cover the body. Besides serving as a cover for warmth it hides the animal. Hunters not accustomed to the forests of Brazil which the ant-bear inhabits step on it without knowing that it is a curiosity. The color is brown washed with gray on the head and face, and interspersed with pure white hairs on the head and hinder limbs. The throat is very black, and a long, triangular black mark crosses the animal from the throat, passing obliquely over the shoulders. Measuring from the tip of the snout to the end of the tail the bear is just a trifle more than six feet in length. The head alone is one and a half, and the tail two feet long. The bear has four toes on the fore-feet and five on the hinder feet. The claws on the fore-feet are extremely long and curved and of no use in walking. They are used as a defense against stronger animals. If they are once implanted in the flesh of a human being the wound is apt to prove fatal. They are apt, also, not to come out, so that the dying man can kill the bear if he desires to. The bear has found that the safest way is to wind its snake-like head around the body of its foe. Its hug is particularly powerful. The bear turned its claws inward upon a thick, rough palm and walked on the outer edge of the fore-feet in a lazy, awkward manner to a box two feet away. The only indication of intelligence it displayed was in scraping away the straw for a bed. It cannot walk long. The bear came from Para by the schooner Thomas ' Williams. Its owner, Mr. Reiche, has had a standing offer, for the last ten years, to all the Captains sailing from New York to Brazil, to pay a good sum for a live ant-bear, and this animal is the only live one ever brought to the United States. Capt. Edward secured it while it was sleeping, which it is very capable at. Mr. Reiche is negotiating to sell it to the German Zoological Garden Company in Berlin for $2,500. He says that no zoological garden in the world possesses a live ant-bear. The London Garden could keep one for only a week. It died in the garden.

Mr. Reiche feeds the bear with extremely finely-scraped beef mixed with eggs and sugar. Every schoolboy, particularly if he has read "Mayne Reid" with proper diligence, remembers the picture of the ant-bear sweeping up a thousand live ants with a tongue nearly two feet long. The tongue, which is covered with saliva, is a most effective ant-trap. At first it did not take kindly to the change of diet, and a basin of ant eggs soaked in lukewarm water was brought. The bear ate half of the meat by lapping up the eggs much the same as dogs eat. Turning to the dish of scraped meat, it placed the tip of its long tongue on the plate and returned it to its mouth without partaking of the food. The bear then stood upon its feet, and, leaning its head down, vertically spread its tongue over the straw and made a shrill noise like a tin whistle, and hobbled back to its bed.

A Parting Scene.

Did you ever hear two married women take leave of each other at the gate on a summer evening? This is the way they do it:

"Good-by!"

"Good-by. Come down and see us right soon."

"Yes, so I will. You come up right soon."

"I will. Good-by."

"Good-by. Don't forget to come soon."

"No, I won't. Don't you forget to come up."

"I won't. Be sure and bring Sally Jane with you next time."

"I will. I'd have brought her up this time, but she wasn't very well. She wanted to come awful bad."

"Did she, now? That was too bad. Be sure and bring her next time."

"I will; and you be sure and bring the baby."

"I will. I forgot to tell you he's cut another tooth."

"You don't say! How many has he got now?"

"Five. It makes him awful cross."

"I guess it does, this hot weather. Well, good-by! Don't forget to come down."

"No, I won't. Don't you forget to come up. Good-by!"

And they separate.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Habit of Complaint.

There are some unhappy people who are never cheerful—who are always under a cloud. Now we may be born with a melancholy temperament, but that is no reason why we should yield to it. There is a way of shuffling the burden. In the lottery of life there are more prizes drawn than blanks, and to one misfortune there are fifty advantages. Despondency is the most unprofitable feeling a man can have. One good, hearty laugh is a bombshell exploding in the right place, while spleen and discontent are a gun that kicks over the man who shoots it off. Then give over complaining. Take out-door exercise and avoid late suppers, if you would have a cheerful disposition. The habit of complaint finally drops into peevishness, and people become waspish and unapproachable.

Reverence.

A Minnesota correspondent sends the following:

We have had for many years in this county, as Clerk of the District Court, an intelligent and careful German, who, during the sessions of the court, is very fastidious about violations of decorum. Recently, in an important trial, a somewhat "bumptious" young man from the rural districts was called as a witness, and took his place on the stand without removing his hat. He was told to hold up his hand, which he did, and the Clerk proceeded to administer the customary oath, reading it from the statute. He had read about half way through, when, happening to glance up over his spectacles, he noticed that the witness had not removed his hat. The Clerk slowly lowered the book, and, gazing intently at the young man, said: "Look here, sir, when you swear before me and Gott, take off your hat, sir!"—"Editor's Drawer," in Harper's Magazine.

Mr. Vanderbilt Going Out of Business.

W. H. Vanderbilt tells his intimate friends that he desires to be relieved at an early day of the responsibilities of railroad management. He feels, it is said, that he has no motive for further augmenting his immense possessions by continuing an active business career. He has no ambition yet unsatisfied which requires him to carry any longer the immense responsibility of great public interests. He desires, therefore, to dispose, as speedily as he can without sacrifice, of all controlling interests he has owned in the transportation systems of the country, and to place his property largely in Government bonds, and henceforth to live as the Astors are living, not upon his investments in productive industries, but upon the interest of his loans and the rents of his estate.

Vanderbilt, it may be said here, is pushing the work upon his new Fifth avenue mansion, which is to be the most costly private residence in the country, except that of Mrs. A. T. Stewart. He is adding from time to time to the number of flyers in his stables, and has developed a wonderful interest lately in art matters.—New York Cor. Chicago Times.

The Effect of Coffee Again.

Dr. Richardson, the eminent English scientist, in respect to the popular notion that coffee is an unhealthy beverage, that it keeps up a constant irritation of the stomach, and brings on depression of spirits, etc. There was a great deal of truth in that statement, says the doctor, as coffee cannot be taken in excess without producing dyspepsia and irritation, but moderately used it is an invigorating, healthful, and wholesome drink, bringing a man's best energies into play. The quantity taken, however, must not be large, and should be good.

Dr. Book, of Leipsic, another celebrated scientist, says: "The nervousness and peevishness of our times are chiefly attributable to tea and coffee; the digestive organs of confirmed coffee drinkers are in a state of chronic derangement, which reacts on the brain, producing fretful and lachrymose moods. Fine ladies addicted to strong coffee have a characteristic temper, which I might describe as a mania for acting the persecuted saint. Cocoa and chocolate is neutral in its psychic effects, and is really the most harmless of our fashionable drinks."—Scientific American.

Too Mad for the Limits.

A gentleman whose face had a look anything but pleasant yesterday purchased a postal card at the postoffice and took up a pen and wrote for about two minutes with a determined hand. Then, as he blotted the card, he asked the stamp clerk:

"Is it against the postal rules to call a man a liar on a postal card?"

The clerk thought it was, and the man tore up the card, bought another, and after writing a few lines inquired:

"It can't be against the rules to call him a villain, can it?"

The clerk again decided it was, and a third card was purchased. This time the man pondered over his lines, signed his name, and said:

"I have written here that he ought to be in jail for his conduct. Is that against the postal rules?"

The clerk said he wouldn't dare run the risk himself, and the indignant citizen tore the card into a dozen pieces and exclaimed:

"Go to Halifax with your postoffice! I won't send any card at all, but I'll waylay the fellow and knock the top of his head off!"—Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle.

Our Bodies After Death.

Within a very near approach to truth, the human family inhabiting the earth has been estimated at 1,000,000,000; the annual loss by death is 18,000,000. Now, the weight of the animal matter of this immense body cast into the grave is no less than 634,000 tons, and its decomposition produces 9,000,000,000,000 cubic feet of matter. The vegetable productions of the earth clear away from the earth the gases thus generated, and decomposing and assimilating them for their own increase. This circle of changes has been going on ever since man became an occupier of the earth. He feeds on the lower animals and on the seeds of plants, which in due time become a part of himself. The lower animals feed upon the herbs and grasses, which, in their turn, become the animal; then, by its death, again pass into the atmosphere, and are ready once more to be assimilated by plants, the earth or bone substance alone remaining where it is deposited, and not even there unless prosecuted as a common swindler.

Farm Schools for Girls.

France has agricultural schools for girls. One of the chief is near Rouen, which is said to have been begun with a capital of 1 franc, by a Sister of Charity and two little discharged prisoner girls, and to be now worth $160,000. The establishment has now 300 girls from 6 to 18. The farm, entirely cultivated by them, is over 400 acres in extent. Twenty-five Sisters form the staff of teachers. More than one medal of the French Agricultural Society has been awarded to this establishment at Darnetel, and the pupils are in great demand all over Normandy on account of their skill. They go out as stewards, gardeners, farm managers, dairy women and laundresses. Each girl has, on leaving, an outfit and a small sum of money, earned in spare hours. If they want a home they can always return to Darnetel, which they are taught to regard as home.—London Farmer.

JAY GOULD has purchased about 200 acres of highly-improved land and a magnificent white marble residence said to have cost $500,000, and known as "Lyndhurst on the Hudson." Mr. Gould will occupy the villa during the coming summer.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., MAY 6, 1880.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

"No solid south, no solid north, but a solid Union."

Democratic County Central Committee

OFFICERS.

Wm. L. Blair, Chairman.
Theo. Reed, Secretary.
J. J. Van Auken, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Wm. L. Blair. Jas. A. Barns, S. S. Shutt, J. Wm. Wagner, T. F. Jordan, Guy Plumb.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEEMEN.

C. M. Merica, Butler township.
J. J. Walter, Jackson township.
T. S. Murray, Concord township.
Geo. A. Munn, Newville township.
Jacob Christoffle, Stafford township.
Geo. W. Maxwell, Wilmington township.
M. Houston, Auburn precinct.
D. Y. Husselman, Waterloo precinct.
W. J. Frederick, Keyser township.
E. D. Britton, Richland township.
E. M. Brumback, Fairfield township.
Fred. Waterman, Smithfield township.
T. H. Tomlinson, Franklin township.
B. F. Cornelius, Troy township.

The Allen county delegates to the congressional convention came up on a special train.

Horatio Seymour will accept the nomination for president on the democratic ticket, if tendered to him by the Cincinnati convention.

Those who desire their names announced in the COURIER, as candidates for county offices, will please bear in mind that the price is $3.00 in advance.

The Fort Wayne Sentinel of last Tuesday administered an overdose of half-cooked "taffy" to the Whitley county democrats, to physic off the senatorial bile.

The anti-third-term republicans of the country, are holding a national convention in St. Louis to-day, to take such action as may seem necessary to prevent the nomination of Grant.

If some of Gen. Streight's republican friends were personally acquainted with him, and knew what a bombastic, egotistical ass he is, they would probably not be so anxious to have him nominated for governor.

Hon. R. C. Bell, of Fort Wayne, was nominated for senator last Saturday, in the district composed of Allen and Whitley counties. Mr. Bell is a man of some ability and he will no doubt be heard from in the next Indiana senate.

President Hayes has appointed Post-master General Key district judge of the eastern and middle district of Tennessee, which position Gen. Key has accepted. James N. Tyner, of Indiana, will assume the duties of postmaster general.

Democratic County Convention

Delegates from the several townships in DeKalb county will meet at the court-house, in Auburn,

Saturday, June 5, 1880,

at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the following offices, to-wit:

Representative in the legislature.
County clerk.
County auditor.
County treasurer.
County sheriff.
County recorder.
County surveyor.
County coroner.
County commissioner, north district.
County commissioner, southwest district.

The convention will transact such other business as may come before it.

SELECTION OF DELEGATES.

In accordance with a resolution passed at the last meeting of the county central committee, all democrats and others who intend to support the ticket nominated by the convention above named, are requested to meet at the usual voting place in their respective township or precinct,

Saturday, May 29, 1880,

at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the county convention, in accordance with the following apportionment, based upon the number of democratic votes cast for secretary of state at the last state election:

Butler	township	10	delegates.
Jackson	"	19	"
Concord	"	21	"
Newville	"	8	"
Stafford	"	7	"
Wilmington	"	19	"
Auburn precinct		30	"
Waterloo	"	10	"
Richland township		17	"
Fairfield	"	21	"
Smithfield	"	13	"
Franklin	"	9	"
Troy	"	5	"
Keyser	"	26	"
Total,		214.	"

The democrats of each township and precinct will at the same time, (May 29), appoint one delegate to the judicial convention to be held at Kendallville on the 6th day of August, 1880.

By order of the committee.

W. L. BLAIR, Chairman.
THEO. REED, Secretary.

A Slight Mistake.

There was a slightly erroneous impression conveyed by a Fort Wayne item that was republished in our columns last week. Two gentlemen of that place, Mr. Fleming and Judge Lowry, were represented as being personally at variance and contesting with each other for popular support in a manner which tested the strength of each in the ward where they live. The fact was, they only happened to be committed to different views concerning a candidacy for a legislative office, and their relations are understood to be not personally unfriendly.

THE CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.

Harmony and Good Feeling Prevailed.

In accordance with the published call, the democrats of the 12th congressional district met in convention at Auburn, on Thursday, April 29th. The convention was called to order at 10:30 a. m., by Judge C. A. O. McClellan, chairman of the district committee. On motion of Judge Lowry, Mr. John B. Stoll, of the Ligonier Banner, was made chairman of the convention, who, upon taking the chair returned thanks for the honor conferred upon him, and spoke in unmistaken language of the fraud of 1877. He referred to the political prospects in this district and in the state and urged harmony and good feeling and a burial of personal considerations in all contests.

Messrs E. L. Chittenden, of the Fort Wayne Sentinel and Phil. Colerick, of the Fort Wayne Journal were made secretaries.

The following resolution, offered by E. W. Brown, of Whitley, was adopted:

RESOLVED, That the plan of organization recommended by the state central committee be adopted for the management of the campaign in this district.

Dr. D. M. Marshal, chairman of the Whitley county delegation, then offered the following resolution on behalf of the entire delegation from that county, and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, The county of Whitley having given the casting vote in the congressional convention at the city of Fort Wayne on the 29th day of June, 1878, for Hon. W. G. Colerick, of Allen county, whereby he was nominated for congress in the 12th district, now through her delegates to this convention to carry out the instructions of the Whitley county democratic convention, offer the following resolution:

RESOLVED, That Hon. Walpole G. Colerick, of Allen county, present representative in congress, by the purity of his private and public life, by his devotion to democratic principles, his fidelity to the interest of the entire people of his district, and by the ability manifested in the discharge of his official duty, has proven his fitness for the place he now occupies; he is therefore hereby selected and nominated by this convention, as the first and unanimous choice of the democratic party of the 12th congressional district for congress.

(Signed) D. M. MARSHALL,
E. W. BROWN,
I. B. MCDONALD,
H. C. PRESSLER,
A. J. STOUFFS,
BENJAMIN RAUFFER.

Dr. G. W. McConnel, of Steuben county, moved to amend the motion of Dr. Marshall, so as to make the sentiment expressed in the resolution, that of each and every county in the district, the amendment was accepted and the whole was adopted by a rising vote amidst loud any prolonged applause.

The chair declared Walpole G. Colerick to be the unanimous choice of the democracy of the 12th district as a candidate for congress.

"Little Henry," a brother of the nominee, was loudly called for, and came forward and returned thanks to the convention for the honor conferred upon his brother, who was unavoidably absent on this occasion, owing to the small democratic majority in the lower house of congress, caused by the absence of a number of members. Henry is a very pleasant and interesting talker, and withal an honorable gentleman.

Judges Holman, of Indianapolis, and Long, of Warsaw, being present, were called out but declined to speak on political issues, owing to their official position, but as they are both candidates for the supreme bench they were glad to have an opportunity to meet the democrats in the 12th congressional district; and, by the way, allow us to suggest that the DeKalb county delegation to the state convention, can do no better than support both of these gentlemen for the positions they ask. Mr. Holman is in the 3rd district, and Mr. Long is in this (5th) district. Judge Lowry being present his numerous friends called him out and insisted on a speech, inasmuch as the people know his ability to deal in politics and law without mixing. The judge devoted a few moments to the positions occupied by the two great political parties, and the danger that would result from a violation of the established principles of George Washington concerning a third term of the presidency. After short speeches by Col. I. B. McDonald and Dr. Marshall of Whitley, Mr. Ballou of Lagrange and Mr. Free. Kelley of DeKalb, the convention adjourned with three hearty cheers for Hon. Walpole G. Colerick

After the April election, when the republicans of DeKalb county were so unmercifully scooped, the only thing they could they could think of in connection with politics was the republican victory in Fort Wayne, which they claimed to be the result of republican gains; now, when the Auburn republicans get in from the country—whence they went on a fishing tour, leaving town about the time the polls closed last monday evening—just ask them if they have heard from Ft Wayne since the city election: say to them that each of the nine wards gave a handsome democratic majority, which never occurred before in the history of the city

SOLID.

No "Whacking Up" in Auburn,

Owing to the Numerosity of Democrats.

The Corporation Election.

Notwithstanding the effort made by the republicans to defeat the whole or part of the democratic ticket at the election last Monday, every democrat was elected by a good majority, and the candidates for treasurer and marshal, against whom special efforts were made, were elected by increased majorities. The following is the official vote.

TRUSTEE 1ST WARD.

Patrick Murphy, dem. 179; majority 36
Frank E. Strebe, rep. 143.

TRUSTEE 2ND WARD.

Englebert Ashley. d. 194; majority 60
John Lobmiller, rep. 134.

TRUSTEE 3RD WARD.

James A. Potter, dem. 177; majority 28
George E. Porter, rep. 149.

TRUSTEE 4TH WARD.

Timothy G. Matheny, d. 199; majority 77
Henry Wolf, r. 122.

TRUSTEE 5TH WARD.

Wm. Snyder, d. 183; majority 36
J. W. Shaffer, r. 147.

CLERK.

Thos. H. Sprott, d. 205; majority 84
Geo. H. Yesbera, r. 121.

TREASURER.

Mitchell Houston, d. 205; majority 83
Joseph Abright, r. 122.

MARSHAL.

Thompson P. Scott, d. 221; maj. 119
D. K. Houghton, r. 102.

The vote for trustee in the second ward is regarded the party strength, democratic majority 60. Average majority for trustees 47. Average majority for whole ticket 65.

Here is Your Proof.

Quite recently the Decatur Democrat very knowingly (?) asserted that Mr. Hendricks had never said he would not accept a second place on the national democratic ticket, and now, fearing that the editor of the Democrat may still be ignorant of the facts, we let Mr. Hendricks speak for himself in the following extract from a recent conversation with a Chicago newspaper reporter:

"I suppose," said the reporter, "you are a candidate for the presidency yourself?"

"I don't know as I ought to talk about that at all. However I will say that I am not a candidate in a personal sense, but I have no doubt that the delegation from the state of Indiana will present my name before the national democratic convention at Cincinnati."

"Would you accept second place on the ticket?"

"I HAVE OFTEN STATED MY POSITION IN THIS REGARD. Duty compelled me to accept a second place four years ago, but I don't think the same reason exists at this time. My position is well known."

Democratic Caucus.

The democrats of Auburn met in the town building last Friday evening for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for town offices. Upon motion Mr. T. D. Gross was elected chairman, and Mr. Wm. H. Dills secretary. Announcements having been called for, Messrs. Wm. H. McQuiston, James Anderson and Patrick Murphy were named for trustees in the first ward. Murphy nominated on second ballot.

For trustee in second ward Mr. Englebert Ashley was nominated by acclamation.

For trustee in the third ward Mr. James Potter was nominated by acclamation.

For trustee in the fourth ward Messrs. A. C. Wilson, T. G. Matheny and E. Berry were named. Matheny nominated on second ballot.

For trustee in the fifth ward, Messrs. George Ensley and Wm. Snyder were candidates. Snyder was elected.

For clerk, the names of Thos. H. Sprott and Eli Coder were suggested. Sprott nominated.

For treasurer M. Houston and Wm. H. Kiblinger were named. Houston nominated.

For marshal, T. P. Scott and John Treesh were named. Scott nominated.

After the appointment of Theo. Reed, F. E. Davenport and T. D. Gross to act as town committeemen for the ensuing year, the meeting adjourned sine die.

The Garrett Election.

GARRETT, IND., May 5, 1880.

EDITORS COURIER: Please permit the readers of your paper to publish a short sketch of our town election and the result.

There were two tickets in the field, one headed "Corporation Ticket," with T. M. Blair, H. M. Bicknell and W. Y. Johnston as candidates for trustees, Jos. Singler for treasurer, F. D. Bissett for clerk and Charles Travis for marshal; and the other was headed "Citizens' Ticket," with T. M. Blair, J. William Wagner and W. Y. Johnston for trustees, Jos. Singler for treasurer, N. W. Lancaster for clerk and Ed. Sargent for marshal. Both sides were ably represented, and the work was done without any personal hard feeling to mar the peace and harmony of the occasion. The citizens' ticket proved to be victorious, 203 votes having been cast in all, with the following result: For trustee, T. M. Blair, no opposition; J. William Wagner, 127; H. M. Bicknell, 73; W. Y. Johnston, no opposition. For treasurer, Jos. Singler, no opposition. For clerk, N. W. Lancaster, 148; F. D. Bissett, 53. For marshal, Ed. Sargent, 127; Charles Travis, 75.

While the town was unusually quiet during the contest, the enthusiasm appeared the greater as the result was publicly announced by one of the judges. After that, our popular band gave the candidates elected a serenade, which was highly appreciated and brought out to the streets a greater number of the inhabitants of the town than has ever been seen together before. Saloons were all closed, but cigars were as plenty as stars on the sky; and it has been hinted that some select party, irrespective of color, (that is political), got together in some secluded place and, to use a popular expression, had a little "picnic" of their own, however, without any serious results. In short, everything and everybody was lovely except a few who, it is hoped, will profit by their lesson of last Monday, and come to the conclusion that Garrett is not the place for anybody to boast that he carries the votes of the people in his pocket and cannot be beaten, because it has been fairly shown by this election that our people will vote just as they please.

We hope that when the dust of the contest has cleared away the people of Garrett may not find the result detrimental to the general welfare of the town and community. CITIZEN.

Joint Representative Convention.

Delegates from the counties of DeKalb, Noble, and Elkhart, the same constituting a joint representative district, will meet in convention at Kendallville, Ind.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 6th, 1880.

for the purpose of nominating a democratic candidate for joint representative for the counties named. The ratio of representation will be one delegate for each 100 votes cast for Gov. Jas. D. Williams in 1876, and one for each fraction of 50 or over, as follows:

DeKalb county	26
Noble "	24
Elkhart "	36
Total	86

By order of the district committee.

Judicial Convention.

The democracy of Noble, DeKalb and Steuben counties, constituting the 35th judicial district, will meet in delegate convention at Kendallville, Ind., on

FRIDAY AUGUST 6th, 1880,

for the purpose of nominating a judge of the circuit court and prosecuting attorney. The ratio of representation will be the same as that in the joint representative convention, which will be held at the same time and place.

By order of the district committee.

Notice to Contractors.

Notice is here by given that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will, on Friday, May 14th, 1880, at 10 o'clock a. m. let to the lowest responsible bidder the construction of a 100 ft. Howe Truss bridge, near Jeremiah Plumb's in Union township, also at 2 o'clock on same day the building of a 100 ft. bridge about 1½ miles northeast of Auburn, both with pile abutments. Letting to take place at site of bridge, plans and specifications of said bridges can be seen on ground at time of letting, bidders will be required to give a bond according to law.

The board reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

By order of the board

Attest; ALBERT ROBBINS, Aud'r.

May 5th 1880. 19-3w

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The announcement of the names of candidates for county offices will be inserted under this head for $3.00 IN ADVANCE; no announcement to exceed six lines in length without extra charge. All announcements are made subject to the decision of the democratic county convention.

REPRESENTATIVE.

CLERK.

AUDITOR.

EDITORS COURIER: The democrats of Franklin township desire you to announce the name of Thomas H. Tomlinson, of the township named, as a candidate for county auditor

The many friends of John W. Dills, of Concord township, will present his name to the democratic county convention as a candidate for county auditor.

TREASURER.

SHERIFF.

RECORDER.

Mr. George H. Munn, of Newville township, is named by his many democratic friends in that township as a candidate for county recorder.

SURVEYOR.

CORONER.

COMMISSIONER, NORTH DISTRICT.

COMMISSIONER, SOUTHWEST DISTRICT.

Administrator's Sale.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE undersigned administrators, with the will annexed, of the last will and testament of the late Joseph Bowman, deceased, of DeKalb county, Indiana, will offer for sale at public outcry, at the late residence of said testator, in Keyser township, in said county,

ON SATURDAY, 22ND DAY OF MAY, 1880

the personal property of said estate, consisting of horses, cows, hogs, young cattle, wagons, and wheat, corn and oats by the bushel, household goods and furniture, 11 stands of bees, harness and farming implements, and various other articles. Sale to begin at 10 o'clock, a. m.

TERMS:

Sums of three dollars and under, cash; on sums of over three dollars, a credit of nine months will be given the purchaser giving his note with interest and approved security, waiving valuation and appraisement laws.

ELIJAH S. McDOWELL,
GEORGE O. DENNISON,
Executors.

19 3w

LAWNS.

252 pieces of new and choice styles Summer Lawns in side bands, figures, stripes and plain colors, 10 cents, 12½ cents and 15 cents per yard; also new Linen Lawns, Organdies, Jaconets, Momie Cloths, Foulards, Zephyr Ginghams, Seersucker Stripes, Scotch, Canton and Madras Ginghams. An elegant line to make early selections from.

ROOT & COMPANY.

MATTINGS.

This week new arrivals of China Mattings in fancy styles; white and check Mattings, all widths. Also Napier, cocoa and cane mattings for offices and public buildings in different grades at close prices. Also opening a new lot of Tapestry and Velvet Rugs and Matts, all sizes, in new and choice designs, at old prices.

ROOT & COMPANY.

BROCADE.

SILKS, in black and fancy colors. Rich goods at very moderate prices. Also a large stock of Spring Silks, 50 cents, 60 cents and 75 cents per yard. Fancy Trimmings, Satins and Silks, in all colors and combinations, probably the largest collection in the state, at popular prices.

ROOT & COMPANY.

CREPES.

We keep a full line of Grout's and Courtauld's English Crepes, in all widths and grades, from 60 cents to $3 per yard, and can them on the or anyway to suit. Also Crepe and Love Veils, hat and arm Crepes. Our stock of Mourning Dress Goods is large and complete in all fabrics; also have full stock of Mourning Hankerchiefs, Gloves, Black Ruchings, etc.

ROOT & COMPANY.

WHITE

GOODS DEPARTMENT full and complete with stripe, check and plain Nainsooks, Victoria and India Mulls, Lace Stripe Piques, soft Cambrics, Terry Cloths, Swisses, white Welts, cord Piques. Also a large and choice stock of the new Swiss Trimmings and Hamburg Edgings in new designs.

ROOT & COMPANY, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

KIBLINGER & CO.

We are always busy behind the counters, in the ware-house, and on 1st, 2d and 3rd floors, selling Hardware, Nails, Doors, Sash, Glass, Paints and Oils by the wagon-load. Call on us when in want of anything in the Hardware line. We will sell you cheaper than the lowest. Thanks for past patronage.

KIBLINGER & CO.

The Auburn Fruit-House.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

Sugars Down.

Ligh Brown, 8 cents; Light yellow, 8 1-2 cents; Extra Yellow C, 9 cents; Coffee A 10 cents; Granulated, 11 cents.

Coffees Down.

Good Rio, 15 cents; Best Marraicabo, 20 cents; Fancy Rio, 22 cents.

South Carolina Rice, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; New Prunes, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; A No. 1 Fine Cut Tobacco, 40, cents; Extra Fine-Cut Tobacco, 50 cents; Plug Tobacco of all brands very cheap; Parlor Matches, 7c., or 4 for 25 cents; the very best Syrups, 70 cents; Splendid Teas at from 30 to 75 cents.

The new stock of Salt Fish will come in next week, and will be sold at the very Lowest Prices.

Crocks and Jars of any size at 7 cents a gallon.

Entrance on Seventh or Eighth Streets

Frank A. Hoff.

Notice of Administration.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THE undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Rudolph Lechler, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

S. S. SHUTT, Administrator,
19 3w Spencerville, Indiana.
April 28, 1880.

S. B. HARTMAN, D. D. S.

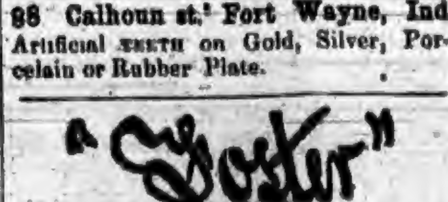
DENTIST,

88 Calhoun st. Fort Wayne, Ind

Artificial TEETH on Gold, Silver, Porcelain or Rubber Plate.

"Foster"

KID



GLOVES

([illegible])

FOR SALE BY

McQUISTON & RALSTON,

18 3w AUBURN, IND.

$100 Reward

For any case of

CATARRH

That cannot be cured with

HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an INTERNAL REMEDY ACTING UPON THE BLOOD, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of HALL'S CATARRH CURE is NOT CURED OR BENEFITED more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

PRICE 75 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

—MORTGAGES,
—WARRANTEE DEEDS,
—QUIT CLAIM DEEDS,
—GUARDIAN'S RECEIPTS, (bound),
—ADMINISTRATOR'S RECEIPTS (bound,)
—For sale in large or small quantities at the COURIER office. tf.

—Dr. Cowan takes in Fort Wayne to-day.

—What this weather most needs is a refrigerator.

—You may still call him Marshal Tom Scott.

—Wall paper cheap at Davenport's drug store. 14-tf.

—D. P. Hale and wife have returned from Cincinnati.

—Sam. Pommert has a new hat. All it needs is another hat.

—Boys' hats, THREE for 25 cents, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Silk mitts in all colors—something gay—at N. Ensley and Co's.

—A 46-piece set of dishes for $3.75 at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—The largest line of fancy goods in Auburn, at N. Ensley & Co's.

—Six-button kid gloves, and Josephine kid gloves at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Some young people from Angola and Waterloo will attend the dance to-night.

—One dozen one-gallon milk crocks for 85 cents, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—John Leasure's heart is broken. His girl is going away. Hence these sadness.

—Spring shawls, linen dresses and ladies' linen dusters at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Tom Somers buys mustard by the half barrel, all ready for use on ham sandwiches.

—Sick headaches incessantly distract many. Let such use "Sellers' Liver Pills." 25c. a box.

—The atmosphere is permeated with the smell of conventions and elections over the land. Pugh!

—It will pay you to see Davenport's patterns, before you purchase wall paper and window shades. 14-tf.

—R. Elson, the dentist, is painting and otherwise beautifying his neat little residence on Fifth street.

—The residence property of D. P. Hale, on west Seventh street, was sold this week to Frank A. Hoff.

—Look out for nice Millinery goods, next Saturday, in all the latest styles and shapes, at N. Ensley & Co's.

—Miss Sarah Weir, operator for the Wabash road at Churubusco, spent Sunday in this place, visiting friends.

—Fine croquet sets, eight balls and mallets, can be had at Willis & Co's book-store and news depot for $1.

—Ruchings, laces, lace ties, fichus, Lisle thread handkerchiefs, and kid gloves in all colors, at N. Ensley & Co's.

—Harry Yesbera rode the goat last week, while Fred. Clark followed suit this week, and now they are both Masons.

—"Honest John" is an earnest worker in the court-house yard. Rain or shine, he gets his work in "all the same."

—A large lot of one, two and three-button kid gloves at from 30 to 60 cents per pair, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Ed. Eldridge's sample room on the west side of the square has been fixed up in fine style. Go in and see for yourself.

He coughed! he coughed! His eyes ran; he looked redder in the face than a lobster. But "Sellers' Cough Syrup" cured him.

—Billy Rainier will make application at the next meeting of the commissioners for a renewal of his license, as per notice elsewhere.

—"Shad" Rhodenbaugh wears a royal crown upon which are emblazoned, in beautiful characters, the emblematic words, DRAY MAN.

—"Mama may I be your little May-Queen this May?" "Yes, dear May, you may." An a-Mays-ing conversation, wasn't it? Maybe.

—Don't buy your embroideries, trimming silks, fringes, beaded gimps and tassels, veilings, etc., till you go to McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Fort Wayne, true to her colors, gained a big democratic victory in her city election Tuesday. The democrats walked off with everything.

—Choice coffee at from 16 to 22 cents per pound. New Java coffee 25 cents per pound. Arbuckle's Ariosa roasted coffee, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Mrs. A. J. Little and Miss Lydia Hogue have gone east to purchase a large line of millinery and fancy goods. Look out for nice styles next Saturday.

—Mrs. Judge Lowry and little daughter Lottie, of Fort Wayne, mother and sister of the junior of the COURIER, are in town to-day, and will participate in the benefit hop to-night. While here they are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Copper.

—Mr. Isaac Bechtel, of Corunna, has traded his steam grist-mill at Corunna for the Eagle mill at Auburn, and will take possession of the latter next Monday.

—The largest assortment of dress goods, such as cashmeres, alpacas, bunting, brocades and cheap suitings in the city, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—The band practiced in the hall above the COURIER office Monday night. We know they were practicing by the music they made. No reference to allusions.

—If any person can find handsomer and cheaper wall-paper than that kept at the book and stationery store of Willis & Co., that firm would like to know it.

—Frank Leas is agent for the celebrated Bryan wheel-barrow, and if you want a good one—a real No. 1—he can fix you off in just two shakes of a sheep's tail.

—The water-tank which supplies dampness for the streets has been overhauled and repaired this week, and the sprinkling-wagon is again getting in some good work.

—Mr. J. C. Cramer called our attention to a fine colt raised by him, which was two years old on the 21st of last month, is 16 hands high and weighs 1,330 pounds. How's that?

—The largest stock of bleached and brown muslin, shirtings, cottonades, ticks, ducks, denims, towellings, table-linens, hats, etc., etc., in the city, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—Billy Little and Will. Ryan made a good team in the road scraping business last week. The chairs in front of Shaffer's furniture store struck them like an oasis in the desert.

—The Lutheran church at St. Joe, DeKalb county, will be dedicated next Sunday, May 9. Neighboring ministers and the public generally are invited to attend the feast of dedication.

—The Presbyterian social will be entertained in the basement rooms of the church next Wednesday afternoon. Refreshments served at the usual hour.

MRS. J. E. ROSE, Sec'y.

—Do you want a carpet this spring? If you do, go to McQuiston & Ralston's at once. They have already closed out several pieces. Those who go early will get the bargains. 17-3w

—The ladies of the Presbyterian church will soon give a good old-fashioned strawberry festival, for the benefit of the church. It will take place as soon as the luscious fruit can be obtained.

—A column of our space this week is devoted to the Fort Wayne Fruit House. You are heedless of your interests if you fail to read it and learn the wonderful prices of goods at that establishment.

—Os. Allen was last week engaged in whitewashing the inside of the livery barn, and it was hard to tell where he put the most whitewash—on himself or on the barn. However, he did a pretty good job on both.

—The hitherto unoccupied brick building on the south side of the square is now packed full of new buggies and harness, the property of Obe Cool and Hank Mader. They are disposing of them like hot cakes.

—After a pleasant visit of some two weeks in this place, the guest of Miss Louie Henry, Miss Lucy Weightman left last Tuesday for Millersburg, Ohio, her past home. She expects soon to make her home in California.

—Four pairs of cotton socks for 25 cents; two pairs heavy seamless cotton socks for 25 cents; children's hose from 10 to 50 cents per pair. The best 10-cent white cotton stockings in the market, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 17-3w

—They are talking of building a union depot at Fort Wayne. It surely has railroads enough to justify such a step, and there is no city that needs one more, or has a better place to erect a union depot, than Fort Wayne.

—Mrs. A. J. Little left yesterday for Toledo to attend the summer openings of millinery. She will return Saturday with a full line of goods, and we would advise those wanting anything in her line to call on her before purchasing.

—Lost, Wednesday of last week, between the residence of M. M. Douglas and the postoffice, a gold necklace with gold cross attached. Any person finding the same will be rewarded by returning it to Mrs. L. H. Roether, Main street, Auburn, Ind.

—Miss Belle Tritch, a very popular young lady who has been teaching for some time past in our public schools, left for her home in Findlay, Ohio, last Wednesday. She is undecided as to when she may return, if at all, but her friends will be anxious to extend a welcome at any time.

—All persons in need of wall-paper and window-shades are respectfully invited to call and examine the fine stock on exhibition at the Physicians' drug-store. The styles are the latest, the quality of the best, and the prices cheap as the cheapest. It will pay you to go and see for yourself.

—The corporation election at Waterloo, last Monday, resulted as follows: For trustee, 1st ward, Marion Howard; 2nd ward, Peter Fisher; 3rd ward, John W. Patterson; 4th ward, Jacob G. Brown; 5th ward, Frank N. Beidler. Treasurer, John A. Shull; clerk, John M. Somers; marshal, Jacob B. Hoover.

—D. D. Moody procured a bucket of paint Tuesday evening, with which to color up some flower trellises, and carried it up home; but he had to make another trip down town to find out whether the paint was green or blue. It proved to be sky green.

—Dave Hampton, two four-rod fish poles, Jim Potter, one dipnet, George Grund, a four-gallon can of fish-worms, Will Shaffer and a great big ham-sandwich started early yesterday morning for Pleasant Lake, on a fishing excursion. They got home at midnight with two bull-heads about the size of a shingle nail.

—The closing foot-shaking of the Neoteric club, for the benefit of Edgerly's orchestra, occurs to-night at Ensley's hall. Every effort has been made to render this one of the most enjoyable hops of the season, and all who are fond of "the mazy" should be there. A number from abroad will be present to enjoy it.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Beers, of Chicago, who have spent some time past in Auburn, guests at the Swinefor house, leave to-day for Angola, where Mr. Beers will deliver the maps of Steuben county recently published. Mr. Beers is a quiet, affable gentleman, while his wife is a pleasant and unassuming lady, and they will make friends wherever they go.

—Conundrum: If two men of equal popularity were to build stores exactly alike, side by side and filled with the same stock of goods, only differing in that one building was so constructed that it required two steps in front, while the other was level with the sidewalk, which man would sell the most goods and what would be the difference in the annual sales? For a satisfactory (*) solution of this difficult problem apply to Frank Davenport. He knows.

—Hank Mader sold a little sorrel horse last Friday, in payment for which he got a great big new hundred-dollar William. (We say William because we're not familiar enough with them to call it Bill). But read on: Hank felt so tickled over it that he went straightway and—set 'em up? no, guess again; he was so supremely happy that he immediately went to work and—got married. It took place Saturday last, and the lady's name was Miss Lillis Adele Thomas. And now all the boys want to smoke.

—The M. E. society met in the lecture room of the church, Tuesday, April 27, for the purpose of electing officers for the present year. They are as follows: Mrs. C. Raut, president; Mrs. J. Anderson, secretary; Mrs. W. H. Kiblinger, treasurer. Six vice-presidents were elected to preside over the following sections, or to assist the president in such ways as may be necessary: For section 1, Mrs. J. Weaver; for section 2, Mrs. M. Houston; for section 3, Mrs. J. Gilliland; for section 4, Mrs. J. Potter; for section 5, Mrs. Houghton; and for section 6, Mrs. Grosh. Meeting then closed in due form.

MRS. J. ANDERSON, Sec'y.

—The closing exercises of the public schools, which took place in Ensley hall Friday evening last, were heartily enjoyed by the largest crowd of Auburn people that Ensley hall has contained for lo, these many months. The programme, as published in last week's COURIER, was carried out to the letter, and the repeated and enthusiastic encores gave every evidence that could be desired as to how the performance was received by the audience. Where all did so well, it is useless to particularize, and much credit is due Miss Lida Powers and her efficient corps of teachers for the thoroughness and excellence of the rhetorical portion of their school work for the past year, as was fully demonstrated by the entertainment of Friday evening.

CEDAR CREEK SABBATH SCHOOL.

A number of the people of this district and vicinity met at the school-house last Sunday at 3 p. m., and organized a Sunday-school. The following named persons were chosen as officers: J. H. Rowland, superintendent; S. P. Jones, assistant superintendent; Cory Shugars, secretary; John Shugars, treasurer; Mrs. Emma Swisher, chorister; Miss Laura Swisher, assistant chorister; Milton Swisher and Miss Delila Waters, librarians.

CORY SHUGARS, Sec'y.

An Official Document.

COUNTY RECORDER'S OFFICE,
Indianapolis, Aug. 12, 1879.

DR. A. R. WHITE—Dear Sir: After using various remedies for Chills without relief, I commenced the use of your Dandelion Alterative, and one bottle effected a cure. I can cheerfully recommend this as an excellent medicine, and worthy the confidence of the public.

Yours truly, WM. N. DUNNINGTON.

For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug store. 19-2w

A Card.

Miss Lydia Hogue, who controls the millinery and fancy-goods department of the Auburn Millinery and Fancy Store, has gone east to purchase a large and complete line of millinery and fancy goods, all of which will be the latest styles to date. Ladies should hold their orders until Miss Hogue returns, when she will show them the largest line of ladies' hats ever brought to Auburn, and at lower prices than ever. Don't spend your money abroad, but spend it at home, where it will do you all good. Remember the place—east of the public square, Auburn, Indiana.

A Sneaking Trick.

About as mean an act as one man can do another, in the way of business transactions, is to make a contract for the performance of certain work and then abandon it when it is but half completed. If a man doesn't know how to estimate his work so that he can fulfill his contracts to the letter, he should shut up shop and hire himself out to somebody else.

Last Saturday evening, at about four o'clock, the man who had contracted to do the masonry work on Kiblinger's new building, Thomas Edwards by name, quit work and stole away from town that night, leaving several parties to mourn his departure. Shortly before skipping out he drew fifty dollars from Mr. Kiblinger for the ostensible purpose of paying his workmen, but he pushed it down in his breeches pocket and slid away in the night, wholly ignoring the claims of his bricklayers and the proprietor of the hotel at which he took his rations. Fortunately, however, but little delay has been occasioned, as the wall was finished up to the second floor and was ready for the carpenters to put in the joice, so that the brick work would necessarily have been suspended a day or so, anyway. The contract has been re-let to responsible parties, who arrive to-day, and the job will be pushed ahead without interruption. Edwards lives at Millersburg, this state, and is evidently a "snide" of the first water. Hence, we give him this notice gratis and call the attention of others to his little eccentricities.

Not Exactly.

Some two weeks since, or thereabouts, a soliciting circular was issued by B. J. Lowrey, of the Republican, "in the interest of G. W. Weamer," editor of the DeKalb County Republican, a paper published here in Auburn—if convenient—every Thursday. These circulars, begging a dollar-and-a-half subscription from all who were not too busy to read them, were sown broadcast over the country, since which time numerous inquiries have reached us as to whether or not "Lowry of the COURIER" was the man whose name was attached to these invitations to invest in the above-mentioned news-rag. Great heavens, no! Though we recognize the striking similarity in the names—one being B. J. L-o-w-r-e-y and the other R. J. L-o-w-r-y—and while we do not feel particularly grieved at having been mistaken for Mr. Lowrey, who is a very pleasant young gentleman, still, it makes us sick at the stomach—very sick—to think of having been suspected of the authorship of such a circular and of being associated with such a paper. Our interests are all centered in the COURIER, for which we have never yet been compelled to issue invitations in order to obtain patronage or add to our increasing subscription list, which is now, as it will continue to be, much larger than that of any paper in the county.

We don't know what we have done that we should be charged with complicity in the publication of the Republican; but we will forgive those who have thus accused us, on condition that they will "take it all back" and hereafter book us as

ROB. J. LOWRY,
Of the COURIER.

Auburn Schools.

Pupils neither absent nor tardy during the month ending April 30:

HIGH SCHOOL.

Flora Hoffman,
Clara Stamets,
James Funk,
Sadie Tarney,
Ida Swihart,
Cory Shugars.

A AND B INTERMEDIATE.

Missie Michael,
Bertha Hale,
John Zimmerman.

LOU. DANIELS, Teacher.

C AND D INTERMEDIATE.

Nannie Peterson,
Alda Shaffer,
Hortie Culberson,
Willie Culberson,
Anna Mead,
Josie Ashely,
Lena Cloy,
George Clark.

LAURA CLARK, Teacher.

A AND B PRIMARY.

Dora Jones,
Frank Davenport,
Mable Hartman,
Ida Miles,
Blanche Peterson,
Maggie Snyder,
Jennie Jones.

LILLIE MCTIGHE, Teacher.

B AND C PRIMARY.

Blanche Long,
Lucy Otto,
Edna Davis,
Eva Ensley,
Laura Ober,
Lillie Grosh,
Stella Hague,
John Clark,
Frankie Baker,
Alda Barkley,
Ella Gregg,
Nora Robbins,
Libbie Hale,
Viola Prosser,
Katie Berg
Eddie Mason,
Zenith Stamets,
Eddie Robbins,
Charlie Rainier.

FRANC STAHL, Teacher.

D PRIMARY.

Freddie Ashley,
Charlie Mason,
Bobbie Showers,
Mary Fretz.
Laura Houghton.
Stella Jones,
Jessie Peterson,
Wesley Lanham,
Calvin Smith,
George Wolf,
Reba Houser,
Clara Hoffman,
Clara Otto,
Sadie Showers,
Owa Treesh.

BELLE TRITCH, Teacher.

Pupils neither absent nor tardy during the year: Flora Hoffman, Sadie Tarney, John Zimmerman, Blanche Peterson and Eva Ensley. Flora Hoffman has been neither absent nor tardy for three consecutive years.

LIDA A. POWERS, Sup't.

Over 1,300 Cases of Fits Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind.

Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-tf.

Address.

EDS. COURIER: Please add to the list of committee on music at the old settlers meeting to be held May 27th, the following names: A. C. Jackman, of Waterloo; Dr. Bulan and Mrs. Maggie Dills, of Butler. In the haste of making up the committees the above selections were left blank to be filled afterward. Yours, W. H. DILLS, Sec'y.

Important to Soldiers.

Soldiers intending to apply for a pension must do so before July next in order to secure the back pension. Mr. Frank J. Darling representing the firm of Milo B. Stevens & Co. pension attorneys, Cleveland, Ohio, and Chicago, Ill., will be in Auburn Ind. Thursday May 20, 1880, to prepare the claims of any who deem themselves entitled.

He will also attend to increase pension and bounty cases. Information as to Mr. Darling's whereabouts during his stay in the city can be obtained at the office of the county clerk.

For the benefit of all sufferers, be good enough to bring the wonderful effect of ST. JACOBS OIL before the public. For twelve long years my wife suffered with Neuralgia in the head, and often had the most terrible pains. A few weeks ago I bought a bottle of that wonderful remedy—ST. JACOBS OIL—and perfectly astonished at the marvellous effect; half a bottle thoroughly cured my wife. I gladly would have paid any physician fifty dollars if he could have done the same; therefore I wish that everybody may learn to value this true medicine.

Christian Hauni, Youngstown Ohio.

We have just received the first number of THE WESTERN NORMAL EDUCATOR, published at Ladoga, Indiana. It is one of the handsomest school journals we ever saw. The mechanical part is faultless. Its editor, Mr. T. W. Fields, has a wide reputation as a teacher and writer. He has been extensively engaged in teaching in all grades of schools, and, also, has had large experience in journalism. He understands the wants of teachers, and has the faculty of supplying the want. He has engaged some of the best contributors in the United States to aid him. Prof. T. W. Giffe will conduct a musical department. The EDUCATOR will contain portraits and sketches of prominent teachers. Every teacher should subscribe at once. Price $1.00 a year. Send 10 cents for a sample copy. Address,

T. W. FIELDS, Ladoga, Ind.

A House to Rent or Sell,

Containing five rooms. There is a good well and cistern on the premises, and also some small fruit.

17-3 w. W. H. MCQUISTON

Announcement.

The name of O. W. Rummel is announced as a candidate for recorder, to await the action of the republican convention of June 19, 1880.

MANY CITIZENS.

This Spring!

We are making some extraordinary efforts to do about two-thirds of the

CLOTHING BUSINESS

of this city. Heretofore we have, probably, done one-half of it. With our increased facilities, and having bought largely before the advance, etc., our belief remains unchanged, and we shall act upon it, that the best time to sell cheap is when others sell dear; and that more fortunes have been made by selling at low than high prices. Call and see the most complete stock of

Men's Clothing,
Boy's Clothing,
Children's Clothing,
Hats and Caps,
Gents' Furnishing Goods

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.
C. O. D.

One-price clothiers and displayers of the best goods for the least money.

Opposite North Door Court House.

Application for License.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN TO THE CITIZENS of the town of Butler, Wilmington township, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county, at their next regular session to be held in the court-house in said county, on the 7th day of June, 1880, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, with the privilege of permitting the same drank on the premises where sold. The premises on which I wish to sell are located on the southwest corner of lot number four (4), in Danforth's addition to the town of Butler, DeKalb county, Indiana.

ISAAC HIRSCHLER.

Application for License.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN TO THE CITIZENS of the town of Butler, Wilmington township, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county at their next regular session, to be held at the court-house in said county, commencing on Monday the 7th day of June, 1880, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in less quantities than a quart at a time, with the privilege of having the same drank on the premises where sold. The premises on which I desire to sell are located on the north two-thirds of lot number one (1) in Norris' addition to the town of Butler, DeKalb county, Indiana.

NICHOLAS F. GENSNAGLE.

Application for License.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county, at their next regular session, to be held in the court-house in said county on the 7th day of June, 1880, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, with the privilege of permitting the same to be drank on the premises where sold. The premises on which I desire to sell are located as follows: Commencing at a point eighteen (18) feet west of the northeast corner of lot number ninety-five (95), in the original plat of Auburn, said county, and running thence south to the south line of said lot, thence west twenty-two (22) feet, thence north to the north line of said lot, thence east to the place of beginning.

WILLIAM RAINIER.

A MEDLEY OF MERIT.

A FINE DRESS SUIT.

Black Cloth Frock Coat	$10.00
Black Doeskin Pants	5.00
Black Cloth Vest	2.50

PANTS.

Men's Fine Rock or Harris	$5.00
Men's All-Wool	3.00
Boys' Very Durable	2.00

BOYS' SUITS.

Excellent Quality	$10.00
Strong and Durable	5.00

SAM, PETE & MAX,
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

EXAMINE OUR NOVELTIES FOR SPRING.

New Hat Man!

Hats
and Caps.

New Hat Man!

C. H. YESBERA,
Auburn, Indiana.

THEIR GRAVES.

BY CARRIE V. SHAW.

They lie together in the shade,
These graves of mine,
Just where the light from sun or moon
Will never shine;
Among the silent shadows there
A somber line.

You ask who lie within these graves?
My summer friends—
The friends who fade and fall away
When summer ends;
The friends whose warmth is but the glow
That summer lends.

With my own hands I made their graves.
I could not bear
That other eyes should see my dead
So falsely fair.
I laid the cypress on their hearts
And left them there.

And that was all. With sobbing heart,
Tears falling fast,
On the dead friends that I had loved
I looked my last,
And buried them together with
A murdered past.

They could not stand the change that comes
When summer wanes,
They could not bear the chill that comes
With autumn rains,
But fell like the dead leaves that fall
In woodland lanes.

And so I shut them from my life,
For they were dead—
As dead to me as though they slept
On earth's cold bed,
As though the red leaves drifted deep
O'er feet and head.

know you tell me, these lost friends
I loved so dear
Will come again, when summer and
The birds appear.
How can they come when I have laid
Them, buried, here?

Phantoms may come, with faces like
My cherished dead;
But they can only bring a sense
Of loss and dread—
Never again can they be more
Than I have said.

I would not wish to see them now
Nor hear a sound
From their false lips that might revive
The old, sad wound.
In friendship's cemetery they
Have each a mound.

And yet the old, old sickening sense
Of pain and loss
Will come, and lonely eyes will gaze
The gulf across,
As if to seek some signal there
That they might cross.

But, if there is a pitying God,
I trust that He
Will keep them always from my sight—
So far from me
That, should I yearn for them in death,
They might not see.

But, should they think of me, when death
Is drawing nigh—
Should call for me with faltering breath
And dimming eye,
Think you that all earth's kingdoms could Prevent reply?

—Chicago Ledger.

THE HERMIT

Away up on the main range—the Sierra Madre—of the Rocky mountains, 12,000 feet above the sea, rests a little mining camp of some twenty or twenty-five rough log cabins—right on the edge of timber line. North, south, east and west huge peaks tower in their massive grandeur and rear their stony heads to the rising and setting sun, and seem like grim old sentinels keeping watch over the little basin in which are the cabins, collectively known as Mineral City. The mountain sides are seamed and ribbed with the rich silver veins of San Juan, and scores of cuts, shafts and tunnels echo daily to the clang of drill and sledge as the hardy miners delve after the metallic treasures of these great store-houses.

Near the blacksmith shop, where the not unmelodious ring of drills and picks being sharpened is heard all the day and far into the night, a little cabin stands unobtrusive upon its rocky foundation. There is an air of neatness about its hipped roof of nicely split "shakes" and its carefully-hewn door that speaks well for the patience, taste and skill of its builder. In fact, the cabin is pointed out as a fine specimen of frontier architecture.

The solitary owner and occupant of this little building was known throughout the camp as "the Hermit." Not, be it understood, because of his imitating those poor old beings of ancient story who dwelt in caves and fled at the approach of any one, but simply because he was a taciturn, quiet old fellow, who worked his mine alone, and, when joining the rest of the men about the fire in the saloon, always sought a corner and rarely, if ever, took part in the conversation.

He was vastly different from the rest of his fellow laborers. He never drank; he never swore; but, in his quiet, unobtrusive way, would sit and gaze intently at the fire, unmindful of the stories, the hearty laughter, the social drinking and the absorbing games of cards going on around him. Tall he was, with a decided stoop in his shoulders; a long beard, plentifully streaked with gray, and a pair of wearied, restless, nervous, yearning eyes, that somehow appealed to the rough but good-hearted miners.

Mail came twice a week in Mineral City, and the saloon was the postoffice. Regularly upon the carrier's arrival the Hermit would join the crowd and listen with an eager, expectant air as the superscriptions of the various letters were read out by the saloon-keeper, and then, when the last missive had been reached and either claimed or set aside, he would lower his head and slowly slip away to his seat at the corner of the fire-place, with never a word. Every mail that went out carried a letter from the Hermit, always directed to the same party, and every month he registered one to the same address, which the boys shrewdly guessed contained such money as the poor fellow was able to scrape together from the scanty yield of his mine—the Alice.

The boys had often debated upon writing a letter to the Hermit, for his continual expectation and his regularly bitter disappointment touched them, but they argued that it would not be what he wanted, and so the idea was abandoned. Several of them asked the Postmaster to lay aside their letters without reading aloud their addresses, that the contrast might not be so painful to the Hermit, and none of them gave vent to any joyful exclamations when the mail brought them favors, as was their wont. The old whisky keg, at the corner of the fireplace, was always reserved for the Hermit, and, come when he might, he never found it occupied, nor, when sitting there, was he ever crowded. And so these rough frontiersmen showed in various ways their sympathy for their lonely and silent companion, of whom they knew nothing save what his pinched, careworn face and yearning eyes told.

One day the mail came in and the Hermit was not there. This was so unusual that it led to considerable speculation among the boys. Then Roney, whose lead lay near the Alice, remembered that the Hermit had not been to work that day or the day before, and when night came on and the keg in the corner remained unoccupied the boys concluded that investigation was necessary.

"Pards, I reckon the Hermit may be a little off and might kinder need help," said Georgia, "an' it sorter strikes me we might call in an' see."

As this met the approval of all the men, Georgia and Roney started up to the Hermit's little cabin. A dim light crept around the edges of the old flour sack that acted as a curtain for the little square pane of glass constituting a window, and, after consultation, the two messengers concluded to take a peep before making their presence known.

Georgia put his face to the glass and peered intently within. The Hermit sat on the earthen floor enveloped in a torn and miserable blanket. His hat was off, and his long, gray hair was tangled and unkempt. His eyes, which Georgia could plainly see, as he sat nearly facing the window, combined with their usual pleading expression a sort of feverish glitter, and the whole attitude of the man was one of despair. In his hands he held what appeared to be a photograph and an old letter, and he never moved his eyes from them.

The rest of the room that came within Georgia's field of vision betokened cleanliness, but at the same time extreme poverty for even that rough country. Georgia withdrew his head, and his companion took a look, after which they both softly retreated some little distance into the timber and paused.

"Well?" said Roney.

"Durned queer," said Georgia.

"Kinder sick looking, eh?"

Georgia nodded his head thoughtfully.

"Let's see the boys about it," said Roney, and then they both retraced their steps to the saloon.

The boys listened with interest to the report, and pulled their beards and scratched their heads in attempts to obtain a solution as to what ailed the Hermit. Many and various were the explanations given, and then they decided that Georgia and Roney had better go back and knock at the door and inquire, at any rate, if anything was wrong; so, thereupon the two once more started up the trail. They knocked—first softly and then louder—but elicited no response or caused any show of life within, save the extinguishment immediately of the light.

"No use," whispered Roney, and, without further word, they left the little cabin and its solitary and eccentric occupant, and joined their comrades.

The next day passed, and the next, and the Hermit gave no signs of existence. That evening the mail came in and among the letters was one, in a woman's hand, for John Harmer, Mineral City, San Juan county, Colorado. There was not such a personage in the county, so far as the boys knew, but Georgia suddenly suggested that it might be for the Hermit. This seemed most probable, and he was deputed to carry it up and deliver it, if correct.

As before, all the knocking failed to obtain an answer, and Georgia, after a moment's hesitation, put his shoulder to the door and with as little noise as possible burst the wooden button off that served as a lock. The next instant and Georgia was in the room. The Hermit lay extended upon the floor, his face flushed and hot with fever, and his long, thin fingers nervously grasping and relaxing again the torn blanket on which he tossed.

"What's the matter, old pard?" said Georgia, as he raised the old man's head.

The fevered eyes slowly turned toward his face, the emaciated fingers opened, and the poor, lonely old fellow said huskily:

"Don't tell her!"

"Who—tell who?"

"Alice—poor little thing—she don't know."

"Thinking of his folks in the States," muttered Georgia, and then tenderly and carefully he lifted the sick man in his arms and strode away to his own cabin.

The news of the Hermit's sickness spread through the camp, and blankets and food came from all quarters for his use. The store was ransacked for the best that it could afford. A terrible slaughtering of mountain grouse took place that rich broths might be made for the invalid. One man traveled sixteen miles to Silverton to secure a can of peaches, and the men almost fought in their anxiety to act as nurses and watchers. Georgia thanked the boys, but kept them away, admitting only one or two to aid him in the care of the old man. But despite all this attention the old fellow sank and sank, and it soon became evident that the mountain fever had one more victim.

One night Georgia sat smoking his pipe and musing. The owner of the letter had been found, for in his ravings the old man had often mentioned the name Harmer, but the boys feared lest he should die before reading it, and this perplexed Georgia sadly. What was he to do with it, and might it not contain matters of importance? Had the old man any friends or relatives living, and where were they to be found? All things and many more came flitting through his brain; and he did not hear his patient slowly raise himself in bed and stare about him. The old man looked the room over, and then his eyes rested on the burly form by the fire,

"Georgia," he said.

reIn an instant Georgia sprung to his feet and hastened to the bedside.

"Why, pardner, dern it—yer—yer getting better, ain't you?"

The old man smiled wearily.

"Tell me all about it," he said.

Georgia briefly recounted the story of his illness, touching but lightly on what he had done and laying great stress on the interest of the men.

"But, now, old man, you'll soon be up and among 'em," he concluded, with a cheerful laugh.

"No," said the old fellow, with the same weary smile, "but—but I thank you."

"Oh, nonsense—that's all right—you're only a leetle shook up, you know—it's nateral after being as fur down as you've been. You'll soon be all right—cheer up, and don't let your sand run out; besides, I've got a letter for you."

"Letter—for me?" and the old man's face lighted up with an eagerness that sent a tremor through Georgia's honest heart, lest the missive, after all, should not be for him. He got it, however, and gave it into the trembling hands.

"Yes, yes," said the old fellow, "it's her writing, I know—like her mother's—oh, how long it has been coming—but now—" and his poor weak, shaking hands vainly strove to open it.

"Let me," said Georgia, kindly.

The old man let him take the letter, and then said suddenly, but in a low, even tone: "Hole on, Georgia."

Georgia paused.

"Georgia," said the old fellow, looking him steadily in the eye, "you've been kind to me—very kind—and I've got nothing to show for it—nothing but confidence. I'm going to tell you something, Georgia, and then—then you can read the letter and you'll understand all the good news it contains."

He paused a moment and closed his eyes. Then he continued.

"Georgia, I was a likely sort of young chap years ago—not such a good-for-nothing galoot as I am now, and I married, Georgia—married the best girl in old Pennsylvania. I was mighty happy—too happy, partner—that's what made it go so hard when she died. We had one child—a girl—and we called her Alice—my wife's name. She was a wee little thing when her mother died and so very, very pretty. It was hard lines on me, Georgia, and somehow I got to drinking. I know it did me no good and I know it wasn't right, but a man don't reason much when he's desperate like, and so I drank and drank. I sold out everything and put my girl—my little Alice—with my wife's brother. He had a family of his own, and what could a lonely, broken-hearted man like me do for a dear little girl? Georgia, if they'd come to me and talked good and gentle they could have made a man of me, but they didn't. They wouldn't let me come into their house, and they said that I'd killed my wife by drinking. Georgia, it was a lie—a damnable lie. I never drank a drop till she died, and I wouldn't have done it then if I'd anyone to sympathise with me. But I hadn't; I was alone in the world—alone with my great grief, and—" and the old man's voice broke, and his poor thin hands went nervously over the blanket, while two tears stole from his hot eyes, and, trickling down the pale, pinched cheeks, lost themselves in the gray hairs of his beard.

"Well, Georgia," he said presently, "they got an order from the court giving the guardianship of my child—my Alice—to her uncle, because they said I was unfit to take care of her. Georgia, if but one kind word had been said—only one—I wouldn't have been the fool I was. Well, I left and went West. I stopped drinking. I have never touched a drop since Alice was taken from me. You believe me, Georgia?"

"Yes," said Georgia.

"After a while I wrote to her uncle, and I told him of my new life and asked him if I couldn't at least write to my little girl. That was in '67, and she was 10 years old. He took no notice of my letter——"

"He's a ——" broke in Georgia, but suddenly checked himself before concluding.

"Then I thought perhaps he hadn't got it, so I got my money together and went East. But he had, Georgia; he had. It was no use, though; he wouldn't believe in me, and wouldn't let me see my little girl. He said she should never know but what he was her father, at least until she was of age. I tried the courts, but I spent all my money without changing the decree. Then I gave it up and came back West again. I gained one thing, though. The Judge said that when Alice was 21 she should be offered the choice of coming to me, her father, or remaining with her guardian. I had to rest satisfied, and I have worked and worked to get money for my little girl. I scrimped some, Georgia, but there's nearly $12,000 in bank for her now," and the old man's voice and manner were full of pride.

"She was 21 last June, and I've been waiting for her letter. I knew it would come. Oh, Georgia, if she only knew how I have worked for her; how I have waited, all alone, but still working and waiting; but she has written now, and to-morrow, Georgia—to-morrow, or next day, I must start East. We will be very, very happy together, and—but read her letter—you know all now," and the lids closed over the fevered eyes, and the poor old man murmured, "little Alice, little Alice."

Georgia tore open the envelope and unfolded the letter, and the old man feebly drew nearer in joyful, happy eagerness.

> "My uncle," read Georgia, unsteadily, "has informed me of your relationship to me. I have only to say that I regret that the man whose habits killed my mother should also bear the title of my father. I sincerely hope that the Almighty will pardon where we cannot.
>
> ALICE HARMER."

Georgia turned toward the old man.

"My God," he said, "the Hermit is dead."

Lime in the Tea-Kettle.

Every good housewife knows that an iron kettle used for heating water, that holds lime in solution, will, in a short time, become coated with that substance. This being a poor conductor of heat, it will, of course, take a longer time to heat the water than when the kettle was new. Copper or tin vessels do not become coated with lime. The reason is that iron has an affinity for lime, which the other vessels have not. But this affinity can be overcome by coating the inner surface of the vessel with a compound of tannic acid and iron, which is insoluble in water and will not precipitate lime. This is easily done. Take a new tea-kettle and put a handful of oak bark into it, and keep it boiling for three or four hours, filling it up from time to time as the water boils away. The iron will get a jet-black coat of tannate of iron, and will be proof against lime. Care must be taken that the kettle does not boil [illegible] and become heated to redness. A [illegible] a little below that point will destroy the coating. If the lime can be fully removed from an old tea-kettle it can be coated in the same manner as a new one, but will require a longer time, and perhaps it will be necessary to repeat the boiling two or three times.

It is also said that one or two clam-shells kept in the tea-kettle will prevent the lime from forming on the sides.—Farm and Fireside.

LINCOLN'S ASSASSINATION.

Drawing a Pistol to Shoot Booth on the Morning of the Tragedy.

[Albany Letter to New York Sun.]

—A number of members of the Assembly were in Assemblyman Wren's parlor, a few evenings ago, and the conversation turned upon the law respecting the carrying of concealed weapons. Assemblymen Lindsay and Shanley, and others, expressed various opinions about the law, but Mr. Wren said nothing. He sat quietly smoking a brierwood pipe, and listening to all that his colleagues had to say. At length Mr. Lindsay asked him what he thought of the law, and whether it had done very much to prevent the carrying of concealed weapons in New York.

"Well, I've had my lesson," said Mr. Wren, "and it was one that taught me the danger of carrying weapons. I had my hand on my pistol to shoot John Wilkes Booth once, and I wish I had, for I drew on him on the morning of the very day that he assassinated Lincoln."

There was no further talk about concealed weapons. The Assemblymen were anxious to learn more of the incident that Mr. Wren referred to.

"Did you know Booth?" asked Mr. Lindsay.

"Intimately. I had acted with him a season in Richmond, and been on the Southern circuit several times with him. I have slept with Booth many and many a time, and there was no one of my friends that was better liked."

Mr. Wren, being urged to narrate the incident, began:

"When I had served my time in the army and got my discharge, I made an engagement with Mr. Grover, who then had one of the Washington theaters under lease. There were quite a number of my old friends in Washington, actors who were well known, at least to the profession. There was Jim McCullom, Sam Chester, John Jennings, Sam Verney, and others, and we used to meet socially every Sunday night. Sometimes Wilkes Booth would join us. He would frequently tell us, when we asked him where he'd been so long—for we would not see him around sometimes for days, and then he would suddenly appear—that he had been taking horseback rides. He used to argue with us on the merits of the Southern cause.

"On the afternoon that the Marine Band serenaded Lincoln when he returned from his visit to Richmond, Sam Verney, Jennings, and myself went to the White House, and, on our return, went to the office of C. D. Hess, who was manager for Mr. Grover. We were going to hear a new play read. We were playing 'Aladdin' at Grover's, and Miss Effie Germon was leading lady. She was in Mr. Hess' office with the others, if I remember aright. At all events, Booth came in, and greatly interrupted us with his violent secession talk. I think this was on the Wednesday before the assassination. Booth asked Mr. Hess at that time, too, when President Lincoln was going to the theater to see 'Aladdin,' for the President had been invited to be present, and had promised to do so.

"The next day a number of us, after rehearsal, were standing in front of Grover's, and afterward we went into the lobby of the theater. As I now remember, there were Mr. O. H. Hess, Mr. Verney, Mr. Jennings, and one or two other gentlemen. Booth came sauntering in. My impression was that he had been drinking.

"He began at once to talk about the war. We didn't pay much attention to his wild talk, for we had heard very much of it, but he finally spoke of Lincoln by a very vulgar and profane term. That made me very angry.

"'John,' said I, 'what do you talk that way for? The war is over. Your side is beaten. What is the use of crying now? If you feel so bad, why didn't you go into the Southern army, as I did in the Northern? It don't look well to brag now, when you never shouldered a musket for your side.'

"'Perhaps I've done as much as you did for the cause, and can do more. Do you mean to say that I'm a coward?'

"'I didn't say so, John,' I replied, 'but I did say that you ought to have showed your courage before you talk as you do now.'

"At this he got very angry. 'You call me a coward, do you?' said he, and he drew his pistol at once.

"I was angry, too, and a good deal more foolish, being a hot-headed young fellow then of 27, but I also remembered that he had me at an advantage.

"'Hold on, John,' I cried, throwing up my hands, 'I am not fixed. If you fire now you will prove yourself a coward. Let me go home and get fixed, and we'll have this out—shoot on sight, if you say so.'

"I had just that melodramatic and foolish bluster, and was silly enough to be in earnest in what I said, for Booth, after looking at me a minute, put up his pistol and said, 'You want to be prepared the next time you see me;' and I went home and got my revolver, but didn't see Booth again that evening.

"The next morning, which was the day of the assassination, I went around to Ford's Theater to see Miss Laura Keene, and, passing down the front lobby, supposing a rehearsal was in progress, I saw H. Clay Ford and also Booth, who turned toward me and, as I supposed, made a movement to carry his threat into execution. I had on a light overcoat and my revolver in the pocket, and I put my hand on it prepared to shoot through the pocket at Booth, for I supposed it was going to be the best thing to get the first shot. Fortunately for me, perhaps unfortunately for the country, I waited an instant, and saw Booth extend his hand to me. He came up, saying, 'Won't you shake hands, George? I wasn't myself yesterday. Let bygones be bygones.' Of course that was the end of the trouble.

"That evening, while Miss Germon was singing 'Sherman has marched to the sea,' and I was standing in the wings ready to go on, C. D. Hess came rushing into the wings, and said to me, with a face like death, 'Lincoln has been shot in his box at Ford's.' I said at once, and I presume Mr. Hess will remember it, 'That —— John Booth did it.' I am sorry I was profane, but perhaps that will be pardoned. Jim McCullom, Sam Hall and I went up to Booth's father's farm, in Maryland, the next morning, looking for him, for we had heard him talk about some caves that were there. We went armed to the teeth, actor-like—here Mr. Wren smiled—and in a very histrionic manner. Of course we didn't find him. Afterward I went to the gunboat and saw Booth's body. It was the poor fellow, fast enough. I have been inclined of late years, as I have recalled his wild and unreasonable manner all that winter, to have charity enough for Booth to believe that his mind was deranged.

"From that day to this," continued Mr. Wren, as he refilled his pipe, "I have not carried weapons, though I used to wish I had shot Booth. If everybody had the experience I have had, there would be no need for any law on the matter."

A TOUGH STORY.

Old Jerry Greening's Big Bear.

"Ever heerd 'bout the scrimmage me and Case had with a b'ar over 'long Rattlesnake creek?" asked old Jerry Greening, as he piled the logs on the fire in his cozy little cabin near this village.

Jerry is one of the best hunters in Pike county, Pa., and his reminiscences are peculiarly interesting.

"I'll tell ye all 'bout it 'fore Case—ye know my son Case, don't ye?—comes in. Wall, me an' Case an that 'ere ole yaller houn' of mine—he's 17 year old this comin' spring—we started out arter a bee tree. Wall, we was a walkin' 'long kinder quiet like, when all to a suddent that cussed houn' of mine give the all-firedest yell ever I heerd, an outen the brush an' scrub oaks came a tremenjus black b'ar. I'll be hanged if that b'ar wasn't ten foot long. Wall, the b'ar stood still in the path, an' looked at me an' Case, an' Case an' me stood still an' looked at the b'ar, an' I'll be gosh hanged if 'twasn't so comical I just sot down on the groun' an' laffed. Then Case he got up on his ear 'cos we didn't have no gun nor nothin' with us, 'ceptin' a nax, an' so he yells to me:

"'Reckon ye'd better git up a tree, 'nless ye want ter git chawed into mince meat,' sez he.

"Jest about thet time Mr. B'ar made fur Case, an' I shinned up a tree.

"Wall, Case he went fur the b'ar with the ax, an' all of a suddent the ole concern flew offen the handle; so Case he started fur ter climb a tree as the b'ar come fur him. Wall, sir, to see Case a climbin' that ar' tree with that b'ar after 'im was more'n I could stan', so I jest bust out laffin' agin. Then Case he got red-hot mad, an' the way he slung the profan'ty roun' were a caution. Jest about the time he begin a callin' me all sort er names, that b'ar reached one of his paws up an' pulled off one of Case's butes. He slid down the tree with the bute, and when he tetched the groun' he struck that ar' bute jest like that 17-year-old dog of mine wud a rat. But the bute didn't seem to satisfy him, so he clim the tree agin. Case saw him a comin', so he yells out, 'I'm a goner, dad!' I sez, 'Hold the fort, an' give him t'other bute.' Jest then Case sez, 'I'll fix the ole cuss.'

"Wall, sir, that b'ar clim a'most to where Case were a-settin', when all at once't I see Case makin' some motions with his fingers. Sez I, 'Be you a-fixin' him?' Sez he, 'I be.' Jest then the ole devil gave a ter'ble roar an' let go the tree. I s'pose you'll hardly b'lieve it, but gosh hang me if that b'ar didn't turn a summerset in the air an' light on his head. Yes, sir, it's a solem' fac' thet thet b'ar fell on hiz head so hard thet he broke hiz neck. The whole thing were so cussed com'cal thet I got a-laffin' an' fell clean off the limb I was straddlin' and nearly broke my neck. When Case come down outen the tree, sez I, 'What made the b'ar tumble?' He looks at me a minnit, an' then pulls out a pepper-box. Wall, sir, that ar boy—I allers calls him boy, though he's 38 year ole comin' hayin'-time—had stole the ole woman's pepper-box, just to tant'lize her, an' thet's what saved his life. He sprinkled the pepper in the b'ar's eyes, an' nearly drove him frantic, so he dropped. But the strangest part of the story is the dog. When me an' Case went back after the b'ar with a hoss an' wagon, I'll be blasted if we didn't fin' that ole yaller houn' up 'nother tree, yellin' like sin. Truth, sir, truth. Yes, sir, that ar' dog he'd been so scart that he just clim that tree 'thout thinkin'. Mebbe you think I'm lyin' when I say that b'ar weighed 550 poun'. But it's the truth, sir. I never lied yet, an' I'm gettin' too ole to learn, fur I'm nigh 70 years ole."

Floating Island.

Among the many natural curiosities of Tuolumne county it is not generally known that there is a "floating island." Up in the "Siskiyous," lying like a pearl in the great mountain chain, is Squaw lake, a beautiful sheet of water, now utilized by a mining company as a reservoir. For many years the lake has been a favorite and delightful resort for fishing parties, and contained nearly in its center an island, comprising about an acre of ground, covered with luxuriant grass and a growth of willow and alder. It was never dreamed that the pretty little island was not terra firma, but when the bulkhead across the outlet of the lake dammed up its waters the island rose slowly until it had been elevated fully sixteen feet above its original level. It would be a question for the naturalist rather than the geologist to determine the age of this floating island, as it is evidently made up entirely of decayed vegetation. Perhaps at some remote period the roots of a tree, uptorn by the mountain storm, drifting out in the lake, formed the nucleus from which the island has grown, but it seems singular that it should have remained anchored and unchangeable in its position. The locality is much frequented by pleasure-seekers, who will hereafter notice the increased elevation.—Jacksonville (Ore.) Sentinel.

Glucose Manufacture.

There appears to be quite a furor in the West in connection with the manufacture of glucose from corn. A large number of factories are being set up; one at Chicago, it is said, will have a capacity of 20,000 bushels a day. A bushel of corn produces 30 pounds of glucose (grape sugar) or 3 gallons of sirup. The sugar costs 2 cents a pound, the corn selling at 40 cents a bushel.—Scientific American.

THE HOSPITAL BELL.

BY ELI OMAL.

Over the Sisters' Hospital
Hangeth a silver bell
That to the city neighborhood
Time's flight doth hourly tell.
"Noonday or midnight, ye must die"—
Ringeth this solemn chime;
Matins or vespers, knelling ever,
For the parting souls and time.
Once, like a pall across the sun,
Came, with his fetid breath,
Fever, in yellow mantle wrapped,
And with him his brother, death.
Skeleton death and livid plague
Danced merrily among the slain;
Wildly the sick their skinny arms
Upraised and tossed in pain.
Never a cup cooled their burnt lips,
Never a prayer was said;
Grim pestilence not even spares
Those who bury the dead.
Less and more less the silver bell
Counted time's creeping pace,
As, one by one, the Sisters looked
Too close in death's unveiled face.
Many a week the bell was still;
Fever held revels then;
'Twas many days ere people came
To that desolate place again.
Over the Sisters' Hospital
Ringeth the silver bell;
But now its hourly chiming is
More than ever a knell.

—Chicago Ledger.

PITH AND POINT.

LIVERY horses belong to the hire class of animals.

WHEN a man gets tight, the devil generally gets loose.

HOW LONG does a widower mourn for his wife? For a second.

WHAT is better than a promising young man? A paying one.

PHYSIC, says an old surgeon, is the art of amusing the patient while nature cures the disease.

THE burglar-alarm is a great invention. It always warns the burglar in season for him to get out of the way before anybody can shoot.

"HOW SWEET the moonlight sleeps upon this bank," as the burglar remarked to his pal while they gazed at the institution they intended to rob the first dark night.

A CHESTER VALLEY (Pa.) young lady is the owner of several calla lilies, the roots of which were procured for her great-grandfather from the banks of the Nile.

"DON'T be afraid," said a snob to a German laborer, "sit down and make yourself my equal." "I vould haff to blow my prains out," was the reply of the Teuton.

"WE wish," says a Texas newspaper, "that a few of our citizens could be permitted to live till they die a natural death, so as to show the world what a magnificent healthy country Texas really is."

A BOSTON lawyer told another lawyer, who asked him a question, that he usually received pay for his advice. "Then," said lawyer No. 1, extending 50 cents, "tell me all you know, and give me back the change."

A LADY tells something which ought to have remained a secret with her sex. It is that a woman in choosing a lover considers a good deal more how the man will be regarded by other women than whether she loves him herself.

WHEN a man's wife comes in and sees him razor in hand and with his face all lather, and asks him: "Are you shaving?" it's a provoking thing in him to answer: "No, I'm blacking the stove," but it's human nature to so reply.—Boston Post.

SEASONABLE work: The farmer turns the furrow with a careless unconcern; and the farmess works the handle of the big, old-fashioned churn. Their son sorts out the 'taters for plantin' in the cellar, while their daughter on the back porch is talkin' to her feller.

"MEN should not allow their wives to split wood," says a contemporary. This is rather inconsiderate. How can a man refuse when his wife comes up with tears in her eyes and says, "Now do, dear, let me go down cellar and split wood for an hour to get up an appetite."

"YOU made a fool of me," said an irritated man to his wife, "and that's the way you got me to marry you." "My love," sweetly responded the wife, "you do yourself an injustice. Call yourself a fool, if you please, but remember that you are in all respects a self-made man."

AN Oil City gentleman who had traveled in Europe said he was at a dinner one day in Paris, and while telling a story was attacked with a sudden and continued fit of sneezing. When he ceased a Russian gentleman at another table, named Plitcheekee, turned around and complimented him on his correct pronunciation of the Russian language.

A NICE distinction—Housekeeper to milkman—"My friend, you put water in your milk." "Oh, no I don't, ma'am." "But I am sure you do." "Oh, no, ma'am." "Now will you say solemnly that you do not put water in your milk?" "Well, ma'am, well, I must say that sometimes I put some water in the can and then put the milk in that, but I never put water in the milk."

A CERTAIN painter was bragging of his wonderful command of color to a friend one day. His friend did not seem to take it quite all in. "Why," exclaimed the painter, "do you know that there are but three painters in the world, sir, who understand color?" "And who are they?" at last asked the friend. "Why sir, I am one, and—and—and—I forget the names of the other two!"

FALL POETRY.

A certain young woman named Hannah
Slipped down on a piece of banana;
She shrieked, and O my'd!
And more stars she spied
Than belonged to the star-spangled banner.
A gentleman sprang to assist her,
And picked up her muff and her wrister.
"Did you fall, ma'am, he cried.
"Do you think," she replied,
"I sat down for the fun of it, mister?"

EQUAL TO THE EMERGENCY.

Yes, doctor, if a baby gal
Should bless my wedded state,
I will not call her Poll or Sal;
No, nothing else but Kate.
My sainted aunt was called the same;
My love for it is great;
Yes, doctor, that must be her name—
She shall be christened Kate.
What! Twins? Good gracious, how they squall!
Doctor, bemoan my fate—
Both girls?—Well, well, I still can call
Them Kate and Dupli-Kate.

THE effect of dime literature on Charlie Hill, a lad, was to make him arm himself with a revolver, when he heard burglars enter the store in which he slept, at Independence, Mo., and drive them out of the building, carrying away nothing but wounds.

THE SLANDERED SOUTH.

Sectional Animosity Rebuked from the Pulpit—Republican Lies Laid Bare in Burning Language—Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

A few weeks ago, to meet engagements in nine of the Southern cities, and to catch a glimpse of the Southern springtime, and to see how that region is recuperating from the desolations of the war, I started south, equipped with a mind full of questions and hungry for information on all subjects, social political, moral and religious.

I started on the tour with no partisan predilections and no prejudices, and resolved to tell on my return what I saw, whether it might be generally approved or denounced by one or both sections. I had no political record to guard or defend, for my chief work in the ministry has been done since the war closed. My admiration for the Democratic party and the Republican party, as parties, is so small that it would take one of McAllister's most powerful magnifying glasses to discover anything of it. American politics are rotten, and that party steals the most which has the most chance. I had all the doors of information opened to me. I talked with high and low—Governors and water-carriers, clergymen and laymen, lawyers, doctors, editors and philanthropists, with the black and the white; old residents of the South and new settlers from the North—and I have found that there have been the most persistent and outrageous misrepresentations in regard to the South by correspondents of secular and religious journals, and by men who, overbearing and dishonest in their behavior at the South, have had intimation given to them that their company was not desirable. If a man go South and behave well, he will be treated well. There is no more need of vigorous governmental espionage in Atlanta, Augusta or Macon than there is in Boston or New York. The present disposition of the South has been so wrongly set forth that I propose now, so far as I am able, to correct the stereotyped slanders concerning it.

First, it has often been represented to us that the South were longing for the old system of negro slavery. So far from that being true, they are all glad to have got rid of it. The planters told me that they can cultivate their fields with less expense under the new system than the old. A gentleman who had 125 slaves before the war told me that the clothing and feeding of them, the taking care of the aged who could not work, and the provision for helpless colored children, was an expense and anxiety and exhaustion. Now the planters have nothing to do but pay the wages when they are due; the families look after their own invalids and minors. So they all say without one exception that I could find. If at the ballot-boxes of the Southern States, the question should now be submitted, "Shall negro slavery be reinstated?" all the wards, and all the cities, and all the counties, and all the States would give a thundering negative. They fought to keep it eighteen years ago, but now there is universal congratulation at its overthrow. Thank God that North and South at last are one on that subject. And this effort of our Northern politicians to keep the subject of slavery rolling on is as useless and inapt as to make the Dorr rebellion of Rhode Island or Aaron Burr's attempt at the overthrow of the United States Government the test of our fall elections. The whole subject of American slavery is dead and damned. I inquired everywhere, "How do the colored people work under the new plan?" The answer was, "Well, very well. We have no trouble. Just after the war there was the disorganization that naturally came of a new order of things, but now they work well. They work far better than Northern laborers that come here, because our colored people can better endure our climate, and on a warm summer's day at the nooning they will lie down in the field to enjoy the sun." My friends, all that talk about dragging rivers and lanes of the South to haul ashore black people, murdered and flung in, though seriously believed by many people at the North, is a falsehood too ridiculous to mention in a religious assembly. The white people of the South feel their dependence on the dark people for the cultivation of their lands, and the dark people feel their dependence on the white people for their wages. From what I have observed here at the North of the oppression of some of our female clerks in dry-goods stores, and the struggle of many of our young men on insufficient salaries, which they must take or get nothing at all, I give as my opinion that to-day there is more consideration and sympathy for colored labor at the South than there is consideration and sympathy for employes in some of the stores on Fulton avenue, Brooklyn, or Broadway, New York, Washington street, Boston, or Chestnut street, Philadelphia. All the world over there are tyranical employers, and for their maltreatment of subordinates, white or black, they are to be execrated; but the place for us to begin reformation is at home.

Another misrepresentation in regard to the South I cure when I say that they are not antagonistic to the settlement of Northern men within their borders. We have been told that Northerners going there are kukluxed, crowded out of social life, unrecognized, and in every way made uncomfortable. But the universal sentiment of the South, as I found it, was "Send down your Northern capitalists; send down your Northern farming machine; buy plantations; open stores; build cotton factories and rice mills. Come—come right away. Come by tens of thousands and millions." Of course they have no more liking for Northern fools or Northern braggarts than we have. A man that goes South and sets down his valise at the depot and goes upon the nearest plantation to say by word or manner to the planter, "I have come down here to show you ignorant people how to farm. We whipped you in the war, and now we propose to whip you in agriculture. I am from Boston, I am. That's the hub. You look very much like the man that I shot at South Mountain. I think it must have been your brother. I marched right through here in the Fourth Regiment of volunteers. I killed and quartered a heifer on your front stoop. What a poor miserable race of people you Southerners are. Didn't we give it to you? Ha, ha!" Such a man as that, to say the least, will not make a favorable impression upon the neighborhood where he comes to settle. He will not very soon get to be deacon in church, and if he opens a store he will not have many customers, and if he should happen to get a free and rapid ride on that part of a fence which is most easily removed, and should be set down without much reference to the desirability of the landing-place, you and I would not be Protestants. Any moral man who will go South and exercise just ordinary common sense will be welcomed, made at home, and, coming from Brooklyn, will be treated just as well as if he came from Mobile. I might give many illustrations—I give one. A member of this church moved to Charleston, S. C., seven or eight years ago. He went without fortune. By his mercantile assiduity he toiled on up. Was he well received? Judge for yourselves, as I tell you that when, a few days ago, his body was taken to the Episcopal church of which he had become a vestryman, for the obsequies, the members of the Board of Trade, the orphan children of the asylum of which he was a director, and a great throng of the best citizens, assembled amid a wealth of floral and musical tribute, all making an occasion, described by the Charleston Courier, as almost unparalleled at the obsequies of any private citizen.

This side of heaven, there is no more hospitable people than the people of the South. And now I bring a message from all the States of the South which I visited, inviting emigration thither. The South is to rival the West as an opening field for American enterprise. Horace Greeley's advice to go West is to have an addenda in "go South." The first avalanche of population thither will make their fortunes. It is a national absurdity that so much of the cotton of the South should be transported, at great expense, to the North to be tranformed into articles of use. The few factories at the South are the pioneers of the uncounted spindles which are yet to begin the hum of their grand march on the banks of the Savannah, the Appalachicola and the Tombigbee. There stands Georgia with its 58,000 square miles, and South Carolina with its 34,000 square miles, and Alabama with its 50,722 square miles, and North Carolina with 50,704 square miles, and the other States, none of them with more than 10 per cent. of their resources developed. When will the overcrowded populations of our great cities take the wings of the morning and fly to the regions where they shall have room to turn round and breathe, and expand and become masters of their own cornfields, or rice swamps, or cotton plantations, or timber forests? Land to be had there in the Southern States from $1 to $20 an acre. Only $15 required to get there, if you are not too particular as to how you go. Do you say the climate is hot? The thermometer every summer runs up higher in New York than in North Carolina and Georgia, though there the heat is more prolonged. Afraid of the fever? The death rates of Michigan and Georgia are equal, while the death-rate, according to the last census, is less, according to the number of population, in Georgia than in Connecticut and Maine. Whether you go West or South, you will probably have one acclimating attack. It is only a different style of shake. There is no need that England or Ireland or Scotland any longer suffer for room or bread. The tides of emigration now pouring into this country are greater than at any time in history. Twenty-one thousand six hundred and fifty-eight emigrants last month arrived in New York, 5,000 emigrants last Tuesday in and around Castle Garden. This is only an intimation of what is to come. Make two currents. While you put on extra trains to take them West by the Pennsylvania, Erie, and New York Central, put on extra trains on the Baltimore and Washington and Chattanooga and Atlanta and Charleston routes to take them South. There are tens of thousands of fortunes waiting for men who have the enterprise to go and win them. The South beckons you to come. Stop cursing the South and lying about the South, and go and try yourselves the cordiality of her welcome, and the resources of her mines, her plantations, and her forests. Perhaps that is the way that God is going to settle this sectional strife. There will be hundreds of thousands of our brightest, most intelligent, most moral young men who will go South for residence, and they will invite the daughters of the South to help them build homes amid the magnolias and orange groves, and their children will be half North and half South, half Georgia and half Vermont, half South Carolina and half New York; and thereafter to divide the country you would have to divide the children with some such sword as Solomon sarcastically proposed for the division of the contested child, and the Northern father will say to the Southern mother, "Come, my dear; I guess we had better put this political feud to sleep in this cradle." The statement so long rampant at the North that the South did not want industrious, useful and moral Northern settlers among them I brand as a political falsehood, gotten up and kept up for political purposes.

Again, I have to correct the impression that the South are bitterly against the Government of the United States. The South submitted to arms certain questions, and most of them are submissive to the decision. There is no fight in them. We hear much about the fire-eaters of the South, but if they eat fire they have a private table and private platter of coals in a private room. I sat at many tables, but I did not see anything of that kind of diet. Neither could I see any spoon or knife or fork that seemed to have been used in fire-eating. Why, sirs, I never saw more placid people—some of them with all their property gone, and starting life at 40 or 60 years of age, with one leg or one arm or one eye, the member missing sacrificed in battle! It is simply miraculous that those people feel so cheerful and so amiable. It is dastardly mean to keep representing them as acrid and waspish and saturnine and malevolent. I have traveled as much as most people, in this and other lands, and I have yet to find a more affable, delicately sympathetic, whole-hearted people than the people of the South. They are to-day loyal and patriotic, and if foreign foes should attempt to set foot on this soil for the purpose of intimidation and conquest, the forces of Bragg and Geary, McClellan and Beauregard, Lee and Grant, would come shoulder to shoulder, the blue and the gray, and the cannons of Fort Hamilton, Sumter and Pickens would join in one chorus of thunder and flame. The fact is that this country has had a big family fight; but let a neighbor come in to interfere, and you know how that always works. Husband and wife in contest, the one with a cane and the other with a broomstick, if some impertinent individual attempts to come between them he gets both cane and broomstick. I have sometimes thought the North and South would never understand each other until the approach of a common enemy compels them to make a common cause. If foreign despotisms think we have no cohesion, no centripetal force as a nation, they have only to try it. The fact that instead of thirteen colonies we embrace everything from Atlantic to Pacific oceans implies no weakening of national grip. By steam and electricity our country is within easier control than at the foundation of the Government. It took two weeks to get official communication across the country at the start. Now it takes two minutes. San Francisco and Galveston and Des Moines are nearer to Washington now than Richmond was then. There never was a time when this nation was so thoroughly one as to-day. Would to God we might more thoroughly appreciate it.

You see the whole impression of my Southern journey was one of high encouragement. The great masses of the people are right. If a half-dozen politicians at the North and a half dozen at the South would only die, we would have no more sectional acrimony. It is a case for the undertakers. If they will bury these few demagogues out of sight we will pay the entire expense of the catafalque and epitaph, and furnish enough brass bands to play the rogue's march. But time, under God, will settle it. The generations that follow us will sit in amazement at a state of things which made the national graveyards of Murfreesboro, Gettysburg and Richmond an awful possibility.

Troops at the Polls in 1880.

The Republicans fought desperately in the House of Representatives to defeat the mild provision attached to the Army bill, which declares:

> That no money appropriated in this act is appropriated or shall be paid for the subsistance, equipment, transportation or compensation of any portion of the army of the United States to be used as a police force to keep the peace at the polls at any election held within any State.

This was the compromise between Congress and the Executive at the extra session, over which the Republicans rejoiced as over a victory achieved. They then taunted the Democrats with having surrendered the principle on which the prolonged contest had been made, and with accepting terms against which they had proclaimed war to the bitter end.

All the Republicans but twelve voted for this amendment as their own cherished bantling. When the same proposition was before the House on Tuesday they voted directly against their previous record, after having factionaly opposed it for days. Some of them had decency enough to abstain from such an exhibition of partisan violence and unblushing inconsistency, but leaders like Hawley, Baker, Cannon, Conger, Hiscock, Monroe and others of less degree, willingly stultified themselves, after threatening a veto.

The false pretence of this opposition was that the section was a "rider," and, therefore, ought to be resisted as irregular legislation. But this sham was soon shattered by proof that the amendment was in the interest of economy, as provided by the rules, and germane to the bill itself. Mr. Hawley was particularly conspicuous and vehement in denouncing "riders" on appropriation bills as revolutionary and in monstrous violation of the constitution.

In closing the debate Mr. Ewing exposed Mr. Hawley's course as a member of the Forty-third Congress—one of the worst Congresses in the history of the Government—when he voted for forty-four different riders on appropriation bills, every one of which was political. In twelve years the Republican party mounted 387 riders on the backs of appropriation acts—more than thirty-two every year—and that, too, when they had majorities of two-thirds in Congress, and could have passed any independent legislation they wanted.

The real underlying motive of this opposition is that the Republicans desire and intend to use troops at the elections this fall, and to repeat the outrages of 1876, when they were employed to intimidate voters in Louisiana, South Carolina and Florida, and to aid in consummating a fraudulent count, if necessary. Hayes is a subservient instrument of the machine leaders. He is quite willing to obey any orders they may give.

When Mr. Evarts was sent to New York, last October, to speak in the name of the fraudulent administration and to kiss the rod that had scornfully smitten the whole concern, he bore witness to the self-abasement to which he and his associates had descended, in order to propitiate Conkling's good will and to be permitted to walk in the ranks of the stalwarts.

The stalwart leaders were not content with this voluntary humiliation. When Grant visited Washington, after having refused to be a guest of the White House, among the first to rush forward with professions of devotion and homage on his lips was the de facto Secretary of State.

No demand can be made on the present Administration to which cheerful response will not be given, in order to conciliate the stalwart chiefs. Hayes and the Cabinet will go even further than the extremists would do under like conditions. They want recognition, and are ready to purchase it by menial work and degrading sacrifices. The army will be utilized at the coming election, and every other engine of power that can be brought into requisition, to make Grant President by force or by fraud.—New York Sun.

INDIANA NEWS.

Nine students have been expelled from Asbury University for pool-playing.

Three children of James Dorsey, of North Vernon, were badly poisoned by eating dock root.

Sarah Roberts, a widow, living at Middleton, Harrison county, went out to tend a brush fire, and was burned to death.

Branson Swain, for several years Justice of Knightstown, accidentally shot and killed himself while cleaning his shot-gun to go hunting.

Lawyer Walls, of Boone county, former Prosecuting Attorney, has appealed to the Supreme Court from a decision expelling him from the bar.

The Remy Hotel, Indianapolis, has been sold to David Nicholson, a farmer of Marion county, for $72,000. There will be no change of management.

The will of Joseph Battell, a bachelor millionaire, has been probated at South Bend, disposing of $700,000 in bequests. One item is $50,000 to Yale College.

About two weeks ago Clara Mason, at Indianapolis, had two teeth extracted, from the effects of which inflammation set in in her neck and chest, and caused her death.

The remains of the late Gen. Jefferson C. Davis have now been interred at Crown Hill, Indianapolis, in a lot immediately opposite the grave of Senator Morton.

Charlie Lincks, an Evansville child of 5 or 6 years, stabbed a little girl of 5, named Mary Bleicher, and is reported to have attempted to stab several others at various times.

J. King, a farmer living two miles north of Wabash, while attending his horses, was bitten on the neck by one of them, from the effects of which he cannot live.

Joseph G. Breckenridge, formerly clerk in the Fort Wayne postoffice, now serving a two year term in the penitentiary for rifling registered letters, has been pardoned.

A decree in favor of the First National Bank of Indianapolis has been placed in the hands of the Sheriff for the sale of the entire personal property of the Shaw carriage-works.

Three brothers named Felsopp, all cripples, were walking on the track near Huntington when they were overtaken by a train. One of them, a paralytic, lost his head, and another was badly injured.

Aaron Howard, a wealthy old bachelor of Greensburg, died about a year ago, leaving about $10,000 to the Masonic lodge at that place. Now a long list of relatives arise and want the wil set aside.

While the jailer of the Frankfort jail was opening a cell door, the other night, he was knocked down by one of the prisoners, pushed into the cell, and locked up. Six prisoners then made their escape.

Mrs. Mitchell, of Bedford, had a finger amputated that had become completely dead from the effects of the death-sweat, or damps, on the body of a child she was laying out for burial, entering a slight wound on the end of it.

James A. Cravens, of Washington county, has been appointed by the Governor to fill a vacancy on the State Board of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, occasioned by the resignation of Franklin C. Johnson, recently appointed Census Supervisor.

Judge Berkshire, presiding in the Circuit Court at Bedford, has decided that a Board of County Commissioners, after it has ordered taxes for railroads to be placed on the duplicate for collection, has no power to restrain or order the taxes not to be collected.

Five men came to the house of a Mr. Richey, living near Plymouth, the other evening, and were reluctantly permitted to dig for something they said was hidden in the cellar. They found there and removed a mysterious iron box that must have lain concealed in its place for ten years. No explanation was given.

The celebrated case of Breedlove and others against Fletcher and others, at Shelbyville, has been compromised. It was an action to recover subscriptions to the amount of $50,000, donated by citizens of Morgan county toward the building of the Vincennes railroad. With interest on the amounts subscribed, the total reached over $75,000. The terms of compromise agreed upon were that the Morgan parties pay 50 cents on the dollar on the amounts originally subscribed, and that Fletcher and the interested parties pay the costs in the case. They are also to collect the amounts from the individuals who made the donations. The costs in the case will amount to more than $5,000, including attorneys' fees. This will reduce the amount to $20,000, provided all of the subscriptions originally made can be collected.

Fire Insurance.

The following record of fire insurance companies' receipts and losses during the year 1879 is founded upon the official figures reported to the Auditor of State for taxation:

Name of Company.	Receipts.	Losses.
Ætna, Hartford	$ 72,394	$44,118
Amazon, Cincinnati	6,557	7,095
American, Chicago	117,391	61,171
American, New Jersey	1,307	....
American, New York	87	....
American, Philadelphia	10,473	6,165
American Central	5,182	2,453
Aurora, Cincinnati	12,996	6,208
Buffalo, New York	17	....
Buffalo German, New York	11,618	4,636
British America	20,242	8,724
Clinton, New York	2,013	269
Citizens', St. Louis	3,236	586
Columbia, New York	1,346	23
Commercial, New York	2,812	1,170
Commerce, New York	463	779
Commonwealth, Boston	4,448	772
Commercial Union	11,059	9,470
Connecticut Fire	7,618	2,389
Continental, New York	100,976	68,588
Detroit Fire and Marine	1,152	12
Exchange	787	10
Farmers', York	4,636	2,511
Farmers' Home	44	....
Firemen's, Dayton	9,880	4,758
Firemen's, Newark	3,112	1,010
Firemen's Fund, California	11,812	13,338
Fire Association, Philadelphia	32,738	9,771
Franklin, Philadelphia	19,680	6,422
Franklin, Indianapolis	34,998	12,081
German American	28,448	17,075
German, Pittsburgh	340	....
Girard, Philadelphia	12,052	2,024
Glen Falls, New York	8,290	6,298
Globe	105	....
Guardian, England	2,801	....
Hamburg-Bremen	3,459	461
Hamburg, Magdeburg	4,500	565
Hartford	71,839	30,448
Hoffman	1,767	29
Home, New York	123,027	44,092
Howard, New York	4,321	1,541
Imperial and Northern	12,369	7,384
Insurance Company of North America	51,134	20,896
Knickerbocker, New York	105	....
La Caisse General	17,713	5,764
Lancashire, England	18,898	5,442
La Confiance, Paris	435	....
Liverpool and London Globe	16,299	7,863
London Assurance	8,357	2,940
Lorillard	2,163	242
London and Lancashire	4,990	....
Louisville Underwriters	411	....
Manhattan, New York	7,091	3,294
Manufacturers and Builders	105	[illegible]
Mercantile, Cleveland, Ohio	4,990	670
Merchants', New Jersey	6,704	2,104
Meriden, Connecticut	5,819	1,016
Metropolitan Plate Glass	1,486	1,065
Milwaukee, Mechanics'	2,504	2,000
National, Hartford	8,558	2,815
New Hampshire	8,252	1,298
New York Bowery	787	....
New York City	1,702	898
Newark Fire	5,409	407
Niagara, New York	24,588	18,298
North British and Mercantile	23,219	10,164
North German	4,160	3,083
Northwestern National	6,262	6,490
Northern, New York	5,124	4,323
Orient, Hartford	4,073	4,323
Ohio, Farmers'	21,841	6,453
Pacific, New York	303	....
People's, Trenton	8,172	3,231
People's, Newark	3,973	4,370
Phenix, Brooklyn	60,697	12,324
Phenix, Hartford	61,433	27,926
Phenix Assurance, England	655	....
Pennsylvania Fire	15,319	8,545
Queen, England	14,505	13,894
Royal, England	56,073	24,799
Rochester German	2,641	840
Royal Canadian	2,735	1,304
Springfield Fire and Marine	31,734	19,430
St. Paul Fire and Marine	6,807	3,122
St. Nicholas, New York	1,089	166
Standard, New York	1,714	....
Star, New York	5,491	....
Scottish Commercial	11,481	8,001
Sterling, New York	105	....
Traders', Chicago	4,386	2,450
Tradesmans', New York	1,447	1,799
Transatlantic, Germany	2,338	....
Teutonia, Dayton	4,701	1,116
Underwriters } Germania } Hanover	40,358	17,39
United Firemen's	2,815	259
Watertown, New York	21,176	12,423
Westchester, New York	11,984	6,853
Western Canada	18,943	1,643
Williamsburgh City	8,629	3,356
Total receipts from 105 companies		$1,448,540
Total losses of 105 companies		684,320
Premium receipts, less losses		$ 764,220
State tax		.03
		$22,926.60

—State tax being 3 per cent. on receipts, less losses.

Color-Blindness.

There is no human infirmity more curious than is color-blindness; and scarcely any other about which so little is known. The oddest thing about it, perhaps, is that it is not certain, or even likely, that the person who is afflicted with color-blindness is aware of the defect.

Color-blindness is an inability to distinguish colors. Those who are wholly color-blind can see no more than the forms of things; but cases of total absence of the power to perceive color are very rare. In most persons who are lacking in this respect, the infirmity extends only to certain colors. One man cannot perceive a red color; another green; another blue, and so on.

This partial color-blindness is not uncommon. Examinations by experts seem to show that about one in every twenty men is defective in the perception of color; and it is asserted that the defect is not so common in women as in men.

Probably not fifty readers of this paper are conscious that they are color-blind. Yet, if oculists are correct, and four or five in every 100 persons are deficient in this respect, the defect assumes proportions that command attention, for the reason that there are many occupations in which a quick and accurate perception of color is necessary. The lack of it may render success impossible.

There are many ways of testing the eye, to find out if it is color-blind. The best is, to put in the hands of a person, worsted, of various colors, and ask him to separate the pieces into red, blue, green and other colors; and then to shade them from light to dark. A man who is color-blind will usually make a mistake in assorting the colors, in the first four or five pieces given him for examination.

Another test is to see if a person can read red letters printed on a black ground. A third is to cover a blue sheet, printed with black letters, with thin white tissue paper. To the perfect vision, the letters will appear a yellowish brown. If they are black letters printed on a red sheet, they will appear green under the paper.

The causes of color-blindness have been sought by scientific men, and very plausible theories have been formed with regard to them, which we have not space to give.

The defect is incurable. A person who does not know colors can never be taught them, and there is no operation or instrument that will remedy the defect.—Youth's Companion.

A fireman on a Minnesota railroad engine climbed out on the pilot, at the risk of his life, and rescued a man who was lying on the track—a man of straw, which mischievous boys had placed there.

WEALTHY MEN OF NEW YORK.

Incomes Equal to Those of the Old World Crœsuses.

Probably no city in the world outside of London and Paris, says the Wall Street Daily News, can show as much private wealth as the city of New York. The richest man in England at present is the Duke of Westminster, whose income from London property alone is estimated at £400,000. His rural land estate yields some £100,000 more. His total income from real and personal estate aggregate about $3,500,000. Great as is this income it does not come up to the income enjoyed by John Jacob Astor and William H. Vanderbilt, New York's chief millionaires. The Astor fortune, at present real-estate values, is estimated at not less than $100,000,000, while Mr. Vanderbilt represents the largest accumulation of private wealth in America. Mr. Vanderbilt's yearly income exceeds $5,000,000.

The late Rothschild, of Paris, left a fortune of 1,000,000,000 francs ($200,000,000). It must, however, be remembered that the enormous wealth of the Rothschilds belongs to different members of a house or firm, while William H. Vanderbilt is practically sole owner of the great properties and vast estates bequeathed him by his father. Jay Gould now ranks high among New York millionaires. He is estimated at $25,000,000, and bids fair, if he lives ten or fifteen years longer, to double his present fortune. Taken all in all, Jay Gould to-day is probably the shrewdest railroad manager and boldest speculative operator in the United States.

Edward H. Green represents another great railroad fortune, estimated at over $20,000,000. He is the chief owner in the great Louisville and Nashville combination, and is said to practically control that road. Henry Hilton can be safely put down at $20,000,000. In April, 1876, Cornelia M. Stewart, widow of the late A. T. Stewart, transferred to Mr. Hilton all her interest in the firm of A. T. Stewart & Co. Wise investments made during the period of depression have, it is said, greatly swollen Mr. Hilton's wealth. Beside the well-known men of wealth at the head of our Knickerbocker families, such as the Rhinelanders, Hamersleys, Schermerhorns, Stevenses, Lenoxes, etc., all representing vast landed estates in this city, we have a great number of minor millionaires, worth from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000, who live and die without attracting any particular attention, unless they have something beside money to signalize them.

Crossing the Atlantic again, Frankfort-on-the-Main, with a population of about 100,000, is reputed to be the richest city of its size in the whole world. It is asserted that there are 100 Frankforters worth from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 each, and 250 who are worth $1,000,000 and upward. The city is one of the great banking centers of the globe. Its aggregate banking capital is estimated at $200,000,000—more than one-fourth of which the Rothschilds, whose original and parental house is there, own and control.

Corn and Wheat Production in Eleven States.

Dr. James Williams, late Auditor of the State of Ohio, furnishes the following interesting exhibit of the production of corn and wheat in the United States for the year 1879:

CORN.

Rank.	Bushels.
1. Illinois	309,000,000
2. Iowa	185,000,000
3. Missouri	142,000,000
4. Indiana	135,000,000
5. Ohio	105,700,000
6. Kansas	90,000,000
7. Kentucky	65,000,000
8. Nebraska	62,000,000
9. Tennessee	51,000,000
10. Pennsylvania	44,000,000
11. Wisconsin	39,900,000
Total	1,228,600,000

WHEAT.

Rank.	Bushels.
1. Illinois	44,000,000
2. Indiana	43,700,000
3. Ohio	36,600,000
4. California	35,000,000
5. Iowa	32,787,000
6. Minnesota	31,887,000
7. Michigan	26,800,000
8. Missouri	26,800,000
9. Pennsylvania	22,300,000
10. Wisconsin	20,600,000
11. Kansas	18,100,000
Total	341,474,000

The whole country produced 1,545,000,000 bushels of corn, of which eleven States produced 1,228,600,000, while twenty-seven States and eight Territories produced 316,400,000. Of wheat, the whole country produced 449,000,000 bushels—341,500,000 in eleven States, and 107,500,000 in all of the other States and Territories. The eleven States enumerated above produced 76 per cent. of the entire wheat crop, and 79 per cent. of the corn crop.

Preventive of Hydrophobia.

Mrs. Jane Grey Swisshelm writes to the Chicago Journal: For years I have been publishing a specific for hydrophobia. I learned it from one who had been familiar with its use and its history since the early part of this century. Among the hundreds of cases in which it has been tried there has never been one of hydrophobia, although in every one the person or animal had been bitten by dogs believed to be mad. It is this: Grate two ounces of the root of elecampane, stew it slowly one hour in a pint of fresh milk; take the mess, fasting, in the morning, and take nothing else into the stomach for six hours. Do this three mornings in succession. This quantity is for an adult person; for a child or animal it should be varied according to size and strength.

Registering Women Voters in Boston.

We are indebted to a "staff correspondent" for the following anecdote concerning the recent registration of female voters in Boston. Its accuracy is vouched for by an eminent artist—one of the most distinguished stone-cutters of the Hub:

Enter old lady of a certain age.

"I wish to register, sir."

"Your name, please?"

"Almira Jane Simpson."

"Your age?"

"Beg pardon."

"Your age?"

"Do I understand that I must give my age?"

"Yes, miss, the law requires it?"

"Worlds, sir, would not tempt me to give it! Not that I care. No; I had as lief wear it on my bonnet, as a hackman does his number; but I am a twin, and if my sister has a weakness, it is that she dislikes any reference made to her age; and I could not give my own, because I don't wish to offend her!"—"Editor's Drawer," in Harper's Magazine.

THERMALINE
A safe and Reliable Substitute for Quinine
The only 25 cent
AGUE REMEDY
IN THE WORLD
CURES
CHILLS & FEVER
and all MALARIAL DISEASES.
Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York, for their ten cent book, mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT.
An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box
Gives Immediate Relief.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.
Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or Chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions, Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.
The above four preparations for sale by F. H. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers, druggists, Auburn, Indiana.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 Cents per box. All Drug Stores.

SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant to take as a glass of Lemonade. 7 cents each. All Drug Stores.

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES
Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)
A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.
☞ Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.
☞ For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.
☞ For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS:
It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.
It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.
Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, overwork, mental shocks, and other causes.
Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhea, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. No other Pills require such small doses for thorough work. Price 25 cts. a box. Warner's Safe Remedies are sold by Druggists & Dealers in Medicine everywhere.
SAFE KIDNEY & LIVER CURE SAFE DIABETES CURE SAFE BITTERS SAFE NERVINE SAFE PILLS
READ! SAVE THYSELF
H. H. Warner & Co., Proprietors, ROCHESTER, N. Y.
☞ Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.

NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO. Battle Creek, Mich.
Established in 1848.
ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE
"VIBRATOR"
Threshing Machinery and Portable and Traction Engines.
THE STANDARD of excellence throughout the Grain Raising World.
MATCHLESS for Grain-Saving, Time-Saving, Perfect Cleaning, Rapid and Thorough Work.
INCOMPARABLE in Quality of Material, Perfection of Parts, Thorough Workmanship, Elegant Finish, and Beauty of Model.
MARVELOUS for vastly superior work in all kinds of Grain, and universally known as the only successful Thresher in Flax, Timothy, Clover, and all other Seeds.
ASTONISHINGLY DURABLE and wonderfully simple, using less than one half the usual gears and belts.
PORTABLE, TRACTION, and STRAW-BURNING STEAM-ENGINES, with special features of Power, Durability, Safety, Economy, and Beauty entirely unknown in other makes. Steam-Power Outfits and Steam-Power Separators a specialty. Four sizes of Separators, from 6 to 12 horse-power; also 2 styles Improved Mounted Horse-Powers.
32 Years of Prosperous and Continuous Business by this house, without change of name, location, or management, furnishes a strong guarantee for superior goods and honorable dealing.
CAUTION! The wonderful success and popularity of our Vibrator Machinery has driven other machines to the wall; hence various makers are now attempting to build and palm off inferior and mongrel imitations of our famous goods.
BE NOT DECEIVED
by such experimental and worthless machinery. If you buy at all, get the "ORIGINAL" and the "GENUINE" from us.
☞ For full particulars call on our dealers, or write to us for Illustrated Circulars, which we mail free. Address
NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

ON

Coffee, Sugar, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18 cents now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents per pound; and the Extra A Sugar we sold at 9 cents, now down to 8 cents; and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound. We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

TEAS! TEAS! TEAS!

The boom in teas last fall has not been maintained. Prices, in place of advancing, have declined so much that we are now selling the best Young Hyson tea lower than it has sold in ten years.

Good Young Hyson, 25c; Choice Young Hyson, 50c; Extra Young Hyson, 40c; Best young Hyson, 65c; Good Imperial tea, 40c; Best Imperial tea, 50 and 65c; Good Gunpowder tea, 40c; Best Gunpowder tea, 50 and 65c; Good Oolong tea, 30c; Best Oolong tea, 40 and 60c; Good uncolored Japan tea, 25, best 40 and 60c.

WHITE AND YELLOW SUGARS.

Cut Loaf, 10c; Coffee A, 9 1-2; Granulated, 10c; Extra C, 8c; Powdered Sugar, 10c; Yellow Sugar, 7c.

COFFEES--RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Bengal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 90c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c;

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickeled pork, 6c.

Fish--Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1; Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies, Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound, 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c. Oranges per dozen 35c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

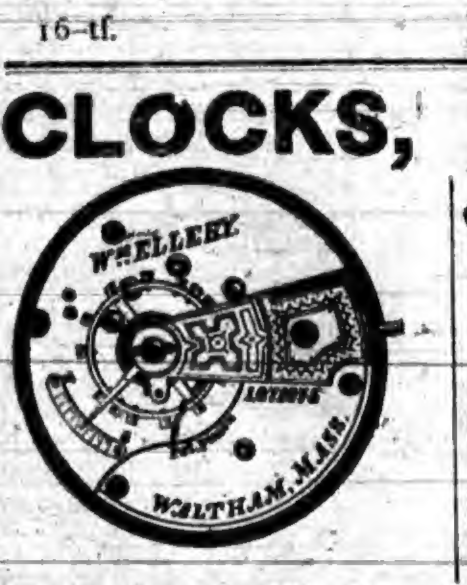
CLOCKS, CLOCKS,



GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,

SPOONS, KNIVES and FORKS,

Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains, Ladies Gold Chains, Castors Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,

Banjos, Accordions

Violin Strings.

Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at

JOE. ABRICHT'S,

Second door north of Postoffice Auburn, Indinaa,

MARK TWAIN.

An Old Engineer Who Remembers Him as a "Cub"—A Piloting Experience Not Set Forth in the Atlantic

A St. Louis correspondent of the Milwaukee Sentinel writes: While sitting in front of the Southern hotel, talking to a future great citizen about the old steamboat days of St. Louis, when captains, clerks and pilots ran the town, and ran it under a full head of steam, an ancient mariner let up on whittling the arm of the next chair, turned toward us, and remarked: "You was speaking of the old river days?" "We was," I replied. "Perhaps, now, you have been reading some of Sam. Clemens' yarns?" I held up a copy of the Atlantic, open at Mark Twain's article, which had really brought about the conversation. "Yes, I thought so; well, he don't tell all he knows," said the social riverman, reaching over for a tobacco pouch which a gentleman was passing to a friend. "There's one little affair he hasn't worked into point yet, and it isn't likely he will."

The social quit off on his reminiscence at this point, and talked generally about the bad outlook of the crops and universal disadvantage of dryness. Seeing that nothing but gin and sugar would start him anew, he was persuaded into a convenient bar-room, and, after hoisting in three fingers (held vertically), a handful of crackers, and several chunks of cheese, he proceeded with his anecdote, interrupting himself several times to remark to the barkeeper. "The same, pard."

"I was first engineer of Alexander Scott when Sam. Clemens (Mark Twain) was a cub in the pilot-house. He was a chipper young chap, with legs no bigger than a casting line, and fuller of tricks than a mule colt. He worked jokes on everybody aboard, from the skipper down to the roosters (darky deckhands), but they were all taken in good part, only I lay by two or three to pay back. About the time Sam. got the run of the river well enough to stand alone at the wheel, the Scott went into the Lower river trade, carrying cotton from Memphis to New Orleans. Perhaps, now, you never see a boat in the cotton trade burn? Well, you may cover your cotton from stem to stern with tarpaulins, and keep your donkey-engines steamed up, but if a spark of fire touches cotton enough to fill a tooth, your boat's a corpse. It's quicker'n gunpowder to burn, and no pilot can reach the lower deck from the texas in time to save himself, let alone his Saratoga. So, you see, everybody in that trade is on the watch, and an alarm of fire in a boat loaded with cotton will turn a man's hair gray quicker'n an alligator can swaller a nigger.

"Sam. being a young pilot, and new to the cotton trade, was told over and over again how the profession would lose a promising cub if ever a fire broke out on the Scott, and the boy got nervous. My striker and me always managed to be in the lunch-room when Sam came off watch, and as he came in we would talk about the number of cotton boats that burnt in such a year, and how such a cub would have made a lightning pilot if he hadn't got burnt up in the cotton trade, and we always noticed Sam's. appetite failed him after that, and instead of going to bed he would go prowling around the lower deck, and peering about the hatchways smelling at every opening, like a pup that had lost his master.

"One day when we backed out of Memphis with a big cargo of cotton, I complained, in Sam's. hearing, that the mate had loaded the boat too near the engines. The boy followed me into the engine-room, and, without seeming to notice him, I told my striker I would do my level best to keep that cotton from catching fire, but that it was a slim chance with bales piled right up before the furnace-doors. Sam. got whiter'n a bulk-head, and went up to the texas, where he packed his Saratoga, ready for any business that might come before the meeting. When he went on watch I posted the scout clerk to keep an eye on him.

"He hid behind a smoke-stack and saw Sam. alone in the pilot-house, his hair on end, his face like a corpse's, and his eyes sticking out so far you could have knocked them off with a stick. He danced around the pilot-house, turned up his nose like he was smelling for a polecat; pulled every bell, turned the boat's nose for the bank, and yelled "fire!" like a Cherokee Indian on the war-path. That yell brought everybody on deck. We had a big cargo of passengers, and the women screeched, the men rushed for cork pillows, and the crew yanked the doors off their hinges and rushed to the guards, ready to go overboard at the first moderation of weather. The skipper had hard work to make the crazy passengers believe that there wasn't any fire, but he brought them to reason finally. I paid no attention to Sam's. frantic yells, so the boat didn't run her nozzle against the bank he aimed for. The captain and first pilot and a lot of passengers, after hunting all over the boat, couldn't find a sign of fire anywhere outside the furnaces, and then they went for Sam. He swore up and down that he smelt cotton burning; no use talking to him—he knew the smell of burning cotton, and by thunder, he had smelt it."

"The first pilot said kind of soft and pityingly to Sam: 'My boy, if you'd told me you was so near the jim-jams I'd stood double watch for you. Now go and soak your head in a bucket of water, and take a good sleep, and you'll be all right by to-morrow.' Sam. just biled over at this, and when a pretty, young woman passenger said to the skipper, loud enough for Sam. to hear 'so young and nice looking, so—how sad it would make his poor mother feel to hear how he drinks,' he fairly frothed at the mouth. You never see a fellow so touched down as Sam was after that, and though the boys never quit running him, he never talked back, but looked kind of puzzled—as though he was trying to account for the smell of that cotton smoke."

"And what was the cause of the smell?" I asked mine Ancient. He chuckled a few minutes and said: "You see there's a speaking tube running from the engine-room to the pilot-house. I had in mind the tricks Sam. had played on me, and having worked him to a nervous state about fire, I waited till he was alone in the pilot-house, and then set fire to a little wad of cotton, stuffed it into the speaking-tube, and the smell came right out under his nose. A little sugar in it, pard."

Joe Parsons' Adventure.

[Philadelphia Times.]

Joe Parsons was a Baltimore boy, and a little rough, but withal a good-hearted fellow and a brave soldier. He got badly wounded at Antietam, and thus laconically discribed the occurrence and what followed to some people who visited the hospital:

"What is your name?"

"Joe Parsons."

"What is the matter?"

"Blind as a bat, sir; both eyes shot out."

"At what battle?"

"Antietam."

"How did it happen?"

"I was hit and knocked down, and had to lie all night on the battlefield. The fight was renewed next day, and I was under fire. I could stand the pain, but could not see. I wanted to see, or get out of the fire. I waited and listened, and presently heard a man groan near me.

" 'Hollo!' says I.

" 'Hello yourself,' says he.

" 'Who be you?' says I.

" 'Who be you?' says he.

" 'A Yankee,' says I

" 'Well, I'm a Reb,' says he.

" 'What's the matter?' says I.

" 'My leg's smashed,' says he.

" 'Can you walk?' says I.

" 'No,' says he.

" 'Can you see?' says I.

" 'Yes,' says he.

" 'Well, says I, 'you're a rebel, but I'll do you a little favor.'

" 'What's that?' says he.

" 'My eyes are shot out,' says I, 'and if you'll show me the way I'll carry you out,' says I.

" 'All right,' says he.

" 'Crawl over here,' says I; and he did.

" 'Now, old Butternut,' says I, 'get on my back;' and he did.

" 'Go ahead,' says he.

" 'P'int the way,' says I, 'for I can't see a blessed thing.'

" 'Straight ahead,' says he.

" 'The balls were a-flyin' all round, and I trotted off and was soon out of range.

" 'Bully for you,' says he, 'but you've shook my leg almost off.'

" 'Take a drink,' says he, holding up his canteen, and I took a nip.

" 'Now, let us go on again,' says he, kind o' slowly,' and I took him up, and he did the navigation and I did the walkin.' After I had carried him nearly a mile, and was almost dead, he said: 'Here we are; let me down.' Just then a voice said: 'Hello, Billy, where did you get that Yank?'

" 'Where are we?' says I.

" 'In the rebel camp, of course,' says he; and d—n my buttons if that rebel hadn't ridden me a mile straight into the rebel camp. Next day McClellan's army advanced and took us both in, and then we shook hands and made it up; but it was a mean trick of him, don't you think so?"

The Blue and the Gray.

[From a Washington Dispatch.]

There was a slight sensation in the house when General Joe Johnson reported and read a bill authorizing the secretary of the treasury to transfer to the Fairmount Park Art Association thirty condemned cannon, to be used in the erection of a monument to General George Gordon Meade, commander of the Union forces at the Potomac toward the close of the rebellion. It will be remembered that General Johnson engaged General Meade in several battles. General Johnson, when he reported the bill, was surrounded by his ex-Confederate comrades, but when he asked unanimous consent that the bill should pass at once, there was not a single objection, and in less than ten minutes, by the voice and votes of ex-Confederates, this tribute was paid to the dead Union soldier. General Johnson seemed well pleased with what he had accomplished, and walked around among the members smiling and receiving their congratulations.

Read This.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county who is authorized to sell the Singer sewing machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Headquarters at the Central House. 14-tf.

Agricultural Implements!

THE

Latest Improved Farm Machinery

OF ALL KINDS.

The ThreeRivers

"Invincible"

VIBRATOR.

The Renowned

Atlas Engine!

For farm use.

THE PEERLESS Reaper and Mower!

Over 20 000 now in use.

DEERING'S WIRE AND TWINE BINDER,

The only successful TWINE Binder in this or any other market. Greatly improved for 188.

LEADER ONE-WHEEL HARVESTER,

Which created so much excitement among the farmers last year.

ELLWOOD CULTIVATORS.

Riding or Walking, with four, six or nine blades. They have more good points and are less complicated than any other cultivator made.

The Steel-beam Red-Jacket Plow

And many other kinds. Also dealers in the

Archer Self-Dumping Hay-Rake.

Adjustable Bar Spring Tooth Harrow.

And The Harris' Double Harpoon Horse Hay-Fork.

Examine our samples carefully, and get our prices before you contract. We guarantee you a bargain.

J. N. MYERS & CO.,

Odd Fellows' Building, AUBURN, IND.

THE ANDERSON BROTHERS'

Carriage Man'factory

AUBURN, INDIANA,

TURNS OUT THE BEST

Carriages, Phaetons, Buggies and Light Wagons

Ever offered for sale in this part of the Country.

The proprietors make no effort to compete with manufacturers of Shoddy Buggies, but use the VERY BEST MATERIAL, and sell the BEST WORK AT THE LOWEST PRICES—prices to suit the times.

Fancy Light Work a Specialty.

Painting Warranted Not to Scale.

☞Repairing neatly done on short notice, at LOWEST RATES.☜

Good sound work-horses taken in exchange for new work. Do not buy until you get price of

ANDERSON BROTHERS,

11 2m Opposite Engle Mills.

NORMAN STALLION

JOCK, Jr.

SIRED BY:

Imported Jock!

Out of a thorough-bred

Norman Mare

JOCK, JR. will stand for mares during the season of 1880, commencing April 1st, at my barn in Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind.

This powerful horse is a bay-roan, 16 hands high, and weighs full

1,700 Pounds.

TERMS:

$10.00

Payable when the mare is known to be with foal.

Owners parting with mares are liable for insurance.

All accidents are at owners risk.

A. W. ALLEN. Auburn, Indiana.

ECKHART

Carriage Works

One-half mile east of Court House.

I have constantly on hand a large stock of the latest styles of

CARRIAGES, PHAETONS, & PLATFORM SPRING WAGONS.

I have recently built a large shop and now have the facilities for manufacturing

150 Buggies

PER YEAR.

All are invited to call and see my works whether they wish to purchase or not. I employ the

BEST MECHANICS

I CAN GET.

All my work is fully warranted.

C. ECKHART,

Auburn, Ind., Jan. 22, '80. 4-6m.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R

CHICAGO DIVISION.

IN EFFECT FROM JAN. 1, 1880.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.
CHICAGO	8 50am	9 40pm
Walkerton Junction	12 10pm	1 08am	10 42am
Milford Junction	1 20	2 15	2 20pm
Cromwell	1 46	2 45	3 30
Albion	2 08	3 08	4 25
Avilla	2 34	3 30	5 20
Garrett ar	2 50	3 45	5 55
Garrett lv	3 10	3 55	4 15
Auburn Junction	3 24	4 08	4 38
St. Joe	3 46	4 25	5 40
Hicksville	4 00	4 45	6 22
Defiance	4 45	5 27	8 00
Fostoria	6 40	7 28	2 30pm
Tiffin	7 00	7 54	3 27
CHICAGO JUNCTION	8 10	9 00	6 00

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.
CHICAGO JUNCTION	6 40pm	8 15am	820am
Tiffin	7 50	9 12	8 20
Fostoria	8 34	9 35	9 35
Defiance	10 32	11 20	4 45pm
Hicksville	11 16	12 14pm	6 18
St. Joe	11 34	12 30	6 50
Auburn Junction	11 54	12 50	7 35
Garrett ar	12 10am	12 58	8 00
Garrett lv	12 15	1 23	6 30am
Avilla	12 30	1 40	7 10
Albion	12 45	2 06	7 38
Cromwell	1 10	2 22	8 25
Milford Junction	1 33	3 00	9 30
Walkerton Junction	2 38	4 12	1251pm
CHICAGO	5 80	7 05

O. H. HUDSON, Superintendent.

SAM'L POWELL, Act. Gen. Ticket & Pass. Agent, Chicago.

L. M. COLE, Gen. Ticket Agent, Baltimore, Md.

Recorders Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, MAY 13, 1880. Number 20.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

EDITORS,

THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5,00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. W. S. Allen,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store, Auburn, Ind.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhauser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET, EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross. Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MONEY TO LOAN

By the Union Central Life Insurance company, from 1 to 5 years at 8 per cent secured by first lien on real estate worth at least double the amount of the loan (exclusive of improvements). We charge no commission, and your mortgage is held here within a few hours ride of your home. If you live, you are here to look after it yourself; if you die, you have made provisions to pay the debt just where you contracted it. For further particulars, apply to Thos. H. Sprott, Auburn Indiana.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 23-1y

$1500 TO $6000 A YEAR, or $5 to $20 a day in your own locality. No risk. Women do as well as men. Many make more than the amount stated above. No one can fail to make money fast. Any one can do the work. You can make from 50c to $2 an hour by devoting your evenings and spare time to the business. It costs nothing to try the business. Nothing like it for money making ever offered before. Business pleasant and strictly honorable. Reader, if you want to know all about the best paying business before the public, send us your address and we will send you full particulars and private terms free; samples worth $5 also free; you can then make up your mind for yourself. Address, GEORGE STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-1

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator, with the will annexed, of the estate of Joseph Bowman, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

ELIJAH S. McDOWELL,
GEORGE O. DENISON,
Administrators, with the will annexed.
April 22, 1880. 18-3w

G. R. & I. R. R. Co.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS,
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., April 1, '80.

To the Stockholders of the Grand Rapids & Ind. R. R. Co.:

Take notice that there will be a meeting of the stockholders of said company, at the general office, in the city of Grand Rapids, state of Michigan on

THE NINTH (9th) DAY OF JUNE, 1880,

at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of said company to the sum of five million dollars and it is proposed at such meeting to increase said capital stock to that amount.

DIRECTORS:

W. O. Hughart,	C. A. Zollinger,
W. R. Shelby,	Thos. A. Scott.
H. J. Hollister,	Geo. B. Roberts,
S. S. Cobb,	Wm. Thaw,
J. G. Wait,	Thos. D. Messler,
Pliny Hoagland,	J. N. McCullough,

Rob't. B. Potter.

15-tf. J. H. P. HUGHART, Secretary.

The Empire Democracy.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

The democrats of the state of New York are in an exasperating and unpatriotic attitude. Tammany, John Kelley, and their following, lift up their voices and say that if the democrats of thirty-eight states choose to nominate a certain democrat for the presidency they will not vote for him. It is undeniable that the men behind the Kelly-Tammany movement are numerous and formidable, and constitute a dangerous political element. That their position is to the last degree undemocratic is equally undeniable. The right of one faction in one state to issue an edict that a certain man shall not be nominated by the national democracy for the presidency cannot be admitted. It is claimed, with truth, that this faction was able to cast seventy-seven thousand votes in New York last year. But the democratic party casts more than three millions of votes.

The logic of the situation would not be altered if this faction in New York were to command the national democracy to nominate a certain gentleman for the presidency, and say that if that gentleman were not nominated they would not support the democratic ticket The right of a faction to say that Mr. Smith shall NOT be nominated for the presidency does not differ from the right of a faction to say that Mr. Smith SHALL be nominated for the presidency, saying in each case that if their pleasure is not observed they will not support the national ticket. It is not easy to find anything more undemocratic in the attitude of men who call themselves democrats anywhere than a declaration from one of the organs of John Kelly immediately after the democratic convention at Syracuse. The Star, John Kelly's paper, said: "The fight is forced upon us, and to the bitter end will it be fought. The democracy has two objective points in view—the salvation of the nation and the vindication of our honor—and neither can be achieved but by vigorous, active, continued war against the insolent faction that would endanger both. It cannot be too often repeated that the nomination of Tilden would involve the election of Grant. Better that a thousand times than the election of Tilden. The undisguised tyranny of a military despotism might come to be respected for its boldness; the sneaking selfishness of a coward traitor could never win respect or command approval."

This is not democratic language. The faction that takes this position is not entitled to the confidence and amiable regard of the national democracy. When a few bolters in New York call the other democrats of the country a "faction" there is another case of "we, the people of England."

It is significant that this un-democratic rebellion in the empire state is not made in the interest of purity, of superior honesty, of angelic government on earth. It will not be generally alleged that the Tammany-John Kelly desire is one of supreme devotion to public virtue. These bolters do not threaten to leave the democratic party (if their wishes are not observed as to the presidential nomination), because they are too pure and holy, in comparison with the national democratic party, to associate with it. It is not that species of "independence" that moves them. John Kelly and Tammany will not probably claim the right of dictatorship in the democratic party because they alone are seized of public purity, because they alone are capable of handling public affairs with spotless integrity. This aggressiveness is not, therefore, in the public interest.

There is another phase of the empire democracy. The nomination of Mr. Tilden for the presidency is not a national necessity. There were brave men before and after Agamemnon. The insolence of the un-democratic faction in New York should be small among the influences affecting, in one way or another, the action of the national democratic convention. The Cincinnati convention ought not to refuse to nominate any man because of the factious New York rebellion. It should not be provoked into nominating any man out of spite to this factious revolt in New York. If there were no other reasons for refusing to nominate Mr. Tilden than the threats of John Kelly the Tilden candidacy would still be strong. If there were no democrats in New York and out of New York opposed to the nomination of Mr. Tilden save those in sympathy with John Kelly, Mr. Tilden would be nominated at Cincinnati in June.

◆

A Child's Faith.

We have rarely seen a more touching little incident than this told by a New Haven paper. A widow's child received a reward of merit in school and ran home eagerly to her mother, saying, as she entered her humble dwelling, "I held it up to the sky all the way home, mamma, so that papa might see what a good girl I am."

Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks.

A writer in the Clarke Courier, a Virginia journal, concludes an article on the presidential situation as follows:

"To be serious, as matters now stand, Mr. Hendricks is the strongest man the country over for the first place. There are many pure and great patriots in the land, but of them all there are none greater than he who, amidst the rude changes of fickle fortune, retains the confidence and affection of a state first to relieve the country of the foul incubus of radicalism. Let us cease the cry of 'second place for Hendricks,' and come up like brave men and true to follow to the fore-front of the battle the man who, in the thickest of the fight, has ever proudly borne the ensign of victory. Long live Thomas A. Hendricks! Long live that spirit of concord which has united in harmony the rank of democracy in Indiana, making a host more invincible than Grecian phalanx or Roman legion! Their leader, calm and self-reliant, amidst the stormy waves of political discord, has spoken, 'Peace, be still,' and the sea of passion has ceased its tempestuous tossing to bear upon its tranquil bosom rich argosies of peace, prosperity, union and fraternity. All eyes are turned to Indiana. If we hold up the hands of Thomas A. Hendricks he will 'smite the enemy hip and thigh,' and bury the loathsome carcass of radicalism so deep that the hands of resurrection can never fathom the blackness of darkness that is gathering to enshroud its eternal oblivion."

◆

Literature for Girls.

[Ruskin.]

If there were to be any difference between a girl's education and a boy's; I should say that of the two the girl should be earlier led, as her intellect ripens faster, into deep and serious subjects; and that her range of literature should be, not more, but less frivolous, calculated to add the qualities of patience and seriousness to her natural poignancy of thought and quickness of wit; and also to keep her in a lofty and pure element of thought. I enter not now into any question of choice of books; only be sure that her books are not heaped up in her lap as they fall out of the package of the circulating library, wet with the last and lightest spray of the fountain of folly.

Or even of the fountain of wit; for with respect to the sore temptation of novel-reading it is not the badness of a novel that we should dread, but its overwrought interest The weakest romance is not so stupefying as the lower forms of religious exciting literature, and the worst romance is not so corrupting as false history, false philosophy or false political essays. But the best romance becomes dangerous if, by its excitement, it renders the ordinary course of life uninteresting, and increases the morbid thirst for useless acquaintance with scenes in which we shall never be called upon to act.

I speak, therefore, of good novels only, and our modern literature is particularly rich in types of such. Well read, indeed, these books have serious use, being nothing less than treatises on moral anatomy and chemistry; studies of human nature in the elements of it. But I attach little weight to this function; they are hardly ever read with earnestness enough to permit them to fulfill it.

The sense, to a healthy mind, of being strengthened or enervated by reading, is just as definite and unmistakable as the sense, to a healthy body, of being in fresh or foul air; and no more arrogance is involved in forbidding the reading of an unwholesome book than in a physician's ordering the windows to be opened in a sick-room. There is no question whatever concerning these matters with any person who honestly desires to be informed about them; the real arrogance is only in expressing judgments, either of the books or anything else respecting which we have taken no trouble to be informed. Life being short, and the quiet hours of it few, we ought to waste none of them in reading valueless books; and valuable books should, in a civilized country, be within the reach of every one, printed in excellent form, for a just price; but not in any vile, vulgar, or by reason of smallness of type, physically injurious form, for a vile price. For we none of us need many books, and those which we need, ought to be clearly printed, on the best paper and strongly bound. I would urge upon every young woman to obtain, as soon as she can, by the severest economy, a restricted, serviceable and steadily—however slowly—increasing series of books for use through life; making her little library, of all the furniture in her room, the most studied and decorative piece, every volume its assigned place, like a little statue in its niche.

A True Lady.

[Gail Hamilton.]

Wildness is a thing girls cannot afford. Delicacy is a thing which cannot be lost or found. No art can restore the grape its bloom. Familiarity, without confidence, without regard, is destructive to all that makes women exalting and ennobling.

The world is wide, these things are small;
They may be nothing but they are all.

Nothing? It is the first duty of a woman to be a lady. Good breeding is good sense. Bad manners in a woman is immorality. Awkwardness may be ineradicable. Bashfulness is constitutional. Ignorance of etiquette is the result of circumstances. All can be condoned and not banish men or women from the amenities of their kind. But self-possessed, unshrinking and aggressive coarseness of demeanor may be reckoned as a state's prison offense, and certainly merits that mild sort of restraint called imprisonment for life. It is a shame for women to be lectured on their manners. It is a bitter shame that they need it. Women are the umpires of society. It is they to whom all mooted points are referred. To be a lady is more than to be a prince. A lady is always in her right inalienably worthy of respect. To a lady, prince or peasant alike bow. Do not be restrained. Do not have impulses that need restraint. Do not wish to dance with the prince unsought; feel differently. Be sure you confer honor. Carry yourself so lofty that men will look up to you for reward, not at you in rebuke. The natural sentiment of man toward woman is reverence. He loses a large means of grace when he is obliged to account her a being to be trained into propriety. A man's ideal is not wounded when a woman fails in worldly wisdom; but if in grace, in tact, in sentiment, in delicacy, in kindness, she would be found wanting, he receives an inward hurt.

◆

Wedding Days.

The wedding day may be the most eventful day in a woman's life, but it is not the happiest, though it is conventionally called so. Nor is it the man's. Both the chief parties to a wedding cut rather awkward figures and play difficult parts on the day when they are made one in the presence of a great concourse of friends, neighbors and indifferent folks. The only brides who can really enjoy a wedding day are those who do not care much for bridegrooms or who have struggled towards marriage under circumstances which convert their wedding day into splendid personal triumphs. In humbler life, when a girl marries a man who is her superior in station, she must experience a moment of exquisite delight when her union is consecrated amid a circle of envious friends. But to ordinary couples who love each other, and whose match is so well assorted in respect of age, station and fortune that it excites no wonder, the wedding day is certainly a tiresome one. The two young people are impatient to be united, and they glory in the day which is to make them man and wife; but all the formalities of nuptials seem to them most tedious. The bride expectant rises in the morning, unrefreshed by a sleepless night and nervous in anticipation of the day's proceedings. A glance at her mirror shows her that she is not looking her best. Correctly speaking, a man has no rights over his bride till the wedding service is over, and consequently he has no business to kiss her before strangers; but at court weddings, royal bridegrooms settle the difficulty by a compromise, and kiss their brides on the hands. Lucky the bridegrooms who can laugh on a wedding day. The worst of a dismal bridegroom is that his glum looks may work upon his bride's nerves, and make her cry. There are brides who feel called upon to sob in church, at the breakfast, and again at the hour of departing. Anything is better than this. The bridegroom cuts a most miserable figure when he is made to appear as a brute who is carrying off an impressionable maiden against her will, and the bride herself does not shine out to her gratest advantage when she lapses into the melting mood several times in one day. Some tears are, of course, excusable, and one honest unpremeditated out-burst at the moment when the newly wedded wife leaves the home where she has been so happy is but a proof of good-heartedness, which the bridegroom should notice as a glad augury, seeing that cold-hearted girls do not, as a rule, make warmly attached wives. On the whole, however, let a wedding be mirthful without levity, and, as it is the bridegroom who strikes the keynote of the prevailing sentiment at a wedding, let him clothe his features in serenity.—London Truth.

Fourth Annual Report of the Auburn Graded Schools.

To the Board of School Trustees.

GENTLEMEN: I herewith submit to you the annual report for the school year, beginning September 1, 1879, and closing April 30, 1880:

Whole number of days taught	157
Number of holidays	3
Whole number of school children as shown by the last enumeration	593
No. enrolled during the year—(a) high school	70
(b) Intermediate department	183
(c) Primary department	207
Total	460
Foreign pupils enrolled in high school	27
In intermediate department	6
Total	33
No. of resident pupils enrolled	429
Per cent. of enrollment on enumeration	78
Average daily attendance	327
EXPENSES OF THE YEAR.
Aggregate of teachers' salaries	$2,360
Janitor's fees	160
Fuel	152
Miscellaneous items	450,40
Total	$3,122.40
Amount of foreign tuition received	$141.78
Amount of same yet due	17.44
Total	$159.22
Cost of instruction per capita on enrollment	$8.85

The schools throughout have been too full for pupils to receive justice in the way of care and instruction. The enrollment, omitting the high school, will show an average of 78 pupils to the room. No teacher is able to do either herself or pupils justice under such circumstances.

I would add here that a crying evil of the schools is irregularity in attendance, with the pernicious custom of withdrawing pupils before the school year has closed. The graded schools require so much work to be done each year in the various grades. At the end of the year pupils are examined and passed, if ready, to the next grade. Now, if children have been absent half the time, or more or less, they cannot be expected to pass a satisfactory examination, since they have done only a part of the work. One pupil cannot, unless unusually able, accomplish in six months what another does in eight or nine, much less can he do the work in two or three. A pupil has been out say half the year, and at the time of examination fails to pass with his grade, as might be expected. His parents, either not understanding the situation, or not disposed to give the matter a reasonable consideration, find fault with the teacher or school authorities in general, when the fault, if fault there be, (it may be an unavoidable circumstance) is with the pupil himself or with the parent, in not having secured a regular attendance. The pupils should all be in attendance, IF POSSIBLE, till the close of the school year.

In concluding this report, I acknowledge my indebtedness to my assistant teachers who, throughout the year have given me their united and individual support, and have worked with untiring energy and zeal in the discharge of their duties.

It is with feelings of great respect and the warmest affection that I remember the pupils with whom I have labored while in Auburn. I leave them with regret, and shall ever feel the deepest interest in their future progress and happiness.

Respectfully submitted by
LIDA A. POWERS, SUPT.

A Dictionary Free.

The NATIONAL WEEKLY, published at Washington, D. C., is a sixteen page, sixty-four column literary and family paper, (Harper's Weekly size) now in its fourth year of publication. It contains no sensational stories, but is a pure instructive and entertaining journal for home circle. In order to introduce it to new readers, the publishers offer to send it one month on trial for ten cents. To any one sending a club of ten trial subscribers and $1, they will send a copy of the American pronouncing dictionary, containing 30,000 definitions, 250 illustrations, a list of abbreviations foreign phrases etc., handsomely bound in cloth. Every reader of this notice can, with little trouble, secure for himself one of the most useful books ever printed, and do his friends a service besides. Don't fail to take advantage of this liberal offer. Address The National Weekly, Washington, D. C.

◆

Read This.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, agent for the GENUINE SINGER, at Spencerville, Ind. Horses and cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office at Cahill's tin-shop. 14-tf.

Notice of Meeting.

The members of the Farmers' Mutual insurance company, of DeKalb county, will take notice that the annual meeting of the company will be held in Auburn, Saturday, May 29, 1880, for the purpose of electing officers, appointing township soliciting agents and for the transaction of such other business as may come up.

The directors of the company will meet Friday, May 28, 1880, to settle with the secretary.

17-4w PERRY FITCH, Secretary.

WABASH St. LOUIS AND PACIFIC R'Y.

The Great Through Car Route to

Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.		WEST.
Mail	12:34 p. m.	Mail	3:20 p. m.
Accom'n	12:57 a. m.	Accom'n	3:57 a. m.
Local F't	4:45 p. m.	Local F't	6:30 a. m.
M'l tr'n arrives at Butler	1:30 p. m.	M'l tr'n arr. at Logansport	6:45 p. m.

No Change of Cars From

TOLEDO OR FT WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison.

No Change of Cars From

St. Louis To Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the

Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific

Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

☞ Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West, Southwest, North or Northw'st

Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager,
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent,
St. Louis, or
LOUIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn Ind.

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE.

Time-Card takes effect April 11, 1880.

(CHICAGO TIME.)

GOING NORTH.

Leave Auburn:

4:10 A. M.—From Fort Wayne 3:05 a. m.; arrive at Waterloo 4:40; Pleasant Lake, 5:30; Angola, 6:10; Fremont, 6:48; Reading, 6:36; Bankers, 7:50; (connecting closely with D. H. & S. W. R.;) Jonesville, 8:13; Jackson, 9:20 a. m. there connecting for Ann Arbor 10:35, Detroit, 11:50 a. m.; Grand Rapids, 4:20 p. m.

12:31 P. M.—From Fort Wayne 11:30 a. m., Academie, 11:46; Huntertown, 11:56; New Era, 12:10 p. m.; Auburn Junction, 12:28; arrive at Waterloo 12:42, connecting with L. S. & M. S. train east and west; Summit, 12:52; Pleasant Lake, 1:01; Angola, 1:11; Fremont, 1:29; Reading, 2:10; Bankers, 2:30, making close connection with D. H. & S. W. R. R.; Jonesville, 2:35 (making connection with L. S. & M. S. for points east; Hillsdale, 2:40; Adrian 4:05; Toledo, 5:25, p. m.), Jackson, 3 40 p. m., making close connection for Ann Arbor, Detroit, Lansing, Iona, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Battle Creek, etc.

5:50 P. M.—From Fort Wayne, 5:00 p. m; New Era, 5:40 arrive at Waterloo 6:11; Summit, 6:25; Pleasant Lake, 6:36; Angola, 7:00; Fremont, 7:35; Reading, 8:35; Jonesville, 9:30; Jackson, 11:00 p. m.; connecting closely for Chicago, Detroit and Grand Rapids.

GOING SOUTH.

Leave Auburn:

9:21 A. M.—From Jackson, 5:05 a. m; closely connecting from Chicago; Jonesville, 6:50; connecting from Chicago, etc.; Reading, 7:45; Montgomery, 7:58; Fremont, 8:17; Angola, 8:34; Pleasant Lake, 8:44; Summit, 8:55; Waterloo, 9:10; arrive at St. Johns, 9:36; New Era, 9:45; Huntertown, 9:53; Academie, 10:05; Ft. Wayne, 10:30 a. m. connecting closely with Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, etc.

3 17 P. M.—From Jackson 12:35 p. m.; (connecting from Detroit 9:35 a. m., Ann Arbor, Saginaw, Lansing, Grand Rapids, etc;) Jonesville, 1:21, close connection from Toledo; Bankers, 1:35; Reading, 1:48; Montgomery, 1:58; Fremont, 2:18; Angola, 2:33; Pleasant Lake, 2:40; Summit, 2:55; Waterloo, 3:08; arrive at Auburn Junction, 3:20; St. Johns, 3:31; New Era, 3:36; Stoner's, 3:46; Huntertown, 3:51; Academie, 4:00 Fort Wayne, 4:15 p. m.; connecting for Indianapolis, Louisville, Lima, Cincinnati, etc.

11:30 P. M.—From Detroit, 1:05 p. m.; Grand Rapids 11:50 a. m.; Kalamazoo, 1:40 p. m.; Jackson, 6 45 p. m.; Jonesville, 8 00; Reading, 8 35; Fremont, 9 15; Angola, 10 15; Pleasant Lake, 10:30; Waterloo, 11 10; arrive at New Era 12:30 a. m.; Fort Wayne, 1:20 a. m., connecting with early trains west, south and east.

4 10 a. m. train run daily. All other trains daily except Sundays.

M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Supt.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Fr't. & Pass'r Agent.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, MAY 13, 1880.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

THE number of emigrants arriving in New York during the month of April foot up to 50,000—the greatest number in any one month ever recorded.

A VIOLENT storm has prevailed all along the Atlantic coast, strewing the coast with wrecks and delaying the mail steamers for Europe.

EX-CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM WIRT WARREN died in Boston last week, of pneumonia.

THE work of reconstructing the railway suspension bridge at Niagara of iron, instead of wood, has begun. The whole structure will be of iron, except the floors; and the change is to be effected without delay to traffic. It is expected that the work will be completed some time next fall....A woman at Penn Yan, N. Y., drowned her two children in a cistern and then attempted to drown herself, but was rescued. She is now a raving maniac.

GEORGE P. ROBERTS has been elected President of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He will take charge on the 1st of June....By a gas explosion at the Mountain colliery, in Pennsylvania, three men were killed, and two others seriously, if not fatally, injured.

THE WEST.

A PRIVATE letter to a St. Louis business house, dated Las Vegas, N. M., says that it is reported there that Joseph Brown, ex-Mayor of St. Louis, and a party of St. Louisans had been murdered by Indians at or near White Oaks, N. M....Clement Shaw, the witness who testified before the Coroner's jury in San Francisco that De Young fired the first shot at Kalloch, is held on a charge of perjury.

A PARTY of six miners were recently drowned while attempting to descend the rapids of the Skagit river, in California....The reported massacre of ex-Mayor Brown and other citizens of St. Louis, by Indians in New Mexico, is contradicted by later dispatches from Las Vegas....At Battle Creek, Mich., the Potter House, new American Hotel, and other buildings, have been destroyed by fire: loss $75,000. ....At Jacksonville, Ill., the postoffice and two entire blocks of business houses were recently leveled by fire; loss, $80,000.

NOTICE is given that visitors to the National Republican Convention in Chicago will be transported at the rate of 2 cents per mile each way by the following-named railroads: Chicago and Alton; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy; Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific; Illinois Central; and Wabash....The citizens of Fairplay, Col., dissatisfied with the verdict of the jury in sentencing one J. J. Hoover to eight years only for murder, deliberately took the prisoner from the officers and hung him to a tree.

IN view of the many charges of mismanagement, cruelty, and scandalous conduct of persons connected with the Ohio Central Lunatic Asylum, Gov. Foster has directed inquiry into the truth or falsity of these charges. ....Some dastards are endeavoring to destroy Omaha, Neb. That city has been fired four times within a few days past, and the citizens are terribly alarmed.... The quadrennial session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church (colored) is in session in St. Louis. About 200 delegates are present, representing 350,000 communicants, 2,150 ministers, nearly 3,000 local preachers, and six Bishops.

THE Board of Supervisors of San Francisco have unanimously adopted a resolution authorizing judicial proceedings to be instituted against Mayor Kalloch that he may be removed from office. Kalloch presided at the meeting, and appeared cool and unmoved by the proceedings of the board....The Long Branch Hotel, at Alameda, Cal., has been destroyed by fire.

THOMAS HEERMANS, proprietor of the Star and Crescent Mills, Chicago, met with a terrible death the other day, by falling through his elevator shaft, a distance of ninety feet. Death was almost instantaneous....A Portland, (Ore.) special says a large fleet of fishing vessels started out to lay nets at the mouth of the Columbia river. Twenty of the boats were driven on the bar by a squall and swamped. At least twelve fishermen were drowned.... Judge Dangerfield the presiding Justice of the San Francisco Superior Court, dropped dead on the bench while hearing a case. Disease of the heart is said to be the cause of his death.... Mayor Kalloch, of San Francisco, says of the preliminary steps of the Supervisors toward his impeachment: "I am glad they have exposed themselves. They are just furnishing me an an opportunity. I want to ventilate the whole proceedings of the last few months.

THE SOUTH.

CONGRESS has decided on having a marine hospital at Memphis. It appropriates $30,000 to purchase a site and erect the building....There is a report in Washington that there were three genuine cases of yellow fever in New Orleans last week.

DR. SAMUEL CHOPIN, the distinguished surgeon, died of pneumonia in New Orleans, a few days since.

A HOUSTON (TEX.) special reports the failure of A. Harris & Bros., wholesale dry goods. Liabilities, $108,000....Telegrams from Santa Fe, N. M., report Victoria's band of Apache Indians as committing terrible depredations. Thirteen herders on one sheep-ranche had been killed; three miners met the same fate, and one man had his flock of 100,000 sheep confiscated by the red vandals.... An investigation of the Barataria canal, the proposed new route from New Orleans to the deep waters of the Gulf, has just been concluded by Capt. John Cowdon and party. They assert that one-half of the money spent on the Eads jetties can make a splendid water route of a permanent character, and are fully determined to push the work of deepening and widening the channel to completion.

THE Governor of Louisiana, the Mayor and President of the Board of Health of New Orleans, and several other prominent gentlemen, emphatically deny that there has been any case of yellow fever in New Orleans. They also pledge themselves to promptly report the first appearance of any case in their city.

POLITICAL.

THE Harrisburg Convention instructed its delegates to the Cincinnati Convention to observe the two-thirds rule. The delegates are supposed to be about evenly divided between Hancock and Tilden in their choice for the Presidency....The result of the Republican State Convention in California is contained in the following resolution, which was adopted: "Resolved, That we cordially support the nominee of the Republican National Convention, whoever they may be, but we know that the six electoral votes of our State are certain to be given for the Republican ticket if James G. Blaine be nominated; wherefore we do hereby instruct our delegates to the Republican National Convention to vote as a unit first, last, and all the time for James G. Blaine, and to use all honorable means to secure his nomination for President of the United States."... The Indiana State Convention of Greenbackers have nominated Richard Gregg for Governor, and for the first time nominated a lady delegate to the National Convention. The balance of the State ticket is as follows: Lieutenant Governor, Thomas Debruler; Secretary of State, J. B. Lingley; Auditor of State, George W. Demaree; Treasurer of State, John F. Ullery; Attorney General, John L. Miller; Reporter of the Supreme Court, Thomas Marshall; Clerk of the Supreme Court, Capt. Wessler; Superintendent of Public Instruction, L. E. Piess; Judge of the Supreme Court, W. A. Tipton.

THE Wisconsin State Greenback Convention is called to meet at Watertown May 27.

THE Chicago Daily News claims to be authorized by the Hon. E. B. Washburne to state that that gentleman still adheres unequivocally to his already-announced position, and that the various movements looking to his candidature for the Presidency are entirely without his approval.

THE State National Greenback Convention, in session at Greensboro, N. C., appointed delegates to the National Convention at Chicago, June 9. They go uninstructed.... The Wisconsin Republican State Convention met at Madison, and elected William P. McLaren, of Milwaukee, President. The convention decided not to instruct its delegates as to the Presidential candidate to be voted for. A resolution complimentary to President Hayes was adopted. The majority of the delegation elected are believed to favor Washburne.... The Mississippi Republican State Convention met at Jackson, on the 5th. Over 200 delegates were present. A combination of the Sherman and Blaine forces against the Grant adherents resulted in the election of W. H. Gibbs, temporary Chairman, by a vote of 118 to 111....The Republican State Convention of Tennessee met in the hall of the House of Representatives on May 5. William H. Young, colored editor of the Nashville Herald and Pilot, was elected Chairman, thus achieving the distinction of being the first negro ever elected to preside over a convention of similar character in Tennessee. The majority of the delegates favor Grant.

GENERAL.

THE Methodist Episcopal General Conference began its quadrennial session in Pike's Opera House, Cincinnati, May 1, Bishop Scott presiding. Delegates numbering about 400 are entertained at private houses. The conference will be in session one month.

A RENEWAL of the old animosity between Irish and French dock laborers, in Quebec, Canada, a few days since, resulted in a terrible combat, the death of two men, and the serious injury of a large number of others.... The boom in the iron trade appears to be subsiding. The manufacturers of Pittsburgh are cutting down the wages of their employes in order to keep running, and many others are stopping work entirely. Over-production is the probable cause....Immigrants from Europe to this country are more plentifully supplied with cash now than those of former years. The immigrants who landed last week are reported to have been possessed of $400,000 in cash.

AMERICAN grain merchants are establishing branch houses at Calais, France....An extraordinary suicide occurred in St. Louis the other day. A German named Yaeger was observed standing near a railroad track in the southern part of the city, apparently waiting for a train. When a train at length came in sight he ran upon the track, and, finding a spot suited to him, laid down deliberately with his head upon the rail, just as the train came near. The wheels cut of his head neatly, throwing it some distance from the body. The face wore a smile when the head was picked up, and was not marred in any way.... The steamer Moravian, at Halifax, reports seeing the Polynesian in the ice in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, but had no communication with her. The Polynesian had over 1,000 passengers on board....A terrible affray is reported from Wayne county, Ky. A man named Powell, who was a witness to the killing last fall, of Hutchison by Phillips, has been begged and threatened by Phillips, in order to keep him from testifying. Powell refused to leave the country or accept a bribe. The other night a party of six or seven masked men attacked Powell's house and broke in the door with a rail, when Powell struck three of them down with an ax. Mrs. Powell was shot in the arm. The maskers retreated, but again returned, when Powell fired and killed the leader, who proved to be John Will Smith. Phillips was recognized in the assaulting party. ....Mrs. Maria Jones, of Christianburg, Va., while suffering from mental derangement, set fire to her house and destroyed it, together with herself and five children. Neighbors attempted a rescue, but the frantic woman intimidated them with threats until it was too late.

WALNUT RIDGE, a wealthy Quaker settlement northwest of Rushville, Ind., has lately been greatly excited over a new religion which they call the White-Lightning religion. The excitement became so great that schools were dismissed and the people left their places of business and farms to participate. The leaders pretended to supernatural power, and held the bodies of their friends with attempts to revive them till burial was compelled by the authorities....A most extraordinary decision has just been rendered by the French Court of Appeals. A modest girl who was engaged by a Parisian theater manager as a ballet-dancer refused to appear in a certain costume because she considered it vulgarly immodest. The manager fined her 150 francs for her refusal, whereupon the actress applied to the courts, which decided adversely to the claims of the modest ballet-girl. ....At the quarterly meeting of the Quebec Board of Trade, it was decided to make an inquiry into the working of the charter of the Quebec Ship-Laborers' Benevolent Society, and to adopt such measures as will secure the independence of labor and protect the lives of those engaged therein.

WASHINGTON.

SECRETARY THOMPSON has directed the Alliance, at the Norfolk Navy Yard, to proceed to Newfoundland, and guard the interests of American fishermen. The Alliance carries six guns....It is expected that the President will order the officer in command in that department to prevent the contemplated invasion of the Ute reservation, and will, in addition, issue the usual form of proclamation in such cases.

COL. WILLIAM HEMPHILL JONES, Clerk of the Ways and Means Committee, died in Washington last week. It was to this gentleman Gen. Dix sent his famous telegram, "If any man attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot."

JOSEPH SEGAR, a noted Virginia old-time Whig politician, connected with the Spanish Mixed Claims Commission, dropped dead on the boat recently while going to Washington from Norfolk.

THE veteran Maj. Gen. Heintzelman, who served gallantly in the Union army all through the war, and commanded a division at the first battle of Bull Run, died in Washington last week....A new and very successful petty swindle has been discovered at the Government Printing Office. A custom exists there of advancing pay upon the "dupes," or duplicate proofs of the compositors. One of the printers has been detected in wrongly stamping duplicate proofs and obtaining the money upon them....The name of Gov. Richard J. Oglesby, of Illinois, is very favorably mentioned in connection with the forthcoming vacancy in the Cabinet caused by the appointment of Postmaster General Key to a Judgeship.

THE claim of Chicago as the proper location for the new national mint is being vigorously urged by Representative George R. Davis....The House Committee on Postoffices and Post-roads reported favorably a bill providing for a double postal card....W. H. Doolittle, Assistant Commissioner of Patents, has tendered his resignation....Gen. Miles has been ordered to return to his post on the Northwestern frontier....It is now believed that the President will not appoint the successor of Postmaster General Key until after the Chicago Convention shall have nominated a Presidential ticket.

THE President signed the Army Appropriation bill and the Fortification Appropriation bill, but vetoed the Deficiency bill on account of a rider attached to it...The House Committee on Appropriations has recommended an item of $145,000 for the improvement of the Chicago harbor. The committee has also reported in favor of a survey of the river, in accordance with the request of Congressman Davis.... The Senate confirmed Joseph K. McCammon, of Pennsylvania, Assistant Attorney General of the United States; N. C. Paul, Census Supervisor Fifth District of Indiana; Robert B. Stuart, Receiver of Public Moneys, Olympia, Wyoming. ....The House Committee on Indian Affairs has agreed to recommend the passage by the House of a bill to transfer the Indian Bureau from the Interior to the War Department, with an amendment, that the transfer shall be made July 1, 1881, instead of 1880, as originally provided.

SECRETARY SHERMAN has ordered the purchase of $3,000,000 worth of bonds for the sinking fund....There is a movement on foot in the Senate, started by Voorhees, to establish a national library in Washington....The House has passed a bill appropriating $250,000 for printing. The Public Printer threatened that unless the appropriation was made work would be discontinued ...At a meeting of the House Committee on Railways and Canals Representative Wise made a favorable report upon the bill providing for an appropriation of $15,000 to defray the expense of surveying a route for a canal to connect the waters of Lake Erie and Lake Michigan, utilizing the old Wabash and Erie canal upon a portion of the route....The marriage of Miss Eleanor Mary Sherman, daughter of Gen. W. T. Sherman, to Lieut. Alex. Montgomery Thackara, United States navy, has been solemnized at Gen. Sherman's residence.... The Supreme Court of the District has denied the appeal of Mrs. Oliver from the rulings of Chief Justice Cartter's decision in favor of ex-Senator Cameron. She will appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

FOREIGN.

A CABLE dispatch from Ireland says the United States relief ship Constellation will undergo some repairs and sail homeward-bound about the 10th of May. The Duke of Edinburgh, in the dispatch boat Lively, took stores to the people on the western coast of Connaught. ....It is announced that last week a steamer touched off Lundy island, at the entrance to Bristol channel, for the purpose of transferring two passengers to a fishing smack. The steamer is named the Helene. She has a cargo of 12,000 rifles, 4,000,000 cartridges, and a torpedo launch. These will be landed in Crete about the end of May, when a revolution is to break out in various parts of the island. Two passengers are Cretan agents entrusted with the purchase of arms. This is the ship some American correspondents said was intended for a raid on Cuba.

ST. PETERSBURG advices says the Russian Government has received information that China has solicited and has received the aid of numerous Americans for her army and navy. She is increasing her fleet in the Pacific, which is already known to be larger than that of Russia. Consequently the Russian fleet will be largely reinforced. The Government is also considering the policy of reprisal upon the privileges of Americans within the Russian domains....The Nihilists are reported as leaving Russia in large numbers....During a fire at Grusbach, Moravia, some malicious persons incited a mob to attack the Jews. One Jew was mortally injured, another had a hand cut off, and others were saved with the utmost difficulty....Advices from Shanghai state that all business is unsatisfactory and in a critical state, owing to the uneasiness caused by the state of affairs at Pekin and the probability of a war with Russia.... In consequence of the refusal of the Reichstag to grant a subsidy, the Directors of the German South Sea Trading Company have resolved to summon a meeting of the shareholders to appoint liquidators to wind up the affairs of the company....The town of Osurgeti, in Russia, is reported entirely destroyed by fire, causing great suffering and distress to the inhabitants.

FRENCH newspapers inform us that more than 250,000 persons now in France are awaiting transportation to this country....A committee headed by the Duc de la Rochefoucauld, a Legitimism member of the Chamber of Deputies, has been formed in Paris to raise a fund for the defense of religious liberty....A cable dispatch states that the situation in Northern Albania is most serious. The combined Albanian clans, numbering 15,000 men, are advancing to attack the Montenegrins' positions in the Movatscha valley, and, if possible, recover Podgoritza....A submarine telegraph cable from Singapore to the Phillippine islands has been laid....A dispatch from Valparaiso says the Chilian fleet is bombarding Callao. The Chilian army is advancing rapidly upon Tacua.... A Berlin dispatch says: Owing to Bismarck's nervous system being much overstrained, the physicians of his family urge his temporary retirement from state affairs, and it is expected he will take a long leave of absence....The British troops in Afghanistan have forced communication with Cabul. The whole of Gen. Ross' force has arrived in that city. Gen. Stewart has taken charge, Gen. Roberts retaining divisional command.

THE Marquis of Ripon has been appointed Viceroy of India....The officers of the United States relief ship Constellation have visited the Lakes of Killarney, and also paid their respects to the celebrated Blarney stone, which every true Irishman is supposed to kiss once in his lifetime. The officers performed the customary osculatory ceremony, and are reported as doing well....The House of Commons has appointed a committee to examine the claim of Charles Bradlaugh to make affirmation, instead of taking the usual oath of members. Bradlaugh being an avowed atheist, his taking the customary oath would be a gross absurdity....Parnell having been elected to sit for Cork, A. M. Sullivan has consented to stand for Meath county. ....A stand fell at the Nerac races, near Agen, France, injuring 100 persons.... The rebellion in Afghanistan is now practically ended. Very few rebels remain in arms, and the villagers are helping hunt them out.... King Humbert, of Italy, has dissolved the Italian Chamber of Deputies, and ordered new elections....Bismarck's health is so far restored that he promises to return to his Parliamentary duties at an early day.

WOLFF & Co., of Buenos Ayres and Paris, have failed. Liabilities stated at £200,000....Advices from Constantinople are to the effect that the power of the Porte is rapidly waning, and a reign of anarchy is predicted.... Over 7,000 men are on a strike in the North of England in consequence of the iron manufacturers having reduced wages 5 per cent. The cotton manufacturers at Burnley, Blackburn and other Lancashire towns have agreed on a reduction of wages, and a strike is imminent.... Intelligence by way of London from Turkey goes to show that the recent invasion of the Albanians of the territory which the Porte was to have yielded to Montenegro, has been instigated by the Turkish authorities and organized and planned by Turkish officers, and it is extremely probable a declaration of war by Montenegro against Turkey will follow....Capt. Potter, of the relief ship Constellation, has been presented with the freedom of the city of Dublin....The Chinese in Hong Kong have subscribed liberally to the Irish famine relief fund. ....An explosion at a coal mine near Nagasaki, Japan, killed about fifty persons.

THE infant Princess of the reigning house of Greece has been baptized, and it required representatives of the Danish, English, Russian and German royal families to perform the ceremony in a satisfactory manner.... The West of England and Southwark Bank directors, charged with falsifying accounts and conspiring to defraud, have been acquitted. The bank suspended in 1878.... A dispatch from St. Petersburg says: "Instead of the amelioration of the position of the Jews, the police measures against them are enforced more stringently than formerly. Persons in business are required to quit the capital on twenty-four-hours' notice, and Jewish strangers arriving are ordered to depart in the same summary manner."....The English residents of Peru are threatened with violence because of their sympathy with the Chilians. The Peruvians have also an idea that the English Government favors their enemies.

BOSTON is to have a new Court House erected on a site costing $800,000, on Pemberton square.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

The Senate indulged in a little verbal sparring on the morning of Thursday, April 29, on the proposition to have the President appoint two cadets each year for West Point. Senator Conkling made a most stalwart speech, while Senator Hoar opposed the amendment as recognizing differences in race and assuming that there is not at West Point perfect equality before the law. Amendments to the Indian Appropriation bill were made, and the bill was passed. The following bills were introduced and referred: By Mr. Teller, to grant titles to lands patented by the United States; by Mr. Ingalls, to facilitate the business of the Treasury Department. The joint resolution authorizing the President to call an international sanitary conference at Washington was passed. The report of the conferees upon the Immediate Deficiency bill was agreed to....In the House, Mr. McMahon submitted a conference report on the Special Deficiency bill, and it was agreed to. The Senate amendments to the Post Route bill were concurred in. The House went into committee of the whole on the bill amending the Internal Revenue laws. The bill was not disposed of at adjournment. The House met at 7:30, and immediately went into committee of the whole on the bill organizing a Court of Pensions. After some time spent in general debate, the committee rose and the House adjourned.

Mr. Allison made a speech in the Senate, on the morning of the 30th ult., upon his amendment to the bill to establish a retired list for non-commissioned officers, the amendment being to direct the President to appoint two colored cadets-at-large to West Point yearly. The morning hour having expired, the Naval Appropriation bill was taken up and passed. Mr. Plumb, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported a resolution calling on the Secretary of the Interior for information as to any recent changes in the rulings of the department affecting the entries of town sites on public lands, and requesting him to suspend action thereon pending Congressional action on the subject. Adopted. Mr. Vance then spoke upon the Kellogg case, but before the conclusion of his remarks the Senate adjourned for the purpose of allowing Senators to attend the funeral of Mr. Middleton, late Clerk of the Supreme Court, which was about to take place from the Capitol. The President nominated Orange Ferris, of New York, to be Second Auditor of the Treasury, vice French, deceased....In the House, bills were introduced and referred: By Mr. Chalmers, extending the letter-carrier system to cities of 10,000 inhabitants; by Mr. Wells, to establish an assay office in St. Louis. The House then went into committee of the whole (Mr. Stevenson in the chair) on the private calendar. The committee rose, and a number of bills granting pensions passed, and the House adjourned.

The Senate was not in session on Saturday, May 1....In the House, the bill passed for the relief of Notre Dame College, at South Bend, Ind. On motion of Mr. Price, the bill passed providing that the oath of affirmation in verifying returns made by the national banks may be taken before notaries public. Mr. Money, of Mississippi, offered a resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to send 4,000 rations to Macon, Miss., for the use of the sufferers made destitute by the cyclone of April 25. Adopted. May 13 was set aside for the consideration of the bill to establish additional training schools for Indian youths. Mr. Blackburn, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported the Postoffice Appropriation bill. Ordered printed, and recommitted. The bill recommends an appropriation of $38,000,000. The House then went into committee of the whole on the bill amending the Internal Revenue law. All day was passed on this bill, no action being reached.

A bill for the payment of about $500,000 to Ben Holladay for carrying the mails occupied the morning hour of the Senate on Monday, May 3, but was not disposed of. Messrs. Eaton, Davis and Windom were appointed a committee of conference on the disagreeing vote of the two houses on the Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation bill. Mr. Ingalls introduced a bill to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States. The Vice President laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War asking an appropriation of $142,000 for clothing, camp and garrison equipage, etc., donated by act of Congress for the use of civilians. A large number of petitions in favor of the Labor-Tariff Commission bill were presented. Mr. Paddock presented a petition of citizens of Omaha for the establishment of a branch mint at that place. A bill was introduced by Mr. Williams to establish an ocean mail service between the United States and certain foreign ports and providing adequate compensation therefor. Mr. Vest obtained the floor to speak on the Kellogg resolutions, but yielded to Mr. Saunders, on whose motion the bill extending the northern boundary of Nebraska was taken up, and, after debate, recommitted. Mr. Vance then spoke upon the Kellogg matter. The President nominated Edward L. Johnson, of Denver, to be United States District Attorney for Colorado....In the House, Mr. Orth was given unanimous consent to make a personal explanation to-morrow in regard to his connection with the claims against Venezuela and the Congressional investigation of the Forty-fourth Congress in regard thereto. Bills were introduced: By Mr. Ellis, to establish Government postal telegraph service for the United States between Boston and Washington intermediate postoffices; by Mr. King, a resolution calling for information in regard to the expulsion of the Israelites who were citizens of the United States from St. Petersburg, Russia; by Mr. Manning, a resolution declaring that the Secretary of the Interior had not transmitted certain information called for by the House relative to the Modoc, Pawnee, and other Indian tribes, and directing him to do so or state why he cannot; by Mr. Doggett, to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy. The Republicans demanded the reading of each measure introduced, the impression being that their purpose was to prevent an anti-third-term resolution being offered after the call of States should have been concluded. The bill introduced by Mr. Doggett was a long printed bill. It was moved that the House adjourn, inasmuch as it was evident the whole day would be wasted. Agreed to.

A bill was introduced by Mr. Morgan in the Senate on the 3d inst., to provide that the President of the Senate shall submit to the Senate and House, when assembled to count the votes for President and Vice President, all packages purporting to contain electoral votes. The House bill to furnish four condemned cannon for the soldiers' monument at Marietta, Ohio, passed. Also, the Senate resolution authorizing a loan of tents for the soldiers' reunion at Wichita, Kan. Mr. Teller, from the Committee on Railroads, reported favorably on the bill authorizing the Wyoming, Montana, and Pacific Railroad Company to build its road across Fort Russell and Fort Laramie military reservations. Passed. Mr. Vest made a speech upon the Kellogg case. Messrs. Beck, Withers, and Allison were appointed conferees on the disagreeing vote of the two houses on the Indian Appropriation bill. The bill authorizing a claims convention with Nicaragua was again taken up, and the doors closed for its consideration. It was afterward passed. The Senate rejected the following nominations of Census Supervisors: John H. Littler, Second district, Ohio; John H. McFie, Eighth district, Illinois; George S. Houghton, Third district, Iowa.... In the House, Mr. Orth made a personal explanation in regard to his connection with the claims against the Government of Venezuela in 1874. Mr. Reagan, Chairman of the Committee on Commerce, reported the River and Harbor Appropriation bill. Ordered printed and recommitted. Mr. Wells, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported back the Indian Appropriation bill, with Senate amendments, with recommendations that some of the amendments be concurred in and some non-concurred in. Report agreed to. The Speaker then laid before the House the President's message vetoing the Special Deficiency bill, and it was read. The veto message was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and the bill laid on the Speaker's table. The Carlisle Internal-revenue bill was passed. The House passed the remainder of the day in committee of the whole on the Postoffice Appropriation bill.

Mr. Wallace, from the select committee to inquire into the alleged frauds in the late election, submitted a report of the result of the investigation on the subject of denial or abridgement of suffrage in Rhode Island, on the 5th inst., and reported a bill to enforce the provisions of the amendments to the constitution of the United States. Mr. Booth, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported favorably the House bill for the relief of settlers on public lands, and it passed. It provides that when a pre-emption, homestead, or timber-culture claimant shall file a written relinquishment of his claim to the local land office, the land covered by said claim shall be open and subject to entry without further action by the Land Commissioner. Where any person has contested, paid the land fees, and procured the cancellation of any entry, he shall be notified by the Register of the Land Office of that district, and shall be allowed thirty days to enter the land. Any settler who hereafter proceeds to enter land under the Homestead laws shall be allowed the same time to perfect his original entry as is now allowed settlers under the Pre-emption laws, and his right shall relate back to the date of settlement as if he settled under the Pre-emption laws. The bill authorizing the sale of Fort Logan, M. T., and to establish a new post on Musselshell river, M. T., was passed. On motion of Mr. Voorhees, the bill for a joint commission to arrange for better accommodation for the Congressional Library was taken up, to allow him to speak in its support. The Senate devoted the afternoon to the consideration of the bill making appropriations for the expenses of the District of Columbia. The President nominated John W. Peebles, of Marion, Supervisor of the Census for the Eighth district of Illinois, and George S. Houghton, of Tabor, for the Third district of Iowa....The House, by unanimous consent, passed a bill appropriating $250,000 to enable the Public Printer to continue his work. The Senate resolution was concurred in for printing 3,000 copies of the report of the board to test iron and other metals. Some time was spent in committee upon the Postoffice Appropriation bill. A bill was passed granting the Memphis and Vicksburg Railroad Company the right of way through the United States Cemetery tract of land near Vicksburg. Mr. Frost offered a resolution for the appointment of a standing committee on the Mississippi river and its tributaries. The Senate amendment to the House bill for the sale of Fort Logan and the establishment of a new fort on the frontier was concurred in. The House then took a recess, the evening session to be for the consideration of the District Code bill.

FEDERAL FINANCES.

The statement of the public debt for the month of May is as follows:

Six per cent. bonds		$ 249,961,300
Five per cents		492,680,300
Four and one-half per cents		250,000,000
Four per cents		739,322,850
Refunding certificates		1,534,850
Navy pension fund		14,000,000
Total coin bonds		$1,742,698,400
Matured debt	$ 6,877,635
Legal tenders	346,742,106
Certificates of deposit	8,760,000
Fractional currency	15,604,337
Gold and silver certificates	20,274,320
Total without interest		391,961,013
Total interest	$ 13,022,099
Total debt		$2,147,907,046
Cash in treasury		199,464,898
Debt less cash in treasury		$1,968,314,752
Decrease during April		12,078,070
Decrease since June 30, 1879		56,892,509
Current liabilities—
Interest due and unpaid		3,320,089
Debt on which interest has ceased		6,877,635
Interest thereon		649,404
Gold and silver certificates		20,274,320
United States notes held for redemption of certificates of deposit		8,760,000
Cash balance available, May 1, 1880		157,392,961
Total		$ 199,464,898
Available assets—
Cash in treasury		199,464,898
Bonds issued to Pacific railway companies, interest payable in lawful money, principal outstanding		64,623,512
Interest accrued and not yet paid		1,292,470
Interest paid by United States		46,881,155
Interest repaid by transportation of mails		12,084,819
By cash payments of 5 per cent. of net earnings		655,196
Balance of interest paid by the United States		32,911,227

The official statement of the coinage at the mints for the month of April is as follows: Double eagles, $1,320,000; eagles, $3,173,100; half eagles, $2,317,600; silver dollars, $2,300,000; cents, $21,200; total coinage, $9,131,900.

The Comptroller of the Currency reports the net increase of national-bank notes for the year ending May 1, 1880, is $15,900,390. Increase of legal-tender notes on deposit for the month of April, $525,993, and the increase for the year ending May 1, 1880, was $5,770,501, and the amount of legal-tender notes now on deposit, $19,126,740. The total amount of national-bank notes outstanding on May 1, 1880, is $343,579,300, not including the national gold bank notes amounting to $1,351,550. Amount of called bonds now held on security for the circulation of national-bank notes, $1,760,700, of which $1,722,700 are 10-40s, and $38,000 5-20s. Amount of 6s of 1861 held by the banks, $54,075,150, and the amount of 5 per cent. funded 81s, $154,703,250.

The National Bank Redemption Agency reports national-bank notes disposed of for the month of April amounting to $8,100,800.

Following is the statement of United States currency outstanding this date:

Old demand notes	$ 61,690
Legal-tender notes, all issues	346,681,016
One-year notes of 1863	47,155
Two-year notes of 1863	13,000
Compound-interest notes	247,340
Fractional currency, all issues	15,604,591
Total	$362,677,545

The receipts from customs for the month just closed were $17,546,560, against $12,940,052 for April, 1879, and the receipts from internal revenue were $10,767,478, against $7,946,513 for the corresponding month of last year. This showes a net increase for the month from these two sources, compared with April, 1879, of $8,527,473, and a net increase for ten months closed May 1, compared with the corresponding ten months of 1879, of nearly $53,000,000. The receipts from sources other than customs and internal revenue do not vary much, and are not included in the above figures.

Veto Message by the President.

The President has sent to the House of Representatives the following message, vetoing the Deficiency Appropriation bill:

To the House of Representatives:

After mature consideration of the bill entitled "An act making appropriations to supply certain deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes," I return it to the House of Representatives, in which it originated, with my objections to its passage. The bill appropriates about $800,000, of which over $600,000 is for the payment of the fees of United States Marshals and of general and special Deputy Marshals earned during the current fiscal year, and their incidental expenses. The appropriations made in the bill are needed to carry on the operations of the Government and to fulfill its obligations for the payment of money long since due its officers for services and expenses essential to the execution of their duties under the laws of the United States. The necessity for these appropriations is so urgent and they have already been so long delayed that if the bill before me contained no permanent or legal legislation unconnected with these appropriations it would receive my prompt approval. It contains, however, provisions which materially change, and, by implication, repeal important parts of the laws for the regulation of the United States elections. These laws have for several years been the subject of vehement political controversy, and have been denounced as unnecessary, oppressive, and unconstitutional. On the other hand, it has been maintained with equal zeal and earnestness that the elections laws are indispensable to fair and lawful elections, and are clearly warranted by the constitution. Under these circumstances, to attempt, in an appropriation bill, a modification or repeal of these laws, is to annex a condition to the passage of needed and proper appropriations, which tends to deprive the Executive of that equal and independent exercise of discretion and judgment which the constitution contemplates. The objection to the bill, therefore, to which I respectfully ask your attention is that it gives marked and deliberate sanction, attended by no circumstances of pressing necessity, to a questionable, and, as I am clearly of the opinion, the dangerous practice of tacking upon appropriation bills general and permanent legislation. This practice opens wide the door to hasty, inconsiderate and sinister legislation. It invites attacks upon the independence and constitutional powers of the Executive by providing an easy and effective way of constraining the Executive discretion. Although of late this practice has been resorted to by all political parties when clothed with power, it did not prevail until forty years after the adoption of the constitution, and it is confidently believed that it is condemned by the enlightened judgment of the country. The States which have adopted new constitutions during the last quarter of a century have generally provided remedies for the peril. Many of them have enacted that no law shall contain more than one subject, which shall be plainly expressed in its title. Constitutions of more than half the States contain substantially this provision, or some other of like intent and meaning. The public welfare will be promoted in many ways by a return to the early practice of the Government and to the true interest of legislation, which is that every measure should stand upon its own merits.

I am firmly convinced that appropriation bills ought not to contain any legislation not relevant to the application or expenditure of money thereby appropriated, and that, by a strict adherence to this principle, an important and much-needed reform will be accomplished. Placing my objection to the bill on this feature of its frame, I forbear any comment upon the important general and permanent legislation which it contains, as matter for specific and independent consideration.

(Signed) RUTHERFORD B. HAYES.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, May 4, 1880.

Secretary Sherman on Redemption.

The following letter has just been sent by the Secretary of the Treasury to Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the United States Senate:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 30th ult., transmitting the Senate bill to define the amount and manner of purchase of public loans to be made by the Secretary of the Treasury, and requesting my views in regard thereto. The bill in question requires the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase outstanding obligations of the United States bearing interest at 6 per cent. per annum, to an amount not less than $3,000,000 each week until he shall have purchased and extinguished all such outstanding obligations, these purchases to be made in addition to and independent of any purchases of outstanding obligations of the United States made by the Secretary on account of the sinking fund. The bill also provides that all purchases of bonds hereafter made shall be advertised in the public press on Monday of each week, and the purchase of the amounts thus advertised for shall be made by the treasury on Wednesday of each week.

In reply I have to state that the amount of 6-per-cent. obligations now outstanding is about $250,000,000, which, under the provisions of this act, the treasury would be obliged to purchase within the next fifty weeks. To accomplish this purpose, surplus revenues within that period must amount to the face of the bonds and the premium paid thereon, the present rate of which is about 6 per cent., or the reserve in the treasury accumulated for redemption purposes must be used or resort be had to increased taxation.

The surplus revenues since the 1st of January, though larger than was expected, or can be expected in future, have been only about $10,000,000 a month, but should they continue at the same rate they will provide for payment within the next fifty weeks of less than one-half the bonds which this bill requires to be purchased. With the Deficiency bill now pending in Congress, and which will soon become law, and the probable appropriations for the next year, there is no probability of having such a large amount of surplus revenues as stated. There is at present of cash in the treasury about $152,000,000 above all matured liabilities, excepting United States notes. Of this amount there is of fractional silver coins and minor coins about $23,000,000, which would not be available for the purchase of bonds, these coins being legal tenders only in small amounts. This would leave of available cash in the treasury about $129,000,000, which amount was accumulated to a large extent by the sale of bonds for resumption of specie payments, and is a little less than 40 per cent. of the amount of outstanding notes. Neither the law nor sound public policy seems to permit any encroachment on this fund. There would seem, therefore, to be no method of carrying out the provisions of the bill except by resort to increased taxation, and the propriety of such increase for this purpose must be determined by Congress. I deem the matter of advertising in advance the amount of bonds to be purchased as inadvisable. Such course would only enable bankers and brokers to advance the price of bonds and to dictate terms to the treasury. Under the existing method of making purchases it is understood by all that the surplus of the Government will be paid out from week to week in the purchase of bonds, bids for which will be received up to noon of each Wednesday at the sub-treasury in New York. The amount of bonds to be purchased is not made public until after all bids are in, thus preventing any combination to compel the treasury to pay exorbitant rates for bonds, and it is well understood that the department reserves the right to reject all bids should prices be considered unduly high—a right which would be surrendered under the proposed bill.

I know of no reason for making any purchases of bonds beyond the amount of surplus revenues, and for this purpose the treasury already has sufficient authority, while the present method of making purchases is probably as advantageous to the Government as any that can be devised. I am, very respectfully,

JOHN SHERMAN, Secretary.

THERE can be no doubt about the genuineness of the conversion of the unknown man who sent $130, in the following letter, to the War Department: "I was in the arms of the late war, a Union soldier, and I did a great rong by takieng a horse belonging to the Government and sold him and kept the money. I joined the M. E. Church, and asked Go for mercy, and I had to promcee him to pay for the horse, and I did so, and he forgave my sins, and now I am able to pay the money into your hand, as it belongs to the Government."

IN Washington county, Pa., while the body of Mrs. Miller was being carried to the grave, a furious hail and wind storm raged. Carriages were overturned and their occupants injured. Many of the carriages had to be held down by several persons to prevent capsizing until the storm subsided. The scene was a lively one, women and children crying and screaming at the top of their voices.

THE oldest pensioner on the widow's roll at Washington died the other day at the age of 117—so it was believed. She had been drawing pay for over sixty years.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
BEEVES	$8 00	@10 00
HOGS	4 00	@ 5 [illegible]
COTTON	11¾	@ 12
FLOUR—Superfine	4 00	@ 4 75
WHEAT—No. 2	1 26	@ 1 29
CORN—Western Mixed	50	@ 52
OATS—Mixed	42	@ 43
RYE—Western	92	@ 95
PORK—Mess	10 00	@10 50
LARD	7	@ 7¼
CHICAGO.
BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	4 45	@ 4 90
Cows and Heifers	2 60	@ 4 00
Medium to Fair	4 00	@ 4 15
HOGS	3 50	@ 4 50
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter Ex	5 50	@ 6 25
Good to Choice Spring Ex	5 00	@ 5 75
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 13	@ 1 15
No. 3 Spring	97	@ 98
CORN—No. 2	36	@ 37
OATS—No. 2	29	@ 30
RYE—No. 2	78	@ 79
BARLEY—No. 2	79	@ 80
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	21	@ 22
EGGS—Fresh	8½	@ 9
PORK—Mess	9 90	@10 00
LARD	6¾	@ 7
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—No. 1	1 16	@ 1 17
No. 2	1 10	@ 1 11
CORN—No. 2	36	@ 37
OATS—No. 2	29	@ 30
RYE—No. 1	76	@ 77
BARLEY—No. 2	69	@ 70
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red, Fall	1 10	@ 1 11
CORN—Mixed	32	@ 33
OATS—No. 2	30	@ 31
RYE	73	@ 74
PORK—Mess	10 00	@10 25
LARD	6½	@ 6¾
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT	1 13	@ 1 14
CORN	40	@ 41
OATS	33	@ 34
RYE	84	@ 85
PORK—Mess	10 00	@10 25
LARD	6¾	@ 7
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—Amber Michigan	1 17	@ 1 18
No. 2 Red	1 17	@ 1 18
CORN—No. 2	39	@ 40
OATS—No. 2	33	@ 34
DETROIT.
FLOUR—Choice	5 65	@ 5 75
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 13	@ 1 14
No. 2 Amber	1 12	@ 1 13
CORN—No. 1	41	@ 42
OATS—Mixed	36	@ 37
BARLEY (per cental)	1 20	@ 1 30
PORK—Mess	11 50	@12 00
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	1 08	@ 1 09
CORN	38	@ 39
OATS	32	@ 34
PORK—Clear	12 00	@12 50
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
CATTLE—Best	5 00	@ 5 25
Fair	4 00	@ 4 50
Common	3 50	@ 3 80
HOGS	4 40	@ 4 60
SHEEP	4 75	@ 6 00

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED, ROB. J. LOWRY } Editors.

A very old man was attacked by a bull-dog at Burtonville, Miss. He climbed to the top of a fence, but the beast jumped high enough to reach his legs and pull him down. He defended himself as well as he could with his cane, but was finally killed by the dog.

The King of Sweden has decided to create Prof. Nordenskjold a Baronet, and to present to him the Grand Cross of the Order of the North Star in diamonds of the value of 1,000 guineas. Thirty thousand visitors arrived in Stockholm to witness the professor's arrival in the Vega.

The editor of a newspaper that has adopted phonetic spelling, in a measure, received a postal card from an old subscriber in the country, which read as follows: "I hev tuk your paper for leven yeres, but, if you kant spel enny better than you have been doin' for the las to munths, you may jes stoppit."

The Independent condemns the practice of announcing "no collection" in the notices of religious meetings: "Since the fall of man, there is no older or more solemn act of worship of God than giving. As well announce no singing, no prayer, or no preaching. They are not one whit more religious or Christian than giving, as an act of worship."

A rare sight was seen in San Antonio, Texas, on San Jacinto day. Of the veterans of Analhuac, Velasco and Goliad who assembled every one had white hair—250 snowy heads around one table. The Alamo was visited by hundreds, who thought of Davy Crockett as they read over the doorway: "Thermopylæ had her messenger of defeat, the Alamo had none."

The collection of portraits of Presidents in the White House is to be made entirely complete by the addition of those of Buchanan and Johnson, which Mr. E. F. Andrews now has orders to paint. The former will be an enlarged copy of a miniature which Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson has of him. A photograph only of Andrew Johnson can be found to aid the artist in making a portrait of him in oil.

The Westminster Review reckons the public debt of the world at the present time at $24,000,000,000. The railway indebtedness has been estimated at $6,000,000,000 and municipal debts at $5,000,000,000, thus bringing the public indebtedness of the world up to the vast sum of $35,000,000,000. It is not expected that this will ever be paid, but it constitutes an annual lien on the industry of the world of $1,700,000,000.

The first vessel ever chartered to carry California wines to Europe has just sailed for Bremen with a cargo of 100,000 gallons, which was ordered by one of the largest firms in that city, and which is intended for the German market exclusively. This seems something like carrying coals to Newcastle, until we recollect that, by reason of the phylloxera and other plagues, the German wine-growers are sadly crippled, and the dealers find it necessary to import wines from some other quarter.

During the flush times of 1869 Ozias Bailey was one of the richest men in Kansas. He didn't know what to do with his surplus money, and so put it in St. Louis and San Francisco railroad stock. The stock was then selling at $3 a share. When the hard times followed, Bailey lost every dollar of his money in one way or the other. His fortune was at the ebb, and he only continued to hold his railroad stock as so much worthless paper. Recently, upon the consolidation of the St. Louis and San Francisco with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, he sold out for a round million.

The Savannah News says: During the war Gen. McLaws, now Postmaster at Savannah, was riding down his picket line and encountered a genuine son of the Old Pine Tree State on duty, who had taken his gun apart with the intention of giving it a thorough cleaning. The General halted in front of him, when the following conversation ensued: "Look here, my man, are you not a sentinel on duty?" "Well, y-a-s, a bit of a one!" "Don't you know it is wrong to take your gun apart while on duty?" "Well, now, who the devil are you?" The General saw his chance, and, with a sly twinkle of the eye, replied: "I'm a bit of a General." "Well, Gineral, you must excuse me. You see thar is so many —— fools ridin' 'round here a fellow can't tell who's Gineral and who ain't. If you will jist wait till I get Betsey Jane fixed I will give you a bit of a s'lute."

The Hartford newspapers mention a prominent Congregational clergymen of that city, but without naming him, who was called to officiate at the funeral of an old member of his church. The son and heir of the dead man was a prominent Episcopalian, and so averse to Congregationalism that he not only insisted on confining the minister to the Episcopal burial service, but sent him a prayer book, in which passages were marked for use. But he omitted to designate any prayer, and the clergyman, after reading all the marked things, complacently sat down. There was an awkward pause. Then the sexton whispered the question whether there was to be no prayer. "I have done all that was requested," was the reply. Then the son sent an inquiry as to the stop, and was informed that all he had marked had been read. "For goodness' sake," he said, "offer a prayer in your own way," and the Congregationalist triumphantly prayed extemporaneously.

It is a long time since Prince Bismarck has spent his birthday in Berlin, as he has a strong aversion to the showy demonstrations made in the city upon such occasions. At his country house, however, he is not able to escape a hailstorm of congratulations and gifts upon that day. The staff of officials at the local postoffice has to be considerably augmented, and loads of letters, telegrams and parcels pour in from all parts of Germany and from other countries. Many a peasant or loyal burgher in some remote corner of the empire thinks it his duty to render tribute to the Prince; the first plover's eggs to be found in the Frisian marshes, the finest snipes procurable, the choicest produce of farm or dairy, are certain to reach Prince Bismarck's larder, which, as he once jocosely remarked, scarcely needed any other replenishing than that afforded by the gratuitous offerings of his numberless admirers and substantial well-wishers.

In 1874 a man named Udderzook was hanged in Pennsylvania, on circumstantial evidence, for having killed his brother-in-law, W. T. Goss. He died professing his innocence. It appears, however, that he left a confession with the stipulation that it be not published till the lapse of the statutory time, which would free Goss' brother from prosecution as a party to an attempt to defraud some insurance companies. The three conspired together, got $25,000 on Goss' life; got a "stiff" and put it in his house, which they burned down. His wife, who really supposed him dead, brought suit to collect the money from the insurance companies; but suspicion finally turned on Udderzook, and he was finally hanged. Many people have since held a belief in his innocence. The stipulated time having expired, his confession is published. He tells how Goss, in his hiding, became dissipated, and, fearing that, in one of his drunken fits, he would divulge the secret, he enticed him into the woods one day, made him drunk, and killed him.

CO-OPERATIVE LIFE INSURANCE.

A Western Official Opinion.

Hon. T. B. Needles, State Auditor, and Insurance Commissioner for Illinois, speaks as follows upon the subject of assessment life insurance:

State of Illinois, Auditor's Office, }
Springfield, April 20. }

In my judgment co-operative life insurance, as offered by the various mutual-aid societies now in operation, is unsound and fallacious, full of errors, and sure to bring disappointment and loss to those who trust to its protection.

When the benevolent feature is attached to secret societies and organizations in which there are other and paramount interests to bind the members together, it may no doubt be productive of great good in rendering assistance in misfortune and relieving the families of deceased members; but this cannot take place or perform the office of life insurance proper.

The independent co-operative societies, however, do not possess even this element of cohesion. They are money-making concerns, intended to benefit their originators, officers and managers, while their real object is disguised under various benevolent and mutual-aid titles. Their membership consists of persons who have no community of interest, who are not acquainted with one another, who are not actuated by benevolent motives in joining or paying assessments, but who are governed solely by self-interest.

The bond of union is so weak that, should the societies fail to fulfill the large promises of their agents, should the mortality increase and the assessments multiply more rapidly than was anticipated, and the members find that it did not pay to remain and there is no loss attending withdrawal, they will drop out in large numbers. The indefiniteness of the contract, the misrepresentations and large promises of agents, and the uncertainty of benefits in case of death, depending upon the voluntary contributions of an uncertain number of members, are productive of dissatisfaction and disappointment. There are not the benevolent considerations which exist in various orders, societies and brotherhoods to hold the members together, and these societies do not have the obligations of a definite mutual contract, as in regular life insurance companies, to compensate them for withdrawals.

The success of these societies cannot be predicated upon the experience of a few years. The rate of mortality changes from year to year. The average age of the members advances, and cannot be offset by the accession of new members; and, in consequence, the rate of mortality is certain to increase. The assessments for death losses soon become a burden which the members, disappointed in their expectations of cheap insurance, will no longer bear. Those who are insurable will withdraw and seek insurance elsewhere. Those whose health has become impaired, and who are no longer insurable, will be compelled to remain or forego the benefits of any kind of insurance. The result is, the insolvency of the society, and irreparable loss to those who are most in need of insurance. Without interest income, guarantee capital, or accumulated reserve, these associations cannot fulfill their promises of cheap insurance and large benefits.

I do not regard these associations as fit to be compared in point of responsibility and likelihood of fulfilling their agreements with the organizations founded upon the scientific application of carefully-collected statistics, whose ability to pay the last surviving policy-holder remains, should all the others withdraw.

I have no statistics to enable me to determine the relative cheapness of the two plans, for when the element of certainty of benefits is wanting, as in the case of co-operative life insurance, it is valueless, and I consider it dear at any price.

I cannot see wherein there is less opportunity for dishonest management in this system than in that of regular life insurance, while I believe, as a fact, they have been managed with less honesty.

T. B. Needles, Auditor, etc.

Whittier loves to drive along country roads in a buggy.

FARM NOTES.

(From the American Agriculturist.)

Hills or Drills.—On clean land drills may give the best returns, but, if weeds are plenty, hills will be better, as they allow of cultivation in two directions.

Seed about which there is any doubt should be tested before planting to ascertain whether it will grow. Badly-kept seed often causes disappointment from its failure to germinate.

Blight is a quick comer which gives no warning. The best that can be done is to cut away the portion "struck" down to the live wood. If the tree is badly affected it is best to remove it entirely.

Thinning Fruit.—The sooner fruit is thinned after it has set, the better it is for the tree, as all growth of fruit costs effort for the tree to make, and is, therefore, exhaustive. No one who desires the choicest fruit will fail to thin an overloaded tree.

Seed-beds of fruit and forest trees need close attention to keep the soil loose and the weeds from establishing themselves. The beds, especially of evergreens, will need shelter from the hot sun, which may be provided by a lattice work of laths, or brush may be used, but less convenient in weeding.

Clover.—An early rolling of clover to settle the roots that have been raised by frost will be especially appropriate after the open winter just passed. Fifty pounds of plaster per acre will often have as good effect as the larger doses of 100 and 200 pounds that are recommended. Wood ashes on many soils will be found an useful application.

The time of planting corn will, of course, vary with the locality, but it will be better as a rule to secure a thorough preparation of the soil before putting in the seed, even if it somewhat delays the time of planting. Late-planted corn, in a warm, well-pulverized soil will usually take the lead of that which has been struggling from an early start under unfavorable conditions.

Manures.—Corn, unlike the other cereals, will bear the direct application of manure in liberal quantities. For immediate results, well-rotted manures are always best, but that taken unfermented from the barn-yard may be applied to corn. Long manure may be placed under, while short manure may be spread upon the surface and worked into the soil by the harrow and cultivator.

Mangels may be sown early this month. Our practice has been to sow in drills thirty inches apart, using six pounds of seed per acre. A liberal supply of seed is required to secure an even stand, and the plants should be thinned by striking a broad hoe directly across the drills so that single plants will stand twelve to sixteen inches apart. Root crops are often a failure from defective thinning.

Meadows.—Pick up any stones that may have been raised above the surface from the action of frost. The roller may be used to bring the surface into good shape for the mower. Meadows are frequently injured by the tread of cattle before the ground is fairly settled. The grazing of meadows in spring is at the expense of the hay crop. It is better to keep cattle in the barn until the pastures are ready to furnish them a full ration.

Plowing.—The plowing, and all subsequent preparations of the soil for the seed, should be done in the best possible manner. In turning a sod for corn, any breaks or "balks" in the work will prove an annoyance in after cultivation, and should be avoided. In many localities, especially at the West, the Kentucky blue grass (poa pratensis) is a troublesome weed in a corn crop, and it can only be subdued by careful and thorough tillage.

Planting in Orchards.—There is a general reluctance to give up the soil of the orchard entirely to the trees. While the orchard is young it is best to cultivate it thoroughly, and hoed crops, like potatoes, roots, etc., can be grown as a present pay for the trouble, but, as the trees get older and shade the ground, nothing else but fruit should be expected from the orchard. It is a good practice to pasture hogs in the orchard in clover sown for the purpose, as it is one of the best methods of enriching the soil and at the same time destroying insects.

May is a very busy month, and there is so much work crowded into it that a farmer is in danger of being in a hurry. Every hour of work should be so planned that it will tell most effectually, and this requires considerable thought in order to do the most urgent and important work first, and leave undone those things which may be done almost as well by-and-by. As we sow so do we reap, and, as this is the month of sowing, the work now will in a great measure determine what the harvest of the year shall be. Keep pushing on, but with a plan.

Insects.—The potato beetle has become such an abundant and troublesome pest that it should be given no quarter—not even from the start. By combined effort in the early portion of the season the "bugs" may be kept in check and thus do very little damage. Paris green has been so long and successfully employed that it is scarcely necessary to explain its mode of application. Suffice it to say that the liquid method is the one now generally practiced—that is, mix the paris green with water and sprinkle it upon the vines. A coffee-pot may be converted into a sprinkler by providing the spout with an extension and a rose at the end. The only source of danger is the careless handling, and the poison should be kept and used with a full knowledge of its nature.

Historical Snow-Storms.

Snow-storms have more than once played an important part in history. At Towton, the decisive battle of the Wars of the Roses, the Lancastrian soldiers, having the snow driven in their faces by a strong wind, fell upon each other by mistake, and were easily routed. In one of the numerous wars between Denmark and Sweden, the Danes escaladed a Swedish fortress at night by means of the snow that had drifted against the wall. One of the Jacobite nobles, condemned after the rising in 1715, was saved by a snow storm which delayed the arrival of the death-warrant for two days, during which time his friends contrived his escape. Napoleon's column of attack at Eylau, in 1807, which should have fallen upon the Russian flank, was so blinded by the flying snow as to come out right in front of the great central battery, and was almost exterminated. The same cause occasioned the French defeat at Pultusk a month earlier; while the destruction of the British army by the Afghans, in 1842, was materially aided by a snowfall which blocked the passes several fathoms deep, rendering any help from India impossible.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

To Clean Ivory.—Salts of lemon will remove stains from the ivory handles of knives.

To Polish Floors.—To polish stained floors rub them thoroughly once a week with beeswax and turpentine.

Marlborough Pudding.—Stew a few apples and strain them, add a teacup of butter, a teacup of sugar, a teacup of cream; the juice of two lemons, with the best part of the grated rind, a little mace, and four eggs, beaten lightly, and to be baked in a rich paste.

Hickory-nut Cake.—One and one-half cupfuls of butter, three cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of milk, seven cupfuls of sifted flour, five eggs, one teaspoonful of soda, two spoonfuls of cream tartar, one quart of hickory-nuts, one nutmeg, teaspoonful of cinnamon.

To Clean Decanters.—When making cake or omelette take your discarded egg-shells, crush them into small bits, put them into your decanter three parts filled with cold water, and thoroughly shake them. The glass will look like new, and all kinds of glass washed in the same water will look equally well.

Indian-meal Pudding.—One pint of Indian meal cooked, one quart of milk, half a cup of butter, one pint of molasses, four eggs with a little cinnamon or nutmeg; boil the milk, stir in gradually the meal, mix all together and let it stand two hours; add the eggs when the pudding is ready to put in the oven; let it bake two hours.

Citron Cake.—(How to keep the citron from falling to the bottom of the cake.) One cup of butter, two of sugar, three of flour, four eggs, and one cup of milk; add one teaspoonful of soda and two of cream of tartar and one pinch of salt. Make the cake as above, put in the pan, cut the citron thin, put it in the cake endwise, push down until the batter covers citron.

Mushroom Sautes.—Pick and thoroughly clean them, cutting them in four pieces if large, throw them into cold water, with the juice of a lemon or a little vinegar, as they are being done; then take them out and dry them in a cloth. Melt a piece of butter in a saucepan, add pepper, salt, and a little grated nutmeg. Put in the mushrooms, and toss over the fire till thoroughly cooked.

New England Election Cake.—A very old and excellent recipe: Three pounds of flour, one and three-fourths pounds of sugar, three-fourths of a pound of butter, one-half pound of lard, one and a half pounds of raisins, four nutmegs, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, three eggs, six teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, three teaspoonfuls of soda, two quarts of milk, one pound of currants; beat sugar, flour and butter together; add the fruit with the milk and spices; beat the soda and cream of tartar together in the milk until it foams.

Bread.—To be set at 4 o'clock p. m. Three eggs, three scant table-spoonfuls of brown sugar, eight table-spoonfuls of flour; beat the eggs and sugar; stir in the flour, a quart of lukewarm water, a little salt and a cent's worth of yeast; cover it to rise at 10 o'clock at night; take five quarts of sifted flour, put in it a small piece of butter, and knead well into dough; set it away for the night; spread it with butter before putting it away to prevent it getting a hard crust, which impedes its rising; all it requires in the morning is putting into the pans.

Children's Shoes.

The shoes mostly in demand for little people are close-fitting, medium high-cut, and buttoned. The heels should be low and broad, and the soles moderately thick, but, if you wish your child to have graceful carriage, do not allow her to wear too heavy shoes. The wearisome weight of a shoe that tires the ankle gives a lagging step and an inclination to favor one foot or the other by "toeing" in sooner than any other cause. Especially should too short a shoe be avoided; all new shoes are lovely and comfortable at the shoemaker's, but the child should not be left to his own judgment in this matter, and the person buying should make sure that the new shoe extends a good half inch beyond the big toe.

Maternal vanity prompts to the purchase of a good many Louis Quinze and Spanish heels for children, who somehow get about in them with consummate grace. Slashed sandals show off the pretty hosiery too well to be soon relinquished, and a three-strapped sandal is also liked. The newest shoe is called the pinafore. It is very low cut at the toe, but high at the back and sides. A delicate embroidery in yellow silk ornaments the sides, and the heels and soles are cut in one piece in the French style.

Foxings of fine serge and matelasse are often selected, both round and square cut vamps being in favor. The decided rise in all the materials that enter into the construction of high-grade shoes makes the prices something higher than last year, but the shoe is the last part of the toilet that should show a falling off in style or quality, especially since the advent of short costumes.—Cincinnati Gazette.

The Saturday Review says that the Cairo donkey boy is the incarnation of everything Oriental, strange, convenient, civil, and wonderful in Egypt. His activity, his ready tact, his good temper, his avidity for backsheesh, and, above all, his knowledge of English, are astonishing. Many Englishmen accustomed to winter in Egypt retain a donkey boy for the season, and, in cases of severe illness, one of these marvelous factotums has been known to become a tender, attentive, and vigilant nurse. The average donkey boy speaks better English than the average dragoman.

Within the past six months more than 1,000 white people have emigrated from the neighborhood of Greensboro, N. C., to Indiana and the Northwest.

CHARLES DE YOUNG.

Personal Characteristics of the Murdered San Francisco Editor.

De Young was short, but well built, a trifle under the medium height, yet with so graceful and affable a bearing as to give a most favorable first impression. His face was of the strong Jewish type, with an unmistakably Israelitish nose, strong black side whiskers, cut short, a large mouth, and strong, square chin. His complexion was ruddy, and his dressing was exceedingly tasteful. His tout ensemble was that of a well-bred and successful man of 40 or thereabouts; well preserved, because of temperate habits and wholesome living. In his appearance he was very greatly the superior of his brothers. Charles De Young was a hero in the estimation of many a fair woman in San Francisco, and a romantic and interesting character, if not a hero, in the mind of many a woman on the eastern slope who lacked neither refinement or respectability. The danger which all knew lurked at every moment around the Chronicle's editor threw a glamour of romance over the man. The everywhere known exceptional daring and energy of the Ishmaelitish editor earned for him the sympathy, and sometimes more than the sympathy, of hundreds of those who had heard and read of the man. He was the central figure of scores of scandals. Men were all the while "gunning for him." He was all the while conscious of his peril; but it was never insinuated that he changed his course or resorted to a subterfuge to avoid his enemies or escape their attacks. He never sought better than to meet them prepared. The desperate encounter between the De Youngs and Naphtaly, although more notorious than many others, was but a fair sample of the risks that the man took and the determined energy with which he would defend himself and his family from every slander. Naphtaly had been in the employ of De Young; had been received into his confidence and treated with especial consideration. He had betrayed the confidence in some way, had been discharged, started another paper and continued the quarrel. The De Youngs had notice of attack upon their mother which was contemplated in the Sun. Mike De Young took an ax, invaded the Sun's composing room, and smashed the forms containing the objectionable article. Immediately after the two brothers hunted for Naphtaly in the billiard-room of the Grand Hotel. They did not find him. A proof of the article had been preserved and it appeared. This was the famous article that came so near making an end of Kalloch; that left him with a bullet in the back and another in the lungs, and that has now put an end to Charles De Young's life through the pistol of Kalloch's son. Three times De Young was shot at by Judge Lake, a prominent San Francisco lawyer. It was no secret that this fighting editor went all the time armed; that he was "quick as a flash;" and himself believed that the man did not live who could kill him.

It was his custom to come to his office in the middle of the day, and to remain until his paper had gone to press. The business management, so far as the supervision of details are concerned, was entirely in the hands of his brother. His staff is considered the best in San Francisco. To miss an item of news was a dangerous step for anyone in his employ, and a "scoop" was the only occurrence that caused him any chagrin. Socially, he had no standing. But this ostracism did not annoy him.

New Designs in Furniture.

The traditional parlor set is rarely seen nowadays. Instead are a sofa and two large arm-chairs to match, covered, say with Persian raw silk, while the rest of the room is filled with odd pieces—an S chair, an embroidered chair or two, an Eastern divan, a Moorish pouf, which is merely four cushions piled in a slender frame, and as many fancy chairs of gilt or ebony as may be needed. The mantal lambrequin, the curtains, and portiere match the sofa and arm-chairs, unless they are specimens of artistic embroidery, in which case the foundation must match the prevailing tint of the room.

Fancy tables, with standards of gilt or ebony, have the tops upholstered with plush or raw silk either to match sets or as odd pieces. These same tables, covered with cretonne or mummy cloth, are much liked for bedrooms. Indeed, cretonne and mummy cloth in cretonne designs play an important part in house furnishing. A favorite idea is to furnish bedrooms throughout with these, having the whole furniture—bed, chairs, dressing table, and small table—covered with cretonne, the curtains and mantel lambrequin being of cretonne also, the carpet suiting in tone, and the very paper of the room manufactured in the design and color of the cretonne selected for the purpose. It is an easy matter to convert any old chair, which is strong enough to hold together, into an available seat by cushioning it and furnishing it with a cover of cretonne. Mummy cloth in cretonne designs is much handsomer, as well as more durable than the ordinary cretonne, inasmuch as it is a heavier fabric. The new designs are in Persian patterns and in Japanese figures, as well as in the myriad floral designs which have always been and always will be liked for chamberdra peries.

A Curious Story.

There is a tale told of a sea Captain who, in a distant corner of the southern seas, visited an undiscovered or unexplored group of beautiful islands. After landing and trading with the gentle natives, he was astonished by the visit of a white man, evidently a person of means and consequence, who, after making himself very agreeable, implored the Captain to give him a story-book, if he had such a thing in his possession. The Captain had, and, deeply touched by the pigs and cocoanuts which the white exile had given him, bestowed on him a copy of the "Arabian Nights Entertainments." Overcome by the present, the exile burst into tears, and cried, "You have saved my life, and given me rank and wealth." On explanation, he said, "I should long ago have been eaten, but while they were fattening me I learned enough of their language to tell a child the story of 'Little Red Riding Hood.' The child repeated it, and the whole population were mad with joy. They had never heard a story before. From that day I became a great and honored man. When they had a national festival I sat on top of a hill, and thousands wept (while some elderly relative was being cooked for a feast) at the cruel death of the grandmother as caused by the wicked wolf. I had with me a volume of 'Fairy Tales,' and I soon began to set a price on my performances. 'Red Riding Hood' is rather worn; I only get a hundred cocoanuts for her now; but 'Cinderella' is still good for four pigs and a turtle, and 'Beauty and the Beast' brings six or seven, according to the quality. But with the 'Arabian Nights' I shall be able to go on accumulating pork to the end of my days."

ALL SORTS.

A pious negro woman at Livingston, Ala., shouted herself to death at church.

Florida gardeners get $500,000 this year for the early vegetables they have sent North, and next year will see the business increased.

Sir George Balfour lately spoke in the House of Commons to the Speaker alone, there being actually but one single other member in the House.

Robert Bonner gives $10,000 toward Princeton's $25,000 telescope. One would think he could see stars enough speeding Rarus and his other flyers.

When the President and Mrs. Hayes dined with Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor in New York, the other day, a gold table service was used valued at $25,000.

A Canadian missionary has begged his much-used tomahawk from Sitting Bull, and it has been placed among the treasures of the museum of the college at Ottawa.

It shows how fast Virginia's mineral lands are being gobbled up that, in one week, $50,000 worth were secured by the Northern capitalists in the single county of Bouritetout.

Mr. G. W. Childs is proposing to build a new home for his Ledger newspaper, the plan of which is to be selected from a number submitted by the beste architects in the country.

The new pair of shoes came home for little 5-year-old. He tried them on, and, finding that his feet were in very close quarters, exclaimed: "O my! they are so tight I can't wink my toes."

A Californian's matrimonial advertisement winds up as follows: "Fortune no object, but should require the gal's relations to deposit $1,500 with me as security for her good behavior."

The comparative merits of wood, asphalt, and granite pavements have been tested by Col. Heywood, engineer of the city of London. The number of horses falling down during the fifty days of the test was 2,327, of which 542 fell on wood, 719 on granite, and 1,066 on asphalt. With the same expenditure of force, it is estimated that a horse could travel 132 miles on granite, 191 miles on asphalt, and 415 on wood.

The scarcity of hay and fodder for cattle in many sections of the Province of Ontario, particularly in the eastern counties, is causing much distress. In some places the cattle are dying for want of food. The winter has been so long and the spring so backward that farmers can not obtain food for their cattle for love or money in the inland settlements, largely owing to the bad condition of the roads.

When it was proposed to remove the remains of Napoleon from St. Helena to France, some people in England objected, on the ground that the French would say that the English were afraid of them. "Who cares one two-penny —— (a favorite expression of the Duke's when extra emphatic) what they would say?" was Wellington's comment, and, as all the world knows, the remains were received in state by the House of Orleans, and laid beneath the dome of the Invalides, and no one was the worse for it.

Children
CRY
FOR Pitcher's
Castoria.

Mothers like, and Physicians recommend it.

IT IS NOT NARCOTIC.

CENTAUR LINIMENTS; the World's great Pain-Relieving remedies. They heal, soothe and cure Burns, Wounds, Weak Back and Rheumatism upon Man, and Sprains, Galls, and Lameness upon Beasts. Cheap, quick and reliable.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Bilious Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite—they will tell you by taking

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c.,

IT HAS NO EQUAL.

This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

PURELY VEGETABLE.

If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

It is given with safety and the happiest results to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., MAY 13, 1880.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

"NO SOLID SOUTH, NO SOLID NORTH, BUT A SOLID UNION."

Democratic County Central Committee

OFFICERS.

Wm. L. Blair, Chairman.
Theo. Reed, Secretary.
J. J. Van Auken, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Wm. L. Blair, Jas. A. Barns, S. S. Shutt, J. Wm. Wagner, T. F. Jordan, Guy Plumb.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEEMEN.

C. M. Merica, Butler township.
J. J. Walter, Jackson township.
T. S. Murray, Concord township.
Geo. A. Munn, Newville township.
Jacob Christoffle, Stafford township.
Geo. W. Maxwell, Wilmington township.
M. Houston, Auburn precinct.
D. Y. Husselman, Waterloo precinct.
W. J. Frederick, Keyser township.
L. D. Britton, Richland township.
J. M. Brumback, Fairfield township.
Fred. Waterman, Smithfield township.
T. H. Tomlinson, Franklin township.
B. F. Cornelius, Troy township.

Joint Representative Convention.

Delegates from the counties of DeKalb, Noble, and Elkhart, the same constituting a joint representative district, will meet in convention at Kendallville, Ind.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 6th, 1880.

for the purpose of nominating a democratic candidate for joint representative for the counties named. The ratio of representation will be one delegate for each 100 votes cast for Gov. Jas. D. Williams in 1876, and one for each fraction of 50 or over, as follows:

DeKalb county	26
Noble "	24
Elkhart "	34
Total	86

By order of the district committee.

Judicial Convention.

The democracy of Noble, DeKalb and Steuben counties, constituting the 35th judicial district, will meet in delegate convention at Kendallville, Ind., on

FRIDAY AUGUST 6th, 1880,

for the purpose of nominating a judge of the circuit court and prosecuting attorney. The ratio of representation will be the same as that in the joint representative convention, which will be held at the same time and place.

By order of the district committee.

◆

Robert Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas, sons of illustrious sires, are delegates to the Illinois republican state convention. They are for Grant.

◆

The vote of DeKalb county in the democratic state convention ought to be, and no doubt will be, cast for Hon. E. V. Long, of Kosciusko county, for judge of the supreme court.

◆

Senator Davis, of West Virginia has discovered that $240,000,000 of money has mysteriously disappeared from the United States treasury within the time John Sherman has had charge of the funds

◆

The republicans of Nevada have instructed for Blaine; the Michigan delegation to Chicago will also be a unit for Blaine. The delegation from West Virginia will be divided between Blaine and Sherman, with a majority in favor of the former.

◆

We are glad to note that the canvass being made by the several democratic candidates in this county is being conducted with the best of feeling, which is an indication of victory at the next election. Nothing is of more importance than harmony.

◆

Kernan, the republican editor of the Okolona States, has retired to private life, owing to the failure of the republican leaders to keep up the regular money contributions. Hereafter the average republican editor in the north will hanker after the Okolona fodder in vain.

◆

When Judge Mercer, of Pennsylvania, told Judge Black that he ought to be a republican, the latter replied that there was only one thing in the way. "If," said he, "there was no hereafter, I would join the republican party at once. Nothing deters me but the fear of hell."

◆

After all the splutter made in favor of Blaine in the republican congressional convention held in Auburn to appoint delegates to the national convention, one of the participants who has since been appointed one of the delegates from the state at large, viz: Hon. J. S Collins of Columbia City, is now reported by the Indianapolis News as being in favor of Washburne or Grant. One by one the Indiana delegation is deserting the captain of the "Mulligan Guards."

◆

The "southern claims" hobby, continually kept before the people by the republican party in past campaigns, will be of no avail in the future. An act of June 15, 1878, provided for a southern claims commission, and the commission was appointed and its work is now complete, the commissioners having recently reported "that the whole number of claims presented to them is 22,298, amounting to $60,258,150.44. The whole amount allowed is $4,636,920.69, making the whole amount disallowed $55,621,229.75. The act of June 15, 1878, provided that all claims wherein the evidence of claimants shall not have been submitted by the 10th of March, 1879, should be forever barred, and the number of claims so barred is 5,220." That settles the whole business.

Something for Democrats to Think About.

A correspondent of the Courier-Journal, writing from Indianapolis, presents some facts for the democrats of Indiana to consider—facts which are applicable to the situation in DeKalb county, and which we desire to impress upon the mind of every democrat. The records show that in over twenty democratic counties in Indiana there are over fifty republican officers. These same counties give an aggregate democratic majority on the state ticket of over 10,000 and yet the democrats do not seem to be satisfied with the republican party holding 104,000 government offices, bestowing upon that party a patronage of $100,000,000 annually. Fifty republicans holding offices in democratic counties in Indiana, who contribute not less than $50,000 to the republican campaign fund of the state every two years, all of which is used to defeat democrats and democratic principles. The correspondent truthfully says: "There is no excuse for this. It is attributed to local causes, but there is no good excuse for local causes. The fault is in the county conventions. The best timber in the county should compose the county ticket. Honest, sober and competent men should be nominated. Old party hacks, chronic office-seekers and incompetent men should be thrown aside. The machine politician who secures his nomination by fraud and chicanery should be beaten in the convention. In 1868 Gov. Hendricks and the democratic state ticket were defeated by republican county officials in democratic counties. Now is the time for democrats to seriously ponder over these facts. County conventions are now being held all over the state. With a good democratic county ticket in the field in every democratic county in Indiana, the democratic candidates for governor and president will carry the state by not less than 20,000. With bad, weak county tickets, success will be jeopardized. If there is any one thing that will contribute more to democratic success this fall than another, it is the selection of good county tickets."

◆

Our republican friends across the way are making dreadful efforts to have Streight nominated for governor on the republican ticket. We second the motion; if the democracy can't beat Streight for governor, and carry the state against Grant for president, then we miss our guess. We have not seen the Indianapolis Journal's argument against Streight, but from what we have learned of him, we are inclined to the opinion that the Journal could justly brand him as a windy ignoramus.

◆

The Indiana republicans are fast wheeling into line for Grant. Martindale, Washburne's champion, has sold the Indianapolis Journal, and with it Washburne's chances in Indiana went glimmering. Mr. John C. New is chairman of the republican state central committee, and an outspoken advocate of Grantism. New and his son have purchased the Journal, and will doubtless advocate the nomination of Hog Grant; and the Blaine following, now dubbed "Mulligan Guards," will give way to the pressure.

◆

Hon Eugene Schyler writes from Rome that he has received proposals from Messrs. Joseph Seligman & Co., the well-known publishers at Stockholm, Sweden, for permission to translate and publish his life of Peter the Great, now running in SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY, in the Swedish language, and from the house of Schmitzdorff & Co., St. Petersburg for permission to publish in the Russian language. It is probable that, on its completion in SCRIBNER, the work will be published simultaneously in at least five countries, and perhaps more.

◆

If any of the numerous readers of the COURIER contemplate taking a summer trip, and want to know where to go, what to see and how to get there, we advise them to consult the illustrated "Summer Tourists' Guide," just issued by the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific railway. It matters not where you want to go, whether to the Rocky mountains, Colorado, Minnesota, Northern Michigan, Adirondacks, White mountains, the great lakes, the seaside, Saratoga, Newport, Lake George, Long Branch, Cape May, Quebec, Niagara Falls, or any other points in the east, west or north, you will find in the guide a well-written description of each of the many hundred places of resort in the United States. Parties desiring copies of the guide can obtain them either personally or by letter, on application to L. Johnson, agent, Auburn.

◆

Bob. Ingersoll says: "Hayes couldn't be elected if no one run against him. There would be enough scattering votes to defeat him if he was the only candidate in the field."

Robert is also of the opinion that "the democratic party just now has the best chance of winning. You see, the democrats have 138 votes solid from the south. That much they are sure of, and if they can carry New York and Indiana, they will have 189 votes, three votes to spare. Besides these, there is a chance of their carrying New Jersey or Connecticut, and perhaps Oregon or Nevada. You see, there has been such an emigration from Nevada to Leadville and other points in Colorado quite recently that there is no telling how these states are going to go. Even if the democrats lost Indiana, if they carried New Jersey and Connecticut, they would still be safe."

Which shows that Robert knows more about politics than he does about religion, if he is a stalwart republican.

Democratic County Convention.

Delegates from the several townships in DeKalb county will meet at the court-house, in Auburn,

Saturday, June 5, 1880,

at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the following offices, to-wit:

Representative in the legislature.
County clerk.
County auditor.
County treasurer.
County sheriff.
County recorder.
County surveyor.
County coroner.
County commissioner, north district.
County commissioner, southwest district.

The convention will transact such other business as may come before it.

SELECTION OF DELEGATES.

In accordance with a resolution passed at the last meeting of the county central committee, all democrats and others who intend to support the ticket nominated by the convention above named, are requested to meet at the usual voting place in their respective township or precinct,

Saturday, May 29, 1880.

at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the county convention, in accordance with the following apportionment, based upon the number of democratic votes cast for secretary of state at the last state election:

Butler	township	10	delegates.
Jackson	"	19	"
Concord	"	21	"
Newville	"	8	"
Stafford	"	7	"
Wilmington	"	19	"
Auburn precinct		30	"
Waterloo	"	10	"
Richland township		17	"
Fairfield	"	21	"
Smithfield	"	12	"
Franklin	"	9	"
Troy	"	5	"
Keyser	"	26	"
Total,		214.	"

The democrats of each township and precinct will at the same time, (May 29), appoint one delegate to the judicial convention to be held at Kendallville on the 6th day of August, 1880.

By order of the committee.

W. L. BLAIR, Chairman,
THEO. REED, Secretary.

◆

When the DeKalb County Republican gets through abusing the Indianapolis Journal—the republican organ of Indiana—it will be in order for the crusher, as "the recognized organ of the soldiers of DeKalb county" to devote a column or two to squelching the disloyal sentiment expressed by the Cincinnati Gazette (republican) in nominating the rebel general Joseph E. Johnson for vice-president on the ticket with Grant. Here is what it says:

"No one thing would go so far to get the confidence of the southern white party in General Grant's declarations of trust in their loyalty as the nomination with him of this distinguished confederate soldier. No one would go so far to support their expectations of the time of complete reconciliation, and of the extinction of all sectional feeling, when the national and confederate soldiers shall be put on the same footing as equally deserving their country's gratitude, and its care for those who were disabled in the service"

If that is not an out-and-out, flat-footed, inconditional proposition to pension rebel soldiers and place them on an equal footing with Union soldiers, and from good republican authority at that, then we are totally unable to comprehend the English language. No democrat has ever thought of rewarding confederate soldiers with pension or bounty land for their efforts to distroy the Union. The unreasonable and unjust proposition at last emanates from the corrupt republican party, for the sole purpose of retaining possession of the goverment it has plundered for the last twenty years.

◆

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY for May, containing Stedman's essay on Poe, with the frontispiece portrait engraved by Cole, De Vinne's article on "Wood Cut Printing," "The Young American Printers," "The New York Seventh Regiment," etc., etc., is already out of print.

Look at This!

Gage plums, ten cents a can; best green-gage plums, sixteen cents; sugar corn, three cans for twenty-five cents; whortleberries, two cans for twenty-five cents; tomatoes, three cans for twenty-five cents; best tomatoes, two cans for twenty-five cents, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

Musical Normal.

At Butler, commencing May 31 and continuing four weeks, under the direction of W. A. Ogden and an able pianist. Every musician in the county, of every grade, should attend. Both vocal and instrumental work will be done. For particulars, address

C. A. FYKE, Butler, Ind.

An Official Document.

COUNTY RECORDER'S OFFICE,
Indianapolis, Aug. 12, 1878.

DR. A. R. WHITE—Dear Sir: After using various remedies for Chills without relief, I commenced the use of your Dandelion Alterative, and one bottle effected a cure. I can cheerfully recommend this as an excellent medicine, and worthy the confidence of the public.

Yours truly, WM. N. DUNNINGTON.

For sale at Cassbeer & Matheny's drug store. 19-2w

Over 1,500 Cases of Pile Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind.

Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-tf.

Notice to Contractors.

Notice is here by given that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will, on Friday, May 14th, 1880, at 10 o'clock a. m. let to the lowest responsible bidder the construction of a 100 ft. Howe Truss bridge, near Jeremiah Plumb's in Union township, also at 2 o'clock on same day the building of a 100 ft bridge about 1½ miles northeast of Auburn, both with pile abutments. Letting to take place at site of bridge, plans and specifications of said bridges can be seen on ground at time of letting, bidders will be required to give a bond according to law.

The board reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

By order of the board

Attest; ALBERT ROBBINS, Aud'r.

May 5th 1880. 19-3w

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The announcement of the names of candidates for county offices will be inserted under this head for $3.00 IN ADVANCE; no announcement to exceed six lines in length without extra charge. All announcements are made subject to the decision of the democratic county convention.

REPRESENTATIVE.

CLERK.

AUDITOR.

EDITORS COURIER: The democrats of Franklin township desire you to announce the name of Thomas H. Tomlinson, of the township named, as a candidate for county auditor

The many friends of John W. Dills, of Concord township, will present his name to the democratic county convention as a candidate for county auditor.

TREASURER.

SHERIFF.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Please announce that Mr. Philip Plumb, of Waterloo precinct, will be presented by his friends as a candidate for sheriff of DeKalb county.

RECORDER.

Mr. George H. Munn, of Newville township, is named by his many democratic friends in that township as a candidate for county recorder.

SURVEYOR.

The many democratic friends of Azam P. Foltz, of Auburn precinct, announce his name for county surveyor, believing him to be well qualified for that position.

CORONER.

COMMISSIONER, NORTH DISTRICT.

COMMISSIONER, SOUTHWEST DISTRICT.

S. B. HARTMAN, D. D. S.

DENTIST,

88 Calhoun st, Fort Wayne, Ind
Artificial TEETH on Gold, Silver, Porcelain or Rubber Plate.

Notice of Administration.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THE undersigned administrator of the estate of Rudolph Sechler, deceased, late of DeKalb county, Indiana, will offer for sale at public outcry, at the late residence of said decedent, in Concord township, of said county, on a large portion of the personal property of said estate, consisting of horses, cattle, hogs, farming implements, sheep, grain, hay and various other articles.

THE THIRD DAY OF JUNE, 1880,

TERMS:

Sums of three dollars and under, cash; over three dollars, a credit until June 3rd, 1881, the purchaser giving note with interest, waiving valuation laws, and with approved security Sale commences at 10 o'clock a. m.

May 11, 1880. S. S. SHUTT
20 3w Administrator.

Application for License.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN TO THE CITIZENS of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county at their next regular session, to be held at the court-house in said county, commencing on Monday the 7th day of June, 1880, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in less quantities than a quart at a time, with the privilege of having the same drank on the premises where sold. The premises on which I desire to sell are located as follows: Commencing at the southeast corner of lot number twenty-seven (27), in the original plat of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, running thence west twenty-three and one third (23⅓) feet thence north to Sixth street, thence east twenty-three and one-third (23⅓) feet, thence south along the east line of said lot number twenty-seven (27) to the place of beginning.

20 3w THOMAS SOMMERS.

$100 Reward

For any case of

CATARRH

That cannot be cured with

HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an INTERNAL REMEDY ACTING UPON THE BLOOD, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of HALL'S CATARRH CURE is NOT CURED OR BENEFITED more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

PRICE 75 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists

LAWNS.

250 pieces of new and choice styles Summer Lawns in side bands, figures, stripes and plain colors, 10 cents, 12½ cents and 15 cents per yard; also new Linen Lawns, Organdies, Jaconets, Momie Cloths, Foulards, Zephyr Ginghams, Seersucker Stripes, Scotch, Canton and Madras Ginghams. An elegant line to make early selections from.

ROOT & COMPANY.

MATTINGS.

This week new arrivals of China Mattings in fancy styles; white and check Mattings, all widths. Also Napier, cocoa and cane mattings for offices and public buildings in different grades at close prices. Also opening a new lot of Tapestry and Velvet Rugs and Mats, all sizes, in new and choice designs, at old prices.

ROOT & COMPANY.

BROCADE.

SILKS, in black and fancy colors. Rich goods at very moderate prices. Also a large stock of Spring Silks, 50 cents, 60 cents and 75 cents per yard. Fancy Trimmings, Satins and Silks, in all colors and combinations, probably the largest collection in the state, at popular prices.

ROOT & COMPANY.

CREPES.

We keep a full line of Grout's and Courtauld's English Crepes, in all widths and grades, from 60 cents to $3 per yard, and cut them on the or anyway to suit. Also Crepe and Love Veils, hat and arm Crepes. Our stock of Mourning Dress Goods is large and complete in all fabrics; also have full stock of Mourning Hankerchiefs, Gloves, Black Ruchings, etc.

ROOT & COMPANY.

WHITE

GOODS DEPARTMENT full and complete with stripe, check and plain Nainsooks, Victoria and India Mulls, Lace Stripe Piques, soft Cambrics, Terry Cloths, Swisses, white Welts, cord Piques. Also a large and choice stock of the new Swiss Trimmings and Hamburg Edgings in new designs.

ROOT & COMPANY, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The Auburn Fruit-House.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

Sugars Down.

Ligh Brown, 8 cents; Light yellow, 8-1-2 cents; Extra Yellow C, 9 cents; Coffee A 10 cents; Granulated, 11 cents.

Coffees Down.

Good Rio, 15 cents; Best Marraicabo, 20 cents; Fancy Rio, 27 cents.

South Carolina Rice, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; New Prunes, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; A No. 1 Fine Cut Tobacco, 40, cents; Extra Fine Cut Tobacco, 50 cents; Plug Tobacco of all brands very cheap; Parlor Matches, 7c., or 4 for 25 cents; the very best Syrups, 70 cents; Splendid Teas at from 30 to 75 cents.

The new stock of Salt Fish will come in next week, and will be sold at the very Lowest Prices.

Crocks and Jars of any size at 7 cents a gallon.

Entrance on Seventh or Eighth Streets

Frank A. Hoff.

KIBLINGER & CO.

We are always busy behind the counters, in the ware-house, and on 1st, 2d and 3rd floors, selling Hardware, Nails, Doors, Sash, Glass, Paints and Oils by the wagon-load. Call on us when in want of anything in the Hardware line. We will sell you cheaper than the lowest. Thanks for past patronage.

KIBLINGER & CO.

Application for License.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county, at their next regular session, to be held in the court-house in said county on the 7th day of June, 1880, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, with the privilege of permitting the same to be drank on the premises where sold. The premises on which I desire to sell are located as follows: Commencing at a point eighteen (18) feet west of the northeast corner of lot number ninety-five (95), in the original plat of Auburn, said county, and running thence south to the south line of said lot, thence west twenty two (22) feet, thence north to the north line of said lot, thence east to the place of beginning.

WILLIAM HAINER.

Administrator's Sale.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE undersigned administrators, with the will annexed, of the last will and testament of the late Joseph Bowman, deceased, of DeKalb county, Indiana, will offer for sale at public outcry, at the late residence of said testator, in Keyser township, in said county,

ON SATURDAY, 22ND DAY OF MAY, 1880

the personal property of said estate, consisting of horses, cows, hogs, young cattle, wagon, and wheat, corn and oats by the bushel, household goods and furniture, 11 stands of bees, harness and farming implements, and various other articles. Sale to begin at 10 o'clock, a. m.

TERMS:

Sums of three dollars and under, cash; on sums of over three dollars, a credit of nine months will be given the purchaser giving his note with interest and approved security, waving valuation and appraisement laws.

ELIJAH S. MCDOWELL,
GEORGE Q. DENNISON,
19 3w Executors.

Notice of Administration.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THE undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Rudolph Sechler, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

S. S. SHUTT, Administrator,
19 3w Spencerville, Indiana.
April 28, 1880.

Application for License.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN TO THE CITIZENS of the incorporated town of Auburn, Union township, DeKalb county, Ind., that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county, at their next regular session to be held in the court-house in said county, on the 7th day of June, 1880, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, with the privilege of permitting the same drank on the premises where sold, viz: On the middle one-third of lot number twenty-seven (27), in the original plat of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana.

20-3w. JOHN MEISER.

Application for License.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of the incorporated town of Auburn, in Union township, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county, at the next regular session of said board commencing June 7th, 1880, for a license to retail intoxicating, spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, with the privilege of allowing the same to be drank upon the following described premises, to wit: The northeast one-fourth—the same being 30 feet east and west and 60 feet north and south—of lot number twentyeight (28) in the original plat of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana.

FERDINAND [illegible].

May 13th, 1880. 20-3t.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

Fun on the Road.

Last Saturday some time, Fred. Clark and friend, Mr. Norm. Clark, of Detroit, conceived a brilliant idea; they thought how perfectly charming it would be to mingle with the fair sex and attend church (?) next day in that lovely little watering-place, Rome City. Accordingly, at about eight per clock next morning, when Old Sol was beaming his beamingest and all nature was smiling from ear to ear—metaphorically speaking—these young gentlemen, under the protection of Miss Lillie Morse, of Angola, and Mrs. Mattie Birdsall, of Richmond, started with two fiery, untamed steeds and a two-seated barouche for the above named and popular Hoosier resort. They arrived about noon, happy as (C)larks, but for particulars as to proceedings while there, see small bills. The writer was not there, so he will here insert some * * * and proceed with the narrative. In the dusky twilight, having excurted to their hearts' content, the little party mounted their chariot, turned their Arabian chargers eastward, pushed on the lines and sailed for Auburn; before many miles had been left behind, however, they tarried by the wayside; a drenching rain poured in upon them, the monotony of which was here and there relieved (?) by frightful flashes of greased lightning and peals of deep-toned thunder, and they were exceedingly sad—particularly in external appearance; they mournfully realized that there's many a slip 'twixt Rome City and Kendallville, at which latter place they wrung out their demoralized garments and put up for the night. Monday morning the trip was continued, Auburn looming up in the dim vista about noon. The livery man failed to recognize his outfit, owing to the difficulty experienced the previous night in trying to get the horses to mix with the lightning; the former were both stone blind and deaf, the carriage was minus a back spring and three wheels, while the harness—oh, where was it! Altogether it was an interesting group—a crowd that looked as though it had been fooling around a cyclone or threshing-machine. And here the curtain drops, with red lights and slow music.

An Afflicted Family.

The time-worn adage that "misfortunes never come singly," has just received another substantial and sorrowful demonstration in the case of a respected family living in Butler township. Last Friday, at his residence about one mile north of Cedar Creek, where he has lived for many years, Charles Probst died of dropsy, after a long life of activity and usefulness; and on the Tuesday following, before the tears of grief had yet ceased to flow, his son's wife, Mrs. Henry Probst, joined him on the other shore, her death having resulted from measles and a recent confinement. Nor is this all, for the remainder of the family are nearly all prostrated on beds of sickness, while their hearts are wrung with the losses they have just sustained. It is unnecessary to say that the sympathies of the neighborhood are with them, and that they are receiving all possible attention.

Gravel Roads.

EDITORS COURIER: Please allow me space in your paper to advance an idea concerning gravel roads. It is generally conceded that gravel roads are beneficial to every citizen of the county, and it is well known that the public highways within one or two miles of each town in the county are in worse condition during a considerable portion of the year than they are farther out.

Now, in order to provide for the improvement of the roads, I desire to suggest to the tax-payers of the county the propriety of circulating a petition, asking the board of commissioners to levy a gravel-road tax sufficient to raise $20,000, the same to be appropriated upon the order of the county commissioners for the purpose of graveling the roads approaching the several towns and villages in the following proportion, to-wit: Auburn, $4,000; Waterloo, $4,000; Garrett, $4,000; Butler, $4,000; and to the villages the remaining $4,000. I would like to hear from other parts of the county concerning this important subject.

KEYSER TOWNSHIP.

A Fast Run.

Considerable has been said recently about quick time on our railroads, and now the Fort Wayne and Jackson road has a little piece to speak. The afternoon train on that road, which passes here going south at 3:17, left Jackson last Saturday one hour and five minutes late, having waited for the arrival of a train on another road. The run was made from Jackson to Auburn in 2 hours and 20 minutes, and from Jackson to Fort Wayne, a distance of 100 miles, in 3 hours and 5 minutes, including 15 stops at stations and 2 stops for fuel, which makes an average of 33 miles an hour inclusive of 17 delays. The engineer was J. W. Reading, on engine "Angola," and the train was in charge of Conductor Horace Cooper, who was busy with a "hot box" and steamed around like a quarter-horse.

—Bounce the burglars.

—That was a "slick" robbery.

—Yesbera's hats are par excellence.

—Billy Groscop's saloon is undergoing repairs and house-cleaning.

—Kiblinger's new building again boometh.

—Wall paper cheap at Davenport's drug store. 14-tf.

—For the latest styles in millinery, call on Mrs. A. J. Little.

—J. W. Shaffer is afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism.

—For white goods and embroideries go to McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—Johnnie Picker puts his whole soul into the tuba when he blows it.

—Go to McQuiston & Ralston's for spring shawls and linen suits. 20 3w

—The grass in the court-yard it is beautiful. It is of a greenish hue.

—See those lovely ribbons and flowers just received at Miss Cleveland's.

—Miss Alice McKay will sell you a hat, bonnet, tip, ribbon etc., very cheap.

—Examine prices at Miss Alice McKay's before purchasing millinery goods.

—Why didn't they write it, as it sounds, "Will you love me when I mould?"

—Be sure to see Miss Cleveland's stock of fancy millinery-goods before purchasing.

—1,000 yards of French gingham for sale at eight cents a yard, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—Did the lightning strike your house last Monday? If not, what in thunder did it strike?

—R. Elson, the dentist, has his office days Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

—The old settlers meeting, remember, will be held here May 27, or two weeks from to-day.

—5,000 yards of new-style calicos, at seven and eight cents a yard, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—Remember that R. Elson's office days are Wednesdays, Tuesdays Fridays and Saturdays.

—The thunder and lightning during the fierce storm of Monday was most uncomfortably close.

—If you have no desire to be robbed of your good name, don't have it painted on your umbrella.

—Dr. Jared Spooner is now in Peru, his future home. He bade Auburn farewell last Saturday.

—Bargains in bleached and brown muslins, towelling and table-linen, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—2,000 yards of dress goods—good styles—from 10 to 15 cents per yard, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—It will pay you to see Davenport's patterns before you purchase wall paper and window shades. 14-tf.

—Mrs. W. M. Baughan, of west Seventh street, has been very seriously ill this week with dropsy.

—Rev. E. A. Russell, of Michigan, will preach at the Baptist church next Sabbath, morning and evening.

—The best remedy for liver-complaint is "Sellers' Liver Pills." Only 25 cents per box. Sold by all druggists.

—Dave Hampton has his right arm in the hospital, the result of going down stairs where there weren't any steps.

—J. N. Myers & Co. are selling the best line of agricultural machinery that is made. Don't buy until you see them.

—Miss Cleveland deals with one of the largest millinery firms in Chicago, and keeps posted as to all the latest styles.

—Has your last year's hat gone glimmering? Then haste away to Yesbera's, where you can get one in any color, size, or style.

—John Robbins objects to so much dam—dam—pness; it moistens the ground and spoils the trade in plow-points.

—Fred. Schulthess and Miss Rosa McKinly, both of Garrett, were married by Rev. Geo. A. Harter, at Avilla, Saturday, May 1.

—The regular Dunkard meeting will be held at Stonestreet's barn, in Cedar Creek, Thursday and Friday, 27th and 28th of this month.

—I take "Dr. Sellers' Cough Syrup," and no one in the city keeps clearer of coughs and cold than I. Druggists sell it. Price 25 cents.

—Frank Copper has a new lawn-mower—his own patent. It consists of the Jackson company's horse, which he has turned loose in his yard.

—Tom Sommers has had his sample room and billiard hall handsomely decorated this week, and it is now one of the finest rooms in town.

—The M. E. society will meet at the lecture-room of the church Wednesday afternoon. Refreshments will be served at half past five.

—New trimming silks and satins, laces, ruching, gloves, feather edge braid, silk and linen floss and flowers of all kinds, at Miss Alice McKay's.

—Lew Garfield has again been trying to evacuate the jail, but as before, he slipped up. His trial will take place one week from Monday, or May 24.

—Frank Larimore, whose visit here was mentioned in a late COURIER, is now in Chicago, and we hereby acknowledge the receipt of papers sent us from that point by him.

—Mrs. A. J. Little returned from the east last Saturday with the finest line of millinery goods ever brought to the city.

—One of the boys in this office thinks that if John Bunch were only a good conductor of electricity, he would make a first-class lightning-rod.

—If W-o-r-c-e-s-t-e-r spells Wooster, why in all common sense doesn't R-o-c-h-e-s-t-e-r spell Rooster? There is a conundrum for us to crow over.

—Frank Dills and Billy Little went to a dance at Corunna, Friday night, and they showed the boys and girls how to "swing on the corners"—street corners.

—Mrs. H. J. Norris is at Wooster, Ohio, her maiden home, visiting relatives and friends. She started last Tuesday, and will be absent about three weeks.

—COURIERS of March 11th, April 1st and April 8th, 1880, are missing from our files; if some subscriber will furnish copies of the dates named, we will consider it a favor.

—C. Eckhart is now turning out some of the best carriages ever made in the county. Do not purchase until you have seen his stock. Samples can be seen at N. Ensley's, Auburn, Indiana.

—The Ft. Wayne Sentinel says the trees are leaving out. We have been trying, ever since Sunday, to ascertain what they are leaving out, and have concluded that it must be the worms.

—Mr. Norm. Clark, of Detroit, an old chum and school-mate of Fred. L. Clark, has been trying to drive dull care away for a week past in Auburn, and with Fred's assistance he has made a triumphant success of it.

—Miss Frankie Ryan is lending her presence to our interesting little suburb of Waterloo, having gone up there Tuesday noon to spend a few days with friends. She will attend the party here, allee samee this evening.

—Mrs. A. J. Little spent several days last week in the trimming departments of some of the largest millinery establishments in the east, thus enabling her to supply the trade with the very latest styles. Give her a call and be convinced.

—Miss Lillie Morse, one of Angola's fair maidens, participated in the benefit hop of Thursday evening, since which time she has been visiting in town (and Rome City), the guest of Mrs. W. J. Austin and Mrs. Mattie Birdsall.

—"Will your love for me grow cold?" is the title of a beautiful little song and chorus composed by Prof. C. A. Fyke, of Butler, in answer to "Will you love me when I'm old?" for a copy of which this office is indebted to the professor.

—Everybody—big and little, male and female—has been fishing this week. A line of people as long as a piece of rope constantly adorn the banks of the creek, in proportion of about nine anglers to every fish.

—Joe Abright, always conniving at some improvement in his already attractive jewelry store, has now placed therein an elegant new burglar-proof safe, provided with combination lock and all the most approved attachments. It is a darling, so to speak.

—The house of T. C. Elson, about two miles west of town, caught fire on the roof and was damaged about fifty dollars' worth last Saturday. The prompt action of the family and neighbors was all that saved the total distruction of the building.

—Miss Melleski Tarney, daughter of Mrs. Geo. Durkee, took her departure Monday noon, via the Jackson, Lake Shore and Grand Rapids railroads, for Grand Rapids, Mich., where she will remain during the summer, and may possibly locate.

—Jay Eastman, of Garrett, who bossed the "C. O. D." store at this place last summer, was in town Monday, buying some lumber. Jay is now twisting brakes on the B. & O., and he exhibits a healthy phiz—if his moustache has been shaved off.

—Harry Bennett, formerly a clerk at the Central hotel, has returned to Auburn and will probably remain, having taken a similar position at the Stamets house, Auburn Junction. He is right at home in a hotel, and knows how to make himself indispensable.

—Billy Rainier isn't afraid to get down to hard labor, if he has got a paying business of his own. Tuesday morning he shouldered his little trowel and went to work on Kiblinger's new building, and he throws bricks and mortar around like an old stager.

—The old building formerly used as a hotel, and which now stands in the rear of the neat and commodious Swineford house that displaced it, is being moved and renovated, and it will soon be a convenient laundry, wood-house and cow-stable for the present hotel.

—W. H. McQuiston and wife went to Ft. Wayne last Saturday in response to a letter stating that Mr. M's father, John McQuiston, had been thrown from a buggy and quite seriously injured. They returned home Monday, satisfied that his wounds, tho' dangerous, will not prove fatal.

—Dave Snyder went to Chicago Monday, returning Tuesday night. He walked down from Waterloo at midnight, having got to the depot just in time to be ten minutes too late. The distance is five miles, which he made in three hours, amusing himself with gentle cuss words the while.

—A small party will be given this evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Austin, who will be assisted by Mrs. Birdsall and Miss Morse. A general good time may be expected, as W. J. and lady know how to "make it pleasant for 'em."

—Mrs. G. H. Forkner, sister of Mrs. S. C. Swineford, who with her husband is now taking a spring vacation at the Swineford house, has been suffering for some three or four weeks with a billious attack, though she is now convalescing under the care of Dr. Allen.

—All persons in need of wall paper and window-shades are respectfully invited to call and examine the fine stock on exhibition at the Physicians' drug-store. The styles are the latest, the quality of the best, and the prices cheap as the cheapest. It will pay you to go and see for yourself. 19-4t.

—Elmer Lowrey, for some time past message boy and assistant operator for Frank Copper, at the Jackson depot, left for Pleasant Lake Tuesday last, where he has secured a position as operator. Elmer learned the art very quickly, under Mr. Copper, and will make a rattling "lightnin' jerker."

—A young man named Sebring, who is about sixteen years old and resides here, fell in a fit at the corner of Jackson and Seventh streets, yesterday afternoon, and was taken to his home in the north end, in a buggy, by Jay Van Auken. The boy is subject to fits, sometimes having three or four in succession.

—The reason that we are all born at so tender an age, is probably due to the fact that we couldn't make a success of life otherwise. The first man the Lord made was started full grown, privileged to choose for himself; but he made a wrong choice, and there has never been another man made on that pattern since.

—C. B. Jones, the gentlemanly agent of the Wabash at Cedar Creek, met with a serious accident Thursday morning, in the shape of a compound fracture of the leg, which was broken just above the ankle by a frisky horse. Dr. Littlefield attended and succeeded in alleviating his suffering and materially improving his unfortunate situation.

—Dr. S. B. Hartman, dentist, 83 Calhoun street, Ft. Wayne, has just had some job-printing executed at the COURIER office, and a postal-card received yesterday tells the tale thusly: "I am very much pleased with the sample of business cards; please print 300. Am also delighted with the calling cards." Dr. Hartman reiterates the praises our job work gets from all quarters.

—A young woman at Ray, (formerly called State Line) a small station north of here on the Jackson road, last Thursday murdered her illegitimate child and threw it in a pond near the depot. It is claimed that she had been betrayed by a young man of Toledo, under promise of marriage, and that the poor girl, in her desperation, adopted this method of concealing her shame. She is now in jail at Angola.

—The "Sylvan Lake Hotel," at Rome City, gives a grand opening one week from to-morrow, or Friday, May 21. We venture the assertion that it will be a grand affair, and an opportunity will be afforded to meet friends and acquaintances from all over this region. Rome City will be a popular pleasure resort this summer, and Mr. Dodge, proprietor of the new hotel, will feel well repaid for his enterprise.

—Frank Anderson, a Butler shoemaker, got on a rampage at that place, last Tuesday, during which he tried to get the town into his pocket and walk off with it; but the town objected, and Frank now languishes in the county jail, in default of $75 bail. He will appear at the next term of court and tell what he intends to do about keeping the peace hereafter. Corn-juice did it.

—A small party of young people was very handsomely entertained at Mr. Clark's residence, on west Seventh street, Tuesday evening. Music and dancing, delicious cake, oranges and lemonade, sweet young men and blooming damsels—chiefly the latter—all contributed to make it fully as enjoyable as any of the previous gatherings at that place; and that is saying considerable, for Mrs. Clark's pleasant manner of entertaining has become proverbial.

—Conductor Mogford, of the Jackson, is entitled to a life pension for getting off the following egg story, which beats them all. He says—and tries to make everybody take it in—that a Michigan hen laid a monstrous egg, a day or so ago, upon which were inscribed, as if by an engraver, the war-ning words, "WAR IN 1881!" Credulous folks may think this is an allusion to the result of the coming presidential contest, but we can't swallow it;—not eggs-actly.

—Tuesday evening, when Fred. Yesbera returned to the jewelry store from supper, Eliza Shaffer remarked that he had been gone "just an hour and a quarter," to which Fred. responded, "You're a liar by the regulator in the store," or words to that effect, and then they went at it—all in fun. The fun cost them about six dollars jointly, owing to a dextrous movement of Eliza's right wing, by which he managed to shatter a five-foot glass in Mr. Abright's front door. The glass has been replaced, and the boys are cutting down cigar expenses trying to get even.

A COOL TRANSACTION.

One Pair of Pants and $86 Alleged.

Perhaps everybody hasn't noticed it, but it is nevertheless too true, that a gang of hard-looking characters has been prowling around the streets of Auburn for several days past—men who are strangers and will bear an unlimited amount of watching; and some of these gentlemen of leisure are professionals, in substantiation of which we tell this story:

Tuesday night at about 10 o'clock, I. N. Cool and family, who live at the corner of Jackson and Ninth streets, went to bed. There is nothing particularly alarming about that, because they carry out that same programme nearly every night; but the information intended to be conveyed is, that between that hour and daylight some felonious individuals went through the house and lugged off Mr. Cool's coat, vest and pants, which were hanging on a chair near his bedroom door and in the pockets of which was a wallet containing a twenty-dollar gold coin, about two dollars in silver, and a note for $70. The latter was made by John and John M. Paul, payable to I. N. Cool, and had already been paid and receipted for, so that it is no longer legitimately negotiable. Mr. Cool had a pocket-book under his pillow, containing $180, which was unmolested; and Mrs. Smith, who owns the property and lives up stairs, had $260 in a trunk, which was also untouched. The coat and vest were afterwards found in an out-house, but the pants are gone forever. A lamp burning in the room where the thieves were operating was not disturbed, nor was one of the occupants of the house awakened by the slightest noise to cause suspicion. While it was fortunate that they did not carry their researches further and secure the whole boodle, still, twenty-dollar gold pieces don't grow on evry bush, and "Obe" feels the loss; and besides, if the breeches don't fit anybody else, he would like to have them returned. The robbery was a very "slick" one, as no clue has yet been obtained to the perpetrators.

To all Whom it May Concern.

Having learned that reports are in circulation damaging to my reputation as a carriage-builder, I take this means to inform those who are not personally acquainted with me, that all reports which are intended to injure me or my reputation as a carriage-builder, are utterly false. I employ the best mechanics I can get, and am willing at any time to put my work in competition with any in the state.

CHARLES ECKHART,
Proprietor of Eckhart Carriage Works.

Select School.

Miss Sadie Baldock will teach a two-months term of school in the north-ward school-house, commencing next Monday, May 17. Tuition $1.50 to $1.75.

—There is an advertising "chromo" in John L. Davis' hardware store that "lays over" any of them. While it is an attractive and highly-colored picture, the very idea of the lady of the house, elegantly attired in robes of richest material, standing in her boudoir with a box of "Rising Sun" stove-polish scattered over her writing-desk, is just a trifle too ridiculous. The representation is excellent, but it lacks the beauty of consistency.

—A letter received yesterday from an attendant at the insane asylum at Indianapolis, addressed to the local editor of this paper, personally, states that a young man from Valparaiso, who was recently adjudged insane and sent to the asylum, is laboring under the hallucination that he (the writer of the letter) is us. Latest advices, however, justify us in saying that the crazy man has got it all wrong. We are not there, and have so written to our correspondent, requesting him to have the gentleman from Valparaiso take something for it.

From the Sturgis (Mich.) Weekly: Mr. John Brast, living in Sherman township, informed us a few days ago that his feet had been so terribly frost-bitten that he could hardly stand the pains caused thereby. He happened to think of ST. JACOBS OIL—which he always keeps handy—rubbed his feet twice with the remedy, and the pain disappeared entirely. He not only values ST. JACOBS OIL as an unexcelled remedy for a great many other painful diseases to which mankind is subject, but he also asserts that it is really invaluable for the many diseases horses and stock are subject to, and which so often play havoc with the prospects of the farmer and stock raiser.

This Spring!

We are making some extraordinary efforts to do about two-thirds of the

CLOTHING BUSINESS

of this city. Heretofore we have, probably, done one-half of it. With our increased facilities, and having bought largely before the advance, etc., our belief remains unchanged, and we shall act upon it, that the best time to sell cheap is when others sell dear; and that more fortunes have been made by selling at low than high prices. Call and see the most complete stock of

Men's Clothing,
Boy's Clothing,
Children's Clothing,
Hats and Caps,
Gents' Furnishing Goods

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.
C. O. D.

One-price clothiers and displayers of the best goods for the least money.

Opposite North Door Court House.

A MEDLEY OF MERIT.

A FINE
DRESS SUIT.

Black Cloth Frock Coat........$10.00
Black Doeskin Pants........5.00
Black Cloth Vest........2.50

PANTS.

Men's Fine Rock or Harris........$5.00
Men's All-Wool........3.00
Boys' Very Durable........2.00

BOYS' SUITS.

Excellent Quality........$10.00
Strong and Durable........5.00

SAM, PETE & MAX,
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

EXAMINE OUR NOVELTIES FOR SPRING.

New Hat Man!

Hats.

and Caps.

New Hat Man!

C. H. YESBERA,
Auburn, Indiana.

THE DEACON'S PRAYER.

BY W. FRANKLIN WATSON.

When Deacon Fairweather went to pray,
At the close of a pleasant summer day,
While the neighbors were kneeling around him there,
As they usually did at that hour of prayer,
He prayed in his honest, kindly voice,
That oft made many a heart rejoice,
For wisdom, virtue, trust and grace
To guide him on to heaven apace;
That, indifferent to this world, his love
Might strengthen for the world above.
And he didn't forget the heathen there,
But offered him up on the wings of prayer.
He prayed for all good institutions,
And the blessing of God on contributions,
And he hoped their own bright happy band
Might gather at last on the shining strand.
But, while he was heartily praying for those,
Some visions to his mind arose,
Of his neighbor's hogs he had chased that day
From his field of potatoes over the way,
For they tore like demons around the field,
And the faster he followed the louder they squealed
The school-house inmates heard the noise,
"Whoa, Emma!" cried the little boys,
And it set the deacon in a chafe
To see the pretty school-dame laugh.
When the swine had fled the fence was flat,
And the deacon panting, without a hat.
While fixing the fence in a testy putter,
The good old deacon was heard to mutter
Some words a pirate would blush to utter.
And now, as I said, while he bowed to pray,
At the close of that pleasant summer day,
There came abrupt in his bended head
Thoughts of the swine and the words he said,
"Forgive us, Lord, when we have disobeyed,
As we've forgiven trespasses," he prayed;
"And let our lives be humble—more like Thine,
Our walk and conversation more divine."
And the deacon's prayer went softly on,
And soon the thoughts of the swine had gone;
For he thought to himself, "If I loudly pray
This vision will fade from my mind away."
But while he was drawing his prayer to a close,
The shadowy porkers again arose
And feebly kicked near the deacon's nose.
Some warning they appeared to render,
Like Samuel in the Witch of Endor.
The long, sad squeals rose painful clear,
And smote upon the deacon's ear.
"Oh, Lord!" he stammered, "our sins forgive,
And help us more like Thee to live."
Just at that moment he caught the eye
Of the grunting shoats from his neighbor's sty,
And once again in a dreamy sense
He saw them clamber a broken fence.
The deacon didn't know what to do,
It seemed like a vision—yet seemed true;
His eyes bulged out in a dreadful way,
And his hair stood up like new-land hay,
He groaned—then faltered—then ceased to pray.
His mind was troubled, he knew not why,
As he glanced around at his friends from the sty;
Those painful moments were but brief,
Then he burst in penitential grief:
"Oh, Lord of Heaven, forgive me, I pray,
For swearing at Johnson's hogs to-day."
Scarce had those humbling words been said,
The deacon lifted up his head;
The heavy weight was off his heart,
No more he felt its galling smart.
The grunting swine that stood before
Had vanished to return no more;
The worthy deacon's heart was light,
He saw no more of hogs that night.
—Chicago Ledger.

THE TWO FINGERS.

At the extremity of a little hamlet, situated at no great distance from Tours, on the road between Paris and Bordeaux, was to be seen a few years back a pretty little inn, with whitewashed walls and a swinging signboard. Extensive gardens surrounded it and shut it out from the neighboring houses. Thus isolated, and rendered still more striking by its freshly-decorated exterior, still farther set off by window-blinds of a bright green, it broke upon the eye of the traveler like one of those pleasant villas that adorn the picturesque shores of the Loire. It is not, then, to be wondered at that it should be the favorite resting-place for travelers, the chosen hostelry of postillions and conductors, the most-approved rendezvous for wealthy traders, whom pleasure or business might conduct to its locality. Nor did the interior of the inn belie the inviting aspect of its exterior. At the top, the snuggest bedrooms were to let; on the ground floor the dining-room and the kitchen with its wide fireplace, the two separated by a passage leading to the outer door. Everywhere neatness and order reigned paramount.

It was in the kitchen of the White House—for so the inn was named—that on a cold and rainy evening, in the month of November, 1818, M. Ebrard, the landlord, and his three children, in company with one of their neighbors, were seated round a bright wood fire, discoursing of their affairs, and enjoying the puffs of heat emitted by the glowing embers.

"Only listen to the rain!" said M. Ebrard, after a silence of more than usual duration. "This is the third day that it has poured incessantly, and there seems no likelihood of a change. I looked at the clouds this evening, and they were as watery as ever! Marie, go and fetch us another bottle of our particular—you know, on the left, at the bottom of the cellar."

At these words, uttered in a harsh and imperious tone, Marie instantly roused herself from a sort of reverie into which she seemed to have fallen; she first threw a vague and undetermined glance upon him who had thus abruptly summoned her; then recalling, as by an inward effort, the injunction of M. Ebrard, she rose and left the apartment without uttering a word.

Whoever had observed the young girl while she lighted her lamp, repaired to the cellar, and brought thence the wine, could not fail to have been struck with the immobility of her countenance, while her deep reverie had caused her to resemble a statue of marble—beautiful, indeed, with features delicately formed, and outlines gracefully delineated, but as inanimate and cold as the block whence they seemed hewn. And it was on that account that M. Ebrard pursued her constantly with his reproaches, and wearied her with his gross pleasantries, for M. Ebrard was not the father of Marie. She was the daughter of a rich merchant, who had died a bankrupt, and her mother married M. Ebrard in the hope of securing a home and protection for herself and helpless child.

"Come on, come on," said the landlord, as soon as he saw Marie returning from the cellar. "Only just look at that face of hers! Does she not remind one of a picture of the Magdalene, with her great black eyes, and air of patient resignation?"

"Your health, M. Ebrard," rejoined the neighbor, arming himself with a glass three parts full.

At this moment two knocks were heard on the outer door, and the hands of the innkeeper and his comrade were suddenly arrested in the very act of lifting their glasses to their lips. Marie gave a nervous start that almost caused her to leap out of her chair.

"Who can it be at such an hour of the night?" said Ebrard. "It is no traveler, unless the diligence is greatly behind time; and besides—"

Two knocks, more violent than before, resounded through the kitchen. The landlord rose uneasily, took a lamp, crossed the passage that led to the outer door, and, before opening it, demanded, in a firm voice, "Who's there?"

"A traveler; open quickly!" was the response from the outside.

"What do you want?" said the landlord.

"What do I want?" repeated the voice outside. "Why, a supper and a bed, to be sure. Open the door, will you?"

"Don't get in a passion," said Ebrard, drawing back the bolt, and turning the key in the lock. "Walk in, sir! You come at a rather unseasonable hour; and, as the country is overrun with robbers, we are apt to be cautious about opening the door late at night."

So saying, he held the lamp under the very nose of his guest, and the contemplation seemed sufficiently reassuring, for he bowed respectfully, closed the door, and, taking the portmanteau of the stranger on his back, marshaled the way toward the kitchen, lamp in hand.

As soon as the traveler had disencumbered himself of his cloak, saturated with rain and mud, he seated himself beside the fire, opposite the young girl whom he had remarked on entering. His first care was to call for some supper, adding:

"I must beg of you to be quick about it, for, as I wish to start very early in the morning by the —— diligence, I should be glad to get to rest early."

"Your supper shall be ready in ten minutes," said Ebrard; "but excuse me, sir. You might, I should have thought, have reached —— by the diligence you have just left, without quitting it, and stopping here only to set out again to-morrow morning."

"You are inquisitive, Mr. Landlord," said the traveler, "or rather you are timid; for it is a vestige of fear and suspicion that now haunts you. Let it suffice, then, for you to know, and to quiet your fears, that my family reside in a small neighboring town, and that, by continuing my journey in the diligence I should have arrived at home in the middle of the night, which I desired to avoid, while by stopping at your house I can, by means of the diligence, which starts at 6 to-morrow, arrive in the morning. Does that appear sufficiently satisfactory to you?"

"Perfectly, sir," answered the landlord, a little confused by the pointed and meaning tone with which the young man had replied to his impertinent questioning.

There was a silence of some minutes, during which the eyes of Marie and the young man met often. Some strange and novel sensation was certainly passing through the young girl's heart, for her face, ordinarily so pale, had become suffused with a roseate tinge; her demeanor, before so calm and tranquil, was embarrassed and confused; a scarcely perceptible emotion seemed to have taken possession of her whole being. She was, however, aroused from this fresh reverie by the rough voice of Ebrard announcing supper. The traveler placed himself at the table, and twenty minutes sufficed for the repast.

"Marie," said Ebrard, "light a candle, and show the gentleman to his room."

The poor girl obeyed, and the young man followed her to the first story.

"You are not that man's daughter," said he, as soon as he found himself alone with Marie.

"No, sir," she replied, and her face became crimson.

"I could have sworn it," said he; "only from your white and delicate hands, and the modest blush that suffuses your face at this moment. Then, after a moment's silence, he asked, "Have you many visitors in the house?"

"You are the only one this evening," she replied.

"Your name, mademoiselle, I beg?" said he.

"Marie, sir," she replied.

They were silent, and it would have been a curious thing to observe this gay sub-Lieutenant on leave, this young man with all the ardent and unbridled passions of youth, speechless and spellbound before a woman, a simple girl, the attendant of an humble roadside inn. Oh, matchless power of innocence and virtue! for it was the timid look, the honest demeanor of Marie, that had led him to divine what she really was; one glance had been sufficient to convince him that had he dared to lay a profane hand upon her, a single word from the young girl's lips would have sufficed to hurl him back into his former attitude of respectful homage.

"Does monsieur require anything more?" asked Marie with visible effort.

"No, I thank you," was the young man's sole response.

They wished each other good-night, and Marie did not once raise her downcast eyes, but, precipitately quitting the chamber, descended the stairs, almost stumbling at every step.

The young man remained petrified, his eyes fixed upon the door, and he gave himself up to a deep fit of musing. A burning brand falling from the fireplace to his feet, with a crackling noise, aroused him from his meditation. A quarter of an hour of positive existence sufficed to dissolve the charm. Nothing remained but astonishment at having found so fair a face and form beneath the rude shelter of an obscure inn. It was one of those mysteries to be met with sometimes in life, an undecipherable hieroglyphic.

When Marie re-entered the kitchen she found another stranger there. He was a man about 40 or 45 years of age; strong and athletic, with large coarse hands and brawny shoulders. His face was tolerably good-looking, notwithstanding that his hair, sprinkled with gray, and plastered down upon his forehead, imparted a singularly Jesuitical expression to his countenance, heightened, moreover, by a peculiar ambiguity in his eyes. The sole question he addressed to the landlord at his supper was:

"Am I the only traveler in your inn?"

"You will have a next-door neighbor, sir," was the reply; "a young man who arrived this evening, and who seems a perfect gentleman."

The stranger became thoughtful, and his brow grew clouded. After a few moments' reflection he said:

"Take care to call me at 7, for I must be at Tours before noon. By the way," he added, "you must procure me a horse; and mind it is ready betimes."

To each of these injunctions Ebrard replied by a sign of acquiescence, and then placed a candle in the hands of Marie, who conducted the new-comer to his chamber.

The young man was in bed, but his candle was still burning. Agitated and disturbed by the passing emotion which had swept across his heart, he had not as yet been able to yield himself up to the influence of sleep, whose balm he so much needed, to soothe the fatigues of a two-days' journey. All at once an idea took possession of his mind; he rose, sought for a key in the pocket of his waistcoat, opened his trunk, and took thence his sword, which he placed at the head of his bed. That done, he again betook himself to his couch.

The old kitchen clock had just struck the midnight hour; all the house was doubtless buried in a profound sleep, excepting Marie, whose head and brain seemed to throb with a confusion of ideas equally novel and strange, and who, in her innocence, strove vainly to account to herself for the tumultuous feelings that possessed her.

At this instant the young man was awakened by a noise similar to that of a key turning in a lock. He listened, and, hearing nothing more, persuaded himself that he had only been dreaming, and went to sleep again; but again he was awakened, and this time he was not mistaken, for there was really some one seeking to enter his room. He rose, took his sword, and, although his candle was extinguished, he crept silently toward the door, near which he crouched down to watch the event.

At the end of five minutes the noise ceased; he thought the design of penetrating to his apartment had been abandoned, as he had double-locked the door, and it must have been very difficult to open it, when, chancing involuntarily to cast his eyes down, he perceived by the light of the moon, which shone brightly through the window-panes, a hand gliding into the space left between the floor and the room door, and striving to lift the latter off its hinges. He raised his weapon above his head, and, letting it fall with all his strength, brought it down upon the hand just as it was about to disappear. A stifled cry was heard, then a fearful blasphemy, half-articulated, and, lastly, a light sound, as of some one retiring, and which gradually melted in the silence of the night. Two bleeding fingers remained on the threshold.

The young man ran to the fireplace, where a few embers yet burned; his candle lighted, he could contemplate the hideous trophy of his victory. After the first moment of surprise he picked up the two fingers, washed them carefully, and stanched the blood with his handkerchief.

"It must be confessed," said he to himself, "that I was very lucky to have thought of my sword." Then, attentively examining the fingers, he added, "Rather a white hand for a thief—and the nails tolerably clean!"

So saying, he wrapped the two fingers up in a handkerchief, and returned to bed with the utmost coolness, as if nothing extraordinary had happened. Another quarter of an hour and he was sleeping soundly.

It was not yet daylight when the landlord came to awaken the young man, who was to set forth at 6 o'clock. When the latter, having first cast a glance at Ebrard's hands, related to him, half jocularly, the event of the night, and showed the blood which had stained the threshold of the door, the honest innkeeper turned pale and trembled; but, speedily recovering, his first movement was to repair to the apartment of the stranger who had arrived last, to see if it were still tenanted. He found the door open, entered, drew the bed-curtains, but saw no one. Some traces of blood guided him to the window, which he found also open; he looked out, and in the garden beheld the heavy footmarks of some one escaping in the direction of the high-road; so that M. Ebrard, notwithstanding the confusion that reigned in his poor brain, had still presence of mind sufficient to enable him to draw the reasonable inference, and admit the profound conviction, that the mutilated robber was no other than the pretended traveler whom he had harbored the preceding night.

It would be difficult to paint the truly lamentable condition of poor Ebrard after the fatal discovery. We need only say he regained his self-possession sufficiently to repair to the Commissioner of Police to make his deposition and relate on his way to all his acquaintances, and with an air of the most utter bewilderment, the fearful tragedy of which his house had been the theater.

The young traveler arrived at his paternal mansion about noon; and, as he was quite unexpected, he was welcomed by an explosion of joy and tender exclamations. His mother bestowed a few soft tears upon him, while his sisters threw their arms about his neck, caressing him, and contemplating him with joy and satisfaction.

"But where is my father?" said he, at length extricating himself from the stringent embrace of his youngest sister.

"You are aware," said his mother, "that he is accustomed to be often absent from home. He left here three days ago for a little town in the neighborhood; but we are expecting him to-day."

"And is my good father still as taciturn and gloomy as ever?" he asked.

"Alas, yes!" they replied; "you would imagine him incessantly pursued by some dread fatality; but your arrival, so unlooked for as it is, cannot fail to gladden and cheer him."

As soon as the young man was seated, questions of all sorts assailed him, so greatly was the curiosity of his family excited to learn every particular of his life since he had quitted the paternal roof.

"And you met with no accident on your journey?" asked his mother.

"No, not exactly an accident," he replied; "but a somewhat-singular event occurred to me last night, as you shall hear."

He then related his night of agitation and blood, and they listened, horror-stricken, for the tone in which he spoke convinced them of the truth of his recital.

"Oh! I had nearly forgotten," said he, at the termination of his tale, "to mention that I brought away irrefragable proofs of my victory."

As he spoke, he put his hand into his pocket, and drew from it a handkerchief, in which something seemed to be carefully wrapped up. At the same moment the door of the apartment opened, and a man, with a pale and disordered countenance, with travel-stained garments and tottering gait, entered.

"My father! my dear father!" cried the young man, rushing into his arms, "we are all then now reunited."

So saying, he stretched out his hand to his father, but no answering hand met his in return. For the first time, he perceived that it was enveloped in a blood-stained cloth.

"What do I see?" he exclaimed. "Is it possible that you are wounded?"

"Yes—yes," said his father. "To-night, as I was crossing a forest some leagues from hence, I was attacked by robbers. I endeavored to defend myself, and in the struggle I had the mishap to lose two of my fingers; but do not let that distress you."

All at once the youngest of the sisters, who had picked up the handkerchief which his father's arrival had caused the young man to drop, opened it, and, uttering a piercing shriek, exclaimed:

"Mamma! two fingers wrapped up in Frederick's handkerchief!"

At these astounding words a deep silence of terror and dismay ensued. A thunder-bolt had fallen in the midst of this family; all felt that there was an assassin among them. An hour later, and the father of Frederick was in the hands of justice; for his children, in their despair and horror, had not bethought themselves of urging him to fly.

On the 20th of December the Court of Assize at Tours was thronged with rowds of the curious, who flocked from all parts, and were conversing eagerly on the important business of the day. Every countenance expressed joy and impatience. It was but natural; a father was about to be tried for having attempted to assassinate his son. Poor public! such a treat as this so rarely occurs!

After the reading of the accusation, the Judge proceeded to the hearing of the witnesses. Jean Antoine Ebrard was called; but he had died the beginning of the month. Then a young girl came forward, dressed in black, and carefully concealing her features beneath the folds of a large silk mantilla. It was Marie. She raised her hand, tremblingly, and when asked if she recognized the person of the accused, she replied no. She shrank not from falsehood for the sake of the father of Frederick.

The depositions of the other witnesses were overwhelming; but the most important of all, that of the innkeeper; which would alone have sufficed for the condemnation of the accused, was wanting.

After the Attorney General, the counsel for the prisoner spoke. He endeavored to prove an alibi. By his account it was impossible to prove that the accused had slept at the inn on the night of the event, since the only person who could have seen him declared that she did not know him. "No," said he, in conclusion, "the accused has been a victim, and is not guilty; it is by the knife of assassins that he has been thus mutilated, and not by the sword of his son."

"And as a proof," cried a hollow voice from the midst of the crowd of auditors, "behold the relics which I have kept ever since!"

At the same moment two fingers rolled on to the desk of the presiding Judge, and were passed to lawyers, advocates and jurors, and all were able to convince themselves that they belonged to the left hand, while the accused had been wounded on the right.

Three days afterward Frederick fled the country, and Marie with him. To save his guilty father he had mutilated his own hand.

A Sad Death.

A minister was summoned to the bedside of a dying man. The man who lay, gradually obeying the grave summons, gasped and groaned. The minister moved to the bedside and held the hand of the victim. The wife, wild with grief, sank to the floor.

"My friend," said the minister, "you are a man whose prosperous condition in this life has allowed you much time for devotional exercises. Your dear little children, your wife informs me, are visiting relatives. They will not see their father die. How many children have you?"

"Thirteen," gasped the dying man.

"I had no idea that you had so many. Poor little ones. Your poor wife looks as though she will die. Judging from your number of children I should think that you had been married more than once. How many wives has the good Lord granted you?"

"Fifteen," groaned the man.

"Surely not so many," said the minister, "Think of this matter seriously. How many times have you been married?"

"Fourteen," and the victim fell back exhausted.

"Are you willing to die?" asked the minister, after a pause.

"Move three up, six, down and eight to the left!"

"Are you prepared to share the glorious territory of Abraham's bosom?"

"Move ten up!"

"Have you made your peace with your Savior?"

"Simplest thing in the world—move nine down!"

"Take your mind from the confused arithmetic of the world and place it on heaven's holy algebra. Are you willing to stand before the great throne?"

"Three."

"Can you go fearlessly?"

"Eleven."

"After life's desperate struggle, what have you accomplished?"

"Thirteen, fifteen, fourteen," and the man was dead.—Little Rock Gazette.

Profits of Rose-Culture.

It is stated, as showing the profits from rose-culture, that in 1871 a florist in Massachusetts set out out five rose-bushes of the Gen. Jacqueminot variety, in a new greenhouse thirteen feet by 100. The first crop of flowers he sold for 4 cents each, with his tea-roses. The next year they sold for $1 per dozen, and the next for $2 per dozen. During the month of February of this year he cut 1,052 roses, which he sold to the florists in Boston for from 25 to 50 cents each, netting him $440.50. Since that time he has cut and sold enough to make the amount over $500 in the aggregate from the five plants. A second crop from the same plant is now coming in.

The leaves of geranium are an excellent application for cuts, when the skin is rubbed off, and other wounds of the kind. One or two leaves must be bruised and applied on linen to the part, and the wound will become cicatrized in a very short time.

TURKEY.

The Doom of the Ottoman Empire

The latest news from Constantinople, says the Chicago Tribune, induces us to believe that the Eastern question in Europe is rapidly approaching its final phase. In January last we referred to a prediction, made by the National Gazette of Berlin, that the near death of the Ottoman empire might be expected. The Gazette expressed the opinion that the demise of Turkey would not be caused by foreign aggression, but by an absolute want of the pecuniary means necessary to prolong its existence. If recent telegrams are correct, this prediction is liable to be verified at a much earlier date than could then have been expected. Turkey is now said to be almost at the end of her resources. Little revenue is being received from her already impoverished provinces, and her custom-house receipts are utterly inadequate to meet the most necessary expenses of the Government. The debts due to army and navy contractors are not paid, and some of these, so great is their want, have been forced to demand an interview with the Sultan, a desperate step in Turkey, in order to require from him a settlement of their accounts.

The sum now due contractors for feeding the Turkish army and navy is stated to be over $5,000,000. There is no money to meet this emergency, and it is feared that the means of subsistence for the army must soon cease. The same want of money is felt in every other department of the Government. The limited amount received is squandered in paying the extravagances of the Sultan and his harem, or in exorbitant salaries to a few of his personal favorites and higher officials. With these exceptions the employes of the Porte receive little or nothing for their services, and the time appears near when the entire public service of Turkey can only be maintained by a system of wholesale robbery and plunder of the Turkish people. In the meantime the Sultan's most intimate counselors seem to have lost all reason. Judged by their actions, they believe that Turkey is able to oppose the entire power of Europe. They have alienated from her the sympathies of every foreign Government, and it may be doubted that, even if Lords Beaconsfield and Salisbury had retained power in England, they would have been either willing or able longer to bolster up the flagrant misrule and shameful violation of all promises of which the Turkish Government had been so openly guilty. There can be no doubt as to the policy the British Liberals will pursue. Lord Hartington stated in one of his campaign speeches that they would do all in their power to create a coalition for compelling Turkey to introduce the reforms she has promised on every occasion, but which she has constantly and defiantly failed to carry out. There is evidently nothing to prevent them from adopting this programme. A coalition for this purpose would probably not be opposed by a single country in Europe. Public disgust at the conduct of the Turks has become so marked that any proposition having this in view will be most gladly welcomed by any European Government, and the demands which may be made upon the Sultan will be most promptly and sternly enforced.

Many of the Liberals go even farther than Lord Hartington in the desire to enforce reforms upon the Turkish Government. Mr. Gladstone has especially been most positive in his assertions that it is idle to trust longer to any promises of reform which may be given by the Sultan. His opinion can be accepted as that of the party he represents, and this opinion will constitute the policy of the Liberal Cabinet.

Canadian Weather.

Mr. H. G. Vennor, of Montreal, whose boldness in weather predictions has brought him into such prominence, says that the extreme cold of Canada is almost always produced by a wind blowing from a point to the north of west. Such a wind is both cold and dry. Being dry, in passing along it imbibes moisture rapidly, causing cold. Being also cold, it quickly absorbs heat from the surface of the earth; and, when this continues for several hours of any day, and toward sunset it becomes calm, we then usually have the lowest state of the thermometer. In Canada, these extremes of cold usually last about three days; the nor'wester beginning about noon of one day, blowing fiercely for that afternoon, becoming almost calm in the evening—then a cold night. Next day the wind is not so high, but still from a northwesterly point. Again, toward sunset, there is a calm, with the thermometer more or less below zero. In the morning, it may be observed that the force of the cold is breaking. If the wind veers round to a point south of west, there will be a few flurries of snow, very threatening in appearance, but amounting to very little in reality, no snow-storms of consequence coming from the west. If, on the other hand, the wind passes to the east, several hours of bitter cold may be expected, followed by a general snow-storm lasting from twenty to thirty hours.

A Remarkable Family.

A South Carolina patriarch is Mr. William Smoak of Orangeburg, who boasts perhaps the largest family in the United States. He is of German extraction, and, having been born in 1784, is now in his 97th year. He has had thirteen children, ten of whom are still living, the oldest being now 75 years of age and the youngest 50. These thirteen children have brought into the world 130 children, 104 of whom are now living, and these have had 460 children, of whom 391 are now alive. There have also been seventy-nine children of the fourth generation of Mr. Smoak's descendants, of whom all but nine are now alive. Thus the old man has 575 living descendants, and has also seen 116 others, who are now dead. The most remarkable feature of the case is the fact that both the old man and his wife (the latter is now dead) lived to see their thirteenth and youngest child a grandmother. The entire family have been known in the community where they now live for sixty years, and there has never been a criminal or a drunkard among them.

A bad little Milwaukee boy, having been expelled from school, returned in girl's clothes, and the imposture was not discovered for several months.

ONE PINK BLOSSOM.

BY MRS. J. V. H. KOONS.

Far away on a Western prairie
  By a region of grass wild and high,
And fair as a kingdom of fairy,
  We were riding, an old friend and I.

He chatted of possible corn-fields,
  With thousands of silk-tasseled ears
Of various wonderful grain yields
  There would be in a few more years.

He told me of birds and of serpents,
  Of insects—and legion by name;
Of beautiful rivers and fishes,
  Of all kinds of wild prairie game.

I do not believe that I listened
  As well as I ought to have done—
I remember the while I was thinking
  Of another and dearer friend's son.

But I saw peeping up by the wayside,
  Through grasses green, tangled and high,
A tiny pink blossom as pretty
  And bright as a wee baby's eye.

It was turning and reaching and lifting
  Its meek little sunshiny face
As high as it could in the drifting
  Green wavelets of fringes and lace.

And still it kept struggling and glancing
  Like a sunbeam through clouds in a storm,
Its patience and hopefulness haunt me—
  I cannot forget its sweet form.

When I see a bright spirit entangled
  In humanity's rank weeds and grass,
I think of that dear, dainty flowret
  That smiled in the wild morass.

I've thought of it over and over—
  I shall think of it all through my life;
For many a beautiful spirit
  Shall struggling go down in the strife.
—Chicago Ledger.

PITH AND POINT.

The person who retires with the sun must have a warm bedfellow.

An Illinois racehorse is named Chicago Girl. Of course it is very fast.—Boston Post.

Gen. Melikoff's reply to the Nihilist who tried to kill him: "You be hanged."

It is a poor rule that won't work both ways. There are savages with Christian hearts, and Christians with savage hearts.

Danbury News: "Every year the winter grows milder. The time will come when sleighs will be fitted with mosquito-nets."

In order to induce the ladies to vote, the Elmira Free Press moves that the polls be established in a millinery store where there is a perpetual opening.

You can't suit a man anyway. He will scoff at the microscopic bonnet on the street, and growl at the aspiring one in the theater.—New York Graphic.

Mr. Smith, who has to lug a scuttle of coal upstairs three times a day, reads with prospective joy the announcement that the coal-fields of the world will be exhausted in 2,000 years.

"Good-morning, Patrick; you have got a new coat at last, but it seems to fit you rather too much." "Och, there's nothing surprising in that; sure, I wasn't there when I was measured for it."

"Never expose your disappointments to the world," says Beecher. Correct. If the other fellow responds to your call with a show of four aces, stick your four kings into the pack and say you were bluffed.

Young gent—"Might I ask you, miss—ah—" Miss—"Very sorry, sir, but I'm engaged for the next three dances." Y. G.—"It is not dancing—ah—it is—it's—beg your pardon, miss; you are sitting on my hat."

A gentleman having a servant with a very thick skull used often to call him the king of fools. "I wish," said the fellow one day, "you could make your words good, as I should then be the monarch of the world."

Lawyer C—(entering the office of his friend Dr. M—, and speaking in a hoarse whisper): "Fred, I've got such a cold this morning that I can't speak the truth." Dr. M—, "Well, I'm glad that it's nothing that will interfere with your business."

There seems to have been a collision in legal circles in New York. The Daily Register chronicles a "Conveyance Overturned." This reminds us of a lawyer who told his wife he had been "working like a horse" all day "drawing conveyances."—Albany Law Journal.

John Smith is dead. That fine young man
  We'll never see no more;
He was a member of our club
  Since 1864.
His private virtues were immense,
  His manner free and bluff;
He wore a paper collar
  And was never known to muff.
His nose was Roman and his eyes
  Continually were peeled;
He made a splendid umpire
  And beautiful left field.
Though not a matrimonial man
  He dearly loved a match,
And, like his sister, had but few
  Superiors on the "catch."
But he is gone. With ins and outs
  Forever he is done.
He broke his heart and burst his spleen
  In making a home run.

George Abrahams was extravagantly fond of cold cabbage, and one day, seeing that quite a dishful was left after dinner, asked his wife to save it for his salad at night. About midnight George came laboring under a stress of heavy weather. Feeling hungry, and thinking of his favorite cabbage, he asked where it was. His wife replied: "In the pantry, on the second shelf." Down he went, found the cabbage, got out the oil, mustard, and vinegar, cut up the cabbage, dressed it to the Queen's taste and ate it all. In the morning his wife noticed the plate of cabbage where she had placed it the day before, and, turning to her "dear George," innocently asked why he did not eat the cabbage. "I did," he said. "How did you like it?" "Oh! not very well; it was tough and stringy." "But here is the cabbage now; where did you find any more?" "Why, on the second shelf, where you told me." A quick look at the shelf by the wife and then a cry of agony. "Why, George, you have eaten $20 worth of lace collars and cuffs that I had put in starch; stringy cabbage, indeed!"

Warning to Young Ladies.

A beautiful young lady, the daughter of Alderman Dellet, of Lancaster, the other night playfully threw her arm around the waist of a lady friend, and a pair of scissors hanging therefrom severed an artery in her arm and she nearly bled to death. This accident should teach young ladies that throwing arms around the female waist is a dangerous piece of business that should be performed solely by the male sex. The latter are strong, and brave, and don't mind having an artery severed now and then for the good of the cause.—Norristown Herald.

MR. THURMAN AT HOME.

Speech of the Ohio Senator at Columbus, Ohio.

MY FRIEND AND FELLOW-TOWNSMEN: If any one of you were far from home, and should receive a warm and cordial welcome from strangers whom you had never seen, you would feel deeply, profoundly grateful for that kind attention. But, grateful as one may feel for the welcome of strangers, there is something much nearer the heart in the welcome to his home by one's friends and neighbors. We may be grateful for politeness from those we have never seen, but when we are welcomed home by those with whom we have dwelt, whom we recognize as our own townsmen, and with whom we expect to live as long as life shall be spared, there is a feeling more deep than gratitude, more powerful than respect. So I feel to-night at this welcome which you have been so kind as to give me, and I but feebly express my emotions when I thank you for it with all my heart, and when I also return to the orator who has spoken for you to-night my sincere appreciation of his too-flattering remarks.

My friends, as I passed through Newark today I purchased a Columbus paper, and to my great surprise I found that I was expected to make a speech here to-night. I speak in all sincerity and truth when I say that that surprised me, for it was only yesterday morning that I knew I could come and visit my home, and I had no certainty at all that you would know that I was coming, and, if you did know it, I had no idea I would be expected to make a speech; and this being the case, my friends, I have no prepared speech to deliver you. I did not come to Ohio charged with a speech. I did not think a speech from me was at all necessary. I came here to get a little rest, after five months' intense labor without any recreation at all. Although enjoying fine health, I needed among my friends at Columbus; but, since you have been told that I would speak to-night, and have been kind enough to come to hear me, it would be unjust in me not to say something, at least, upon the political questions, or some of them, that agitate the country. You will permit me, however, my friends, to be very brief. At no time am I a long speaker, and, therefore, it is but seldom that I am tedious. I shall speak to you, therefore, very briefly indeed, but what I do say I commend to your careful and thoughtful consideration.

My friends, it has been said that every Presidential election is a crisis in this republic, and, though it might be doubted whether in the past that remark is so absolutely true that there was no exception to it, yet it would be admitted that in later years every Presidential election has in fact been a crisis in our affairs, and no one can tell how long it may thus continue to be. But of one thing I think we may be absolutely certain, and that is that this Presidential election will be regarded, as long as the history of this country shall be read and studied, as a crisis in the affairs of the republic. And why do I say this? I am not accustomed, it is not my wont, to magnify things. Why, then, do I say that this is a crisis in public affairs? Because, my friends, in my serious judgment the election this year will go far to determine whether substantial liberty, substantial free institutions, shall longer exist in America.

Judge Thurman then spoke for some minutes upon the phrase so often repeated by the opponents of the Democratic party, that "We need a strong Government." The meaning of the phrase was that we should have a stronger National Government to rule over the whole people of this country. The people should be content with the Government as it has existed for three-quarters of a century, under which we have flourished as no other people have flourished. There are but two modes of giving strength to a Government; one mode is fraught with beneficence to the people, and safety, security, and prosperity to the state. The other mode means despotism over the people, and some rest, some repose; and I came to get it means ruin and ultimate destruction to the state. The first is to so constitute your Government, and so administer it that it will challenge and receive the affection of the people who dwell under it, that they shall not merely obey, but that they shall revere, esteem and love it. A Government thus supported by its people, whatever may be its form, however few may be the powers expressly conferred upon it, is one of the strongest Governments upon the earth, if not the very strongest. Such a Government our forefathers thought they had ordained for the people of the United States, and such a Government the Democratic party has always advocated.

The other mode of strengthening a Government is to strengthen it merely by force—by great standing armies. The point was dwelt on at some length, and the illustrations of the results of such kind of government was given by reference to the rule of Great Britain over Ireland, the empire of Russia, etc.

The application made of the principles underlying the two forms of Government was that the former mode was that by which the Democratic party sought to administer the Government, while the Republican party resorted to the latter mode.

He concluded as follows: "Now, my friends, in my judgment, the great question which is to be solved is whether or no the strength of our Government in the future shall come from the affections of the people, or whether it shall be that strength that despots, and despots alone, employ. There is much more that I might speak to you about, of the necessity of reform, of the necessity of economy, of the necessity of lowering taxes, and all these subjects with which you are more or less familiar; but I promised you that I would not weary your patience, and I hope you will not allow me to weary myself."

Again thanking the crowd, he retired, amid enthusiastic applause.

Blaine and the Credit Mobilier.

The defiant attitude and "moral heroism" presented by James G. Blaine, when, in the sessions of 1872-3, he left the Speaker's chair and boldly asserted his innocence of any complicity with the great Credit Mobilier scandal is well remembered, as a dramatic picture in American politics. A letter in the Springfield Republican recently reviews this matter for apparent edification of Mr. Blaine:

Recently the writer had a conversation with a near friend of Mr. Ames, who has always defended his memory and challenged any proof of the assertion that he was an untruthful man. I had not asserted to him that I thought Mr. Ames untruthful, but I told him that I always had great difficulty in reconciling the alleged testimony of Mr. Ames before the Poland committee relative to Mr. Blaine with the facts as shown by Mr. McComb's statements and the memorandum book itself. "You, yourself, well know," I said to him "that Mr. Blaine's name was on Mr. Ames' memorandum book with the other names, and that he was a sharer with the others in the distribution of the Credit Mobilier stock?" The reply was as follows: "If you knew what I know you would say that Mr. Ames was a perfectly truthful man. I was in the committee room when Mr. Blaine made his statement, and I know all that happened. The record makes Mr. Ames corroborate Mr. Blaine. It is not true. He did not do it. I was standing by Mr. Ames when the question was asked him whether Mr. Blaine's statement was in accordance with his recollection, and I trembled for him then, but he never opened his lips—no matter what the report of the evidence may say—he never opened his lips!" The gentleman who made this statement is a man whose word will be taken anywhere, and his testimony that Mr. Ames' lips were closed when the record made him vindicate Mr. Blaine startled me. The statement has been made by friends of Mr. Ames that Mr. Blaine, when offered a share of the Credit Mobilier, scouted the bargain on account of the smallness of the amount and demanded $100,000 worth of it. Whatever may be the facts his name stands in Mr. Ames' memorandum book with the figures "3,000" against it, and Mr. Ames' remark: "You have heard Mr. Blaine's testimony and my acquiescence in it," is certainly a remarkable one. He does not say that Mr. Blaine's statement is true, but only that he acquiesces in it. Mr. Ames was in a very difficult position at that time. He knew that he would be threatened with expulsion, and the Speaker's influence was very valuable to him. Besides, he felt kindly toward Mr. Blaine, while he did not feel so toward Mr. Colfax and some others who were trying to place him in a false attitude. So he let Mr. Blaine's statement pass with his "acquiescence." But this does not prevent numbers of people who believe themselves conversant with the facts from saying and believing that the memorandum book was correct, and that Mr. Blaine did receive the dividends on thirty shares of C. M. stock. Mr. Blaine recently, when squarely confronted with the statement that there was proof in the possession of the heirs of Oakes Ames to show that he (Blaine) was interested in the Credit Mobilier, did not deny the fact, but replied, "Do you suppose the children of Oakes Ames are going to make public anything that will cast everlasting disgrace upon the name of their father?"

Illinois Democracy---No Longer Lethargy in the Ranks.

There is no longer lethargy in the Democratic ranks in Illinois. The rank and file of the party in our State have already begun to enlist in the contest with the determination of rescuing Illinois from Radical rule; and, with a complete union, under courageous leaders, we shall accomplish the good work next November. Experience has taught us some dear lessons, and we shall now reap our reward. Dissensions have been buried, and the old Jacksonian spirit of Democracy is now cropping out all over the State. Under its inspiring influence we shall march to victory. Our cause is the cause of the people, and the people will sustain it. The seal of popular condemnation will be put upon all attempts to turn the Government over into the hands of men who would change it into a central despotism. The people are opposed to the increase of the power of wealthy corporations and to a wealthy aristocracy. The Government must be preserved as our forefathers intended it should be. Equal rights, equal justice and fair reward for labor can only be obtained when the Government dispenses its blessings and bounties to all alike. Subsidies and rings have been eating up the vitals of the country, and we can no longer be blind to our interests. Let the people push the glorious work of a grand revival in the Democratic ranks. Victory is within our reach, and, when she perches upon our banners, the plaudits of a saved country will be our reward.—Belleville (Ill.) Democrat.

The Law of Immigration.

The stream of immigration which is now pouring into this country, and which promises to reach 350,000 or 400,000 before the year is out, follows with curious accuracy the course of events after past revivals of business. Both in the industrial blight which fell over this country after the War of 1812, in 1837 and in 1857, the panic was succeeded by increased land sales in the West, and a migration from the East to fill them, cheap grain and a great grain export, a rush of immigration from Europe, which is in progress now, coupled with a vast increase in speculation. It is a curious circumstance that after '37 and '57 the swollen tide of immigration came at the same time with the discovery of new mines in the West and a speculative mining fever in the West. It has generally taken from five to ten years after immigration set in before the bubble broke, so reviving is this fresh addition of new blood and new labor.—Springfield Republican.

Gymnastic Training.

The Spartans were rigid in exacting a gymnastic training for youths. Then the girls were expected to be good gymnasts, and no young woman could be married till she had publicly exhibited her proficiency in various exercises.

A New Dish.

A Frenchman has invented a new dish, and Paris has gone crazy over it. Take a head of celery and boil the heart in vinegar water for a quarter of an hour wipe it dry, and place it in a sauce made of sugar flavored with lemon juice. Serve it cold at dessert. It is called crystallized celery.

HARTMANN the Nihilist refugee, is by occupation an engraver and designer, excelling in the latter capacity. He is about 43 years of age, of middle height, curly black hair, clean shaved, and bronze complexion. Like many Russians, he is an accomplished linguist, and of manners so agreeable that, though the son of a swineherd from one of the Baltic provinces, he was received in good society in Paris, where he penetrated by accident, keeping his real position a secret.

GEN. STOLER had a narrow escape from assassination recently, at Kieff. While walking along the street he felt something cold touch his cheek. Turning suddenly he saw a man with a revolver standing by his side who hurried away saying: "Excuse me; I have made a mistake." It was fortunate for him the man discovered his mistake in time.

WHILE Pastor Woolpert was out of his pulpit, at Fort Wayne, Ind., Class-Leader Jackson entered it, unfolded a manuscript, and read a formal charge of immorality against the minister. The congregation frequently interrupted, but Jackson persisted until they had heard all he had written.

PRESIDENT HAYES and his family have several relics of Lincoln, and the former especially values a pair of black kid gloves which were found in the pockets of the overcoat which Lincoln wore to the theater on the night when he was assassinated.

INDIANA NEWS.

LOGANSPORT has been sued for $20,000 on interest account.

THERE are now over 100 men at work on the State House foundation.

REV. EDWARD SWEM has received the appointment of Chaplain in the State Reform School at Plainfield.

THE Hope and Greensburg railroad has received its quietus by the refusal of Clay township to vote the requisite $24,000.

EX-CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM H. ENGLISH, of Indiana, is building for Indianapolis a Grand Opera House that will seat 4,000 persons.

PNEUMONIA is prevailing in an epidemic form among the colored citizens of Carthage and vicinity, almost every case proving fatal.

THE contested election of Trustees, at Shelbyville, has been settled by counting out the Republican—the Democratic candidate having first been counted out.

EX-GOV. HENDRICKS, of Indianapolis, has been allowed a claim for $157.55, based upon damages to his carriage wrecked by running into a bad hole on North Illinois street last January.

MRS. JOSEPH RAMSEY, living about four miles from Vevay, gave birth to triplets last week. Two of the children are dead, and the other was not expected to live. Mrs. Ramsey was, however, doing well.

THE question in Indiana now is, whether it is necessary to call the Legislature to assemble in extra session to pass a Registration law, as required by one of the constitutional amendments just adopted.

THE new owners of the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago railroad, through their Directors, have ordered the issue of $3,000,000 first-mortgage bonds on the road, the proceeds of the sale of which are to be used in improving the road.

THE County Commissioners of Grant county have refused to award the contract for the Court House. When the plan was adopted it was upon the guarantee that the building would not cost over $112,000. The amount asked by the contractors was $136,000.

A WELL-TO-DO farmer named Savage, living at West Florence, eleven miles southeast of Richmond, shot his daughter through the head with a revolver, and then tried to blow his own brains out. Both are injured beyond recovery, and there is no explanation of the affair.

CATHARINE MULLOY, a Quaker lady, made a bequest, in 1868, to the White Lick Quarterly Meeting of Friends, which appointed a trustee who now holds the fund, amounting to a considerable sum of money; and, the White Lick Quarterly Meeting having since withdrawn from the orthodox Quakers, the question is now being heard in court who shall have the money.

MR. SAMUEL GORDON, of Shelby township, Jefferson county, recently found on the farm of Mrs. Sallie Gordon, on Indian Kentuck creek, an Indian tomahawk of remarkable style. It is of metal, which, at a glance, resembles copper, but on close inspection looks more like gold. A large number of people have looked at the prehistoric implement, and its close resemblance to the precious metal has caused no little excitement in the neighborhood.

A TERRIBLE double tragedy occurred recently at the magistrate's office of Esquire Boston, in Blue river township, Harrison county. The litigation and neighborhood excitement had grown out of a quarrel between John Dicklocker and Henry Long over a case of cow stealing. The trial of Long began at 10 o'clock at night, and lasted until 4 in the morning, when a masked mob of from seventy-five to 100 vigilantes rode up to the magistrate's office, and, dismounting from their horses, a part of the mob rushed into the office in order to seize and hang Long. Henry L. Otte, a citizen of Long's neighborhood, headed the mob, and seized Long, who immediately drew his revolver and shot Otte through the heart, killing him instantly. A dozen men at this rushed on Long, and, in his efforts to escape them, his pistol was knocked out of his hands. The infuriated mob fired six or eight shots at Long as he retreated from the office. Gaining the yard he ran around into the kitchen of the house and secreted himself under or behind a bed. An eye-witness says that when he entered the kitchen Long had two pistol shots in the face and one in the neck, and was panting for breath. The mob threatened to burn the house. The beleaguered man again sought escape by flight, and, as he reached the door in his flight, six shots were fired at him. A trail of blood marked his flight to a strip of wood near by, and there is a great pool of gore as if some one had lain bleeding on the ground, and this was the last trace of Long. He was, no doubt, overcome by the mob at this point and killed, and his body carried away to be secreted. The mob then went to the residence of Long, and notified his wife to leave the neighborhood immediately or she would be killed. Joseph Bruner, a neighbor of Long's, was also notified to leave immediately or suffer the penalty of being hung. Other citizens of the neighborhood have also been warned away.

The Amendments.

The official vote on all of the seven constitutional amendments submitted to the people on the 5th of April is published below. The following summary shows the vote in favor of and against each amendment, the total votes cast, and the majorities:

First amendment—Yes	169,483
No	152,251
Total vote	321,734
Majority	17,232
Second amendment—Yes	177,304
No	138,985
Total vote	316,289
Majority	38,319
Third amendment—Yes	173,921
No	144,097
Total vote	318,018
Majority	29,824
Fourth amendment—Yes	175,145
No	137,716
Total vote	312,861
Majority	37,429
Fifth amendment—Yes	182,684
No	136,175
Total vote	318,859
Majority	46,509
Sixth amendment—Yes	175,626
No	141,318
Total vote	316,944
Majority	34,308
Ninth amendment—Yes	176,943
No	126,953
Total vote	303,896
Majority	49,990

BRITISH BULLDOZING.

Election Amenities in Great Britain.

It has been the custom of British journals for years to lament the want of courtesy to candidates manifested in our elections, and to freely comment thereon to the detriment of republican institutions, with supercilious flings at our backwoods style of civilization. Of late, however, says the Chicago Tribune, they have had their attention turned toward their own elections, especially in the recent campaign; but, curiously enough, what they so lavishly condemned in ours they appear to regard as funny in theirs. Even such a high-toned journal as the Saturday Review, referring to the assaults upon Mr. Parnell, says: "It is impossible to regard the hat or the other garments of Mr. Parnell as we feel that they ought to be regarded; human nature is too weak for that. It was, as in a parallel case recorded by Mr. Browning, 'sad, and bad, and mad' of the Enniscorthyites to rabble Mr. Parnell; but, somehow or other, the knowledge that he was rabbled is not wholly disagreeable. This is wrong, but it is human nature." The difference between the two countries is just like this; that what strikes the Saturday Review as so funny would have aroused a storm of indignation all over this country had it happened here.

A few of the "funny" incidents, as told by the Review, will serve to indicate the quaintness and frolicsomeness of the British elector when he seriously turns his attention to a candidate. Mr. Pender, a Scotch borough member and candidate for re-election, who was announced to have no opposition, in the course of his campaigning tour, arrives at Stromness, where the simple-minded, quiet people evidently determined he should have some opposition. They allowed him to make his speech, applauding him to the echo, and, at the close, after their fashion, took the horses out of his carriage, ostensibly to draw the member to his hotel. It was a proud day for Mr. Pender, and he surveyed the scene with expressions of serene satisfaction. After riding for some time, however, it struck him that he was not nearing his hotel, and that there were singular expressions of mirth among his human draught animals. His apprehension finally gave way to consternation as he saw himself rapidly going down a declivity, heading directly for the ocean. Fortunately for Mr. Pender, the carriage stuck in a rut just before it reached the water, and, with their best efforts, his team could not budge it. He then commenced addressing the crowd from the carriage windows with the purpose of mollifying them; but, instead of mollifying, they hooted at him, and then they commenced to smash the carriage into kindlings. The member slowly emerged from the wreck, then his hat was smashed, and at last he was allowed to foot his way back to the hotel, thankful that he was not adrift on the Atlantic, and convinced that there was some opposition to his candidacy in Stromness. At Dundee, Mr. Blair, another candidate, while making his speech, was suddenly seized by the crowd and carried, kicking and struggling, to the docks, for the purpose of being thrown overboard—a purpose which would have been carried out had it not been for the police who rallied to his rescue. At Chester, Mr. Malgarini, a candidate, appeared at a public meeting in a theater in white kids, immaculate necktie, and swallow-tail. The plebeian crowd resented this aristocratic display of raiment and went for it with rotten eggs and decayed vegetables, and they splashed it all over. The curtain was quickly rung down, but the crowd went for the curtain and soon tore it up, and then swarmed all over the stage in quest of the dilapidated Mr. Malgarini, who succeeded in escaping by the stage door and in making his way to his hotel in a very odorous and offensive condition. It is said that he was so disgusted with the manners of the electors that he did not appear again as a candidate, but retired to the privacy of his own mansion, where there was no danger that his elegance would be interfered with again.

Woman at the Bottom of It.

"Yankee" Hill, a famous actor in the first half of the present century, used to tell an amusing story of the early days of the theater in the United States. Hill once "showed"—to use a professional phrase—in a town in the western part of New York, where no theatrical performance had ever been given. He found the audience assembled, with the women seated on one side of the hall, the men on the other, exactly as they were used to sit in church, and throughout the play the most solemn silence was observed. They were attentive, but they gave no evidence of approval or displeasure; there was no applause, no laughter, not even a smile; all was solemn stillness. He did his utmost to break the ice; he did everything a clever comedian could do, but in vain. He flung himself against their rigidity; it was of no use. The audience was evidently on its best behavior, and the curtain went down at last amid a silence oppressive and almost melancholy. After the play Hill, worn out by the extra exertion, and mortified at his want of success, was passing through a public room of his hotel, when he was stopped by a tall countryman, with the remark, "Say, mister, I was into the play tonight." "Were you?" said Hill. "You must have been greatly entertained." "Well, I was! I tell you what it now, my mouth is all sore a-strainin' to keep my face straight. And, if it hadn't been for the women, I'd 'a' laughed right out in meetin'."

Sickness in the Farm-House.

Dr. Goddar, of Massachusetts, was once asked, and answered, the following question:

"Have you seen sickness produced by decaying vegetables in the cellars of farm-houses?"

"I think I have. For instance, the case of a farmer of means, his wife and five children. Four sickened in September of typhoid fever, and three died. In the cellar were found half-decayed cabbages and other vegetables, half a barrel of old fish-brine, and filth generally, so that the smell was noticeable rods from the house, when cleared out by the doctor's direction."

Through that cellar, typhoid fever sneaked into the house. A writer in the New York Times says: "Miasm is the most subtle foe of the farmer's home. It is generated in his barn-yard, cesspool, cellar; soaks into his well, and appears on his table in the form of limpid water; enters his bedroom by night, and poisons the very air he breathes."

And all this from the want of a little intelligence and a little painstaking.

BRIBERS SENTENCED.

Some Plain Talk by Judge Pearson.

William H. Kemble, late State Treasurer of Pennsylvania, and four members of the Legislature of that State were recently convicted of bribery and sentenced by Judge Pearson, of Harrisburg, to one year in the penitentiary. In sentencing the prisoners the Judge said:

"It is greatly to be feared that for many years it has been the practice in this State to procure the passage of laws by corrupt and improper means, and to such an extent has this evil prevailed that instead of examining into the propriety or impropriety of measures presented to either house for enactment, the inquiry was much more likely to be made as to the amount of money which those requesting the legislation could afford to pay for the passage of the law. It was charged throughout the whole country that bribery in the Pennsylvania Legislature was of daily occurrence, and was always the order of the day. So crying was the evil that when the convention met to frame our present constitution there appeared to be a fixed determination to break up the practice by severe constitutional enactments. However unimportant you may consider the offense, it is not so esteemed by this court. We look upon it not only as a high crime against the laws of the State, which have been long in force and are well known to all men, but one leading to the most corrupt kind of legislation, by which the public has been frequently plundered, and some individuals enriched, and others greatly impoverished; and it is much to be feared that some of you are by no means novices in the art and practice of legislative bribery. What adds to the enormity of the offense of two of you is the fact that you were at the time members of the Legislature, and acting in violation of your official oaths, and endeavoring to induce your fellow members to commit perjury on their part. As an individual, I feel pity for your situation; as a Judge I cannot sympathize with crime. When you come into this court you must understand that the beggar in rags and the millionaire in broadcloth stand on precisely the same footing. The one is to be imprisoned for stealing a loaf of bread; the other is not to escape, who, by his criminal acts, may involve the State in the loss of millions. It is not the slightest excuse, as urged by some, that the pending bill was highly meritorious. If so, it should pass without the aid of bribery." The Judge said they could not plead ignorance, as they were men of intelligence. "You went into the criminal practice in plain violation of law, with your eyes open. You well know that many members of the Legislature were utterly corrupt, and were ready to sell their votes in the public market to the highest bidder. You were ready to suborn them to commit perjury by violating the oaths they took on their installation into office." The Judge also reminded the prisoners that they were disqualified from holding any office or position of honor, trust or profit in the State, and closed by sentencing them to pay a fine of $1,000 each, costs of prosecution, and to imprisonment for one year in the Eastern penitentiary, separate and solitary confinement, at labor.

The sentence fell like a thunder-clap on the prisoners, who had no idea of going to the penitentiary. It was also a surprise to their lawyers and the spectators. Kemble made corrupt propositions to three members of the Legislature, Salter to eight, Rumberger to one, Crawford to three, and Petroff to two. The sums offered ranged from $500 to $2,000, to be given for votes for the $4,000,000 Riot Relief bill. The sentence imposed is half the maximum authorized by law, and the fine all that could be demanded. The Board of Pardons will no doubt soon be asked to recommend the prisoners to the mercy of the Governor.

Paper Clay.

In view of the rapid rise in the price of paper, and the complaints of the paper-makers with regard to the scarcity and increasing costliness of all sorts of paper stock, it is gratifying to see that one source of such raw material is not likely soon to fail us. Whatever may happen to rags, wood pulp, and the thousand other sorts of fibrous material supposed to enter into the composition of paper, the clay bank promises to be inexhaustible. True, the majority of people who pay a high price for paper may have a prejudice against that material, but evidently the owners of the clay banks have not; for, in a prominent journal devoted to the paper trade, they boldly print a large cut of their "clay works," showing a long stretch of snowy bluff out of which a huge section has been cut, presumably to supply the needs of "all first-class mills, East and West," to whose owners they refer for evidence of the excellence of their clay. —Scientific American.

IN his new work on metallurgy, Dr. Percy, F. R. S., puts the value of silver produced annually of late years as averaging somewhere about $80,000,000, and the gold at $140,000,000. The author was lecturer on metallurgy in the Royal School of Mines.

DON'T RENT
BUY A HOME IN MICHIGAN.
$5 TO $10 PER ACRE!
Strong Soils! Sure Crops! Railroad through Center of Lands. Healthy Climate. Schools and Churches. Intelligent Population.
HIGHEST REWARD TO FARMERS.
These lands are a long distance East of the Mississippi River. Large amount saved in travel and transportation of crops. Descriptive pamphlet in English and German. Address W. O. HUGHART, Commissioner, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

THERMALINE
A Safe and Reliable Substitute for Quinine
The only 25 cent
AGUE REMEDY
IN THE WORLD
CURES
CHILLS & FEVER
and all MALARIAL DISEASES.
Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & Co., 35 Wooster Street, New York, for their ten cent book, mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT.
An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box
Gives Immediate Relief.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.
Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or Chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions, Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.

The above four preparations for sale by F. E. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers, druggists, Auburn, Indiana.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 Cents per box. All Drug Stores.

SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant to take as a glass of Lemonade. Ten cents each. All Drug Stores.

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES
Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)
A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.
Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.
For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.
For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.
It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.
It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.
Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, overwork, mental shocks, and other causes.
Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhea, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. No other Pills require such small doses for thorough work. Price 25 cts. a box.
Warner's Safe Remedies are sold by Druggists & Dealers in Medicine everywhere.
H. H. Warner & Co., Proprietors, ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.
SAFE KIDNEY & LIVER CURE
SAFE DIABETES CURE
SAFE BITTERS
SAFE NERVINE
SAFE PILLS
READ! SAVE THYSELF

NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO. Battle Creek, Mich.
Established in 1848.
ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE
"VIBRATOR"
Threshing Machinery and Portable and Traction Engines.
THE STANDARD of excellence throughout the Grain-Raising World.
MATCHLESS for Grain-Saving, Time-Saving, Perfect Cleaning, Rapid and Thorough Work.
INCOMPARABLE in Quality of Material, Perfection of Parts, Thorough Workmanship, Elegant Finish, and Beauty of Model.
MARVELOUS for vastly superior work in all kinds of Grain, and universally known as the only successful Thresher in Flax, Timothy, Clover, and all other Seeds.
ASTONISHINGLY DURABLE and wonderfully simple, using less than one half the usual gears and belts.
PORTABLE, TRACTION, and STRAW-BURNING STEAM-ENGINES, with special features of Power, Durability, Safety, Economy, and Beauty entirely unknown in other makes. Steam-Power Outfits and Steam-Power Separators a Specialty. Four sizes of Separators, from 6 to 12 horse-power; also 2 styles Improved Mounted Horse-Powers.
32 Years of Prosperous and Continuous Business by this house, without change of name, location, or management, furnishes a strong guarantee for superior goods and honorable dealing.
CAUTION! The wonderful success and popularity of our VIBRATOR Machinery has driven other machines to the wall; hence various makers are now attempting to build and palm off inferior and mongrel imitations of our famous goods.
BE NOT DECEIVED
by such experimental and worthless machinery. If you buy at all, get the "ORIGINAL" and the "GENUINE" from us.
For full particulars call on our dealers, or write to us for Illustrated Circulars, which we mail free. Address
NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

—ON—

Coffee, Sugar, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18 cents now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents per pound; and the Extra A Sugar we sold at 9 cents, now down to 8 cents; and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound. We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

TEAS! TEAS! TEAS!

The boom in teas last fall has not been maintained. Prices, in place of advancing, have declined so much that we are now selling the best Young Hyson tea lower than it has sold in ten years.
Good Young Hyson, 25c; Choice Young Hyson, 30c; Extra Young Hyson, 40c; Best young Hyson, 65c; Good Imperial tea, 40c; Best Imperial tea, 50 and 65c; Good Gunpowder tea, 40c; Best Gunpowder tea, 50 and 65c; Good Oolong tea, 30c; Best Oolong tea, 40 and 60c; Good uncolored Japan tea, 25, best 40 and 60c.

WHITE AND YELLOW SUGARS.

Cut Loaf, 10c; Coffee A, 9 1-2; Granulated, 10c; Extra C, 8c; Powdered Sugar, 10c; Yellow Sugar, 7c.

COFFEES--RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Bengal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 90c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c;

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickeled pork, 6c.

Fish--Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1; Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies, Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound, 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c, Oranges per dozen 35c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court-house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

WM. ELLERY
WALTHAM, MASS.

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,
SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS.
Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains, Ladies Gold Chains,
Castors Everything in the Jewelry line.
Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions
Violin Strings.
Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at
JOE. ABRIGHT'S,
Second door north of Postoffice Auburn, Indinaa,

The Orator Paused.

"If Lincoln had not died," exclaimed a political orator, "what would he have been to-day?" "Alive!" sadly ventured a timid looking man on a back seat, and the tide of eloquence was momentarily checked.—Hawkeye.

Where Printers Don't Go.

A printer don't go to the doctor every time he is out of "sorts."

Nor to a baker when he gets out of "pi."

Nor to hell when he wants the "devil."

Nor to a wood-pile when he wants a "stick."

Nor to the bible when he wants a good "rule."

Nor to a gun-shop when he wants a "shooting-stick."

Nor to a bank when he wants "quoins."

Nor to a girl when he wants to "go to press."

Nor to a lawyer when he has a "dirty case."

Nor to a butcher when he wants "fat."

Nor to an old cheese box when he wants "live matter."

Nor to a pump when he is thirsty and has five cents in his pocket.

The Guileless Witness.

"Do you know the prisoner well?" asked the attorney.

"Never knew him sick," replied the witness.

"No levity," said the lawyer sternly. "Now, sir, did you ever see the prisoner at the bar?"

"Took many a drink with him at the bar."

"Answer my question, sir," yelled the lawyer. "How long have you known the prisoner?"

"From two feet up to five feet ten inches."

"Will the court make the—"

"I have jedge," said the witness anticipating the lawyer; "I have answered the question. I knowed the prisoner when he was a boy two feet long and a man five feet ten—"

"Your honor—"

"Its a fac', jedge; I'm under my oath,' persisted the witness.

The lawyer arose, placed both hands on the table in front of him, spread his legs apart, leaned his body over the table and said:

"Will you tell the court what you know about this case?"

"That ain't his name," replied the witness.

"What ain't his name?"

"Case."

"Who said is was?"

"You did. You wanted to know what I knew about this Case—his name's Smith."

"Your honor," howled the attorney, plucking his beard out by the roots, "will you make this man answer?"

"Witness," said the judge, "you must answer the questions put to you."

"Land o' Goshen, hain't I bin doin' it? Let the blamed cuss fire away, I'm ready."

"Then," said the lawyer, "don't beat about the bush any more. You and this prisoner have been friends?"

"Never," promptly responded the witness.

"What! wasn't you summoned here as a friend?"

"No sir, I was summoned as a Presbyterian. Nary one of us was ever Friends—he's an old line Baptist, without a drop of Quaker in him."

"Stand down," yelled the lawyer in disgust.

"Hey?"

"Stand down."

"Can't do it. I'll sit down or stand up—"

"Sheriff, remove that man from the box."

Witness retires, muttering: "Well, if he ain't the thickheadest cuss I ever laid eyes on."—Des Moines Register.

Truth.

How essential it is that we should inculcate the principle of truth-telling under all circumstances. Children should be taught in their early life to represent things just as they are, without any equivocation on their part. Also parents should by their practice, show to their children their example of always telling things just as they are every time. Many people get in the habit of speaking in a hyperbolical manner, and one is obliged to make much allowance for so large a story as is often told. A neighbor of mine was very sick, and the report went from one to another. At last they had her deranged and carried to the asylum.

So it is, we must be so careful before our children; ofttimes we may speak in rather glowing terms; how soon we will see it enacted in our little ones. Often times our children do perhaps try to shield themselves from a punishment by telling things that are not so. We ought to be very lenient to them if they get in trouble, and that will encourage them to come and tell us a true story. Parents should be more frank and honest with their children, then children will confide in their parents more, and will not under any circumstances disobey them in telling falsehoods. It chills my blood ofttimes to see how cold and distant children are treated by their parents. Their many childish questions which they ask are received so coldly and often treated so distant; they are told that to be seen and not heard is the part that children occupy. Give the children their rights and there will not be so many falsehoods told. Cultivate a noble, manly, spirit in the hearts of your children, and they in future will reward you in your endeavors.

Bring them up in the fear and admonition of the Lord, and they will honor our gray hairs in future. While their young hearts are tender, lead them to higher and holier things, then there will always be truth and nothing but the truth, always rest assured.

To Young Men.

It is a great mistake in a young man to suppose that he can wait as long as he will before he begins to gather these things about him that I have tried to describe—a true wife, a good home, and such a family as he can find room for in his heart; and then, when he has made his fortune, and can keep a wife and family in a certain social station with all the luxuries of life, he has done his whole duty. If you ask him why he does this, he will tell you that he cannot do any better—that he can not ask a woman to marry him out of a mansion and go to live in a cabin; such a woman is not fit for a poor man's wife. But in time a man finds out ever so many secrets on this question. First he finds out that she who is not fit to be a poor man's wife as a rule is not fit to be any man's wife; especially in a land like ours, where no man knows how soon he may be poor. But suppose he waits until she is thirty and he is thirty-five, and then marries the woman of his choice. One of the first things she tells him is that she would have jumped at him ten years ago if he had said the word; she wanted him to say so dreadfully, and almost broke her heart because he didn't. I think the wisest thing I ever did was to marry on seventy-five a day and find myself, before I was twenty-four. Very sad is the fate of a man who hears a voice say in his Eden at twenty-two: "Here is a woman I have made for thee;" and replies, "I cannot take her yet, for ten or twelve years to come." When a man is saving money he is wasting life. Dr. Stark, the register general of Scotland, has shown from statistics that from the age of twenty to twenty-five twice as many bachelors die as married men. I was appalled when I read this, at the risk I had run in staying single until I was twenty-four. The average for single women is little better: but it ought to be, because they are not the greatest sinners, for they cannot always do as they like.

So, young man, if you have been waiting, show your grit, and go right away and pop the question, and this lecture will prove the best sermon you ever heard in your life.

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

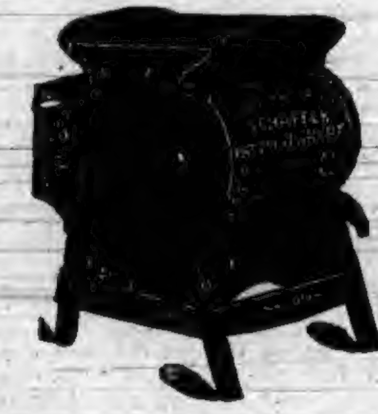
W. H. MacIntosh,
Co. Sup't. of schools.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. Martin, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
8-tf Auburn, Ind.

ROBERT OGDEN,
Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,
IRON AND LEAD PIPE,
BRASS GOODS
OF ALL KINDS.
125 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana



SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1, the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer
IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

☞ For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

Agricultural Implements!

THE

Latest Improved Farm Machinery

OF ALL KINDS.

The ThreeRivers
"Invincible"
VIBRATOR.

The Renowned
Atlas Engine!
For farm use.

THE PEERLESS Reaper And Mower!
Over 20 000 now in use.

DEERING'S WIRE AND TWINE BINDER,
The only successful TWINE Binder in this or any other market. Greatly improved for 188.

LEADER ONE-WHEEL HARVESTER,
Which created so much excitement among the farmers last year.

ELLWOOD CULTIVATORS,
Riding or Walking, with four, six or nine blades. They have more good points and are less complicated than any other cultivator made.

The Steel-beam Red-Jacket Plow
And many other kinds. Also dealers in the

Archer Self-Dumping Hay-Rake.
Adjustable Bar Spring Tooth Harrow.
And The Harris' Double Harpoon Horse Hay-Fork.

Examine our samples carefully, and get our prices before you contract. We guarantee you a bargain.

J. N. MYERS & CO.,
Odd Fellows' Building, AUBURN, IND.

THE ANDERSON BROTHERS'

Carriage Man'factory

AUBURN, INDIANA,
TURNS OUT THE BEST

Carriages, Phaetons, Buggies and Light Wagons

Ever offered for sale in this part of the Country.

The proprietors make no effort to compete with manufacturers of Shoddy Buggies, but use the VERY BEST MATERIAL, and sell the BEST WORK AT THE LOWEST PRICES—prices to suit the times.

Fancy Light Work a Specialty.
Painting Warranted Not to Scale.

☞ Repairing neatly done on short notice, at LOWEST RATES. ☜

Good sound work-horses taken in exchange for new work. Do not buy until you get price of

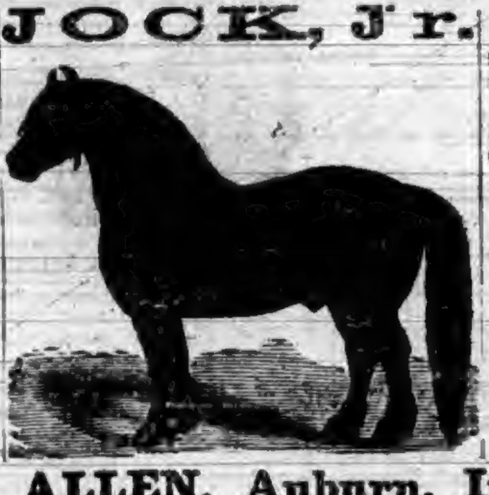
ANDERSON BROTHERS,
11 2m Opposite Eagle Mills.

NORMAN STALLION

JOCK, Jr.

SIRED BY
Imported Jock!
Out of a thorough-bred
Norman Mare

Jock, Jr. will stand for mares during the season of 1880 commencing April 1st, at my barn in Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind.



This powerful horse is a bay-roan, 16 hands high, and weighs full
1,700 Pounds.

TERMS:
$10.00
Payable when the mare is known to be with foal.

Owners parting with mares are liable for insurance.

All accidents are at owners risk.

A. W. ALLEN. Auburn, Indiana.

ECKHART

Carriage Works

One-half mile east of Court House.
I have constantly on hand a large stock of the latest styles of

CARRIAGES, PHAETONS, & PLATFORM SPRING WAGONS.

Three years ago my business only required a shop 18x24, and I could do all the work myself excepting the smith work, but since then there has been such a demand for my work that I have

Greatly Increased

my facilities, and at present my shops, stock rooms and ware-rooms occupy nearly

10,000 Square Feet,

and I employ eight hands, not including myself. Having had twenty-three years experience, and being a practical mechanic in painting, wood-work and trimming, I flatter myself that I can turn out as good work for the money as any one in the state. Please remember that my work is fully warranted, and no misrepresentation is used to sell work

We are now turning out a finished Buggy from the rough every four days. Be sure and call at ECKHART CARRIAGE WORKS when in need of a buggy.

C. ECKHART,
Auburn, Ind., 4 6m.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R

CHICAGO DIVISION.

IN EFFECT FROM JAN. 1, 1880.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.
Chicago	8 50am	9 40pm
Walkerton Junction	12 10pm	1 05am	10 42am
Milford Junction	1 20	2 15	2 20pm
Cromwell	1 48	2 45	2 30
Albion	2 08	3 08	4 25
Avilla	2 34	3 30	5 20
Garrett ar	2 50	3 45	5 55
Garrett lv	3 10	3 55	4 15
Auburn Junction	3 24	4 08	[illegible]
St. Joe	3 44	4 25	5 40
Hicksville	4 00	4 42	6 22
Defiance	4 45	5 27	8 50
Fostoria	6 40	7 26	2 30pm
Tiffin	7 00	7 54	3 37
Chicago Junction	8 10	9 00	6 00

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.
Chicago Junction	6 40pm	8 15am	[illegible]am
Tiffin	7 56	9 12	8 20
Fostoria	8 34	9 35	9 33
Defiance	10 32	11 20	4 45pm
Hicksville	11 16	12 14pm	6 18
St. Joe	11 32	12 30	6 50
Auburn Junction	11 54	12 50	7 35
Garrett ar	12 10am	12 58	8 00
Garrett lv	12 15	1 25	6 20am
Avilla	12 20	1 40	7 10.
Albion	12 48	2 08	7 58
Cromwell	1 10	2 32	8 48
Milford Junction	1 33	3 00	9 50
Walkerton Junction	2 38	4 12	1251pm
Chicago	5 50	7 05

C. H. Hudson, Superintendent.

Sam'l Powell, Act. Gen. Ticket & Pass. Agent, Chicago.

L. M. Cole, Gen. Ticket Agent, Baltimore, Md.

Recorder's Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, MAY 20, 1880. Number 21.

The Auburn Courier
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY THE COURIER COMP'Y.
EDITORS,
THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5.00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House, Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gonsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

THIRD STREET, EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross, Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Application for License.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN TO THE CITIZENS of the incorporated town of Auburn, Union township, DeKalb county, Ind., that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county, at their next regular session to be held in the court-house in said county, on the 7th day of June, 1880, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, with the privilege of permitting the same drank on the premises where sold, viz: On the middle one-third of lot number twenty-seven (27) in the original plat of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana.

20-3w. JOHN MEISER

MONEY TO LOAN

By the Union Central Life Insurance company, from 1 to 5 years at 8 per cent secured by first lien on real estate worth at least double the amount of the loan (exclusive of improvements). We charge no commission, and your mortgage is held here within a few hours ride of your home. If you live, you are here to look after it yourself; if you die, you have made provisions to pay the debt just where you contracted it. For further particulars, apply to Thos. H. Sprott, Auburn, Indiana.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else. The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 23-1y

$1500 TO $6000 A YEAR, or $5 to $20 a day in your own locality. No risk. Women do as well as men. Many make more than the amount stated above. No one can fail to make money fast. Any one can do the work. You can make from 50c to $2 an hour by devoting your evenings and spare time to the business. It costs nothing to try the business. Nothing like it for money making ever offered before. Business pleasant and strictly honorable. Reader, if you want to know all about the best paying business before the public, send us your address and we will send you full particulars and private terms free; samples worth $5 also free; you can then make up your mind for yourself. Address, GEORGE STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-1

G. R. & I. R. R. Co.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS,
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., April 1, '80.

To the Stockholders of the Grand Rapids & Ind. R. R. Co.

Take notice that there will be a meeting of the stockholders of said company, at the general office, in the city of Grand Rapids, state of Michigan, on

THE NINTH (9th) DAY OF JUNE, 1880,

at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of said company to the sum of five million dollars; and it is proposed at such meeting to increase said capital stock to that amount.

DIRECTORS:

W. O. Hughart,	C. A. Zollinger,
W. O. Shelby,	Thos. A. Scott,
H. J. Hollister,	Geo. B. Roberts,
S. S. Cobb,	Wm. Thaw,
J. G. Wait,	Thos. D. Messler,
Pliny Hoagland,	J. N. McCullough,

Rob't. B. Potter.

15-tf. J. H. P. HUGHART, Secretary.

Ingersoll on Alcohol.

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, who has been denounced as an infidel, was lately employed in a case which involved the manufacture of ardent spirits, and in his speech to the jury he used the following language:

"I am aware there is a prejudice against any man engaged in the manufacture of alcohol. I believe from the time it issues from the coil and poisonous worm in the distillery until it empties into the hell of death; dishonor and crime that it is demoralizing to everybody that touches it from the source to where it ends. I do not believe that anybody can contemplate the subject without being prejudiced against the crime. All we have to do is to think of the wrecks on either side of the stream of death, of suicides, of the insanity, of the poverty, of the destruction, of the little children tugging at the breasts of weeping and despairing wives asking for bread; of the men struggling with imaginary serpents produced by it. When we think of the jails, of the alms-house, of the prisons and of the scaffolds on either bank, I do not wonder that every thoughtful man is prejudiced against this vile stuff called alcohol. Intemperance cuts youth in its strength, and age in its weakness. It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the doting mother, extinguishes natural affection, erases conjugal love, blots out filial attachment and blights parental hope, and brings premature age in sorrow to the grave. It produces weakness, not strength; sickness, not health; death, not life. It makes wives widows, children orphans, fathers fiends, and all paupers. It seeds rheumatism, nurses gout, welcomes epidemic, invites cholera, imports pestilence and embraces consumption. It covers the land with misery, idleness and crime. It engenders controversies; it fosters quarrels and cherishes riots. It crowds your penitentiaries and furnishes victims to the scaffold. It is the blood of the gambler, the element of the burglar, the prop of the highwayman and the support of the midnight incendiary. It countenances the liar, respects the thief, esteems the blasphemer. It violates obligations, reverences fraud, honors infamy. It defames benevolence, hates love, scorns virtue and innocence. It incites the father to butcher his helpless offspring, and the child to grind the parental ax. It burns up men, consumes women, detests life, curses God and despises heaven. It suborns witnesses, nurses perfidy, defiles the jury-box and stains the judicial ermine. It bribes voters, disqualifies voters, corrupts elections, pollutes our institutions, and endangers the government. It degrades the citizen, debases the legislator, dishonors the statesman and disarms the patriot. It brings shame, not honor; terror, not safety; despair, not hope; misery, not happiness; and with the malevolence of a fiend, calmly surveys its frightful desolation, and, unstained with havoc, it poisons felicity, kills peace, ruins morals, whips out national honor, then curses the world and laughs at its ruin. It does that and more—it murders the soul. It is the sum of all villainies, the father of crimes, the mother of all abominations, the devil's best friend and God's worst enemy."

Overworked Children.

A German physician, who has been giving attention to the lassitude and habitual headaches of children, says that he finds the trouble to be largely on the increase. He attributes the cause to excessive intellectual exertion, which ambitious parents, instead of checking, as they should do, are inclined to stimulate and spur up on all occasions. Children who have a variety of subjects to study up and do much night work are almost invariably exposed to these disorders, caused entirely by exhaustion of the brain. A London physician, commenting upon the German's observations, remarks that he has sometimes found the brain to be growing faster than the skull which contained it. "What seemed like a great stupidity was for a time the result, but in time the skull effected its enlargement and the brain was relieved." A brain overworked in childhood prepares a man for great evils later in life.

The Rake's Progress.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

Progress of the boom: 1. Grant would not be a candidate anyway. 2. He would not be a candidate unless there was a unanimous call for him, and he was nominated by acclamation. 3. He would try the first ballot, but might then be withdrawn. 4. He was after it like any other man. 5. He is "in" for a bitter fight, and will hang on till he is voted down and beaten.

ELOPING EN DESHABILLE.

A Plucky Girl Who Was Bound to Marry Her Lover.

The neighborhood of Elizabeth City, N. J., is in a state of great excitement over the recent elopement and marriage of a gushing young couple, Jonathan Ivy and Florence Seymark. The young lady's parents did not approve of young Ivy's advances, and forbade him the house. The lovers, however, managed to meet clandestinely, and made up their minds to an elopement, which was to have occurred one night. Old man Seymark, by some means or other, got wind of the proposed escapade and went gunning that day for Jonathan. Coming up with the gay young lover he blazed away at him, shooting him in the shoulder and inflicting a painful but not dangerous wound. Florence was overwhelmed with grief by her father's hasty conduct, but her passion for her lover was intensified a thousand-fold. She sent him a letter telling him she would fly with him that night if he would come for her. So that night young Ivy put in an appearance with a close carriage about 1 o'clock. Miss Florence was in a terrible dilemma, for her cruel parents, to insure against any escapade, had not only locked the girl into her room but had also taken away all her clothing. But she was not to be baffled. She made a rope out of the sheets of her bed and let herself down to the ground, with no other garment but a night dress. She told the coachmen to "look the other way," and after her lover had helped her into the carriage and covered her with the carriage-robes, she made him sit on the box with the coachman. They drove to the house of a friend, where Florence was attired in proper garments, and then proceeded to the house of a sympathizing preacher, where the lovers were speedily united in wedlock.

A RACE FOR A BRIDE.

The Man Who Came in Last, But Who Fainted at Her Feet, Winning the Prize.

A novel wedding was celebrated at Pollockville, N. C., Monday. It seems that Moses John Miller and Alexander Bibb, two well to-do farmers, were in love with the same girl, Lenora Loyd, of that place. She was not able to decide which she liked best. One Sunday morning Bibb walked home from church with her and left her under the impression that she said she would marry him. Both men went to the court-house Monday morning to get out license. Each procured the necessary documents and started off with a license to marry Miss Loyd. They met at the court-house door, and, after some talk, agreed that the first man who reached the lady's house should marry her. The residence of Col. Loyd was one mile distant, and both men started on the race for the bride. Bibb soon quit the main road and dashed into the wood, expecting to make a short cut and reach the house first, but Miller kept the road, and got in on the home stretch eight minutes before his rival. The men were in sight of each other going up the lane to the house. Bibb, from sheer exhaustion, fainted in the porch, falling almost at the feet of his lady love. When the situation was explained to her, she said that she had come to the conclusion that she liked Mr. Bibb the best, and therefore she would marry him. Her sympathies were won over by seeing him faint. She said she believed that both loved her, but that he who faints at the danger of losing a bride must love her more than he who is cool and unconcerned in the midst of all. The Rev Aaron Jasper, the well-known Baptist minister, married Mr. Bibb and Miss Loyd.

Sleep Without a Monument.

The sea is the largest of cemeteries, and all its slumberers sleep without a monument. All other grave-yards, in all lands, show some symbols of distinction between the great and small, the rich and poor; but in that ocean cemetery the king and clown, the prince and the peasant, are alike undistinguished. The same wave rolls over all, the requiem by the minstrels of the ocean is sung in their honor. Over their remains the storms beat and the same sun shines; and there, unmarked, the weak and the powerful, the plumed and the unhonored, will sleep on until, awakened by the trump, the sea will give up its dead. No marble rises to point out where their ashes are gathered. Yet the cemetery hath ornaments of which no other can boast. On no other are the heavenly orbs reflected in such splendor. Over no other is heard such noble melody.

The Uselessness of Preaching Against Fashion.

[Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.]

There is no faculty in the human soul that is not right in its primary nature, but it is in the uses to which we put them that they are right or wrong. Of course there are some things which are true that a minister should not talk about. There are moral morasses he cannot pass over, and mountains right in the way of the preacher that he cannot get over, and one of them is fashion. Do you suppose that I am such a fool as to suppose that anything that I could say against fashion would make one ribbon's difference? If it were the fashion to turn the toe under the heel, you would go on tiptoe for all that I could say; and if a wasp-like waist is the fashion, though the physicians may talk against it, and say it is destructive to health, and if some Parisian harlot had got up that fashion, it would go, and all the world would have it. Fashion is even barbaric, grotesque and uncomfortable, but to its behests you must all conform. I don't say this to help you any; I say it to relieve myself. "Do not conform to the vanity of fashion," it is my duty to say, but I say it with the consciousness that I am a voice crying in the wilderness.

A Brave Baby.

A woman who lives in Ashville, Ala., writes to the Ægis, of that place, of the miraculous rescue of her little three-year-old boy from drowning. The child fell down a well, the depth of which was thirty feet. The mother saw him go down. She says:

"On reaching the well I was just in time to see him rise to the top of the water. I was alone, save three other little children whom I sent for help. I had, amid all the anguish of my soul, presence of mind enough to let the bucket down and tell him to take hold of it, which he did. After some minutes he let loose from weakness, sank again, except his little head. I lowered the bucket lower, telling him to take hold of the rope. He ran his hand through a ring tied on for the purpose of sinking the bucket, and caught the pail, and there he held on for one and a half hours, begging me all the time in his baby talk to come down and help him out. I would say: 'Hold on Bobbie.' 'I will,' he would reply. At length a lady came to my assistance, and we took a rope and made a noose on the end of it, and letting it down, told him what to do. He put his foot through the noose and drew up around his knee. I asked him if he could hold on. He said he could hold on to the bucket. 'Daw me out.' He holding the bucket, the rope around his leg, I telling him not to let go, we drew him up until I could reach his little, shivering hands. Thus I saved my little baby from drowning. Safe to my breast I clasped his little, shivering body, and praised God for His mercies."

A Remedy for Scarlet Fever.

Dr. E. Woodruff, for nineteen years a practicing physician at Grand Rapids, Michigan, furnishes the Springfield (Ill.) Journal the following: "Wash the child from head to foot with strong sal-soda water, warm, then wipe dry. Then immediately bathe with oil from beef marrow, or oil from butter, applied freely. Then give freely catnip tea, or some good sweating article, pennyroyal, &c. Repeat every half hour, or as often as they get worrisome or wakeful, and in one or two days they will be entirely cured. I have been called to cases where they have been fully broken out, and in this way entirely cured them in twenty-four hours. I have had thirty cases on hand at one time, and never lost a case in my life. But now I am old and about to give up my business, and seeing from papers that your town is infected with the epidemic, I wish to do all the good I can. It is so simple. You do not need to call a doctor. A good nurse can attend to them. If by opening the pores of the skin and sweating you can let off the poison, which is an animalcula, or animal in the blood, the cure is complete. The same is equally good in fevers of all kinds, hard colds and coughs. I take the ground that all diseases are caused by a stoppage of the pores of the skin, retaining the poison, or living animals, in the blood, and all you have to do at first is to open the doors of the system and let them out, or drive them out. All people know a warm bath is good. But you apply the oil to the skin, and it keeps the pores open for a long time and gives the enemy a chance to get out. I hope all will try it, and they will soon be convinced.

THE CAMPAIGN OF 18[illegible]

A Stirring Episode of Mr. [illegible]dricks' Canvass for Governor.

(Philadelphia Times Correspondence.)

In the summer of 1872 Mr. Hendricks was nominated by the democracy for governor of Indiana, and made an elaborate speech on accepting the nomination. The weather was intensely hot, and the windows of the building in which he spoke were lowered for the purpose of ventilation. Party spirit ran high at the time, and some of his political enemies organized a plan to interrupt and annoy him. A couple of drums and a fife were brought into requisition and made to do duty in the dirty work. Negro musicians were employed to manipulate these instruments, and as this band, followed by a lot of rowdies, yelling for Morton, marched and countermarched past the house, the speaker's voice was completely drowned. This greatly incensed his friends, and one of them rose to his feet and proposed to rally a force and "clean out the niggers." The proposition took like wildfire, and as the excited men were leaving to carry the project into execution, Mr. Hendricks ran to the front of the platform as though he would jump into the parquet below, and when he reached its verge, exclaimed in his loudest tones: "Let them alone! The loon shrieks loudest when it hears the storm coming. The rowdy loons upon the street hear the thunder of an outraged people and see the lightning of the coming storm. Let them shriek!" His words went to the nerve centers like electricity from a battery. They tingled in the ears and made the blood run fast. At the moment some one shouted, "Hurrah for Hendricks!" and "hurrah for Hendricks" shook the building from foundation to roof. The writer has heard many things that stirred the heart and made the blood gallop, but nothing that approximated in effect these words of Governor Hendricks.

Brainard's Musical World.

We have received the "Musical World" for May, 1880. This valuable musical journal is now in the seventh year of its existence and stands first and foremost among American musical periodicals. The present number contains five new songs and piano pieces and a new arrangement for violin and piano. Also a fine lithographic picture of Rossini. Besides these attractions we find sixteen pages of musical news and miscellany, biographical sketches and items of news from all parts of the world. The "Musical World" is invaluable to all interested in musical matters, and the low price at which it is offered ($1.50 per year, or $1.60 with choice of five premiums) brings it within the reach of all. Send fifteen cents to S. Brainard's & Sons., Cleveland, O., for a specimen copy.

Old-Settlers' Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Pioneers' Association of DeKalb county, Indiana, will be held at Auburn, May 27, 1880. Procession will be formed at the public square at 10 a. m., under the direction of General Blair, chief marshal of the day, with assistants.

Programme of exercises on the ground, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m.:

1st—Music.

2nd—Prayer by Revs. John McCurdy and Levi Harding.

3rd—Music.

4th—Oration by Judge Prentiss.

5th—Music.

Recess for refreshments.

6th—Re-assemble at 1 o'clock p. m., and music.

7th—Report of officers.

8th—Election of officers.

9th—Music.

10th—Speeches by Hon. A. Ellison, Judge Collins, and L. H. Stocker, who have been invited, and who are expected to attend. Also remarks by old settlers of this and adjoining counties.

11th—Music.

12th—Benediction.

The railroads will carry passengers from Albion, Avilla, Garrett, Hicksville, St. Joe, Angola, Pleasant Lake, Summit, Waterloo, St. Johns, New Era, Butler and Moore's Station at reduced rates.

Let one and all, old and young come, and spend one day in reviving old associations and friendships; in forming new ones and in the enjoyment of social intercourse before the heated summer's sun arrives, and the more hateful heat of the coming political campaign is upon us. Let us all put aside labor, and politics one day, and have a good old-settlers' meeting.

S. B. WARD, President.
W. H. DILLS, Secretary.

[Last Week.]

St. Joe.

—Rev. E. W. Erick, formerly of Spencerville, attended the dedication [illegible] Sabbath.

—Some friends of Mr. Evans are visiting him this week.

—Mrs. Meesher, mother of Mrs. J. D. Leighty, is visiting the latter this week.

—S. Burleigh, of Antwerp, Ohio, was in town last week.

—Another humbug, in the shape of a traveling doctor, victimized a few of our people last week.

—There was a big crowd at the dedication services last Sunday.

—John Somerlott has rented the mill of Wm. Francis, and will run it for the next three months.

—Wm. Volmer has his new house nearly completed, and will soon have a castle of his own.

—We understand that two fast trains will be put on the B. & O. railroad May 23, which will make the distance between Chicago and Chicago Junction (271 miles) in nine hours, or thirty miles an hour.

REPORTER.

Read This.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, agent for the GENUINE SINGER, at Spencerville, Ind. Horses and cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office at Cahill's tin-shop. 14-tf.

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACINTOSH,
Co. Sup't. of schools.

Application for License.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county, at their next regular session, to be held in the court-house in said county on the 7th day of June, 1880, for a license to sell spiritous, vinous and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, with the privilege of permitting the same to be drank on the premises where sold. The premises on which I desire to sell are located as follows: Commencing at a point eighteen (18) feet west of the northeast corner of lot number ninety-five (95), in the original plat of Auburn, said county, and running thence south to the south line of said lot, thence west twenty two (22) feet, thence north to the north line of said lot, thence east to the place of beginning.

WILLIAM HAINES.

Administrator's Sale.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE undersigned administrators, with the will annexed, of the last will and testament of the late Joseph Bowman, deceased, of DeKalb county, Indiana, will offer for sale at public outcry, at the late residence of said testator, in Keyser township, in said county,

ON SATURDAY, 22nd DAY OF MAY, 1880

the personal property of said estate, consisting of horses, cows, hogs, young cattle, wagons, and wheat, corn and oats by the bushel, household goods and furniture, 11 stands of bees, harness and farming implements, and various other articles. Sale to begin at 10 o'clock, a. m.

TERMS:

Sums of three dollars and under, cash; on sums of over three dollars, a credit of nine months will be given the purchaser giving his note with interest and approved security, waiving valuation and appraisement laws.

ELIJAH S. McDOWELL,
GEORGE O. DENNISON,
Executors.

19-3w

ECKHART
Carriage Works

One-half mile east of Court House.
I have constantly on hand a large stock of the latest styles of

CARRIAGES, PHAETONS, & PLATFORM SPRING WAGONS.

Three years ago my business only required a shop 18x24, and I could do all the work myself excepting the smith work, but since then there has been such a demand for my work that I have

Greatly Increased

my facilities, and at present my shops, stock rooms and ware-rooms occupy nearly

10,000 Square Feet,

and I employ eight hands, not including myself. Having had twenty-three years experience, and being a practical mechanic in painting, wood-work and trimming, I flatter myself that I can turn out as good work for the money as any one in the state. Please remember that my work is fully warranted, and no misrepresentation is used to sell work.

We are now turning out a finished Buggy from the rough every four days. Be sure and call at ECKHART CARRIAGE WORKS when in need of a buggy.

C. ECKHART,
Auburn, Ind. 4-6m.

"OLD-SETTLERS" Can Get Dinner for 25 Cents at the Stametz House, Adjoining the Grounds, on May 27th, 1880.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, MAY 20, 1880.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

Boston has had another very extensive conflagration. About $400,000 worth of property was destroyed. The buildings and goods were fully covered by insurance....Mr. McKelvey, the chief officer of the Reformatory at Elmira, N. Y., was trying to punish a refractory convict named Symonds the other day. Symonds resisted, and, turning upon the officer, inflicted several wounds on him in the region of the stomach, from the effects of which he died in a very short time.... Destructive fires broke out in the oil regions in the neighborhood of Bradford, Pa., the other day. The fire originated by an oil well which was being torpedoed overflowing and catching fire. The fire spread rapidly, and six distinct fires, covering an extensive territory, were soon in progress. Rew City, a village of some 800 inhabitants, in the oil region, was entirely destroyed, and two women and five children were burned to death. About $1,500,000 worth of property was entirely destroyed, and thousands of men have been thrown out of employment and rendered homeless.

In the inquiry into the causes of the Madison Square Garden catastrophe, the Coroner's jury returned a verdict censuring the Department of Buildings and the Harlem Railroad Company....Forest fires are raging with great destructiveness in New Jersey.

Another great fire has occurred in the oil regions of Pennsylvania, the district devastated being in the neighborhood of Rexford. Eighty light frame buildings, over 30,000 barrels of oil and forty derricks were burned. ....Catherine Miller and her paramour, George Smith, have been convicted in Williamsport, Pa., of the murder of Andrew Miller.

An open switch on the New York Central road, near St. Johnsville, N. Y., caused the destruction of almost an entire express train. Only one passenger was injured, but hundreds of others were badly shaken up.

Fire broke out a second time in the woods near Bradford, Pa., and spread with great rapidity over a large tract of country. The villages of Oil Centre and Middaughville and a tank containing 25,000 barrels of oil were destroyed. Railroad bridges, oil wells and tanks, and other property have been swept away in all directions. The conflagration is so extended that anything like an accurate estimate of the losses cannot be given.... An unsuccessful attempt has been made to kill the Spanish Consul at New York, by means of an infernal machine. The official found, on entering his office, an oblong package, mailed at Philadelphia, which he proceeded to open. On cutting the string, an explosion occurred, filling the room with smoke, and severely wounding him in the left hand.

THE WEST.

A destructive storm visited Minnesota last week, accompanied with lightning and hail. At East Prairie the engine house at the depot was carried off its foundation, and the gas house struck by lightning and entirely consumed, leaving the city in darkness.

A lot of ambitious young men living at Holly, Mich., attempted to clean out a circus, but the plug-uglies of the show received them with a volley of clubs, stones and bullets, and, after half-killing several of the attackers, compelled them to beat a retreat....Heavy rains have fallen throughout Kansas, doing incalculable service to the wheat and other crops....Another raid by squatters on Indian Territory having been announced, more troops have been ordered to the protection of the red men's soil.

Abbey's New York Park Theater Company remain at McVicker's Chicago Theater for another week, the attraction being W. S. Gilbert's great comedy, "Engaged." The author's intention in writing this play was to try the effect of treating a broadly-farcical subject in a grave and earnest spirit, and without extravagance in tone, gesture, or costume. It has always been found that, where the parts were played in accordance with this theory, the comedy has been eminently successful. The play is put on the stage in magnificent shape, and is cast with three of the first company playing the piece in their original characters.

A rumor has reached Denver of the massacre of twenty-five prospectors by the Indians in the Lower Gunnison country. No particulars are given.

A bridge on the Wabash road, a few miles south of Streator, Ill., gave way, as a train was passing over, precipitating the locomotive, baggage and smoking cars into the water, and dashing them into a thousand fragments. No one was killed, but several of the railway employes were severely injured, one of them perhaps fatally.....Four persons were killed and several severely injured by a tornado at Woodlawn, Ill. The storm destroyed many buildings, and killed forty sheep and a number of fine horses.

A contest between a railroad company and settlers on lands claimed by the company in Tulare and Fresno counties, Cal., has culminated in a bloody tragedy. A United States Marshal was sent to serve writs of ejectment on the settlers, by virtue of a decision of the court in favor of the railroad company. In attempting to execute writs four men were killed and two wounded....One hundred pounds of giant powder, stored in a blacksmith shop at Central City, Black Hills, exploded, the other day, instantly killing three men.

THE SOUTH.

The Louisiana Supreme Court rendered a somewhat sensational decision, the other day, in the case of one Frankenstein, who was some time ago sentenced to twenty days' imprisonment and a fine of $100 for selling lottery tickets other than those of the Louisiana State Lottery. Frankenstein, through his counsel, applied to one of the District Judges for a writ of habeas corpus. The State applied to the Supreme Court to enjoin the District Judge from granting the writ, and the injunction was granted. The decision is regarded as a virtual suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in Louisiana.

The Southern Baptist Convention is in session at Lexington, Ky. Ex-Gov. Brown, of Georgia, in a speech in behalf of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, presented $50,000 to the institution.

Henry Horne (colored) was hanged for burglary at Raleigh, N. C., on the 8th of May. On the same day Isham Kapp (colored) was executed at Fort Worth, Texas, for the crime of rape....Intelligence comes from Clarksville, Tenn., of the murder of two colored children by their father, mother and aunt, who had become crazed by religious excitement.

A man was breaking up condemned shrapnel shells at Fort McHenry, near Baltimore, when one of the missiles exploded, killing six persons. The report was heard five miles away. The bodies of the killed were shockingly mutilated.

During an amateur theatrical performance at Atlanta, Ga., a young lady's dress took fire from the footlights, and in the panic which ensued the clothes of two other girls were ignited. All of them were severely burned before the flames could be smothered.

POLITICAL.

The Anti-Third Term Convention met in Masonic Hall, St. Louis, on the 6th. E. C. Hubbard, of Kentucky, presided. About 200 delegates, representing some twenty States, were in attendance. Speeches by Gens. John B. Henderson, Binford Wilson, and others, were made, in which Grant's administration and his connection with the whisky ring was reviewed in a very uncomplimentary manner. A National Committee of 100 was provided for to maintain a permanent organization....The Republican State Convention, of New Jersey, met at Trenton on the 6th inst. Thomas H. Dudley was elected Permanent Chairman. The delegates to the National Convention will go uninstructed, though the majority appeared to favor Blaine. ....The Republican State Convention of New Hampshire met at Concord on the 6th. Though no instructions were given the delegates to the Chicago Convention, Mr. Blaine was indorsed as the candidate for the times. The unit rule was demanded, and delegates requested to vote for a change in the basis of representation in future National Republican Conventions, which would give States a representation there in proportion to their Republican vote....The Republican State Convention of Delaware organized at Dover, on the 6th, with I. N. Mills as Permanent Chairman. The delegates to Chicago go uninstructed....The Republican State Convention of Maryland met at Frederick, on the 6th inst., and proceeded to elect sixteen delegates to the Chicago Convention. A resolution that, in obedience to the overwhelming sentiment of the Republicans of this State in favor of the Hon. James G. Blaine, the delegates to Chicago be requested to use all honorable means to secure his nomination for President was adopted—yeas, 89; nays, 14. ....The Mississippi Republican State Convention adjourned on the 6th. The delegates go uninstructed, but it is understood that their preferences are ten for Sherman, and the remaining six about equally divided between Grant and Blaine....The Tennessee Republican State Convention adjourned on the 6th inst. A resolution to instruct the delegation for Grant failed to pass, though it is expected eighteen delegates will support him at Chicago, the remaining six being adherents of Blaine. Oliver S. Hawkins was nominated for Governor by acclamation..... The Democratic State Convention of Ohio assembled at Columbus on the 6th inst. Congressman Converse was elected Permanent President. Resolutions were adopted recommending the Democratic National Convention to adopt the two-thirds rule in the nomination of candidates, and instructing the delegation to cast the vote of the State as a unit. Allen G. Thurman was the first choice of the convention for President.

In the New York Legislature, Senator Woodin, delegate to the Chicago Convention, in answer to the taunts of Senator Jacobs, declared himself to be emphatically for James G. Blaine. The unit rule being thus disregarded, it is not safe to predict with certainty the action of the delegation at Chicago. Some other delegates sustain Woodin, and there is much rejoicing among Blaine's friends in consequence....The Maryland Republican State Convention, though strongly favoring Blaine, is claimed to have selected a majority of Grant delegates.

John Kelly is arranging to take 250 of his followers to Cincinnati when the Democratic Convention meets there....Mrs. Josephine R. Stone is one of the delegates from the Fourth Massachusetts district to the National Greenback Convention.

Nevada instructs her six delegates to the Chicago Convention to vote for Blaine.... The New York Senate, by a vote of 17 to 14, has passed a concurrent resolution to amend the State constitution so as to extend the elective franchise to women.

Four political State Conventions were held May 12. In Michigan the Republicans instructed for Blaine, but an anti-Grant resolution created a tumult, and was promptly tabled. The Florida Republicans instructed for Grant. In West Virginia the Blaine Republicans had things their own way, instructions for the Senator being opposed by only a few Sherman men. The Wisconsin Democrats elected four delegates-at-large to the Cincinnati Convention. No instructions were given, but they are understood to be opposed to Tilden.

GENERAL.

Hon. George Browne, statesman and journalist, of Toronto, Canada, who was shot by Dickson, an employe, some weeks since, has died of his injuries....Davis, the polygamist, was convicted in Chicago, and the extreme penalty—five years' imprisonment and $1,000 fine—was imposed upon him.... The steamer American, of the Union Steamship line, from the Cape of Good Hope for Southampton, foundered near the equator. The passengers and crew took to the ship's boats, and already three of these, containing fifty-four persons, have been picked up and landed at Madeira. Five boats are still missing, but when last seen they were making for the Liberian coast, with very good prospects of reaching it safely.

The Supreme Court of the United States has rendered a very important decision upon the subject of lotteries. A lottery scheme known as "The Mississippi Agricultural, Manufacturing and Educational Aid Society," received a charter from the State of Mississippi in 1867. An act was passed by the same body in 1870 providing for the suppression of the scheme. The lottery company resisted the enforcement of the act, and carried the case to the State Supreme Court, where they were defeated. The company then appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, which holds that, as government is organized partly with a view to the preservation of public morals, it cannot divest itself of the power to provide accordingly. Lotteries the court held to be demoralizing in their effects, no matter how carefully regulated. They are a species of gambling, and are bad in their influences. The giving of a charter to a lottery concern, then, is merely a permit subject to future legislation or constitutional control or withdrawal.

At a meeting of the Western Nail Association, held at Pittsburgh, it was resolved to suspend work in all the mills represented two weeks out of the next three. A further reduction in the card-rates was made to $3.25....E. O. Haven, C. D. Foss, H. W. Warren and J. F. Hurst have been created Methodist Bishops by the General Conference of that denomination. ....One Samuel S. Stanton sues Secretary Schurz at St. Louis for $20,000 damages for imprisoning him at Fort Russell, near Cheyenne, without cause.

WASHINGTON.

The President has nominated William B. Hyman to be Surveyor of Customs for New Orleans....The treasury has purchased 380,000 ounces of fine silver for delivery at the Philadelphia and San Francisco mints....Reports come in from all quarters of the country since the failure of the Deficiency bill notifying the authorities of the crippled condition in which the United States courts are left. Quite a number will be obliged to suspend business by the middle of the month, and some of them before that, if Congress does not make immediate provision for expenses.

Secretary Sherman has issued a circular notifying all treasury officers that the appropriations for fuel, light and water will only last until May 19. He intimates that, if Congress does not pass the Deficiency bill or make some specific appropriation, all lights and fires in the public buildings will be extinguished in a few days.

Proceedings for divorce have been begun in Washington by ex-Senator Christiancy against his wife....A statement issued by the Bureau of Statistics shows the total value of exports of petroleum and petroleum products from the United States for the month of March, 1880, at $2,378,342; month of March, 1879, $2,039,826; for nine months ending March 31, 1880, $30,613,256; and the same period in 1879, $31,448,961.

FOREIGN.

The general feeling of the Mansion House Relief Committee is that the crisis was never more alarming, as subscriptions are falling off, while the distress is increasing....Four thousand Middlesborough (England) iron-workers have resumed work at a 5-per-cent. reduction of wages....Bismarck, at a recent Parliamentary soiree, declared that he was ready to come to terms with the Vatican, but that the Vatican must testify its willingness by acts instead of words....Sir Garnet Wolseley has left South Africa for England.

"George Eliot" (Mrs. Lewes) has been married to a Mr. Cross....Sixty cotton factories have been closed at Roubaix, France, and 15,000 persons are idle. Five thousand more operatives have struck at Tourcoing. There is also a strike at Rouen, and many silk factories are closed. Higher wages and less hours are demanded....The volcano of Colima, in Mexico, is indulging in a grand eruption, and the people in its vicinity are in a state of wild terror....Part of the roof of St. Gothard tunnel has fallen in killing three workmen....Gen. Mira Fuentes, Governor of the State of Mexico, and a distinguished officer of the War of the French Invasion, is dead....Great distress is reported in Galway county, Ireland.

Mount Etna is once more in a terrible state of eruption....The Albanians have proclaimed their independence....Davitt and Brennan are to stump the United States, and Parnell is to join them when Parliament is prorogued....The inhabitants of Bitlis, Asia Minor, have revolted because the Government ordered all available cereals to be sent from Bitlis to Van and Bosh-Kaleh, where the famine is particularly severe....Gladstone has been re-elected in Mid Lothian without opposition.... American citizens residing in Peru have published a protest against the inhuman and reckless mode of warfare carried on by the Chilians. They complain that their property has been ruthlessly destroyed and themselves wantonly insulted....The provisions for the abolition of slavery in Cuba have been published in Havana....Instructions have been issued by the Spanish Colonial Minister to the Captain General of Cuba to combine firmness with humanity in dealing with the Cuban insurgents....In strong contrast with the frequent cable reports of late that all destitution and distress in Ireland had been relieved comes the intelligence, from official sources, that the condition of the peasantry of a portion of Galway county is such that unless immediate relief is afforded people will die by the score.

Eighteen persons were killed by an explosion of dynamite at the Mount Gothard tunnel works....Bret Harte is reaping a golden harvest in his lecturing tour in England. The attendance at his lectures is reported as large and constantly increasing....The British have bombarded and burned a town on the west coast of Africa, the inhabitants of which recently captured and ill-treated several subjects of the Queen.

A dispatch from Teheran says the famine in Persia is increasing. Crop prospects are bad. There have been 600 deaths from starvation since January in one single district. Wheat costs £60 per ton in the famine-stricken districts.

A Sheriff's posse was successfully resisted in an attempt to eject some tenants from their farms near Tralee, Ireland. The Sheriff and several members of the police force are reported to have been seriously injured.... A commission appointed by the French Government to decide as to the disposition to be made of the Tuileries has agreed to restore the palace and convert it into a museum.... Albania has resolved not only to defend its frontier against the Montenegrins, but has also determined to assert its independence of Turkey. ....Lorillard's colt Iroquois won the 2-year-old plate at the Newmarket (England) race meeting.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

Senator Bayard introduced in the Senate, on Thursday, the 6th inst., a bill fixing the pay of election Deputy Marshals at $2 per each day's actual service, and providing that these officers shall be appointed by United States courts and taken in equal numbers from the different political parties. These officers, according to the bill, are to be men of good moral character, well-known citizens, and actual residents of the voting precinct in which their duties are to be performed. The Vice President was not present, and Mr. Thurman was chosen President pro tem. Mr. Hoar submitted a resolution instructing the Judiciary Committee to report a bill providing compensation for all persons whose ships were destroyed by Confederate cruisers during the late Rebellion from moneys received under the Geneva award. Mr. Morgan submitted a resolution providing a rule for counting the electoral vote. Mr. Eaton, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported favorably on the bill appropriating $260,000 for public printing, and it was passed. Mr. McDonald introduced a bill for the erection of a public building at Fort Wayne, Ind. The morning hour having expired, the Senate resumed consideration of the District of Columbia Appropriation bill. After a long discussion it passed. The President nominated William B. Hyman to be Surveyor of Customs for New Orleans....In the House, Mr. Wells submitted a conference report on the Indian Appropriation bill. Agreed to. The remainder of the day was passed in committee upon the Postoffice Appropriation bill.

The President pro tem. laid before the Senate the credentials of Senator James Garfield, on the morning of May 7, and they were placed on file. Mr. Voorhees submitted a resolution instructing the Committee on Public Lands to inquire into the public policy of declaring all lands granted in aid of the construction of railroads, and which have not been earned by compliance with the terms of the grants, open to public entry and settlement. The conference report on the Indian Appropriation bill was taken up on motion of Mr. Beck, and, after a short debate, passed without a division. Mr. Teller presented the views of the minority of the Wallace committee on the subject of political assessments. The Senate bill authorizing the St. Paul and Chicago Short Line Railway Company to build a bridge across Lake St. Croix was taken up and passed, as was the bill to abolish the Harker (Nev.) military reservation and dispose of its land to actual settlers. The bill making an appropriation of $15,000 for the purchase of a site and the erection of a lighthouse and fog-signal at the entrance of Little Traverse harbor, Lake Michigan, was taken up and passed. Adjourned to Monday. ....In the House, the Postoffice Appropriation bill was passed. The Senate amendment to the House bill for the relief of settlers on the public lands was concurred in. A bill passed establishing a life-saving station at Louisville, Ky. Mr. Washburn introduced a bill appropriating $500,000 for the construction of reservoirs for the improvement of the navigation of the Mississippi river above St. Louis. The bill for the relief of L. Madison Day, of Louisiana, was defeated—yeas, 79; nays, 85—and the House went into committee on the private calendar. After considering ten pension bills, the committee, finding itself without a quorum, arose. About twenty pension bills passed, and the House adjourned.

The Senate was not in session on the 8th inst. ....The House devoted the day to the consideration of the contested-election case of Curtin against Yocum from one of the Pennsylvania districts. Curtin claims the seat as a Democrat. Yocum is Republican-Greenbacker. The day was devoted to a very long speech by Beltzhoover of Pennsylvania. He argued that Curtin was undoubtedly elected, and should be seated.

The President pro tem. (Thurman) laid before the Senate, on the morning of Monday, May 10, a communication from the Secretary of the Interior stating that his estimates of March 5, 1880, for the deficiency for arrears and the army and navy pensions have been found insufficient, and transmitting the increased estimate. The report of the conference committee on the Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation bill was presented by Mr. Eaton and adopted. After the morning hour, the Kellogg-Spofford case was the subject of a speech by Mr. Hoar, occupying the whole day. The Senate rejected the nomination of George S. Houghton to be Census Supervisor Third district of Iowa....In the House, under the call of the States, the following bills were introduced and referred: By Mr. Doggett, for the survey of lands within the railroad subsidy limits; by Mr. Lounsbury, amending the Revised Statutes so as to allow national banks to issue notes to the extent of 90 per cent. of the market value of bonds deposited to secure circulation; by Mr. Frost, a resolution asking what, if any, circular letter had been given to Gen. Grant to foreign Governments on his foreign tour; by Mr. Newberry, to extend the time for completing the Northern Pacific railway; by Mr. Young (Ohio), appropriating $40,000 to rebuild Memorial Hall at Dayton, Ohio; by Mr. Carlisle, to reclaim waste and arid lands; by Mr. McCoid, to regulate commerce by railway between the States; by Mr. Cabell, allowing tobacco manufacturers to import liquorice and liquorice-paste in bond, and exempting the same from duty; by Mr. Wright, a resolution declaring that, after the 15th inst., the session of the House shall begin at 11 o'clock a. m. Mr. McGowan, from the Committee on Epidemic Diseases, reported back the joint resolution requiring the President to call an International Sanitary Conference to meet in Washington, D. C. Passed. The Legislative, Executive, and Judicial bill was reported from the Committee on Appropriations. It appropriates $16,120,901. Consideration was then resumed of the Curtin-Yocum contested-election case, and the House was addressed by Mr. Stevenson in support of the claim of the contestee. Mr. Frost introduced a bill providing that army officers should be promoted according to date of commission. At the night session of the House, Mr. Stevenson, of Illinois, made a speech favoring the election of President and Vice President by a direct vote of the people.

On Tuesday, May 11, the Senate concurred in the House amendment to the joint resolution authorizing the President to call an International Sanitary Conference. The amendment includes in the countries from which delegates are to be invited those subject to cholera. Mr. Hill spoke two hours and a half upon the Kellogg-Spofford case, and had not concluded at adjournment....In the House, after reports from the Ways and Means Committee, the Curtin-Yocum contested-election case was decided by the adoption of a resolution that Mr. Yocum was entitled to retain his seat, by a vote of 153 to 78. The House then went into committee of the whole upon the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill, but adjourned before finishing it. In the evening the House proceeded to the consideration of the Steamboat bill, and after considerable debate, and without making much progress in the bill, adjourned.

In the Senate, on the 12th inst., Mr. Hill finished his speech upon the Kellogg case, his remarks occupying the whole day. The President nominated James L. Dryden, of Illinois, to be United States Attorney for Montana, and John S. Bigley, of Newman, Ga., to be United States Attorney for Georgia. The nomination of Robert M. Wallace to be United States Marshal for South Carolina was rejected by the Senate.....In the House, Mr. Hooker introduced a bill abolishing the Indian Commission. A large number of committee reports were made, and the bills were disposed of as recommended, after which the House went into committee upon the Legislative Appropriation bill. An evening session was held for consideration of the District Code bill.

Sheep Raising.

The sheep industry in the United States is vast and important, and in the consideration of which there are two partially distinct, and at the same time interlocking interests. Sheep were in early times grown almost solely for their wool, and with the annual shearing came the year's income; but in later times, and never so prominently as now, the carcass is looked upon as an important item in sheep husbandry. Mutton as a cheap and acceptable meat has of late grown greatly in popularity, and mutton now stands as one of the two important factors in the successful raising of sheep. In view of the fact that the merino is essentially a wool-producing breed, with a fleece of the finest and best quality, it is evident that the pure-blood merino, though it may supply our manufactories with the material for the finest of woolen goods, on the other hand cannot satisfy the butcher. The sheep having to both feed and clothe its keeper, it is an important question: What is the best breed of sheep to do this? Evidently not the pure-blooded merino. Though the growing of the pure-blooded merinos has its place, and an important one, and the demand for their wool indicates the prosperity of manufacture of the finest goods, it is by the crossing of them with other breeds in which the flesh-producing qualities predominate that a sheep best for both meat and wool is produced. A cross-breed is the one that in most localities is to pay. The merino is slow of growth and small of carcass when mature; but when crossed with a rapid grower, one that matures early, is a high feeder, and lays on flesh rapidly, but not remarkable for its wool either in quantity or quality, a sheep is obtained that pays for itself in its wool of prime quality, and furnishes a good quantity of mutton as a profit. Of such character are the crosses of the merino with the Cotswold and the South-down. But with the great mass of American sheep on the Western plains, wool is the important product, and here the cross must be with the merino upon the "native"—a race of sheep which has grown out of a variety of early importations to this country—an intercrossing of various breeds in which many of the good points have been lost. In this field the merino has a great work to do to raise the yield of wool one, two, or more pounds per head, and give it a higher value.

Traveling on His Looks.

They were in a railroad car journeying to Chicago. On the opposite seat sat a man of commanding figure and brow, and thoughtful expression.

"What a fine countenance, James; I wish I knew his occupation."

"Maybe he is a lawyer."

"There's too much benevolence in his face for a lawyer."

"He may be a banker."

"Not a bit of it; a man with such a heavenly expression couldn't content himself with money getting. His aim in life is higher than that."

"I guess you are right, Amelia; I'll take your word and his for it."

At the next station an inquisitive farmer took a seat beside the stranger with the noble brow, and asked him about his vocation. Amelia held her breath and listened to the reply. It was this:

"I keep a saloon and a meat shop. My wife sells beer and I do my own butchering."

As shedding light on the much-disputed question: "Who was the Commander-in-Chief at the battle of Bunker Hill?" it is said that there is at Yale College an engraving, executed in London, 1775, representing a sturdy and robust military gentleman, who is described in the marginal title as "Israel Putnam, Esq., Major General of the Connecticut forces and Commander-in-Chief at the engagement of Bunker Hill, near Boston, 17th of June, 1775."

The sparrow is becoming to be such a nuisance to pillars and outdoor ornamental work in Hartford as to require the placing of wire screens as a protection against the little rogues.

Col. George F. B. Leighton, Norfolk, Va., is one of the largest strawberry and fruit-growers in the country. His pear orchard numbers 6,000 trees. Since his retirement from the Confederate army in 1865 he has devoted himself to fruit-culture, in which he has been highly successful. He is an active and prominent member of the American Pomological Society.

El Dorado is of Spanish extraction, and was a fabulous region located in the interior of South America, supposed to surpass all others in the richness of its productions, especially gold, gems, and the like. It is now come to be applied to any country, especially an imaginary one, abounding in gold or other precious metals.

THE TWO-THIRDS RULE.

History of the Rule Making a Two-Thirds Vote Necessary to a Choice for Candidates in Democratic National Conventions.

[From the Boston Post.]

As the convention at Cincinnati will be called on to take action on this subject, a brief history of the two-thirds rule may be of some interest. It was first adopted in 1832 at the convention in Baltimore held to nominate a candidate for Vice President. Gen. Jackson had already been put in nomination for President, not by a National Convention of delegates, but by the Democrats of State Legislatures. With respect to him the sentiment of the party was confessedly so strong that no convention was deemed necessary. But there was a diversity of opinion as to the Vice Presidency, and New Hampshire had the honor to lead off for solving the difficulty by a proposition for a national convention, which was readily adopted. The author of the rule was Romulus M. Saunders, of North Carolina, on whose motion the following resolution was adopted: "Resolved, That each State be entitled in the nomination to be made of a candidate for the Vice Presidency to a number of votes equal to the number that they will be entitled to in Electoral Colleges under the new apportionment in voting for President and Vice President, and that two-thirds of the whole number of votes in the convention shall be necessary to constitute a choice." Mr. Van Buren received the nomination under this rule. In 1835, at the National Convention, held at Baltimore, he received a unanimous nomination for the Presidency, and was elected. In 1840 he was again nominated, but was defeated at the polls by Gen. Harrison. In 1844 the friends of Mr. Van Buren again urged his nomination, but there was serious opposition to it. Mr. Saunders was present, and, at his instance, the convention adopted the two-thirds rule by a vote of 148 to 118. On the first ballot Van Buren received 146 votes, a majority, but he was unable to obtain the requisite two-thirds. His friends then made an ineffectual effort to repeal the rule. The result was his defeat, and the nomination of Mr. Polk, which, on the ninth ballot, was made unanimous. At the Baltimore Convention of 1848 this rule was again adopted, and Mr. Cass received the nomination under it. In 1852 Mr. Pierce was nominated under the same rule. In 1856, at Cincinnati, Mr. Buchanan received the nomination in like manner. In 1860 the Charleston Convention adopted the same rule. Fifty-seven ballotings were had and no choice was effected. Mr. Douglas received 151½ votes, 202 being requisite for a choice. The convention divided, and subsequently Mr. Douglas was nominated by one branch and Mr. Breckinridge by the other. In 1864, at Chicago, Gen. McClellan received 202½, the remaining 28½ being for Mr. Seymour, of Connecticut. In 1868, at New York, Mr. Seymour, of that State, received 317 on the twenty-second ballot, 212 being necessary for a choice. At Baltimore, in 1872, Mr. Greeley received 686 out of 732. At St. Louis, in 1876, 492 was the number requisite for a choice, and on the second ballot Mr. Tilden received 525 on a roll call, and his nomination was then made unanimous. At this convention, on motion of Mr. Webber, of Michigan, the States were requested to instruct their delegates to the next convention, whether it be desirable to continue the two-thirds rule now in force, and that the request should be inserted in the call as has been done. The usual practice had been to agree upon the rules at the opening of the convention. This was done at St. Louis, on motion of Judge Abbott."

Dainty Food in a Menagerie.

Next in point of heavy feeding come the elephants. Their chief food is hay, of which it takes about four times as much to keep an elephant as it does to keep a horse, the elephant eating about 100 pounds of hay every twenty-four hours. And in order to keep up his appetite the hay must be the best going, being invariably timothy of the best grade. Other animals that eat hay are the giraffes, the camels, the deer, zebra, and different animals of the cattle species. Most all these are fed on what is known as mixed hay, timothy and clover, which is about 20 per cent. cheaper than the timothy alone.

There are 101 other creatures requiring, in many cases, much more delicate and costly food. The sea-lions have to be fed on fish, usually fresh and salt mackerel, each animal taking twelve to fifteen to each meal twice a day, and consuming all together 100 pounds of fish daily.

Next in point of delicate livers come the polar bears, whose regular diet is bread soaked in milk, with fish now and then for a change. The black bears are also given bread, 100 pounds being used daily. Vegetables of almost every sort are fed liberally to the different animals—cabbage, potatoes, carrots, onions and turnips. The elephants are great cabbage eaters, in addition to their standard diet, hay. The giraffes singularly enough, are great onion eaters, while the deer and goats, and animals of the cow species, eat carrots and turnips and potatoes. Bran and oats and corn are also liberally distributed—mostly once or twice a week—among the hay-eating animals.

The most delicate and expensive feeder in the place, perhaps, is the ourang-otang, which gets beef, potatoes, bread and honey. As there is only one in the collection at present, the cost of keeping this grinning satire on the human species is not multiplied. Another delicacy which must not be omitted in the diet of the polar bears is fish oil, of which they get several supplies a week. After the hay, the oats is perhaps the next chief source of expense in the way of animal food. As for the fowls, the larger ones are fed on corn, while the small birds are fed on canary seed, and all of them now and then get a small chunk of meat. —Philadelphia Times.

Muslin dresses are still made with box-plaited sacque shapes in front, and back finished with a Spanish flounce; but others are also merely gathered and shirred at the neck and just above the deep flounce, giving an easy, loose appearance that is graceful for slender children. Another pretty feature is that of putting on a false yoke just above the Spanish flounce; this is trimmed on the lower edge, just up each side of the front, with lace or edging, and allowed to fall over the flounce like a little basque.

ALL SORTS.

When a man gets tight, the devil generally gets loose.

Senator McPherson, of New Jersey, made his money at cattle dealing.

Congressman Newberry is now President of thirty-five manufacturing companies.

Herbert Gladstone is said to be a brilliant young man, giving promise of a useful career.

A conductor on a Colorado railroad coolly shot and killed a man who would neither get off the car nor pay fare.

Mississippi allows its ex-Confederate soldiers who lost a foot or hand in the war to peddle in any county in the State without a special license.

Prof. Huxley says it is just as safe to marry on a three-weeks' courtship as to wait longer. Each side will conceal all faults as much as possible, anyhow.

Charles Dudley Warner says that students read very little in college outside of text-books. If they attend strictly to "biz," and keep their flirtations up even, there is very little time left.

A Bridgeport (Ct.) man is persecuted by English sparrows. They have nested seven times under his eaves, and seven times he has torn away their nest. The sparrows have commenced on their eighth nest, apparently as uncrushed as the Count Joannes.

Ladies who wear sealskin sacks are very liable not to wear them, for in Belgium rabbit-skins are successfully prepared to resemble sealskin, and thousands of rabbits are annually killed in England whose pelts go to Belgium, and leave that country as genuine sealskins.

An interesting discovery has just been made at Wells, England, of upward of a thousand original documents, some of which date back to the sixteenth century. Many of the seals are in a beautiful state of preservation. They were found in an old oaken press in the almshouse.

"Why do you keep all the caramels yourself, Johnny?" asked a West Philadelphia mother of her son. "Why not give Lucy half them?" "Oh, because," said Johnny. "Because what?" "Just because I'm a monopolist. Didn't you say the other day that if papa hadn't been a monopolist he couldn't 'a' succeeded so well?"

The Czar's bedroom in the Winter Palace, it is said, communicates by a subterranean gallery with the Fortress of Sts. Peter and Paul, so that, in case of need, he may reach the fortress in a few minutes, and be in perfect safety. The room of Emperor Paul I. was provided with a similar secret passage, but he was not quick enough for his assassins, who murdered him on the threshold of the passage.

The annual report of the Bank Commissioners of New Hampshire will show 67 savings banks in the State, having 89,934 depositors, an increase of 1,655; amount of deposits, $28,204,792, an increase of $1,922,655; surplus, $1,089,262; $14,950,800 is invested in secured loans by note, $12,578,080 in stocks and bonds, and $1,586,601 in real estate and fixtures; 688 depositors have $2,000 and upward.

It would be interesting to know how much Windsor Castle has, from first to last, cost. In 1830, on the vote for $500,000 to defray the expenses incurred by the alterations of Windsor, a member objected on the score that $4,500,000 had already been spent, and there was no knowing when the expense would cease. The bill was withdrawn for the time. Enormous sums have since been expended.

Four deaths from political excitement arising out of the Birmingham election have already occurred. At an inquest respecting the death of a teacher of music it was shown that the man was extremely excited over the election, and, after writing on some papers "Vote for the Liberal," died. The Coroner said that this was the fourth instance of the kind which he had held since the election.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$8 50	@	9 75
Hogs	4 60	@	4 90
Cotton	11¾	@	12
Flour—Superfine	4 00	@	4 90
Wheat—No. 2	1 22	@	1 33
Corn—Western Mixed	48	@	52
Oats—Mixed	41	@	42
Rye—Western	90	@	92
Pork—Mess	10 85	@	11 00
Lard	7	@	7¼
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	4 60	@	4 95
Cows and Heifers	2 80	@	4 00
Medium to Fair	4 15	@	4 30
Hogs	3 50	@	4 65
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex.	5 50	@	6 25
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 00	@	5 75
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	1 17	@	1 18
No. 3 Spring	95	@	96
Corn—No. 2	36	@	37
Oats—No. 2	30	@	31
Rye—No. 2	79	@	80
Barley—No. 2	77	@	78
Butter—Choice Creamery	20	@	21
Eggs—Fresh	8	@	8½
Pork—Mess	10 10	@	10 25
Lard	6¾	@	7
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	1 15	@	1 17
No. 2	1 12	@	1 13
Corn—No. 2	37	@	38
Oats—No. 2	30	@	31
Rye—No. 1	79	@	80
Barley—No. 2	69	@	70
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red Fall	1 11	@	1 13
Corn—Mixed	33	@	34
Oats—No. 2	31	@	32
Rye	85	@	86
Pork—Mess	10 00	@	10 25
Lard	6½	@	6¾
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	1 14	@	1 16
Corn	39	@	40
Oats	34	@	35
Rye	89	@	90
Pork—Mess	10 50	@	10 75
Lard	6¾	@	7
TOLEDO.
Wheat—Amber Michigan	1 21	@	1 22
No. 2 Red	1 21	@	1 22
Corn—No. 2	40	@	41
Oats—No. 2	34	@	35
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	5 00	@	5 75
Wheat—No. 1 White	1 15	@	1 16
No. 1 Amber	1 14	@	1 15
Corn—No. 1	42	@	43
Oats—Mixed	35	@	37
Barley (per cental)	1 20	@	1 30
Pork—Mess	11 50	@	12 00
INDIANAPOLIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	1 13	@	1 16
Corn	36	@	37
Oats	34	@	35
Pork—Clear	12 00	@	12 50
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	5 00	@	5 25
Fair	4 00	@	4 50
Common	3 00	@	3 75
Hogs	4 40	@	4 85
Sheep	4 00	@	5 50

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED, JOS. J. LOWRY } Editors.

A [illegible] in Montevideo [illegible] abandoned by their parents during the past year. The deaths during the same period were 631, leaving only eighty-eight children alive.

AN exchange tells its readers that the Arab horse is not broken until he is 4 years old. There is no particular time for breaking the American trotter, but the man who owns him is generally broke the year after his prize goes on the turf.

PROSPECTING parties are entering the Ute reservation in large numbers, regardless of the threatening attitude of the Indians. The officers of the troops stationed at Cochetopa pass say their instructions are simply to prevent hostilities, and not to keep miners out.

A RIDICULOUS quarrel between two Captains of artillery, stationed at the Washington arsenal, one of them a brother-in-law of Mrs. Hayes, is noted. The trouble grew out of an order for the removal of a few building stones. Both have filed charges, but the department will not entertain them.

THE Russian official organs say that they rejoice over the English Liberal victory because it means peace between England and Russia, and not because it means a release of Russia from her obligations under the treaty of Berlin. These obligations she claims will be loyally and faithfully fulfilled.

STATISTICS say that there are about 1,700 female authors in France. Two-thirds of them are natives of the provinces, and one-third of Paris. Of those born in the provinces a majority come from the south. About 1,000 writers out of the 1,700 write novels or stories for the young, while 200 are poets, and 150 devote themselves to educational works.

MR. ROADS is a school teacher at Earl, Pa. When a little girl denied having torn a book, and called on God to witness that she told the truth, he was grieved beyond expression by what he deemed her blasphemy. He grabbed her in one hand and a club in the other, and beat her until he was weary and she insensible. She was maimed for life, and he has gone to prison for two years.

EARL GRANVILLE, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in the new British Ministry, says the Cabinet will maintain the treaty of Berlin, enter into no continental alliance, continue the present cordial relations with France, support the Greek claims, and endeavor to continue the existing harmony in the Anglo-French control of Egypt.

THE Queen of England is said to be a constant sufferer from violent headaches. The mere announcement of this trouble with the Queen's head will awaken universal sympathy, and cause her to be inundated with consolatory letters containing recipes for treating her affliction. The United States is prolific in remedies for so simple a disease as a headache; and, as her Majesty is necessarily cut off from personal communication with those who might give her the panaceas, perhaps the information had better be sent by post, if sent at all.

THE journeyings of another postal card "around the world" are recounted in an exchange. It was mailed in New York Nov. 29, 1879, but, losing the mail steamer, lay over in the New York post-office until the sailing of the next mail steamer, and arrived in London Dec. 13, 1879. Being sent from London to Marseilles, it arrived Dec. 17, 1879; from Marseilles to Cairo, arriving Dec. 25; from Cairo to Bombay, arriving Jan. 15, 1880; from Bombay to Singapore, arriving Feb. 2; from Singapore to Yokohama, arriving March 9; from Yokohama to San Francisco, arriving March 26; from San Francisco to New York, arriving April 3. The entire trip occupied 127 days.

UNDER Republican rule France has made, and continues to make, extraordinary progress in material prosperity. The deposits in the savings banks have enormously increased, and the houses and lands of the peasantry have been greatly improved. There is no such thing as poverty to be found in the beautiful country; and now the intelligence comes that calls of tax-collectors have been so generously and promptly responded to that the amounts already far exceed the estimates, and that the French Government is in a quandary as to what shall be done with the surplus. Verily, France cheaply purchased its redemption from Bonapartist rule by the payment of the indemnity to Germany.

THERE is an old superstition that the opal is an unlucky stone, and in the minds of those who believe in fatality the adventures of the Princess Olga Galitzin, of Paris, confirm this. Soon after her marriage her husband presented her with a beautiful opal bracelet which she happened to see in a shop window. The minute after she put it on she was knocked down by a cab, and, although she escaped unhurt, the clasp of her new bracelet was broken. It was repaired, and the next evening the Princess wore it again at a ball, where she fell badly, broke the ornament once more, and cut her arm deeply. Again the bracelet was repaired, and the lady, undaunted by the proverbial ill-luck of opals, wore it to the opera. There she lost it, and the Prince breathes now more freely.

THE Mormons not long ago held their annual church conference in Salt Lake City. Erastus Snow, one of the chief apostles, made an address defending polygamy, in which he said that if the United States had its way, Abraham, Joseph, and all the other patriarchs would be arrested, were they living with us to-day. From the report of one of the church officers it appears that the total Mormon population of Utah is 111,820; in Colorado, some 600; Arizona, 1,895; the British mission contains 5,275, children included; the Scandinavian 5,205, and the German mission 798. Some 1,600 baptisms are reported during the last year, and upward of 600 excommunications and removals. The number of Mormon births last year is given at 1,230 males and 1,231 females—not many surplus wives in this distribution of the sexes. The tithing receipts for the year of all kinds amounted to $1,097,034.

THE London Telegraph, in a recent editorial on literary men as diplomatists, Consuls, etc., after alluding in complimentary terms to Everett, Irving, Motley, Bancroft, Bayard Taylor, and others, says: "With Mr. James Russell Lowell installed as the United States Minister in London, and with Mr. Bret Harte as American Consul in Glasgow, literature has had such homage paid to her as is seldom accorded in this country. Nor is it possible to refrain from musing upon the vast diversity of ideas suggested by the grimy city upon the banks of the Clyde to a poet who has passed so much of his life among the canons and pine-trees of Nevada and Wyoming. In one respect, however, the scenes contemplated by Mr. Bret Harte, at Glasgow, will be the same as have engaged his attention at Poker Flat and upon the Stanislaus. Glasgow will be as full of suggestions as the wild scenes in which red-shirted, poker-playing, revolver-carrying miners constituted the chief dramatis personæ.

THE House of Commons just elected contains many new young men, as well as many former members who are still young, though prominent in public life. Young men will always be fighting their way to the front in all countries. Mr. Gladstone, who has been the great inspiring spirit in the recent political revolution, was in Parliament at 23, and a Lord of the Treasury at 25; Lord Palmerston was Secretary of War at 25, as Bolingbroke was at 26; the Marquis of Lansdowne was in the Cabinet at 26; William Pitt was Chancellor of the Exchequer at 24, and Sir Robert Peel was Chief Secretary for Ireland at the same age. In our own country young men have early come into position. Alexander Hamilton was Secretary of the Treasury at 32; Henry Clay was in the Senate at 29; Douglas was in the House at 30, and in the Senate at 34; at 34 John Quincy Adams was Minister at Berlin; Buchanan was in the House at 31, Minister to Russia at 41, and in the Senate at 43.

What Followed.

The temptation to pique and punish unlawful curiosity is one of the strongest—the chagrin of the bitten victim so richly deserved. The Louisville Courier-Journal says:

There were some angry men in a certain Kentucky postoffice a few days ago. A postal card was dropped into the letter-box, addressed to the "Rev. John Penobscot, ———." It was an ordinary card, and the Postmaster was an ordinary Postmaster. He took it up, glanced at the address, turned it leisurely over and read:

> ——— May 5, 1880.
>
> You, to whom this card is not addressed, and who, nevertheless, have the cheek to read it, are a contemptible, unprincipled sneak, and a prying, pusillanimous coward.
>
> GEORGE E. DREAN.

The Postmaster laid the card gently down and lounged to the other end of the house, softly whistling "Nancy Lee." In due time the clerk came upon the card, perused it, and made the neighborhood hideous with the complainings of his pet dog, which he kicked in the ribs.

How the card fared with the various route agents through whose hands it passed, it is impossible to say, nor do we know whether it was read by the woman who is Postmistress of the office where the Rev. John Penobscot is supposed to get his mail; but the report is that on the day it reached there she smashed a bottle of ink, spanked the children all round and chewed up 65 cents' worth of wax.

We cannot be too careful never to write on postal cards anything in the least calculated to wound the sensitive delicacy of the postoffice people's feelings.

THERE was recently found in Truckee, Nev., an egg, the shell of which had been pierced by a kernel of barley. Half the kernel was inside the shell and had sprouted, and a bright green blade of barley four inches long was growing from the barleycorn. On breaking a small piece from the side of the shell, diminutive fibrous roots of the barley stock were found extending into the white of the egg.

[illegible]
Cleave the tough, green sward with the spade;
[illegible] gently [illegible] roots, and there
Wide let its hollow bed [illegible]
Sift the dark mold with kindly care
And press it o'er them tenderly,
As [illegible] sleeping [illegible] feet,
We softly fold the cradle sheet;
So we plant the apple-tree.

IN some parts of Kansas farmers have sown flax and spring wheat in the same field. The profit is said to be greater than when either crop is sown alone.

ONE of the occupations of young men who are filling up Western Texas is to breed geese. One of these has 3,000 geese, whose feathers are plucked every two months. Each bird will average a pound and a half a year, worth 50 cents per pound.

A WELL-KNOWN fruit grower, in making a new orchard, systematizes matters by setting his apple trees so that the summer apples will be together, then the fall apples, then the winter apples, and so on. It makes it easier to gather them, and avoids the necessity of hauling all over the orchard.

PLANTS must be allowed air; even those that will not bear the outer air must have the air of the room frequently freshened by ventilation, to preserve them in health. Care should be taken not to let plants stand in a draught, for when so situated one strong gust of cold wind will often prove sufficient to destroy them.

A WOMAN in Wyoming Territory who has raised large numbers of hens says that after vainly trying the recommended remedies for lice she hit upon the plan of giving them once or twice a week a large loaf made of graham flour in which a handful of sulphur had been mixed. The hens liked it, were freed from the lice and kept healthy all through the summer.

EXPERIMENTS in Germany show that if potatoes are fed to milch cows they should be cooked. Raw potatoes will give a larger yield of milk, but less butter, than cooked ones. In the case referred to raw potatoes were first added to the daily rations of hay, straw and other materials. The result was that with raw potatoes the ration gave 282½ pounds of milk a week, yielding six and three-fourths pounds of butter, while with cooked potatoes it gave 248¼ pounds of milk, yielding nine and one-fourth pounds of butter.

WOOD ashes will decompose bones. Expose to the weather a barrel filled with alternate three-inch layers of broken bones and ashes for several months, when, on examination, the bones will be found to be reduced to a jelly-like substance, forming phosphate of potash, one of the most powerful as well as lasting fertilizing materials known, and one which, when exposed to the sun for a few days, may be easily reduced to powder—the very best condition for applying to the land. Do not hurry the operation, but save all the bones and let time and wood ashes convert them into a rich manure.

THE American Cultivator records the names and addresses of 150 enterprising farmers who last season, by careful and intelligent management, succeeded in raising an average of nearly twenty tons of sugar beets to the acre, for which they averaged a cash return of about $100 each per acre. This record represented the product of many farmers in different towns and in three States, viz., Maine, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, which makes it appear that successful beet culture is not so much a matter of soil or locality as of individual effort and skill.

AN exchange says: It is impossible to convey to the reader an idea of the vast valuable forests of fir, pine, and cedar in Oregon and Washington. Trees 200 and 250 feet high, and six feet in diameter, are never out of view; eight and ten feet in diameter, and 300 feet high, are not uncommon, generally two-thirds free of limbs. Fifty and sixty good timber trees grow on an acre, as a rule, and yield seldom less than 300,000 feet, and instances are on record of 1,000,000 feet from an acre. No acre is worked for profit which cannot yield 300,000 feet at least, and even this yield is rare.

AN agricultural writer says his advice to farmers is to try and keep off disease. Keep hogs in clean, good fields; give them access to good water. In the dryest part of the field provide good shelter both from sun and rain. In troughs near their resting-places, two or three times each week, place a composition of salt, soda, red pepper, and ginger. To four parts of the first two articles, add one part of latter. Common red pepper will answer, well pulverized, and all the ingredients thoroughly mixed. This is no remedy, but a preventive of the injurious effects of the foul gases and the pestiferous filth in which hogs have been allowed to wallow.

He Was On Hand.

It was dark in the depot, one day last week, when the evening train came in. An elderly farmer was backed up against the partition, watching in open-mouthed wonder, the big panting engine and the yellow-covered cars as they discharged their passengers, when a handsome young girl in a seal-skin cloak dashed forward, and, throwing herself upon the honest granger's manly breast, imprinted a kiss upon his sunburned cheek, and exclaimed:

"You dear old pa, I knew you would be waiting for me! And how's mother, and how's Aunty Hal and John—and oh! I'm so glad to get back—and where's my trunk—and oh! pa, you take the check and let's hurry."

The granger was old and kind of dried up, and he had never known what it was to have a wife, much less a daughter. He mistrusted the young lady in the seal-skin sack had made a mistake; but, instead of stammering, and hemming and hawing, he came gallantly up to the scratch, and, throwing both arms around the fair creature, he made up his mind to be a father to her or die in the attempt. Imprinting a kiss like the report of a pistol on her cheek, he enthusiastically ejaculated:

"Oh, yer mother's well, an' John an' Henry an' (smack) an' Jane an' Susan (smack, smack) an' Horace an' Belindy an' Calvin (smack) an' Joshua an' Peter (smack, smack), oh, they're all smart an' hearty an'——"

By the time the young lady's friends could get to her, she had slid into a stony faint, and they had to lug her home in a hack, while the aged granger, as he finished the third round with her outraged young man, and sauntered out of the depot, leaving him with a bad eye and a ruptured coat, chuckled to himself:

"The old man's gittin' old an' stiff an' careless like, but when any young female wants to play any games o' copenhagen, they'll find him right to time, an' I shouldn't be s'prised if it rained 'fore 9 o'clock. G'lang, Kate!"—Rockland Courier.

HOUSEKEEPERS' HELPS.

PUFF PUDDING.—Beat six eggs, six spoonfuls of milk, six of flour, a good lump of butter, and bake quickly. Wine sauce is good with it.

ROLY-POLY PUDDING.—Boil six good-sized potatoes, mash them, add a pint of flour, work the potatoes and flour well together until the paste is sufficiently thick, spread over it preserves or fresh fruit. Put it into a well-floured cloth and boil two hours.

TO RENOVATE CRAPE.—Thoroughly brush all dust from the material, sprinkle with alcohol, and roll in newspapers, commencing with the paper and crape together, that the paper may be between every portion of the material; allow it to remain in the roll until perfectly dry.

CHEESE CAKE.—Take four cakes of cottage cheese, rub them fine; melt a quarter of a pound of butter and stir into it, beating all the time; sweeten to your taste; then beat the yelks of ten eggs very light, and stir in, add currants and rose water; when just ready to bake, beat the whites to a perfect froth and stir in gently.

BLACK THREAD LACE.—To renovate black thread lace, wash it carefully in alcohol, or pure spirit, which is diluted alcohol. Lay a towel on a board or table, and smooth out the veil, carefully stretching it, and pinning it to the board round the edge of the lace with pins. When dry, it will look like new, if carefully done.

A GOOD washing fluid which will not injure the clothes may be made by dissolving one pound of potash in one gallon of water, add one ounce of ammonia, and one ounce salts-of-tarter. When you wash add one teacupful of this fluid to a boiler of clothes. Soap must be added, and the clothes soaped on the most soiled places. The clothes should be soaked over-night. In the morning wring them out, and boil as stated above.

CHEESE TARTLETS.—Make a paste with one ounce of butter, two ounces of flour, the yelk of an egg, a little water, a pinch of salt, roll it out to the thickness of an eighth of an inch, and line some patty-pans with it. Take two ounces of finely-grated Parmesan cheese, beat it up in a bowl with the yelks of two eggs; add pepper, salt, cayenne and nutmeg, according to taste—very little of the two latter; then work in three table-spoonfuls of cream, fill each pastry pan with the mixture, and then bake them in a moderate oven till done.

An Amusing Reminiscence of the Late War.

The fight at Blackburn's ford, just to the left of Bull run, was opened by the Second Massachusetts infantry. Supported by a New York and two Michigan regiments, they advanced into the woods until they heard something drop. The regiment bumped up against intrenchments and were subjected to a tremendous fire. Before going into the woods the regiment was "dressed" as on a parade, and the Colonel rode out and exclaimed:

"Men of Massachusetts! the eyes of your country are upon you!"

There was a grand yell, and they went in to conquer or to die! After fifteen minutes' desperate fighting they retired from the woods to re-form behind the supports. Among the last was an old man. He had thrown away coat, hat, gun and all accoutrements, and he was badly demoralized. As he passed the left flank of a Michigan regiment in line of battle, a wag called out:

"Only 800 miles to Boston!"

The old man halted for a moment, and another joker observed:

"The eyes of your country are upon you."

"You blamed Wolverines, go to grass!" growled the old warrior. "I've got a choice about this thing, and I druther stand the eyes of my country all day long than the fire of them cussed rebels for five minutes."

Milk and Lime Water.

Milk and lime water are now frequently prescribed by physicians in cases of dyspepsia and weakness of the stomach, and in some cases are said to prove very beneficial. Many persons who think good bread and milk a great luxury, frequently hesitate to eat it for the reason that the milk will not digest readily—sourness of stomach will often follow. But experience proves, says the Journal of Materia Medica, that lime water and milk are not only food and medicine at an early period of life, but also at a later, when, as in the case of infants, the functions of digestion and assimilation are feeble and easily perverted. A stomach taxed by gluttony, irritated by improper food, inflamed by alcohol, enfeebled by disease, or otherwise unfitted for its duties—as is shown by the various symptoms attendant upon indigestion, dyspepsia, diarrhea, dysentery, and fever—will resume its work, and do it energetically, on an exclusive diet of bread and milk and lime water. A goblet of cow's milk may have four table-spoonfuls of lime water added to it with good effect. The way to make lime water is simply to procure a few lumps of unslaked lime, put the lime in a stone jar, and add water until the lime is slaked and of about the consistence of thin cream; the lime settles, leaving the pure and clean lime water on the top.

The Parson's Shoe.

In a little town near Providence the venerable pastor called on a pious family, one evening, and was invited to conduct family worship. The 3-year-old pet of the family noticed, as the preacher was kneeling, that the sole of one of his shoes was partially off at one end. The baby, who had been in a blacksmith shop watching them shoe horses, quietly ran and got a hammer, and began to bang on the parson's shoe-sole. The reverend brother kept on praying, but the rest of the family had to keep too much laugh in them to be much benefited thereby.

CURIOSITIES OF WASHINGTON LIFE

Letters Received by Members of Congress and Their Wives.

Immediately after the Mexican war a law was passed which gave three months' additional pay to all men honorably discharged after serving therein. The time in which the application for this could be made was limited, and some few did did not know of this, and failed to receive the amount due them. For the benefit of these the law was last year revived, and in consequence thousands of applications for the benefits to accrue from it have been received by members of Congress. Of course, in the thirty years which had passed since the war, many had forgotten that they received the money soon after their discharge from the army. One Congressmen mentions in proof of how many, through sheer forgetfulness, applied for the three months' pay after the law was revived, that out of 2,700 such applications he received, only seven of the claimants he found, after looking over the records, had not previously received the extra pay. Of course to search the records for so many wasted a large portion of the member's time.

One industrious scribe wrote to a Representative that he had a claim on which he desired action to be taken, and added that he had twice written to the President on the subject. He inclosed letters addressed to every member of the Senate and House asking each individually what he purposed doing about the claim when it came up for consideration in Congress.

While giving instances of curious letters received by members of Congress, an allusion at least must be made to those of which the wives of public men are the recipients. The subject is an inexhaustible one, which cannot be treated in detail in any letter of ordinary length. While Gen. Grant was President, a parcel came one day by express to his wife, which, on being opened, was found to contain a hideous calico bedquilt of such incongruous colors that it nearly gave one the ague to look at it. It was so repulsively ugly that Mrs. Grant observed that she would dislike to ask one of the servants to use it. An explanatory letter from the maker of the monstrosity, who lived in the Northwest, said that she had made one like it, which took a prize at the State Fair in her State, and so she thought she would send one to be used on a bed in the White House. The tone of the letter implied that the maker thought she was conferring a great benefit on the Executive Mansion and Mrs. Grant in sending this specimen of her handiwork and "feeling for color;" she added that she would consider herself amply repaid if Mrs. Grant would send her twenty yards of black silk for a dress; that she could make a small pattern do, so that quantity would suffice. She added in a postscript that she would be entirely willing to make another quilt like that sent for Mrs. Sartoris, and a navy-blue silk dress would be compensation for her trouble.

Some Curious Figures in Book-Making.

From an interview with Mr. William H. Appleton, of the firm of D. Appleton & Co., printed in the New York Herald, we extract the following:

"How was Mr. Bryant as a maker of manuscript?"

"Mr. Bryant did all his laboring over the first draft of his poems, and the manuscript as we received it was like copper-plate."

"How did his works sell?"

"They have sold better since his death than before, for some reason or other."

"What is the best-selling book you publish, if not too impertinent a question?"

"The best-selling book we publish is 'Webster's Speller,' and it has the largest sale of any book in the world, except the Bible. We sell 1,000,000 copies a year."

"A million copies a year?"

"Yes, and have for forty years, making 40,000,000 of 'Webster's Spellers' that have issued from our presses. The year following the emancipation of the slaves we sold 1,500,000, because every negro in the South thought it only necessary to have a 'Webster's Speller' to read. After that year it fell back to the original million, and has never varied. We sell them in cases of seventy-two dozen, and they are bought by all the large dry-goods houses and supply stores, and furnished by them to every cross-roads store in the country."

"Can you always tell whether a book will be successful?"

"No more than a manager can predict the success of a play. For example, when 'Lothair' was written we determined to publish it. The firm held a consultation, and some of the members were for printing an edition of 2,000, while others thought that was too many, and doubted whether 1,000 would sell. Finally we agreed to venture with 2,000. You may imagine our surprise when I tell you that we sold 80,000 copies of that novel."

Another successful novel was Miss Muhlbach's "Joseph II. and His Court." Mr. W. W. Appleton, while traveling down South, came across a copy of this book printed at Atlanta, Ga., during the war. He bought it as a curiosity, for it was wretchedly printed on wrapping paper. Having an idle hour or so one day, he read the work and was at once struck by the elements of popularity in it, and it was published by the firm. Every one will remember the success of this story, and how it was followed by a long series by the same author. Before the accident that led to the publication of "Joseph II." Muhlbach's novels had been offered to nearly every publisher in New York, the Appletons among the number, and refused.

Two very successful American books are "Seward's Travels Around the World," and "Gen. Sherman's Memoirs." Gen. Sherman, Mr. Appleton says, is as fast a writer as he is a talker, and he seldom has to correct his manuscript.

"I should like," said Mr. Appleton, taking up a pencil and sheet of paper, "to show you the cost of book-making. I don't believe that people, when they buy a book for 50 cents, have any idea of the capital invested to bring it down at that price. For example, it cost us $138,000 to publish 'Picturesque America,' and that without adding the cost of printing. To be sure we made a good profit on it. Forty thousand copies were sold and $2,400,000 turned in by our agents. An even more profitable venture was the 'American Cyclopedia,' for which the public has paid $5,760,000. Of course, all of this is not profit. It costs an immense amount of money to carry on our factory in Williamsburg. We employ 600 hands, and pay out $293,470 in wages annually."

Cistern Water.

"I've been a workin' like all possessed to-day," said Col. Solon, as he borrowed a paper from the local editor.

"So; what have you been doing?"

"My wife, ye see, has the rheumatics; an' 'twas wash-day; so she sez to me, sez she, 'Solomon, the water in the cistern is out, an' I can't wash without cistern water, and my rheumatics is so bad that I can't fetch it.' Sufficiently profundicated, sez I, 'Sally, I'll bring the water.' An' I brought twenty-five pails of water from my neighbor's well an' poured it into that cistern, an' then I pumped every blamed drop out for the washin'. Mighty hard work."

"Why, in the name of common sense, didn't you put the water in the tubs, instead of turning it into the cistern and pumping it out again?" said the editor.

"Coz," said the Colonel, bristling up, "coz, in the name of common sense, she had to have cistern water to wash with, yer darned fool."

CENTAUR
KENTAUROS
LINIMENT
always Cures and never Disappoints. The world's great Pain-Reliever for Man and Beast. Cheap, quick and reliable.

PITCHER'S CASTORIA is not Narcotic. Children grow fat upon, Mothers like, and Physicians recommend CASTORIA. It regulates the Bowels, cures Wind Colic, allays Feverishness, and destroys Worms.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Bilious Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite—they will tell you by taking

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c.,

IT HAS NO EQUAL.

This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

PURELY VEGETABLE.

If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

It is given with safety and the happiest results to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest-Selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per ct. National Publish'g Co., St. Louis, Mo.

PILES fully described with scientific mode of cure. Prof. Harris' illustrated pamphlet sent free on application. HARRIS REMEDY CO., Manf'g Chemists, 8th & Market Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

The Book of the Million

A large, new and complete Guide to Wedlock, containing, with many others, the following chapters: A Competent Womanhood, Selection of Wife, Temperaments, compatible and incompatible, Sterility in Women, cause and treatment, Advice to Bridegroom, Advice to Husbands, Advice to Wives, Prostitution, its causes, Celibacy and Matrimony compared, [illegible]

"THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER" On Syphilis, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Varicocele, &c., also on Spermatorrhea, Sexual Debility, and Impotency, from Self-Abuse and Excesses, causing Seminal Emissions, [illegible]

"Medical Advice," Lecture on Manhood & Womanhood, 10c.

FOR ONE DOLLAR we send all three of the above described books, nicely bound in one volume, containing 500 pages, and over 100 illustrations. The combined volume is positively the most popular Medical Book published. [illegible]

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY. Established in 1847, cures chronic diseases and complicated cases, and diseases resulting from impure sexual associations, self-abuse or sexual excesses. Patients treated by mail and express. Where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is free and invited. Questions to be answered by patients desiring treatment mailed free to any address on application. For books or treatment address DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Seminal Pastille

An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Unsolicited testimony to the Efficacy of Prof. Harris' Seminal Pastilles, taken from Letters received from Patrons:

[illegible]

From a Physician and Surgeon.

[illegible]

From a Druggist.

[illegible]

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., MAY 20, 1880

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,

THOMAS A. HENDRICKS.

Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

"NO SOLID SOUTH, NO SOLID NORTH, BUT A SOLID UNION."

Democratic County Central Committee

OFFICERS.

Wm. L. Blair, Chairman.
Theo. Reed, Secretary.
J. J. Van Auken, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Wm L. Blair, Jas. A. Barns, S. S. Shutt, J. Wm. Wagner, T. F. Jordan, Guy Plumb.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEEMEN.

C. M. Merica, Butler township.
J. J. Walter, Jackson township.
T. S. Murray, Concord township.
Geo. A. Mann, Newville township.
Jacob Christoffle, Stafford township.
Geo. W. Maxwell, Wilmington township.
M. Houston, Auburn precinct.
D. Y. Husselman, Waterloo precinct.
W. J. Frederick, Keyser township.
L. D. Britton, Richland township.
J. M. Brumback, Fairfield township.
Fred. Waterman, Smithfield township.
T. H. Tomlinson, Franklin township.
B. F. Cornelius, Troy township.

Joint Representative Convention.

Delegates from the counties of DeKalb, Noble, and Elkhart, the same constituting a joint representative district, will meet in convention at Kendallville, Ind.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 6th, 1880,

for the purpose of nominating a democratic candidate for joint representative for the counties named. The ratio of representation will be one delegate for each 100 votes cast for Gov. Jas. D. Williams in 1876, and one for each fraction of 50 or over, as follows:

DeKalb county	28
Noble "	21
Elkhart "	34
Total	86

By order of the district committee.

Judicial Convention.

The democracy of Noble, DeKalb and Steuben counties, constituting the 35th judicial district, will meet in delegate convention at Kendallville, Ind., on

FRIDAY AUGUST 6th, 1880,

for the purpose of nominating a judge of the circuit court and prosecuting attorney. The ratio of representation will be the same as that in the joint representative convention, which will be held at the same time and place.

By order of the district committee.

The DeKalb county delegation to the democratic state convention will stop at the Occidental hotel. Rooms have been secured at special rates.

A rumor is abroad in the land that if Tilden and Grant are nominated by their respective parties, Hon. David Davis will sweep the country at the head of an independent ticket.

John Kelley cannot rule the democratic party of the country.—Fort Wayne Sentinel.

Granted; neither can Samuel J. Tilden; neither can the Fort Wayne Sentinel.

The Fort Wayne Sentinel grudgingly admits that "Gov. Hendricks will have the united support of the Indiana delegation at Cincinnati. He is entitled to this compliment as the acknowledged time-honored leader of the Indiana democracy."

The Kendallville News is still preaching Tilden and him crucified. The man who has more regard for an individual than he has for the party he claims to support, is not entitled to the name of democrat.

The more the Fort Wayne Sentinel misrepresents the sentiment of the northern Indiana democracy, the more the democratic press will have to say against Tilden. Sentiment manufactured in New York, is not well adapted to Indiana democrats.

Chief-Justice Sanford E. Church, of New York, died at his residence in Albany last Friday afternoon. Judge Church has been frequently mentioned in connection with the presidency, he being a statesman of acknowledged ability. His death was sudden and greatly surprised his many friends.

It is suggested by an enthusiastic Tilden exchange that Tilden and fraud ought to be the rallying-cry in the next campaign. The same paper might have added with propriety that banners with "Fraud" and "Tilden" inscribed upon them would then be in good demand, as both parties would consider them appropriate.

Mr. Tilden has proven that he can carry Indiana. The proof of the pudding is the eating.—Decatur Democrat.

Mr. Tilden has proven no such thing. The result in Indiana in 1876 cannot be attributed to the personal popularity of Mr. Tilden, neither can it be attributed to the use of his money, for he never contributed a single dollar for the campaign in this state after he secured the nomination, whatever he may have done before. On the other hand, Mr. Hendricks' final reluctant acceptance of the second place on the ticket so electrified the democratic party that the whole state was ablaze with enthusiasm. In 1876 the people of Indiana believed Tilden to be a strong man and an available candidate; to-day the people of Indiana believe exactly the reverse, and thousands of Indiana democrats have publicly declared that they will never support him; hence, we still believe that Indiana is a doubtful state with Tilden at the head of the democratic ticket.

The Position of Indiana Democracy Upon the Presidential Question—For President, Thomas A. Hendricks.

The following communication from the pen of Hon. W. W. Carson, appeared in the Fort Wayne Sentinel of last Tuesday:

"Indiana has always occupied a high position in the national ranks of the democratic party as a reliable state, devoted to the principles which lie at the foundation of a democratic government, based upon the will of a majority of voters expressed through the ballot-box, and relying upon the integrity and intelligence of the people to correct all errors and abuses in the administration of public affairs. Her democracy has been of the Jeffersonian school, which demonstrated the safety with which 'error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it,' recognizing the great idea of Mr. Madison in his memorable address to the people of the United States, 'that the rights of America for which she had contended, and which she claimed to have secured by the revolution were not the exclusive franchise of a few whom the providence of Almighty God had left her at the close of the struggle, and of their posterity, but were the rights of human nature which the builders of thrones had rejected, but which the architects of this republic had set at the 'head of the corner' which was invested with a sublimity, a majesty, a world, while beneficence that certified the divinity of its origin; and which, being an emanation from the Deity, comprehended all the nations of the earth, all the children of men.

To carry out and uphold the grand and glorious idea set forth in those immortal sentiments of Mr. Adams, Indiana democracy has ever placed itself upon the epitome of principles enunciated by that apostle of human rights and liberties, Thomas Jefferson, in his inaugural address upon assuming the duties of president of the United States in 1801, and although familiar to most readers will even now bear repetition, and may not be inapplicable to the present condition of parties in the United States. He says:

'About to enter, fellow citizens, on the exercise of duties which comprehend everything dear and valuable to you, it is proper that you should understand what I deem the essential principles of our goverment, and consequently those which ought to shape its administration. I will compress them within the narrowest compass they will bear, stating the general principle, but not all its limitations.'

'Equal and exact justice to all men of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political; peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations—entangling alliances with none. The support of the state governments in all their rights, as the most competent administration for our domestic concerns, and the surest bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies; the preservation of the general government in its whole constitutional vigor, as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad; a jealous care of the right of elections by the people; a mild and safe corrective of abuses which are lopped off by the sword of revolution (now rebellion) when peaceable remedies are unprovided: absolute acquiescence in the decisions of the majority, the vital principle of republics from which there is no appeal but force, the vital principle and immediate parent of despotism; the supremacy of the civil over the military authority; economy in the public expenses that labor might be lightly burdened; the honest payment of our debts and the sacred preservation of the public faith; encouragement of agriculture and of commerce, its handmaid; the diffusion of information and arraignment of all abuses at the bar of public reason; the freedom of religion, freedom of the press, freedom of person under the protection of the habeas corpus and trial by juries impartially selected.'

The principles thus enunciated have ever been the polar star of the Indiana democracy. They were elicited by the positions assumed by the federal party in the passage of alein and sedition and naturalization laws, under the administration of the elder Adams, which Mr. Jefferson considered to be passed by an unwarrantable usurpation of undelegated power, contrary to the constitution of the United States and in conflict with the declaration of independence, upon the grounds of complaint against King George. 'He had endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the naturalization of foreigners, refusing to pass laws to encourage their migration hither.'

To maintain these principles the Indiana democracy will be found in the foremost ranks of the democrats throughout this glorious inheritance, ready to do battle against all usurpations of undelegated power, however insidious may be its approaches.

The republican party has been a party of attack and usurpation. Its past history is of too recent a date to be forgotten; its war measures have been discussed and justified as war measures could only be justified. Until recently it has had control of every department of the national government, the legislative, executive and judicial; the army and navy have been under its control. Constitutional restrictions have been disregarded; usurpations of undelegated powers have been sanctioned by its judicial tribunals and executed by its federal officers. States rights have been obliterated and the sanctity of the ballot-box invaded by the most glaring outrage, under pretence of constitutional law and authority. By the civil-rights act it has sought to subject the judicial officers of the states to federal authority for the execution of their official duty, as defined by the state laws to which they owed their official position, and under the construction given to the 14th and 15th amendments by the supreme court of the United States, if sanctioned by the people, the states will be robbed of the last vestige of political rights worth having and reduced to mere corporations subservient to the will and caprice of the centralized power of congress. This must not be permitted, and so says Gov. Hendricks. In his letter accepting the nomination of the St. Louis convention in 1876, he warns us on this subject, and says: 'The first work of reform must evidently be the restoration of the normal operation of the constitution of the United States, with all its amendments. The necessities of war cannot be pleaded in a time of peace. The right of self-government as guaranteed by the constitution must be everywhere restored, and the centralized imperialism which has been practiced must be done away with or the first principles of the republic will be lost.'"

Give Us a Western Man.

The following communication from a western man to the Cincinnati Enquirer so nearly expresses our views that we give it a place in our columns without further comment:

When the democratic party stops catering to eastern interests and seeks to establish a party with a people whose interests are identical, then will the mighty west put its shoulder to the wheel, and then if the old democratic wagon isn't hoisted out of the mud and on to a solid foundation 'suthin will break.' Get out from among the factories and great shops of the east, wherein the sun never shines and the men have pale faces, to establish your party. The men there are not free; they know their rights, but once in a while there comes a time when they are not free, and they dare not assert them. 'Vote the ticket,' says the canvasser who calls upon them, as they go to vote. 'See that you do not lose your place here,' whispers his companion at his side. Principle upon the one side, bread and butter upon the other. It's a hard fight, Mr. Editor, and thousands of them yearly stay away from the polls, fearing to enter it. Let us not ask him to do our fighting for us; let us take this load off his shoulders; let us summon another army to battle. Give us a nomination that will suit western democrats; give us a nomination—a man they love—and the great Mississippi Valley will rally to him. The voters there are not to be coerced. Besides, Mr. Editor, are there not western men who could carry New York? Why not? We have honored their great men with nominations since 1860. Look at the array: McClellan, Seymour, Greeley, Tilden. Now let them honor some of our great men. Give some of our men a chance. Let the people of the great west, under their own leaders, wage the battle. The army of the east has led the assault four different times, and each time has been repulsed. Now give the other wing a chance. Let us make one more grand assault to capture the fort lost in November, 1860. This is all we want to insure peace, and to do this we ask the 'Great Council,' which is soon to hold its session in Cincinnati, to give us a western man as commander-in-chief, and then, with western boys—boys who know how to fight, and who ain't afraid to fight—we will rally around that commander, and at the word of command, with a rush and a yell that will wake alike the denizens of the mouth and source of the 'Great River' well—we will 'get there,' and don't you forget it."

KELLEY'S BOOM FOR LIEUT. GOVERNOR.

Look Out for a Roaring Canvass.

[Warsaw Union.]

It thunders all along the line that Freeman Kelley, of DeKalb county, has an eye upon the nomination for lieutenant-governor on the democratic ticket. Should Mr. Kelley receive the nomination, look out for a roaring canvass. He will pour heavy grape-shot and canister into the republican party, and before the campaign is ended he will have dusted the jacket of many a radical stumper.

A Power on the Stump.

[Elkhart Democrat.]

The Hon. Freeman Kelley, of DeKalb county, is spoken of in connection with the lieutenant-governorship. Mr. Kelley would undoubtedly make a strong candidate, as he is a power on the stump and never fails to draw a large crowd. If the northern part of the state is to be allowed the privilege of naming the candidate, we would as soon it should be Mr. Kelley as any one we know of.

A Forcible Speaker.

[Valparaiso Messenger.]

Hon. Freeman Kelley, of DeKalb county, is a candidate for lieutenant-governor, subject to the decision of the democratic state convention, June 9. Mr. Kelley is a good democrat, a forcible speaker, and very popular with the workingmen of the party.

"Shameless Jeremander."

"He referred to the magnificent victory of the democrats in the state in 1878, and glorified in the shameless Jeremander which disfranchised thousands of republicans to-day, etc."—Auburn Republican.

The above has reference to the speech delivered by the chairman of the democratic congressional convention at Auburn. We think it would puzzle our contemporary considerably to demonstrate that the present apportionment is a "shameless Jeremander" (Gerrymander), while on the other hand it would be a very easy matter for us to prove by facts and figures that it is the fairest and most impartial that Indiana has had for twenty years.—Ligonier Banner.

Democratic County Convention.

Delegates from the several townships in DeKalb county will meet at the court-house, in Auburn,

Saturday, June 5, 1880,

at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the following offices, to-wit:

Representative in the legislature.
County clerk.
County auditor.
County treasurer.
County sheriff.
County recorder.
County surveyor.
County coroner.
County commissioner, north district.
County commissioner, southwest district.

The convention will transact such other business as may come before it.

SELECTION OF DELEGATES.

In accordance with a resolution passed at the last meeting of the county central committee, all democrats and others who intend to support the ticket nominated by the convention above named, are requested to meet at the usual voting place in their respective township or precinct,

Saturday, May 29, 1880.

at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the county convention, in accordance with the following apportionment, based upon the number of democratic votes cast for secretary of state at the last state election:

Butler	township	10	delegates.
Jackson	"	19	"
Concord	"	21	"
Newville	"	8	"
Stafford	"	7	"
Wilmington	"	19	"
Auburn precinct		30	"
Waterloo	"	19	"
Richland township		17	"
Fairfield	"	21	"
Smithfield	"	18	"
Franklin	"	9	"
Troy	"	8	"
Keyser	"	26	"
Total,		214.	"

The democrats of each township and precinct will at the same time, (May 29), appoint one delegate to the judicial convention to be held at Kendallville on the 6th day of August, 1880.

By order of the committee.

W. L. Blair, Chairman.
Theo. Reed, Secretary.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The announcement of the names of candidates for county offices will be inserted under this head for $2.00 IN ADVANCE; no announcement to exceed six lines in length without extra charge. All announcements are made subject to the decision of the democratic county convention.

REPRESENTATIVE.

CLERK.

AUDITOR.

EDITORS COURIER: The democrats of Franklin township desire you to announce the name of Thomas H. Tomlinson, of the township named, as a candidate for county auditor.

The many friends of John W. Dills, of Concord township, will present his name to the democratic county convention as a candidate for county auditor.

TREASURER.

SHERIFF.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Please announce that Mr. Philip Fiecub, of Waterloo precinct, will be presented by his friends as a candidate for sheriff of DeKalb county.

J. J. VanAuken's friends will present his name, and ask that he be nominated for Sheriff by the democrats of DeKalb county, in convention assembled.

RECORDER.

The democrats of Jackson township present the name of Samuel E. High, and ask that he be nominated for county recorder.

We are authorized to announce that James Quince, of Butler township, will be a candidate in the county convention for the office of recorder.

Mr. George E. Mann, of Newville township, is named by his many democratic friends in that township as a candidate for county recorder.

SURVEYOR.

Mr. George L. Leasing, of Auburn precinct, has been named by his democratic friends as a candidate for county surveyor.

The many democratic friends of Amos F. Foltz, of Auburn precinct, announce his name for county surveyor, believing him to be well qualified for that position.

CORONER.

COMMISSIONER, NORTH DISTRICT.

COMMISSIONER, SOUTHWEST DISTRICT.

Mr. Edward Kelham, the present incumbent, is named as a candidate for re-nomination for county commissioner in the southwest district.

$100 Reward

For any case of

CATARRH

That cannot be cured with

HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an INTERNAL REMEDY ACTING UPON THE BLOOD, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of HALL'S CATARRH CURE is NOT CURED OR BENEFITTED more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

PRICE 75 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists.

LAWNS.

300 pieces of new and choice styles Summer Lawns in side bands, figures, striped and plain colors, 10 cents, 12½ continued 15 cents per yard; also new Linen Lawns, Organdies, Jaconets, Mouzie Cloths, Foulards, Zephyr Ginghams, Seersucker Stripes, Scotch, Cotton and Madras Ginghams. An elegant line to make early selections from.

ROOT & COMPANY.

MATTINGS.

This week new arrivals of China Mattings in fancy styles; white and check Mattings, all widths. Also Napier, cocoa and cane mattings for offices and public buildings in different grades at close prices. Also opening a new lot of Tapestry and Velvet Rugs and Matts, all sizes, in new and choice designs, at old prices.

ROOT & COMPANY.

BROCADE.

SILKS, in black and fancy colors. Rich goods at very moderate prices. Also a large stock of Spring Silks, 50 cents, 60 cents and 75 cents per yard. Fancy Trimmings, Satins and Silks, in all colors and combinations, probably the largest collection in the state, at popular prices.

ROOT & COMPANY.

CREPES.

We keep a full line of Grout's and Courtauld's English Crepes, in all widths and grades, from 60 cents to $3 per yard, and cut them on the or anyway to suit. Also Crepe and Love Veils, hat and arm Crepes. Our stock of Mourning Dress Goods is large and complete in all fabrics; also have full stock of Mourning Hankerchiefs, Gloves, Black Ruchings, etc.

ROOT & COMPANY.

WHITE

GOODS DEPARTMENT full and complete with stripe, check and plain Nainsooks, Victoria and India Mulls, Lace Stripe Piques, soft Cambrics, Terry Cloths, Swisses, white Welts, cord Piques. Also a large and choice stock of the new Swiss Trimmings and Hamburg Edgings in new designs.

ROOT & COMPANY, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The Auburn Fruit-House.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

Sugars Down.

Ligh Brown, 8 cents; Light yellow, 8 1-2 cents; Extra Yellow C, 9 cents; Coffee A 10 cents; Granulated, 11 cents.

Coffees Down.

Good Rio, 15 cents; Best Maracaibo, 20 cents; Fancy Rio, 23 cents.

South Carolina Rice, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; New Prunes, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; A No. 1 Fine-Cut Tobacco, 40, cents; Extra Fine-Cut Tobacco, 50 cents; Plug Tobacco of all brands, very cheap; Parlor Matches, 7c, or 4 for 25 cents; the very best Syrups, 70 cents; Splendid Teas at from 30 to 75 cents.

Fish of all Kinds.

No. 1 White Fish, Family White Fish, Pickerel, Lake Fish, Catfish, Mackerel, Herring, Smoked Halibut, Boneless Codfish, etc., etc., all sold cheap and warranted as represented.

Crocks and Jars of any size at 7 cents a gallon.

Entrance on Seventh or Eighth Streets.

Frank A. Hoff.

KIBLINGER & CO.

We are always busy behind the counters, in the ware-house, and on 1st, 2d and 3rd floors, selling Hardware, Nails, Doors, Sash, Glass, Paints and Oils by the wagon-load. Call on us when in want of anything in the Hardware line. We will sell you cheaper than the lowest. Thanks for past patronage.

KIBLINGER & CO.

Notice to Contractors

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THE board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will, at the time and places named below, let to the lowest and best responsible bidder, the construction of certain grading and filling on the following roads, and the digging of certain ditches, to-wit:

On road near A. Hartel's, in Jackson township, at 10 o'clock a. m. Tuesday, May 25, 1880; on road near Philip Grube's, in Jackson township, at 1 o'clock p. m. on same day; on road near Wm. Fountain's, in Keyser township, at 10 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, May 26th; on road near —— Rogers', in Fairfield township, at 3 o'clock, p. m., on same day; on Anthony ditch, in Smithfield township, at 10 o'clock a. m., Thursday, May 27; at the county [illegible], on the Thompson ditch, in Smithfield township, at 1 o'clock p. m. same day; on [illegible] road, Stafford township, at 10 o'clock a. m., Friday, May 28th; at [illegible] bridge, in Stafford township, at 1 o'clock p. m. same day.

Specifications of said work can be seen at the auditor's office and on the ground at the time of letting. Persons taking said work will be required to give a good and sufficient bond for the faithful performance of the same. The board reserves the right to reject any or all bids. By order of the board.

Attest: A. [illegible], Auditor.

May 10 1880.

Notice of Administration.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THE undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Rudolph Sechler, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

S. S. [illegible], Administrator.
[illegible] Spencerville, Indiana.
April 28, 1880.

Application for License.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN TO THE CITIZENS of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county at their next regular session, to be held at the court-house in said county, commencing on Monday, the 7th day of June, 1880, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in less quantities than a quart at a time, with the privilege of having the same drunk on the premises where sold. The premises on which I desire to sell are located as follows: Commencing at the north-east corner of lot number twenty-seven (27), in the original plat of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, running thence west twenty-three and one third (23⅓) feet thence north to Sixth street, thence east twenty-three and one-third (23⅓) feet, thence south along the east line of said lot number twenty-seven (27) to the place of beginning.

[illegible] Thomas [illegible].

Administrators Sale.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE undersigned administrator of the estate of Rudolph Sechler, deceased, late of DeKalb county, Indiana, will offer for sale at public outcry, at the late residence of said decedent, in Concord township, of said county, on a large portion of the personal property of said estate, consisting of horses, cattle, hogs, farming implements, sheep, grain, hay and various other articles.

THE THIRD DAY OF JUNE, 1880,

TERMS:

Sums of three dollars and under, cash; over three dollars, a credit until June 3rd, 1881, the purchaser giving note with interest, waiving valuation laws, and with approved security. Sale commences at 10 o'clock a. m.

May 11, 1880.
79 1w

S. S. [illegible], Administrator.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

THE ANGEL OF DEATH.

Another Friend Gone Home.

The saddest duty the writer has had to perform in many years, now lies before him,—that task being to record the breaking of another link in the golden chain of friendship—a chain that had gained in strength from a long period of intimacy. It has been said, and we are now more prone to believe it than ever, that "Death loves a shining mark," and no more mournful realization of this truism could have been found by his friends than that of the death of Wilson Hoagland, youngest son of Hon. Pliny Hoagland, of Fort Wayne, which occurred at six o'clock last Thursday morning, at Grand Rapids, Michigan. The immediate and apparent cause of his sudden death was excessive bleeding at the nose, though the primary cause was the affliction with which he had suffered more or less for a number of weeks past—Bright's disease of the kidneys. The surroundings of his death were peculiarly sorrowful, he having left home, seemingly, but to die; not a soul of his family was near him—not one of those he loved best; he expressed a perfect willingness to die, if he could but see his sister, Miss Lizzie, for whom he longed with his dying breath, and who had been telegraphed for and was then on her way to him; but she arrived, alas, too late!

Wilson Hoagland, though still a young man,—being only about twenty-five years of age—was one of nature's noblemen, possessed of those superior qualities of heart and mind which favorably impressed even the stranger and endeared him to those who knew him best; he was a general favorite in the society with which he mingled, and, by his genial bearing and gentlemanly courtesy to each alike, he had won universal popularity, and every one who met him was his friend.

The funeral took place Saturday afternoon last, from his home in Fort Wayne, and the universal sorrow there manifested, the unusual attendance at the funeral, the handsome floral tributes from many affectionate friends, all gave abundant evidence of the esteem and regard felt for him by a saddened community.

"Friend after friend departs,—
Who hath not lost a friend?
There is no union here of hearts
That finds not here an end."

For Wilson's immediate relatives—father, three sisters and two brothers—our heart, in common with those of all others, bleeds in sympathy, while we fain would extend to them that solace which none can give. They only feel that Wilson has left them—that his soul has gained the glorious Haven of Rest, while his body lies peacefully sleeping in Lindenwood cemetery, the beautiful City of the Dead.

Too Sensitive.

Some Teutonic gentlemen at Butler, or one in particular, have taken exceptions and become greatly incensed at a local squib which appeared in a recent issue of the COURIER, to the effect that a car-load of Dutch emigrants had passed through town on their way to Butler, where they would probably locate and start a sauer-kraut foundry. We may say, by way of explanation and in our own behalf, that we have no desire to hurt any person's feelings in the slightest degree; on the contrary, we are disposed to be courteous and friendly to each alike, while studiously avoiding the publication of any personal matter calculated to give offense—except in the cases of scoundrels and two-faced individuals whose acts require ventilation for the good of the community. As far as the above item is concerned, it has no local reference to any person or persons; we have full as much respect for Germans, as a class, as for people of any other nationality, and the trifling squib above alluded to would have been published just as readily, and with the same spirit of good humor, if the people had been Scotch, Irish, American, or of any other nationality. It strikes us as supremely absurd for anybody to make such a mountain of a mole-hill, while we are mortified to know that there are persons living in that vicinity who are either too obtuse to understand an item of that character, or too sensitive to accept it as it was given—with the utmost good feeling.

Be Candid with Them.

When the several candidates who are now asking a nomination at the hands of the democrats of this county ask your support and that of your township, be frank enough to give them the situation as it seems to you. Do not encourage them to continue in the race when you know there is no chance for them; if you are satisfied that the candidate cannot be nominated, tell him so; if you think he cannot be elected if nominated, tell him so; if you think he is not qualified for the position he seeks, tell him so; and in each case give him the reasons upon which you base your opinion. It is not treating candidates fairly to tell each of them as they come along that you regard their chances as good. You are not doing justice to your party when you encourage men to seek a nomination whom you are satisfied in your own mind are not strong men. Be candid with them; tell them what you think and what the public thinks.

—Next Monday is show day; don't miss it.

—Bartine's five clown show, next Monday.

—W. H. Kiblinger sells hardware—lots of it.

—Wall paper cheap at Davenport's drug store. 14-tf.

—No services in the Methodist church next Sunday.

—Auburn will have a machine shop and foundry, all the same.

—Go to McQuiston & Ralston's for spring shawls and linen suits. 20 3w

—For white goods and embroideries go to McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—For building hardware, come to Auburn and see W. H. Kiblinger.

—Secure your strawberries before they are all gone. Hoff has them.

—Patronize the ladies of the Presbyterian church next Tuesday evening.

—W. H. Kiblinger handles the Alaska refrigerator, the best in the market.

—Get strawberries and cream at the Presbyterian church next Tuesday evening.

—Wire cloth, for screen doors and windows, can be had at W. H. Kiblinger's.

—If you want a grain cradle, rake or fork, go to Kiblinger's and get a good one.

—Come to town next Monday afternoon or evening and attend the five clown show.

—1,000 yards of French gingham for sale at eight cents a yard, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—The hungry potato-bug is on the war-path some more. He came in on his little buggy.

—S. G. Swineford is a genius. His mind is ever busy with some inventive scheme of his own.

—5,000 yards of new-style calicos, at seven and eight cents a yard, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—2,000 yards of dress goods—good styles—from 10 to 15 cents per yard, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—It will pay you to see Davenport's patterns before you purchase wall paper and window shades. 14-tf.

—Bargains in bleached and brown muslins, toweling and table-linen, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—The happiest results invaribly attend the taking of "Sellers' Celebrated Liver Pills." 25c. per box.

—Bartine's five clown show is said to be first-class. The proprietor only employs the best performers.

—The first strawberries of the season can be had at the Presbyterian church basement next Tuesday evening.

—See the juvenile female brass band and orchestra with Bartine's show, which will exhibit in Auburn next Monday.

—The new temple and opera-house at Fort Wayne will be an elegant structure—if they ever get it constructed.

—S. Hollister and wife returned last Friday evening from their prolonged and pleasant visit with relatives in Virginia.

—Will. P. Breen and Charles H. Aldrich, two of Fort Wayne's attorneys, were in town attending to some legal business Monday.

—Read the line at the bottom of the first page, and when you come to the "Old-Settlers" re-union, take dinner at the Stamets house.

—Nauseous medicines seem all that the doctors can think of. Try "Sellers' Cough Syrup," and you will be delighted beyond measure.

—Go to Frank A. Hoff's for all kinds of vegetables, such as green peas and beans, radishes, onions, lettuce, cucumbers, etc., etc.

—Tom Mays and W. L. Penfield were at Pleasant Lake all day Sunday, and the question now arises, What could they have been doing?

—COURIERS of March 11th, April 1st and April 8th, 1880, are missing from our files; if some subscriber will furnish copies of the dates named, we will consider it a favor. tf

—Remember that the COURIER office employs one first-class workman continually on job work alone. Anything you want in that line will receive prompt attention.

—S. U. Tarney and wife left Tuesday morning for Indianapolis, where the former was in attendance upon the meeting of the grand lodge. They are expected home to-morrow.

—The DeKalb county Sabbath-school association will hold its fifteenth annual convention at the U. B. church, Waterloo, Ind., Tuesday and Wednesday, June 8th and 9th, 1880.

—Two pairs of "euchreists" were pitted against each other at Miss Frankie Ryan's last evening. It was simply a friendly contest, wherein one pair came out scandalously scooped.

—Mrs. T. C. Mays is at present visiting at Greenville, Pa., having departed thence from Auburn last Thursday. She will also visit relatives at Canton, O., and will return home in about three weeks.

—One day last week Coop. Ralston was made a temporary deputy-sheriff, for the purpose of putting a straight-jacket on a crazy man at the poor farm; he accomplished his purpose, too, but the experience he met with there has killed all the desire he may have had to run for sheriff.

—The business of Shaffer & Bush must be booming, as they have opened a branch harness-making establishment next to the COURIER office, over Hague's boot-and-shoe store.

—Chas. A. Munson, of Ft. Wayne, the popular sheriff of Allen county, was in town a short time Tuesday, on the trail of a horse-thief. Thieves stand a poor show when he is after them.

—Rev. H. J. Norris leaves to-day for Cincinnati, where he will attend the general conference. As he cannot return until Monday, there will be no preaching in the Methodist church next Sabbath.

—Lakeside park will be opened and dedicated to-morrow (Friday) at Pleasant Lake, and a number of Auburn folks will be on hand. If you can spare the time, take it in, for it will be a day of pleasure.

—Township trustees will please bear in mind that the only complete set of records and blanks manufactured in Indiana for the use of township and school officers, are on sale at the COURIER office.

—The editor of the republican assumes in his paper of last week that he is acquainted with our parents, but while down home last week we asked them about it and ascertained that they had never heard of him.

—Hereafter, until the winter term of the various schools opens, no more school reports will be published in the COURIER. The summer schools are so scarce and thinly attended as to make their reports of but little importance.

—We are in possession of just about the richest joke of this season, and Will. Shaffer, of Davenport's drug-store, is the subject of it; but Will. purchased our eternal secrecy with a cigar, and we couldn't be hired to divulge it.

—If it were not for John Leasure's numerous afflictions, the COURIER would miss many interesting local notices; this time it is a wretched cold in his head, which he thinks he contracted Saturday evening while drinking a glass of beer.

—Mr. F. Gibson has started a new bakery and restaurant at the old Porter stand, where you can always find fresh bread, rolls, cakes and pies, and good warm meals. A full line of canned goods always on hand. A few day-boarders taken at reasonable rates.

—The little gathering at W. J. Austin's, last Thursday evening, was a gorgeous success in every detail,—no pains having been spared to make it enjoyable for all. The geniality of both host and hostess put the guests at their ease, and the result was a happy one.

—T. J. Cuppy, John L. Davis, F. E. Davenport, J. E. Rose and J. J. VanAuken attended the meeting of Apollo commandery No. 19, K. T., at Kendallville, Friday night of last week. They returned the same night, by rail to Waterloo and by horse-power from that point home.

—All persons in need of wall paper and window-shades are respectfully invited to call and examine the fine stock on exhibition at the Physicians' drug-store. The styles are the latest; the quality of the best, and the prices cheap as the cheapest. It will pay you to go and see for yourself. 19-4t.

—The lately-published history of this county gives Auburn a population of "about sixteen hundred," while that of Waterloo, it states, is "fully sixteen hundred and fifty." That's pretty good, too; but wait until the census of 1880 is completed, when a surprise party will be given to somebody.

—Frank Davenport, Tom Mays, W. J. Austin, Jno. L. Davis, Louis Johnson and Jim Potter—an even half dozen—tackled some fishing-tackle early yesterday morning and "cut stick" for Churubusco. The result of their piscatorial excursion will be made public hereafter, but it will probably be "fisherman's luck."

—The ordinary hen takes a peculiar and fiendish delight in digging up garden seeds that have just been buried, but Joe Rainier's are extraordinary chickens; they are "not that kind of a rooster." He says he has as flourishing a garden as any man in Auburn, though about a hundred chicks run loose on it all the the time.

—Circuit court will convene next Monday. Judge Lowry will occupy the bench during the first week, commencing May 24th, and the third week, commencing June 7th; Judge McClellan will also transact business the first and second weeks of the term. It is expected that all the cases on the docket will be disposed of within the three weeks.

—The Presbyterian society will give a strawberry festival on next Tuesday evening in the basement rooms of the church. A meeting to make arrangements for the festival will be held in the Presbyterian church, Thursday evening after prayer-meeting. A good attendance is desired.

MRS. J. E. ROSE, Sec'y.

—A small party of Pleasant Lake pleasure-seekers, Tuesday evening, consisted of Dr. Humphrey and Miss Mollie Matheny, Dr. Sears and Miss Nettie Shaffer, Chas. Emanuel and Miss Nellie Wheelock and L. J. Hopkins and wife. Moonlight, love and music were indulged in very extensively on the waters of the lake, and the happy group got home at 11:30 same night.

—List of unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice at Auburn, Ind., for the week ending May 15, 1880:

Fannie Clark, A. F. Vicker,
Jno. and Rebecca Miller, O. F. Packard,
W. S. Marshall, S. M. Davis,
Mary A. Raub,
Agt. Scottish Com'l Ins. Co.

—Mr. Jacob Hose, a farmer living two miles south of Columbia City, is now in DeKalb county searching for a stray two-year-old filly which he believes came this way. The filly is a light bay with star in forehead, right hind foot white to pastern joint, and a good mover. If you know where she is leave word at this office.

—While at Garrett a few evenings ago, we had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of Mr. Thomas Coyle, the gentlemanly ticket and freight agent of the B. & O. railroad. A brief conversation with Mr. Coyle led us to believe that he was familiar with railroad management, and he fully understands how to make himself agreeable to the patrons of the road and the traveling public.

—Frank Copper's brother, D. W. Copper, who has been living here for some time past, met with a painful accident, yesterday morning, at Bengnot's stave-factory. While running a stave-cutter, he got the first finger of his right hand mixed up with the knife, and the finger was chopped off clean and smooth at the second joint, as a result of which he is now taking a lay-off.

—The report of school No. 4, Jackson township, for the month ending May 14, is as follows: Number of scholars enrolled, 24; average daily attendance, 22; names of pupils neither absent or tardy, Clara Freeman, Viola Cool, Jane Freeman, Cora Wood, Jas. Dancer, Geo. Cool, Otho Boren, Jesse Dancer, Bentie Lawhead, John Mutzfelt, Frank Mutzfelt and Martin Wood.

OLIVE NELSON, Teacher.

—A lithographic picture has been circulated in behalf of the "Peerless" reaper and mower, which represents one of these excellent machines with a sturdy tiller of the soil standing beside it, who is saying, with violent demonstrations of earnestness: "Young man, go west! The PEERLESS has scooped them all. No more free dinners and cheap machines for me, you bet" The PEERLESS machine is sold by J. N. Myers & Co., first floor of Odd-Fellows' building.

—The water facilities of Auburn are superior, if properly cultivated, to those of any town in the county, as is conceded by all who have done any experimenting. It may not be generally known, but it is nevertheless a fact, that we already have several artesian wells in town—wells from which the water flows of its own power in abundance—and by adopting the proper means, the cool beverage of mother earth could be made to bubble up wherever desired. Let's have artesian wells and more water.

—A man who traveled on a certain railroad, and who had occasion to go over it quite often, always paid his fare in cash on the train. It became so noticeable that one of the conductors said to him, the other day, "What's the reason you never buy a ticket?" The beautiful frankness of the man's reply was commendable, to say the least. "Well, I'll tell you," said he. "This d—d road did me dirt once, and I made a solemn vow that they'd never get another cent of my money; so I've always paid my fare to the conductors ever since." (Conductor steps hastily across the aisle to get the number of an editor's pass).

Morrell Brothers & McComb.

The gentlemen who constitute the above-named firm are Mr. Ed. Morrell, formerly with J. H. Bass & Co., of Ft. Wayne, Mr. James Morrell, who has been running a foundry at Winchester, Indiana, and Mr. James McComb, of Allen county. The first-named is a practical machinist, and one of the best in the state; the second-named is a first-class moulder of long experience, and the last-named is a wood-workman and pattern-maker.

These gentlemen have purchased ground near the Wabash depot, in Auburn, and will at once commence the erection of suitable buildings for a machine-shop, foundry, wood-work shop and saw-mill. It is expected that the shops will be completed in time to repair machinery during the coming harvest, which will be a great convenience to the farmers of DeKalb county. It is not expected that the shops will cost a fortune nor that hundreds of hands will be employed, but the business of the firm will be established upon a solid foundation, with the expectation of eventually assuming large proportions,—such as the citizens of DeKalb county can justly praise. That Auburn is fortunate in securing the location of such an establishment none will doubt, and every property owner and business man in the place should make an effort to secure business for the new enterprise, and help build it up. The gentlemen named come highly recommended as honest industrious, practical mechanics, which in our opinion is of more value than "seven car loads of machinery."

Wanted,

To RENT, a good, large, conveniently-arranged dwelling-house. Also
To PURCHASE, an organ box or case for shipping purposes.
Enquire of Thomas H. Sprott.

Carr's Corners.

—The farmers are busy planting corn this week.

—Mr. James Myers, of Cedarville, Ind., is at present visiting at Mr. James Swisher's.

—Two of our young ladies ran a race with two gents, last week, and say that they beat them. How is it, Link?

—Cedar Creek Sabbath-school is increasing rapidly in numbers. About sixty persons were in attendance last Sabbath.

—John Shugers had a fine large barn raised last Thursday. The size of the building is 42 by 80. About sixty persons attended the raising.

—The boys like to go fishing. A large number of them pass along the creek, at this point, daily. Some of the boys have caught very fine fish this spring. Hence these fishing excursions.

—Services at the brick school-house, last Sunday evening, were conducted by Rev. Sherrick, who occupied the place of Rev. Robinett. He preached an interesting sermon, and was listened to by a large congregation.

—Last Thursday, after the raising at Shuger's, some of the boys concluded to raise "Berry" and he concluded that they wouldn't. After running him 12 or 15 miles they gave it up. Didn't they look sleepy? C. O. D.

HON. Horace Maynard of Tenn., who is now U. S. Minister at Constantinople, will be appointed by Hayes to succeed Post-master General Key.

The proposed extension of the Eel River branch of the Wabash railway, from Butler to Detroit, is creating some excitement along the proposed route. The citizens of Butler are holding a series of meetings for the purpose of raising money to secure the right of way to the Ohio line, but the indications are that Butler will endeavor to secure a division, without which her citizens will not feel disposed to contribute very liberally, though they may stand in their own light in not using every effort to secure the building of the road.

Look at This!

Best green-gage plums, 16 cents; sugar corn, three cans for twenty-five cents; whortleberries, two cans for twenty-five cents; tomatoes, three cans for twenty-five cents; best tomatoes, two cans for twenty-five cents, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

GLOVES

FOR SALE BY McQUISTON & RALSTON,
AUBURN, IND.

18 3w

Strawberries! Strawberries!

Go to Hoff's and get the first strawberries in the market.

Select School.

Miss Sadie Baldock will teach a two-months term of school in the north-ward school-house, commencing next Monday, May 17. Tuition $1.50 to $1.75.

Over 1,000 Cases of Fits Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind.

Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-tf.

The Morbid Liver.

An eminent clergyman says "that a change of stomach and liver would benefit the morbid sinner almost as much as a change of heart." Yet many attribute an irritable temper and a morose disposition to the ingenious workings of the devil, while they are simply the symptoms of dyspepsia, indigestion, torpid fever, constipation or general or nervous debility, and are readily removed by a few doses of Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative. For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug store. 21-2w.

This Spring!

We are making some extraordinary efforts to do about two-thirds of the

CLOTHING BUSINESS

of this city. Heretofore we have, probably, done one-half of it. With our increased facilities, and having bought largely before the advance, etc., our belief remains unchanged, and we shall act upon it, that the best time to sell cheap is when others sell dear; and that more fortunes have been made by selling at low than high prices. Call and see the most complete stock of

Men's Clothing,
Boy's Clothing,
Children's Clothing,
Hats and Caps,
Gents' Furnishing Goods

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.
C. O. D.
One-price clothiers and displayers of the best goods for the least money.
Opposite North Door Court House.

A MEDLEY OF MERIT.

A FINE DRESS SUIT.

Black Cloth Frock Coat	$10.00
Black Doeskin Pants	5.00
Black Cloth Vest	2.50

PANTS.

Men's Fine Rock or Harris	$5.00
Men's All-Wool	3.00
Boys' Very Durable	2.00

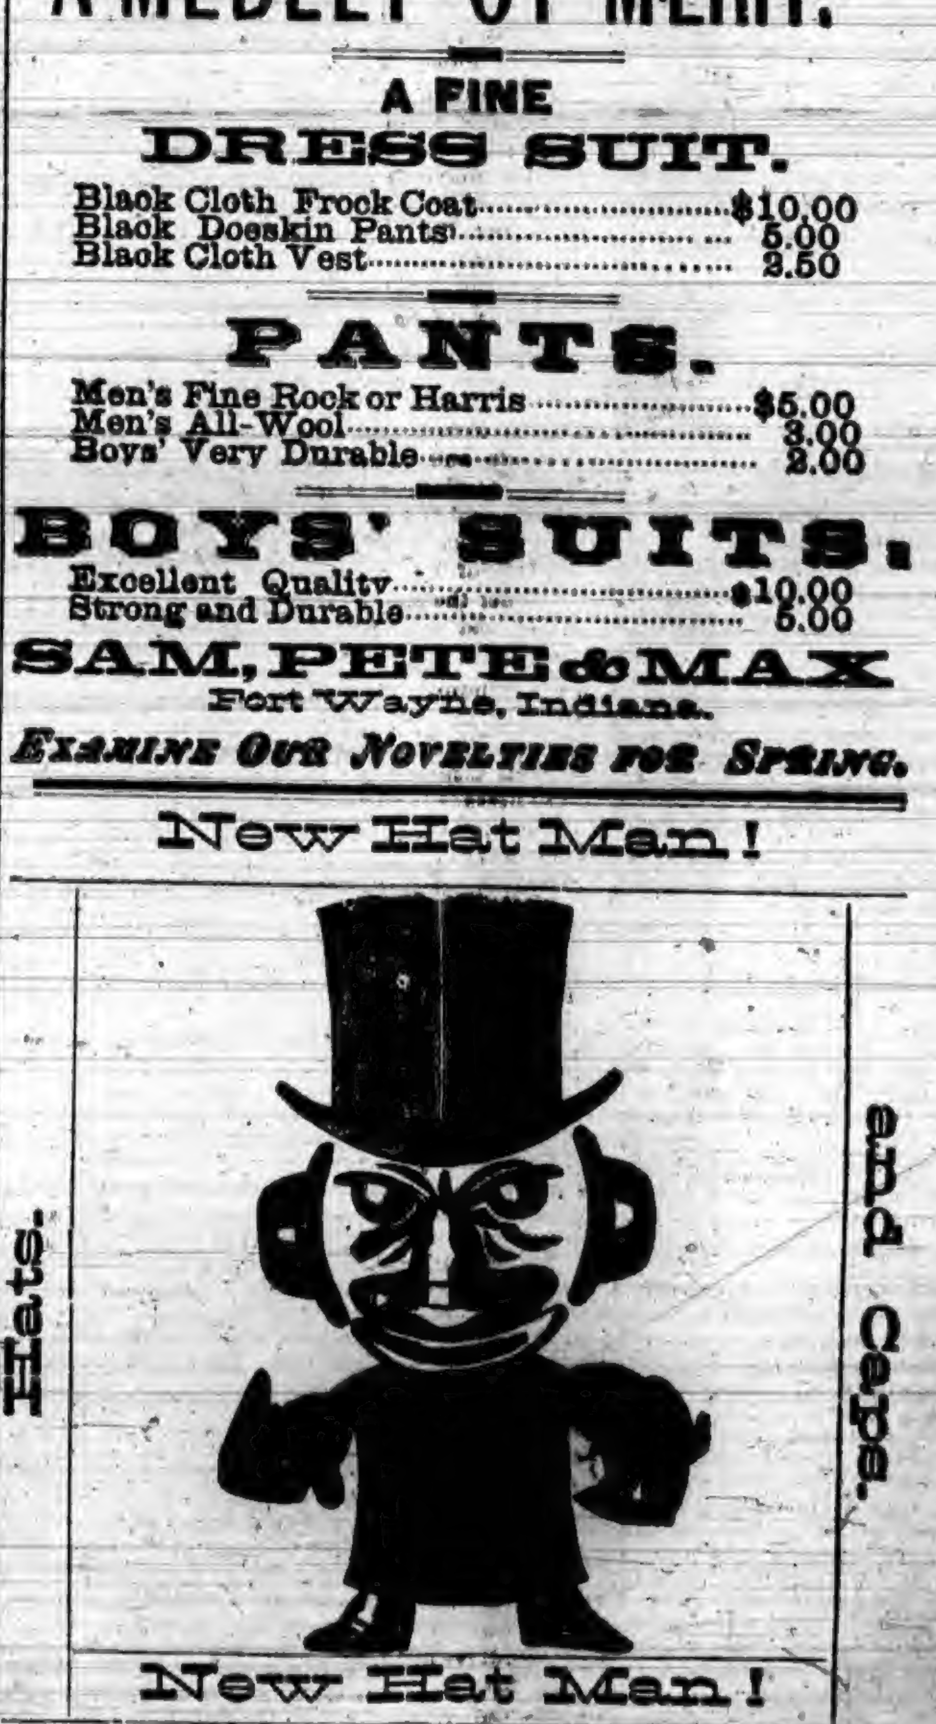
BOYS' SUITS.

Excellent Quality	$10.00
Strong and Durable	5.00

SAM, PETE & MAX
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

EXAMINE OUR NOVELTIES FOR SPRING.

New Hat Man!



New Hat Man!

C. H. YESBERA,
Auburn, Indiana.

THE STORY OF MILITA GREEN.

BY PAUL W. RUSSELL.

Of all the old women that ever were seen,
The crossest and oddest was Milita Green.
She thought it her duty all scandal to know,
And she, in relating, her wisdom would show
By making a story as she would desire.
In spite of the protest of friend or of neighbor,
She'd scatter the news like a telegraph wire;
No recompense ask for her troublesome labor—
Her tongue ne'er was known by the town folks to tire.
One day she fell sick, and she moaned and she groaned;
In accents terrific her pain she intoned;
And joy in the hearts of the people was throned,
For news went about that old Milita Green,
The crossest old woman that ever was seen,
Was crying, and sighing, and probably dying;
And neighbor with neighbor was pleasantly vying
To hasten her off to that beautiful shore
Where old maids are happy and grief is no more;
But she had no notion, with such slight commotion,
Of leaving the earth and crossing the ocean;
And, spite of her moaning and groaning and pains,
Old Milita soon was reviving again.
But, strange to relate, her most pitiful fate,
Her too-faithful tongue was indeed paralyzed.
She moaned her misfortune both early and late,
Well knowing her pleasure and labor was o'er.
She was not the Milita Green as of yore;
Her dark locks grew gray and her looks more profound;
Her silence would many a stranger astound,
Who'd question what sort of a woman was she
Who joined in the revels yet silent would be?
Alas for poor Milita! she could no more
Bring stories of scandal from door unto door;
Her mind could not speak and her tongue would not stir,
And gossip and scandal were weak without her
Assistance; peace brooded on hillside and plain,
And happiness came unto households again.
Her mission was ended; her sorrow was brief.
She laid herself down and she died—died of grief.

MORAL.

You troublesome tattlers, who deem it rare sport,
Or duty to scatter each doubtful report,
Beware! oh beware! there is grief for us all;
The fairest of trees shed their leaves in the fall!
Nor beauty or usefulness ever can save
A rose from destruction, a man from the grave.
Beware! oh beware! how you tell what you've seen,
And think of the fate of poor Milita Green.

ANDERSON, Mass.

THE PASHA OF DAMASCUS.

No country produces so many examples as Turkey of men rising from the lowest station to the highest and greatest. Manners, customs and laws considerably favor these sudden changes of fortune. But of all these examples in the Turkish history none surprises more than the promotion of the Pasha Muhamed el Admi to the Governorship of Damascus.

Muhamed and Murad were the sons of a rich merchant in Constantinople, who died when his children had scarcely passed their boyhood, leaving them in the possession of considerable fortunes. Murad continued the business of his father, and by prudence and industry soon increased his hereditary portion, while Muhamed, in company of idlers and flatterers, spent his share in the most reckless manner, by indulging in all kinds of excesses. It was no wonder that this extravagant life totally ruined Muhamed in a few years, and that when his fortune was gone his gay companions likewise departed. Even his own brother closed his door against him, declaring that he, not having heeded his warnings, did not deserve compassion.

Although this is no uncommon fate of spendthrifts, still the conduct of his former associates, and especially the hard-heartedness of his brother, produced a deep impression upon the good-natured heart of this unhappy youth. But, being gifted with inflexible power of mind, he did not lose courage, but determined to bear his well-merited fate with manly firmness.

At first no other means of subsistence offered itself; he was forced to live on the alms he received from the believers at the mosques. It happened at this time that the Sultan visited one of the chief mosques. He was surrounded by all the high dignitaries of the state, dressed in the most costly and magnificent garments. Near him walked two courtiers having large sums of money, which he, according to custom, distributed among the multitude. Every piece of money was wrapped up in paper; but mixed with these packets were others containing small round pieces of glass, on which the Sultan had written some useful morals or proverbs composed by himself. These lines generally praised poverty, and ridiculed the foolish actions of the overbearing rich. You may well imagine that the mass of people following the monarch were more greedy of the money than of the proverbs.

Muhamed was among the mass. He observed attentively all the movements of the monarch; and when the latter took out of the bags handfuls of gold and silver and strewed it among the multitude, he eagerly grasped at one of the small packets, and then, pushing his way through the crowd, hastened to a solitary spot and opened it. How great was his disappointment when, instead of the expected gold, he found a round piece of glass. He was on the point of throwing it away, when his eyes caught the following words—"Ability and courage have opened the road to distinction to many." Muhamed smiled, considered the words, and, having taken a resolution, carefully placed both paper and glass in his turban, and hastened away, well knowing how to act.

There are traders in Constantinople who lend all kinds of dresses, from the most costly, studded with diamonds and other precious stones, to the simple garment of the dervish. The call for this peculiar trade rests in the fact that many men, suddenly raised from abject poverty to high office, are in immediate need of clothes suitable to their new station. For the same reason these traders furnish those upstarts with horses, servants and other necessary requisites, which they lend for stipulated weekly payment. To one of these traders Muhamed directed his steps, and, possessing a dignified figure, noble features and engaging manners, he, through a fictitious tale, soon persuaded the usurer to provide him with magnificent clothes, fine horses and a richly-dressed body-guard. Within a few hours the poor beggar was changed into an illustrious Pasha, who moved the admiration of the people.

The new Pasha had undertaken to pay for this expensive outfit in the course of a week. He had no money, but certainly an inventive head that, through the costly turban, seemed to have received a double amount of sense and wit. Followed by his body-guard, he galloped to the house of his brother, and, remaining in the court, sent one of his servants with the message to him that Muhamed, his brother, demanded to speak to him. Murad was on the point of returning some angry words, when, just in time, he caught sight of the splendid group in his court-yard. He hastened out of the house to meet his brother and to give him a friendly welcome.

Muhamed, without dismounting, thus addressed his brother:

"Murad, the Sultan, our master, has appointed me Pasha of Damascus; but to properly equip myself for this new dignity I require a considerable amount of money. Lend it to me, and I will thankfully repay you as it becomes a brother and a Pasha."

"May the Lord increase our most gracious master's glory!" replied his delighted brother. "In you Providence raises our family to a never-dreamed-of greatness. Wonderful are the ways of Allah—immeasurable the fountain of his grace! With pleasure I now offer you, Muhamed, my whole fortune—take from it as much as you want. May Allah always take you under his protection!"

During the night Muhamed prepared for his departure. He furnished himself with a body-guard of fifty men, and engaged a few Tartar couriers. On the day following he sent his treasurer to his brother for 20,000 ducats, paid the trader for his outfit, crossed the Bosphorus, and traveled straightway to Damascus.

Muhamed was no common impostor, who only hunted after monetary results; but he had calculated everything beforehand. His liberality, his commanding person, and his noble bearing, in a country where sudden promotion is of daily occurrence, convinced every one, and especially his followers, that he was appointed Pasha of Damascus. At first he traveled quietly to avoid publicity; but the further he went from Stamboul, and the nearer he approached the boundaries of his province, the more openly he showed himself in his new dignity, the more liberally he distributed presents and alms in the towns through which he passed. Everywhere he was received with due respect and laden with presents. When he arrived within three days' march of Damascus he halted and encamped. He then dictated letters to the most eminent emirs of Damascus, announcing that in consequence of treachery the Grand Vizier had fallen into disgrace, and had been strangled, and that his son, the Pasha of Damascus, as an accomplice of his father, had to await the same punishment; that he, Muhamed, appeared as newly-appointed Governor to execute the sentence of the Sultan; and he commanded the emirs to imprison the criminal and to well guard him till his arrival.

Before, however, dispatching these instructions he sent a letter by an express to the Governor of Damascus, secretly informing him that his father had been executed, and that the same fate awaited him when the new Pasha arrived. The consequence of this well-calculated communication was the immediate flight of the poor Governor, who was by no means a favorite of the people. His fear of death was so great that he left everything behind him, even his wives and treasures.

After the emirs had received the dispatches they called a council, and debated upon the steps to be taken for the execution of the received commands. While doing so there appeared a second messenger with a letter of similar contents. Fearing delay and resistance would only endanger themselves, they quickly collected all their partisans, and ordered the inhabitants to take the old Pasha prisoner, and with due respect to receive the approaching one. Some therefore hastened to the palace of the disgraced Governor, beset all exits, and, as they met with no resistance, searched the whole place—but in vain. The furious populace loudly blamed the carelessness of the emirs, and no doubt would have broken out into a rebellion that would have led to the pillaging of the city had not at the very moment from the opposite part of the city cries of rejoicing been heard which saluted the entering Pasha.

The new Governor, surrounded by a splendid suite, proceeded without stopping to the palace, strewing on his way money among the people. The emirs were ready to receive him.

"Where is the guilty one?" demanded Muhamed, fixing his piercing eyes upon the assembly.

His severe, commanding tone created a general consternation. A long silence ensued. At last one of the emirs took courage and said:

"Your Highness will graciously pardon us. The condemned probably received secret communication from Constantinople, in consequence of which he has fled from Damascus, for when we searched the palace he was gone."

"Fled!" cried the amazed Muhamed, with thundering voice. "Miserable slaves! Know ye that my commands are laws of the Sultan, our most gracious master. Away from my presence! Soon you will receive the punishment that falls upon those who, like you, disregard the authority of his Highness."

This threat spread fear and consternation among the emirs. The new Pasha had, through his liberality, already won the common people, and resistance was, therefore, out of the question. Muhamed, however, had the emirs called back one by one, received them most graciously, and presented them with a part of the treasures of his predecessor. In this manner he changed the common fear into general joy. This energetic department of the new Governor produced the still-more-favorable result, that the terrified emirs dared not inquire for the firman of the Sultan by which Muhamed was appointed Pasha of Damascus; but they were satisfied that their carelessness with respect to the taking of the former Pasha remained unpunished.

In the meantime Muhamed, who possessed quite as much intellect as energy, commenced his office by lessening the burdens of the people, by abolishing abuses which had crept in during the administration of his predecessors, by giving excellent laws, and by taking under his particular protection agriculture, commerce and science. After having in this manner won the general confidence of the better classes, he insured himself the affection of the multitude by his great liberality to the poor. Toward the old Governor's relations and friends he acted in the most magnanimous spirit, and to those of the emirs who had held office under that poor fellow he presented honors and riches.

At the time when this happened the communication between the capital and the provinces was very deficient, and this was the cause why a considerable time elapsed before the Sultan heard of these extraordinary occurrences at Damascus, and it was only through the exiled Pasha himself, had how fled from Damascus through the desert to Bagdad, that the affair came under his notice. Arrived there well disguised, the poor Pasha, unable to find any other means of subsistence, was forced to beg at the mosques. Shortly after, however, he found employment at a confectioner's.

The Turk is accustomed to such most unexpected changes of fortune. The sudden advancement, as well as the abrupt downfall from the summit of greatness, he bears with calmness, I might say indifference; and our unfortunate Governor was no exception to this rule. He lived, quietly submitting to his hard fate, in obscurity and poverty for several months, without having even the courage to lisp the name of his father, the Grand Vizier, or to show himself in public places. At last it happened that an official of the Porte, who had formerly lived at Damascus, with great astonishment saw him in the shop of the confectioner, and addressed him as follows:

"Is it possible! Your Highness? I believe—I certainly think I speak to the Pasha of Damascus. Is it not so?"

"You err, sir," replied the terrified man, with visible embarrassment. "I am a poor workman, an assistant of the confectioner."

"Are you? Well—I really cannot—no, no, I cannot believe it. I know you so well! Are you not the son of the Grand Vizier, my most gracious master? What would your noble father say if he saw you in this disguise?"

"In the name of Allah!" whispered the troubled Pasha, "have you been a friend of my father's? Then I implore you, by his dear ashes, do not betray me!"

"Ashes!—betray! What does your Highness mean? Your father is alive and as well as I am. Only this morning I have received a letter from his own hand."

A few more words disclosed the whole affair. The son of the Grand Vizier, highly rejoicing, went to the house of the official to change his clothes for some more becoming to his dignity, and then both started without delay to Constantinople to pray the Sultan for justice. They first went to the Grand Vizier, who could not understand the whole affair, though he heard it from the lips of his own son, and even the Sultan would not believe it when it came to his ears. Still, if it were true, he solemnly vowed that the shameless impostor should feel the whole weight of his anger, and he forthwith dispatched an officer with 400 janissaries to Damascus to take the daring fellow prisoner, and to transport him to Constantinople.

The eight months' government of Damascus by Muhamed had been exceedingly beneficial to the inhabitants of that province, who looked upon him as a father, and it was to be expected that his removal would create considerable dissatisfaction. When the officer of the Sultan appeared before Muhamed, and handed him the letter of his master, the former kissed it in all humility, pressed it as a sign of his subjection on his forehead, and requested only a few hours' delay to prepare for his journey. During this interval he commanded the emirs to his presence, informed them of his recall, and took an affectionate leave of them. Scarcely, however, had the soldiers left the town when all the emirs and principal inhabitants of the town met together, and resolved to humbly petition the Sultan to give them no other Pasha but Muhamed, to whom they and all the people of the province were deeply indebted. This petition was handed to a messenger, who was charged to carry it in five days to Constantinople. As this letter appeared to many not urgent enough, a second was immediately drawn up, in which the services of Muhamed were detailed, and in which was clearly expressed the determination that the province would not freely submit to any other Pasha. As soon as Muhamed arrived at Constantinople he was immediately led into the presence of the Sultan.

"In the name of Allah, speak, man!" demanded the Grand Signior. "Who are you that have so little feared the anger of your lord?"

"One of the Pashas of your imperial Highness," replied the undaunted Muhamed, respectfully.

"By the beard of the Prophet!" cried the Sultan, with increasing anger, "who has appointed you Pasha, and who has signed the firman of this promotion, miserable impostor?"

"Your imperial Highness, the sovereign of the believers," quietly replied Muhamed.

"This is too much!" said the Sultan. "Show the firman, or I will have you strangled instantly, you arch rogue."

"Here it is, your Highness," replied Muhamed, and he drew from his breast a piece of paper, in which was wrapped the piece of glass, and which he laid respectfully at the feet of the Sultan.

Impatiently the Sultan picked it up, and looked with searching eye upon the writing, which he easily recognized as his own. Then he remained silent for some time, lost in thought, while the Grand Vizier, standing near him, expected a fresh burst of anger, and Muhamed, hoping for pardon, bent his knees. At this moment the letters arrived from Damascus, which, as extraordinarily important, were without delay handed to the sovereign.

After the Sultan had carefully read the letters, he spoke as follows:

"Grand Vizier, Allah is merciful! Should I punish this fellow I should cause discontent and perhaps an insurrection in a province of my empire. Therefore, I will rather give to your son the administration of another province. You, Muhamed, I will appoint Pasha of Damascus; yet remember that I only pardon you and confirm your appointment because you have shown a kind heart toward my people! Go!"

"Praised be the mercy of our lord and Sultan!" cried the happy Muhamed, and, amid the rejoicings of the multitude, he left the palace.

He afterward governed Damascus with great success and wisdom for twenty-five years.

THE Washington University, at St. Louis, Mo., has received in its history gifts exceeding $1,000,000, beside more than $100,000 received for scholarship endowments. The largest amount credited to one name is $203,000, and the next is $179,500.

THE SUCCESSFUL FEW.

New York Millionaires, and How They Made Their Money.

[New York Cor. Troy Times.]

A. T. Stewart was an Irishman, and landed in this city with no capital but his education, which enabled him to make a living by teaching. There were two peculiarities about Stewart, which may be mentioned here. He was the only merchant that entered into successful trade without going through a clerkship, and he was the only leading man of his day that refused to have his portrait taken. Peter Gilsey was a native of Copenhagen, and came hither to seek employment at his trade, which was piano-making. He afterward opened a cigar shop in the Bowery, which his wife tended while he still wrought at his trade. This petty shop led him into the path of wealth, and he left an immense estate. Aaron Arnold, the founder of the great house of Arnold, Constable & Co., was a native of the Isle of Wight, and landed here a poor adventurer. Daniel Appleton, founder of the great publishing house, came from England, and was a book agent in this city for several years. Robert Carter, who is still at the head of the rich firm of R. Carter & Bro., is a Scotchman, and on his arrival in this city taught school. The secret of the success of these foreigners is that they bring habits of industry and economy, and get a good start by saving what our American population waste. Another Scotchman, but of a different type of character, was the senior Bennett, who, on his arrival, was at first a clerk, and then became an ill-paid Bohemian. At one time he tried his hand at lecturing in this city on book-keeping. The effort failed, and yet the man became a wonderful journalist and left $3,000,000. Perhaps some of the present crowd of emigrants will also become the great capitalists of the continent.

Stephen Girard died seventeen years before John Jacob Astor. He was in his 82d year, and expired in a small building which was cared for by a housekeeper. His latter days were miserable, and his immense success added but little in the way of comfort. After Girard's death, Astor was the greatest of American capitalists, and held this distinction until his death, which occurred in 1848. Stephen Whitney became known as a millionaire about the time that Girard died (1831), and for many years stood next to Astor. He was the most parsimonious of all American capitalists, since, as it is said, he was never known to do a liberal act, and not a cent out of his immense property (estimated at $8,000,000) was devised to charitable purposes. Peter Lorillard, of tobacco fame, became a leading capitalist in 1835, and the family has held front rank in this respect ever since. John Mason was the first dry-goods king this city ever contained. He died in 1842, having been estimated at a round million during the last seven years of his life. James Lenox did not reach the same financial standard until 1850. Ex-Gov. Morgan has been a millionaire since 1852, and the same statement may be made concerning A. T. Stewart. Jay Gould took his place in the same rank ten years afterward, and so did Russell Sage. George Jones and Robert Bonner are now our only millionaire journalists, for Bennett, though worth more than both of the above, is not practically a member of that profession. He is the heir of immense wealth, which he is spending lavishly for his own benefit and that of others. Cornelius Vanderbilt was not worth a million when he reached 50. He had been, however, preparing the way for rapid profits, which were thenceforth rapidly acquired. William Libby, who stands at the head of the present house of A. T. Stewart & Co., failed in business in 1845, and then became Stewart's clerk. He was made partner fifteen years ago, and soon became a millionaire.

Say "Tick."

The following example illustrates in an amusing manner the absurdity of the ancient rule for "minding the stops" in reading:

A country schoolmaster, who found it difficult to make his pupils observe the difference, in reading, between a comma and a full point, adopted a plan which he flattered himself would make them proficients in the art of punctuation. It was this:

In reading, when they came to a comma, they were to say tick; when they came to a semicolon, they were to say tick, tick; to a colon, tick, tick, tick, and when to a full point, tick, tick, tick, tick.

Now, it so happened that the worthy master received notice that the parish minister was to pay a visit of examination to his school. As he was, of course, desirous that his pupils should show off to the best advantage, he gave them an extra drill the day before the examination.

"Now," said he, addressing his pupils, "when you read before the minister to-morrow you may leave out the ticks, though you must think them as you go along, for the sake of elocution."

So far, so good. The next day the minister was ushered into the schoolroom by the master, who, with smiles and bows, hoped that the training of the pupils would meet his approval.

Now it so happened that the first boy called up by the minister had been absent the preceding day, and in the hurry the master had forgotten to give him his instructions how to read. The minister asked the boy to read a chapter in the Old Testament, which he pointed out. The boy complied, and in his best accent began:

"And the Lord spake into Moses, saying tick, speak unto the children of Israel, saying tick, tick, tick, and thus shalt thou say unto them, tick, tick, tick, tick." This unfortunate exhibition acted like a shower-bath on the poor master, while the minister and his friends almost died of laughter.

How a Town Got a Queer Name.

What's in a name? A good deal, we are told, and how came Tombstone, Arizona, to have such a name? It was not borrowed or stolen from any other place on the globe, nor ever suggested by novel or gazetteer. The story goes, and it is true, that two young men, brothers, when about to start from Tucson on a prospecting tour in the Dragoon mountains, Sonora, or somewhere else, were advised to give up the undertaking, for if they persisted they would find neither mine nor fortunes, but "tombstones" instead. The boys bravely bade good-by to their friends, though emphatically warned that they would never come back alive. The prospectors went off, and, following "that blind trail," already referred to, came to this plain and made their camp. On looking about they saw a ledge of ore cropping out several feet, all marked and rich with the precious metals. "We have found our tombstones!" they exclaimed, and no other name would do to designate the camp. The town has adopted the name, which, if not poetical or classical, is certainly original. A valuable tombstone, too, it must be confessed, for the two brothers sold their half-interest in the mine and mill for $1,000,000.

Western Rivers and Harbors.

The River and Harbor bill, reported to the House of Representatives, makes the following appropriations for Western points:

PENNSYLVANIA.
Allegheny river from the mouth of French creek to Pittsburgh	$ 20,000
Ohio river ($100,000 to be expended on Davis island dam, and $150,000 on river from its mouth to its head)	250,000
Erie (harbor)	25,000
OHIO.
Cleveland	125,000
Ashtabula	20,000
Muskingum river (ice harbor at mouth of)	40,000
Sandusky (harbor)	12,500
Toledo	20,000
INDIANA.
Michigan City (outside harbor)	40,000
ILLINOIS.
Chicago (outside harbor)	145,000
Calumet	15,000
Galena (river and harbor)	12,000
MICHIGAN.
Grand Haven	10,000
Harbor of refuge, Port Huron	75,000
St. Clair flats	2,500
Detroit river	60,000
Saginaw river	10,000
WISCONSIN.
Milwaukee	10,000
Port Washington	20,000
Sturgeon bay harbor of refuge	10,000
Two Rivers (harbor)	10,000
Fox and Wisconsin rivers	25,000
MINNESOTA.
Duluth	25,000
Grand Marais	10,000
FOR IMPROVEMENT OF WESTERN RIVERS.
Wabash river, Indiana	$ 20,000
White river, Indiana	20,000
Sandusky river, Ohio	10,000
Illinois river, locks and dams	100,000
Illinois river, dredging	10,000
Mississippi river, between mouths of Illinois and Ohio rivers	250,000
Mississippi river, at Quincy	20,000
Mississippi river, from mouth of Illinois river to Des Moines rapids	100,000
Mississippi river, from Des Moines rapids to St. Paul	150,000
Mississippi river, above St. Anthony falls	15,000
Mississippi river, bar at Dubuque	2,500
Mississippi river, Rock Island rapids	8,000
Mississippi river, Des Moines rapids	20,000
Mississippi river, for snag-boat and gauging	13,900
Mississippi river, for removing snags and wrecks	100,000
Missouri river, for removing snags and wrecks	65,000
Arkansas river, for removing snags and wrecks	35,000
Osage river, Kansas and Missouri	30,000
Missouri river, at Atchison, Kan	20,000
Missouri river, Cedar City	15,000
Missouri river, at Omaha and Council Bluffs	20,000
Missouri river, at Eastport and Nebraska City	14,000
Missouri river, at Fort Leavenworth	8,000
Missouri river, at Glasgow	20,000
Missouri river, at Kansas City	25,000
Missouri river, at St. Joseph	20,000
Missouri river, at Sioux City	8,000
Missouri river, at Vermillion, Dak	10,000
Missouri river, above mouth of Yellowstone	25,000
Ice harbor, St. Louis	50,000
Rock Island, Ill	6,000
Ice harbor, Waukegan, Ill	15,000
Improving and operating St. Mary's river and St. Mary's Falls canal	250,000

And the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to accept, on behalf of the United States, from the State of Michigan, the St. Mary's canal and public works thereon, provided that such transfer shall be so made as to leave the United States free from any and all debts, claims, and liability of any character whatsoever, and said canal, after such transfer, will be free for public use:

Survey of the Missouri river from its mouth to Sioux City	$30,000
Improving Missouri river at St. Charles, Mo.	25,000
Improving Mississippi river at Alexandria, Mo.	10,000
Improving Mississippi river at Cape Girardeau, Mo.	20,000
Improving Mississippi river at Hannibal, Mo.	25,000
Improving Mississippi river and harbor at Memphis	15,000

West Virginia—$250,000, the principal item being $200,000 for the Great Kanawha river.

Tennessee—$405,000, of which $310,000 is for the improvement of the Tennessee river, and $65,000 for the Cumberland river.

Kentucky—$290,000, of which $200,000 is for improvement of the Kentucky river.

Arkansas—$93,500, the principal item being $25,000 for the improvement of White river.

Beside the above there are numerous minor appropriations for Western waters.

How Grant Went to West Point.

A Columbus (Ohio) letter to the Cincinnati Commercial relates the following entertaining story on the alleged authority of a Republican ex-Congressman of that State, who says that Gen. Grant told it to him just before his first nomination for the Presidency: "When I was a boy," said Grant, "living in Georgetown, my mother ran out of butter one morning, and, needing some before it could be had at the store, she sent me over to the next-door neighbor's to borrow some. Well, I was just as well acquainted there as I was at home almost, and opened the door and went in without knocking, and just as I went in one of the folks, the old gentleman, I believe, was reading a letter from a son who was in West Point. Well, I didn't want to disturb them while they were reading the letter, and stood there and heard what was read. Well, the son said in this letter that he had been found—that is, he had failed to pass examination, and he would have to come home, and he had sent the letter one mail ahead, so that the surprise at his return might not be so great. I got the butter and took it home, and then rushed down to Thomas L. Hamar's office—he was our Congressman then—and I asked him if he wouldn't send me to West Point. He told me that he couldn't send me until this other boy got through, and that wouldn't be for three years yet. 'But, Hamar,' said I, 'suppose this boy should fail to pass examination, and should be sent home, will you send me, then?' 'Well, Uly,' said he, 'I guess if he can't pass there'll be no use of your trying it.' 'But I want you to promise that you will send me,' said I. 'All right,' said he, 'if he can't get through, I promise to let you try it.' Well, during the day Hamar heard about the other fellow, and the next day I went and asked him if he had heard the news. He said he had, and, after laughing at me for the promise, he said it was all right, I should go. Well, I went, and because my mother happened to be out of butter has made me General of the army of the United States, and I don't know, after all, but what it may make me President."

IN MEMORIAM.

In the June twilight sat I alone,
Thinking over [illegible] things to [illegible],
When over the wires and through the mail,
Comes to my ears this piteous wail—
"Charles Dickens is dead!"

In my dreams that night a voice I hear,
Afar off faint, then more near,
Borne on the wings of the soft south wind
Causing hot tears my eyes to blind—
"Charles Dickens is dead."

Above my head I hear a moan,
When silent the outside world has grown,
When stilled the voices of gain and care:
"We meet grim death in the midst of life—
Charles Dickens is dead."

Out of the depths of the forest high,
Comes a voice that is passing by,
Soft and low as a zephyr's hum,
Whispers to me that he is gone.

Dead! Ah! how can I realize
That one whose words I love and prize
By a convoy of angels is borne away?
But the best things of earth can never stay.

Friend of my youth though I knew him not,
Friend who has cheered my lonely lot,
Teaching many a lesson the while,
Helping my weary journey beguile.

Two continents tremble, turn pale and weep,
But why, when he so sweetly fell asleep,
From this sorrow-swept vale to that happy home
From whence no traveler can e'er return?

ALAMO, Ind.

PITH AND POINT.

THE pupil of the eye has to be lashed.

FORCED politeness—Bowing to necessity.

A DIME novel is of course in-ten-cent-sation.

A MAN who had a bad cold said he had just set up a rig of his own. It was a little hoarse and a hack.

"IF I hit yer," said one little boy to another, "yer'll be usin' yerself for snuff ter-morrer."

WHY is it that a woman's heart beats fifteen times less per minute than a man's? Is it because her tongue beats thirty times per minute more?

THE Cincinnati papers are making a great ado over the discovery of a mica bed. Mrs. Malony sends us word that she discovers a Mike a-bed every morning when the boy'd ought to be up, splitting wood.

IF some one would successfully start the report that ice-cream spoiled the complexion and made women bow-legged, it would be thousands of dollars in the pockets of our poor but love-stricken young men.

AN old miser, who was notorious for self-denial, was one day asked why he was so thin. "I do not know," said the miser; "I have tried various means for getting fatter, but without success." "Have you tried victuals?" inquired a friend.

ABOUT 100,000 bushels of hemp seed are annually consumed for bird food in the United States. A heap of baby talk is also wasted on birds in the course of a year, and if some of it was addressed to the children they would be better natured.

AN Illinois youth, husking corn in a field near the railroad, saw a new locomotive, with a red smoke stack. He became frightened, and ran to the house crying: "That 'ere engine is going to bust, sure; it's red hot clean to the top of the stovepipe."

A COUNTRY preacher pictured the horrible torments awaiting those who yielded to the weaknesses of the flesh so vividly that many persons in his congregation gave way to emotions of alarm. A pallor overspread their faces, and their eyes filled with tears. Frightened himself at the effect which he had produced, the worthy parson leaned over his pulpit and said: "I exaggerate little, my hearers; I exaggerate."

WHEN roused from meditation
By some noisy disturbation
'Tis one's natural inclination
To exclaim, "Oh, what was that?"
At first you're all confusion,
Then you think it a delusion,
Then you come to the conclusion
That it must have been the cat.
When a father, overhearing
A farewell in terms endearing
'Twixt a young man, disappearing,
And his daughter, thinks it pat
To demand an explanation
Of that sound like osculation,
She replies with hesitation,
That it must have been the cat.
When at midnight sounds appalling
Like the noise of some one falling,
And a voice in anguish calling,
Make your heart go pit-a-pat,
You're sure it's burglars breaking
In your door, and you lie quaking
And shivering and shaking,
When it only is the cat.

Testing Tea.

It is well known that the quality of tea is judged by experts who taste it after infusion. In an office intended for the purpose there are large tables with round revolving tops. A circle of tea-cups is placed along the edge of these. The tea-taster sits down before the display of crockery and tastes one cup after another, moving the table-top around. In the center of the table is a pair of scales with a silver half-dime in one of the balances. One or two large kettles are kept constantly with boiling water in them. When a sample of tea is to be tasted, as much is weighed out as will balance the half-dime. This is put into a tea-cup and the boiling water poured on. The tea-taster then stirs up the leaves, lifts them on his spoon, and inhales the aroma. At the same time he generally takes a sip of the infusion, holds it in his mouth for a short time, and then spits it out. Enormous brass cuspidors, holding two or three gallons, receive the tea thus tasted and the contents of the cups that have been examined. One some occasions, when a large amount of tea of a certain kind is to be bought, many samples of this are brought in from different houses. The buyers and sellers sit around the revolving table with the samples made into infusions in the cups before them. These are tasted all around, the "body," "fineness," "toastiness," etc., are learnedly discussed, and the poorer specimens discarded. Then those that are left are tasted again and the number further reduced. So it goes on until the article which unites the desired price and quality is obtained. So delicate is the taste of an experienced tea-taster that he will detect not only the quality of the tea as regards age, strength, flavor, fineness, etc., but he can tell in which of the numerous districts in China the tea was grown. The facts regarding the different samples are sometimes put on the bottom of the cups, where they cannot be seen. The cups are then mixed up, and the infusions tasted again, and sorted out simply by their flavors. That the occupation is an exceedingly unhealthy one need hardly be stated, as the entire system is impregnated with tea.

SABBATH READING.

Interrupted Zeal.

[According to the mind of God, our perfection does not depend upon our doing much. This was Martha's error, which our Lord Jesus Christ rebuked.—Bourdaloue.]

Lord, is my service at an end?
I am so slow to comprehend!
Why comes this pause that seems to say
Thou hast no work for me to-day?

Do I not hoard my time for Thee?
Do not my hand and heart agree
To yield to Thee their best, their all?
Dear Lord, why hast Thou ceased to call?

There comes no beggar to my gate
For whom my halved loaf did wait;
I know no creature suffering
For cheer that haply I might bring.

Where lies my load of precious care?
Whose are the tears that I might share?
Or whose the joy that I might make
My equal joy for Thy sweet sake?

The world is just as full of woe,
For sin in hand with grief must go;
But now the world seems distant grown,
And I unneeded and alone.

Ah, now Thou dost Thy will reveal
To interrupt my restless zeal,
That I in solitude may heed
My own, my all-surpassing need.

"Much serving" often hinders love,
And care forgetfulness may prove;
The busy hand may cheat the heart
That else might choose the better part.

Who waits in holy idleness
Can never learn to serve Thee less,
But rather learns how poor, how vain,
Is all he hath accounted gain.

Strive as I may, my every toil
Some lurking vanity will spoil;
Self-love doth ever enter in
To steal what I for Thee may win.

Then give me, Lord, no work to-day,
But give what none can take away,
The portion evermore most sweet
To sit like Mary at Thy feet.

And quicken Thou my inward ear
That I like her Thy word my hear
In inward silence that shall drown
All voices other than Thine own.

The soul that seeks no end but this
The end of zeal can never miss,
But even amid her toil shall be
In holy solitude with Thee.

HARRIET MCEWEN KIMBALL.

Carried Safely Through.

The danger of reviving an old appetite, or of creating a new one, by administering alcoholic drinks to sick persons has led many conscientious medical men to abandon the practice.

In the following case is an instance where a patient with the assent and sympathy of his physician, refused strong drink to the very verge of death. Trusting in God he fought his battle through, and conquered. The facts are condensed from a narrative in a recent address of a member of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

A reformed drunkard, after sixteen years of faithful adherence to his pledge, was attacked with pyæmia, or decay of the blood, probably the slow growth of seeds sown during his early excesses.

The physician who was called to him was well aware that wine and malt liquors were always prescribed in such cases, but he shrunk from the responsibility of possibly making the man a drunkard again—if he recovered.

The disease is almost incurable, under any treatment. He frankly told his patient so, and submitted to him the question of the remedies. The patient referred it back to him.

"With a wife and nine children dependent on me," he said, "I do not wish to die; but, doctor, my children know nothing about strong drink."

The physician was in a distressing dilemma. To withhold the liquors, and probably lose his patient, seemed almost like committing a crime against a human life. To prescribe them, and save his patient would probably only insure the man's slower ruin.

The physician was a Christian man. He asked for guidance from Him in whose hands are the lives of all men, and decided at last to dispense with all alcoholic stimulants, and use only simple nutrients and correctives. If he could not restore the man's health, he would do nothing to injure his soul.

The patient, who was also a follower of Christ, grew weaker every day, but his faith in his physician, and his faith in his Savior, were touching to see. Week after week he lay helpless on his bed, praying alternately for life, for his family, and for resignation. But all the time the thought that he was free from the poison that he hated for the harm it had done him gave him joy.

"Thank God," he would say, "if I die, I shall go into God's presence a sober man."

At last his friends interfered, and insisted that he should take wine. It was the only thing that would revive him, they said, for he was almost gone. But he replied:

"No, no; if this is the passage from life to death, I am happy. Once I was dying a drunkard, and that was misery unspeakable."

His wife entreated him with tears, but even she could not move him.

"Take the wine away," he whispered, pointing to it with his feeble finger. "It nearly lost me heaven once. Take it away!"

By-and-by the crisis came. The physician in despair wrote what he believed to be his last prescription, ordered careful nursing and went away. The patient lay scarcely breathing, his attentive watcher leaning over him, with fingers on his pulse. The pulse began to grow stronger; the breathing became deeper and more regular. The weeping family in the next room waited for the closing scene. They heard a strange sound and rushed to the sufferer's bedside. The poor man had opened his eyes and was trying to sing

Praise God, from whom all blessings flow.

The crisis seemed to be passed, and the gladness with which wife and children joined in that thanksgiving must have made itself heard in heaven.

The man got well, and that physician will always believe that his recovery was due to the fidelity and Christian trust which enabled him to keep his pledge through a trial such as few men would care to encounter.

Speech and Size.

The Power of Speech.—A man who cannot use his eyes should use his tongue.

Man's darkened soul can call for a light when it cannot strike a light.

The spiritually blind man can utter a loud and exceedingly-bitter cry that shall pierce heaven and enter into the ear and heart of God.

Size.—Bigness is not greatness; and yet smallness is in itself no blessing, though it may be the occasion of a man's winning one.

Happily for little men the giants have seldom any great wit.

It is not pleasant to see every one about you a bigger person than yourself. Yet this is a sight many do see who are not dwarfs in stature.

MISS TOWNER'S CHICKENS.

How She Was Caught in the Trap She Set for Others.

Miss Towner was one of the school-teaching species. She went to North Carolina soon after the war, and took charge of the Jonesville district school. She was between 40 and 50, and her reputation for fearlessness and decision of character in connection with the kitchen poker made her a terror to tramps and evil-doers generally. The pleasant little gottage in which Miss Towner lived alone, without even a servant, had a small yard attached to it which seemed eminently adapted for chicken culture. Miss Towner had made several attempts to keep chickens, but the magnetism of the colored element was altogether too strong, and she had definitely abandoned the undertaking, when she read of the Massachusetts man's trap. It was clear to her that whatever could be done by a good-for-nothing man could be done far better by an intelligent woman, and accordingly she resolved to stock the empty chicken house, and to get a new original trap. After much thought she hit upon the plan of a noose trap. She procured a long rope, which she passed through a pulley placed on the limb of a a tree near the chicken house. To one end of the rope was attached a weight of 200 pounds, and to the other end a noose, and the weight was so arranged that a slight pull on the noose would cause it to shoot into the air, dragging with it the unfortunate colored man whose unlawful foot had entered it. One afternoon she received a supply of chickens, which she placed in the chicken house, making no effort to conceal the fact from the colored public. Just before dark she set her trap and repeatedly tested it by poking the noose with a stick. About 9 o'clock that evening she fancied that she heard a noise in the yard, and it occurred to her that some one might be prowling about the chicken house. She therefore laid aside her copy of "Edwards on the Will," took up the poker, and crept stealthily into the yard. It was a bright, moonlight night, but no one was visible, and, after making sure that her chickens were all safe, she was about to return to her reading, when she accidentally stepped within the fatal noose. The trap did credit to her inventive genius. The noose caught her by both ankles, and in an instant she found herself swinging with her head just clear of the ground. With great presence of mind she put her hands on the ground, and thus in some manner relieved her ankles of the strain of her entire weight. It was, however, impossible for her to release herself, and it was with difficulty that she could either breathe or see. There was clearly nothing to be done but to wait until some early chicken-stealer should arrive and appeal to him for aid. Miss Towner did not have long to wait. By half-past 9 Mr. Hannibal Blue approached the yard on chickens bent, but of an unfortunately timorous mind. When he came in sight of the mysterious and appalling spectacle presented by Miss Towner, he remarked, "Golly!" in accents of great terror, and fled away, convinced that he had seen a ghost, while Miss Towner, with a voice stifled by emotion and flannel, in vain besought him to come back. Meeting a dozen of his fellow-citizens, who were on their way to the chicken house, Mr. Blue explained that he had been driven away by a peculiarly frightful ghost, dressed entirely in white and holding both its arms upright above its head. He could not, however, induce his friends to share his fears, and, strong in the consciousness of numbers, they pursued their way to Miss Towner's yard. At the first sight of the alleged ghost, they were undeniably alarmed, but, finding that it did not attack them, they gained courage and drew nearer. In time they recognized Miss Towner's voice, and were able to comprehend that she had been hoist by her own petard, that is to say, noose. Some men in like circumstances would have left the unhappy chicken proprietor to pass the night in misery. Not so did these kindly colored men. They first carefully removed all the chickens, and then investigated the contents of the kitchen larder and the smoke house. Having thus done their whole duty, they explained to Miss Towner that they would send her a colored lady to release her within the next half hour, and then bade her a respectful farewell, confident that in the circumstances she could not identify her benefactors. They kept their word, and before 11 o'clock Mrs. Dinah Washington arrived and lowered Miss Towner carefully to the ground, uninjured, except by a few slight bruises, and a somewhat excessive tendency of blood to the head.

To Cure Foot Rot in Sheep.

The preparation of the foot is just as essential as the remedy, for if every part of the disease is not laid bare the remedy will not effect a cure. A solution of blue vitriol as strong as can be made and as hot as you can bear your hand in, even for a moment, having the liquid three or four inches deep, or deep enough to cover all the affected parts; then hold the diseased foot in this liquid ten minutes, or long enough to penetrate to all the diseased parts; put the sheep on a dry barn floor for twenty hours to give it a chance to take effect. In every case where I have tried it, it has effected a cure, and I have never given a sheep medicine internally for foot rot. This remedy I call a dead shot when the foot is thoroughly prepared, but a more expeditious way, (and where you don't hardly hope to exterminate the disease, but keep it in subjection, is this: After preparing the feet as for the vitriol cure, take butter of antimony, pour oil of vitriol into it slowly until the heating and boiling process ceases, and apply with a swab. This remedy works quicker, is stronger than the vitriol, and is just as safe, but its mode of application renders it less sure.—Ohio Farmer.

SQUIRE—"Got your eye in mourning again, I see, Pat?" Pat—"Oi have! It's in mournin' for the batin' I gave that brute Rafferty this day!"

HIS IMPERIAL MAJESTY, ULYSSES I.

Pungent Pen Picture of the Coming Empire—The Lords and Ladies, Dukes and Duchesses, Earls, Marshals, Etc., of the New Regime—The Gorgeous Imperial Army.

[From the Philadelphia Times.]

One of the cleverest satires of the day is an annoymous pamphlet just issued entitled, "The Coming Crown," giving a prophetic pen picture of the coming empire under "His Imperial Majesty, Emperor Ulysses I." It is illustrated with a crown, and some of its hits at the leading restorationists are admirable. The chief extracts are taken from the Court Journal, dated Washington, Sept. 1, 1882, and from the Imperial Standard, dated Washington, Oct. 1, 1882, to which various telegrams are credited from different sections of the country telling of the troubles with such insurgents as Blaine, Nast, and others, of the progress of imperialism, of the gorgeous and numberless imperial troops, and of the grand public improvements prosecuted under the empire. The following extracts will be relished by the lovers of polished wit, whatever may be their views of imperialism:

RETURN OF THE EMPEROR, EMPRESS AND CROWN PRINCE FREDERICK.

His imperial Majesty, the Emperor Ulysses I., accompanied by the Empress, the Crown Prince Frederick and a numerous suit, arrived at the palace yesterday, after a week's visit to the Duke of Pennsylvania at his palatial residence, Cameron Hall, Harrisburg. Her imperial Majesty, we are happy to announce, is in the best of health. The imperial escort consisted of a battalion of the guards and two companies of the household cavalry.

THE PRINCESS NELLIE.

Her royal Highness, the Princess Nellie, will not return to England. We are in a position to state that the consort of her royal Highness, Algernon Sartoris, Esq., is to be raised to the peerage under the title of Earl of Granton. We further understand that the Earl of Granton is to be appointed Governor, with the title of Lord Lieutenant of the province of Illinois, and that it is the intention of the imperial Government to settle $200,000 per annum upon his Lordship. A vice-regal palace is to be built at Springfield, the Privy Council having issued an order for the razing of the Capitol of the former State of Illinois, and the residence of the Lord Lieutenant will be erected upon the site.

LORD SHARON, EARL OF NEVADA.

Lord Sharon, Earl of Nevada, is expected to arrive at the palace on the 5th inst. His Lordship, who has, during the past month, been entertaining a number of the Western nobility at his magnificent residence, Belmont Hall, San Francisco, is understood to have successfully conducted the negotiations which resulted in California giving her assent to the propositions made by the imperial Government. In view of his Lordship's distinguished diplomatic services in thus eradicating the last vestiges of republicanism in the Western part of the empire, we have reason to know that his Imperial Majesty intends conferring upon his Lordship the honor of the order of the Mailed Hand.

LORD SIMON CAMERON, EARL OF SUSQUEHANNA.

It is with great pleasure that we are enabled to announce the arrival of Lord Simon Cameron, Earl of Susquehanna, at the palace. The venerable Earl and his son, the noble Duke of Pennsylvania, will have the honor of dining with his Imperial Majesty to-morrow, when the Duke is expected to arrive in town. As we have previously announced, Lord Simon was, some time ago, appointed by his Imperial Majesty, Earl Marshal, the title remaining in the House of Camerons according to the laws of primogeniture.

Lord and Lady Hamilton Fish have arrived at the palace. Lord Hamilton will receive final instructions before his departure for England as Imperial Minister to the Court of St. James. Lady Fish will not, we understand, accompany the noble lord, but will remain during the coming season in attendance on her Majesty as principal lady-in-waiting.

WASHBURNE, DUKE OF ILLINOIS.

Cards have been issued by the Duke of Illinois for a grand party at the Washburne House, the splendid residence lately completed by his Grace, and to which his Grace has given the family name, for the evening of the 12th inst. The noble Duke, whose appointment as Prime Minister by his Imperial Majesty has given such profound satisfaction in court circles, will, we understand, entertain during the coming season with ducal hospitality. Her Grace, the Duchess of Illinois, returned from the country last week.

SIR O. E. BABCOCK, PRINCIPAL EQUERRY.

Sir O. E. Babcock, whose devotion to the imperial cause and whose conspicuous gallantry at Albany, N. Y., when the republican army under Fenton was so completely defeated by the imperial troops, have deservedly gained him so many marks of imperial favor, is now, we are glad to state, quite convalescent. He remains at the imperial villa, Long Branch, for a few days more, when he will return to the palace to enter on his duties as principal Equerry in attendance on his Imperial Majesty.

LORDS AND LADIES VISITING.

Lord and Lady Edwards Pierrepont, Baron J. Gould and Sir Whitelaw Reid, of New York, who have been on a visit to Lord George M. Robeson, of New Jersey, at Secor Hall, Cape May, arrived in town yesterday for the season.

The magnificent yacht which his Imperial Highness the Crown Prince Frederick has been pleased to accept as a present from James Gordon Bennett, Esq., of New York, has arrived in the Potomac. It is named "Ulysses," and is a masterpiece of architecture.

THE DUKE AND THE DUCHESS OF NEW YORK.

The Duke and Duchess of New York are expected to arrive in town for the season on Tuesday next. The Ducal residence, Conkling House, is rapidly approaching completion, and promises in point of architectural beauty to equal any of the many splendid houses of the nobility erected in the capital since his Imperial Majesty ascended the throne. Invitations will shortly be issued by his Grace for the ball which is to be given when Conkling House is opened, and the event promises to be one of most extraordinary magnificence.

INDIANA NEWS.

GOV. WILLIAMS and party have arrived home from their Southern tour.

A GOOD deal of horse stealing is going on in the country surrounding New Albany.

A GREAT deal of old railroad iron is being received at the New Albany rail mill for rerolling.

THE Terre Haute car-works are so crowded with orders that the employes work until midnight.

DURING the past four months the Governor has received sixty applications for executive clemency.

THE County Clerk at Indianapolis presented the delegates to the Butter and Egg Convention with 5,000 cigars.

HARVEY P. FERGUSON, of Edinburg, bitten in the hand by a rat, a few weeks ago, was, at last accounts, dying of lock-jaw.

ARTICLES of association of the Cincinnati, Wabash and Michigan Railroad Company have been filed with the Secretary of State.

THE Angola firemen are soliciting funds to defray the expenses of a tri-State tournament, to be held at that place about June 15.

SAMUEL SWEZY died at Clifty, Decatur county, last week, from trichinous disease, caused by eating diseased pork. He had been sick ten weeks.

THE latest statistics on the subject give 2,082 as the number of insane people in the State, about 1,400 of whom are in jails and in private charge.

Two ladies were nominated by the Indiana Nationals as delegates-at-large to the National Convention at Chicago, one as principal, and the other as alternate.

JOHN F. MILLER, Superintendent of the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis road, is fixing up a park in magnificent style, at Richmond. It covers 160 acres of ground.

A TEN-YEAR-OLD son of Peter Carpenter, of Butlerville, while wandering in a grove, ate some buds and new leaves of poison ivy, from which he died in about two hours.

MR. MATT I. HUETTE, clerk of the Prison South, has submitted the following report to the Auditor of State from Feb. 29 to March 31: Receipts, $4,914; expenditures, $5,657.57.

THE electric-light-engine tumult at Wabash closed by the award of the contract to Levi Dollison, of Wabash. The cost entire of lighting the city per year will not exceed $900.

Two boys about 12 years of age, whose parents reside at Shedder station, have gone West to kill desperadoes, scalp Indians, rescue and marry lovely maidens, etc. They have been reading dime novels.

W. W. DUDLEY, Postmaster Holloway, John C. New, E. B. Martindale, and John C. S. Harrison have begun a canvass of the State for the purpose of working up an interest in the Morton Monument Association.

CAPT. JOSEPH BEEBER died very suddenly at Rochester lately. He served his country during the late war, holding the position of Lieutenant of Company F, Eighty-seventh Indiana volunteers. Since the war he has been subject to epilepsy.

THE familiar disease, glanders, has broken out among the horses in the northern part of Knox county. A committee of farmers went to Indianapolis for a veterinary surgeon, who condemned seventeen of the animals, some of them being taken out and shot, by his order.

WILLIAM P. GILLESPIE, of Columbus, on his death-bed, a few days ago, made a confession that he and two others, names not given, killed a wealthy stock-trader named James Jamison ten years ago, and divided between them a large sum of money found on his person. Jamison's body was never found, and this is the first clew to the manner of dis death.

INTENSE excitement exists among the farmers near Washington, Wayne county, over a lot of gold and silver, supposed to be worth $100,000, which tradition says was buried on the banks of the Whitewater, in that neighborhood, many years ago, by the Indians. They think they have located it, and are digging industriously in full hope of finding it.

THE Delphi Journal records the death of Elizabeth Smith, formerly of that place, in the 94th year of her age, and says: "The subject of this sketch was of a proud and aristocratic family, and was a schoolmate of James Buchanan, and, had fortune favored, would have been the lady of the White House. The wedding clothes were prepared, the day was set, and preparations made, when, by some cause never revealed, the match was broken by a solemn pledge that neither would ever marry—a pledge that was sacredly kept."

JAMES JOHNSON, living six miles east of Jonesboro, reputed the largest landowner and wealthiest citizen of Grant county, had his throat cut almost from ear to ear, few days ago, with a razor in the hands of John Miner. Miner had but a few hours previously been adjudged insane, and directed to be removed to the Asylum for the Insane. The cutting took place in a field about half a mile from Johnson's house. Miner was standing a little to the rear of Johnson, and, placing his left hand upon Johnson's shoulder, drew the razor through his throat with his right, cutting just below the root of the tongue and above the windpipe. Miner was found dead in the woods half a mile from where he made the attempt on the life of Johnson, with his throat cut from ear to ear by his own hand.

A TERRIBLE tragedy was enacted the other day, at Brookville, resulting in the death of J. R. Goodwin, President of the Brookville Bank and delegate to the General Methodist Conference now in session in Cincinnati. Mr. Goodwin returned to his home Saturday evening, having been present at the organization of the conference Saturday morning. A day or two before his brother Robert, who had been confined for four years in the Indianapolis Insane Asylum, returned to Brookville, having been discharged as cured. On arriving he met Charles F. Goodwin, son of the murdered man, and remarked to him that he intended to get even with the men who had put him in the asylum. Nothing was thought of the threat until this evening, when he met the bank President and shot him with a revolver, inflicting a wound which resulted in death in about an hour. The man who committed the deed was a Brigadier General in the army, and was Provost Marshal at Nashville for two years. Since the war he has led a dissipated life, resulting finally in insanity, which caused his removal to the Indianapolis Asylum, where he was kept as a boarder, free from special restraints. He is about 45 years old, a lawyer, unmarried, and lived formerly in Indianapolis. The man who was killed was one of the foremost men in his section of the country, owner of the bank of which he was President, and the chief supporter of the Brookville Methodist Church.

Logan's Crusade Against the King's English.

The New York Tribune of several years ago gave a graphic characterization of the Illinois Senator's terrific style of dealing with his mother tongue. We copy the following paragraphs from the Tribune's picturesque sketch:

"Pranced there upon the arena of the great debate, like a trick mule in a circus, or a spavined nightmare upon the track of a beautiful dream—Logan, of Illinois. There visions of mustaches, eye-brows and hair, piled on each other in arches; a large brandishing of arms, a pose and a stridulous war-whoop; and much as though a picture of the Deerfield massacre had stepped out from the pages of our history. Logan took the American Senate by its large, capacious ear. And then he went for his mother tongue. He smote it right and left, hip and thigh, and showed no mercy. Swinging the great broad-ax of his logic high in the air, he turned it ere it fell, and with the hammer side struck the language of 60,000,000 people fairly in the face, and smashed it beyond recognition. Under his stroke the floor of the American Senate was spattered with the remains of a once-proud vocabulary, and messengers, door-keepers and pages were covered from head to foot with the spray. In the fearful two hours which followed the first roar of this oration all the parts of speech were routed and put to flight. There were orphaned adjectives and widowed nouns, bachelor verbs driven to polygamy, and polygamous verbs left lonely, conjunctions dissevered, prepositions scattered, adverbs disheveled and distorted, and syntax flung to disorder. It was a great day for Logan.

"He set his teeth into the language as the untamed tiger of the jungles takes between his mouth and paw the wearing apparel of the wayfarer, and the ripping of it was heard through all the forest depths. It reverberated to the other end of the Capitol, and sluggish Representatives lifted up their ears and listened with terrified awe. Some started for the scene, but, upon being told the cause of the disturbance in the brief communication 'Logan's up,' turned back, with full assurance that they could hear from that end of the Capitol all that was worth hearing. So through two hours Logan swung his beautiful arms over the heads of the Senate like the booms of a Government derrick, while his chin churned the language like a pile-driver in a heavy sea, and the baffled reporters made wild plunges with their pencils to gather up his regurgitations for the printer."

One Source of Strength to Grant.

Although Gen. Grant goes into the National Convention with only a minority of the delegates at heart in his favor, the moment it is undertaken to put any other candidate in nomination a source of strength peculiar to Grant will be developed. It is this: While he is not particularly loved, he is not the object of such bitter and unrelenting hatred as is every one of his competitors for the nomination.

How, for instance, can Conkling ever support Blaine?

It is impossible. He may pretend to do it; but he will never with any degree of sincerity support a man he hates so fiercely.

Neither would Conkling yield any earnest support to Sherman.

At the same time, he hates Washburne even more bitterly than he hates the man of Maine or the man of Ohio.

Sherman, on his part, is just as inimical to Conkling and to Blaine. He could endure Grant, but hardly any other rival candidate.

If Grant is taken, the party starts off with a minority candidate. If any other candidate is put in nomination, the party has to encounter the implacable ill will of some of the most formidable of its leaders.—New York Sun

THE trick of the game of 15, is to put the blocks into the box irregularly, with no regard whether the 15 happens to get between the 13 or 14, or whether 9 gets in front of 8, or 6 behind 1, or any other figure anywhere else. Turn the blocks upside down on a table. Mix them up thoroughly, then fill them in the box, beginning at the upper left hand corner, and putting them in as they come to you right side up. Then move them until in regular order.

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY
Established 1847 at 12 N. 8th Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE Physicians in charge of this old and well known Institution are regular graduates in medicine and surgery. Years of Experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases have made their skill and ability so much superior to that of the ordinary practitioner, that they have acquired a national reputation through their treatment of complicated cases.

INDISCRETION or EXPOSURE Producing such maladies as Syphilis, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Orchitis, all Urinary Troubles and Syphilitic or Mercurial affections of the throat, skin or bones, treated with success, on scientific principles, without using Mercury or other Poisonous Medicines.

YOUNG MEN and those of middle age who are suffering from the effects of Spermatorrhea or Seminal Weakness, the result of self-abuse in youth or excess in matured years, are permanently cured. This disease produces some of the following effects—emissions, blotches, dizziness, nervousness, dimness of sight, cough, indigestion, constipation, despondency, confusion of ideas, aversion to society, defective memory, sexual exhaustion, impotency or loss of manly vigor, which unfits the victim for business or marriage.

PATIENTS TREATED by Mail and Express, but where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is FREE and invited. List of questions to be answered by patients desiring treatment mailed free to any address on application.

(Persons suffering from Rupture should send their address, and learn something to their advantage. It is not a truss.)

Communications strictly confidential, and should be addressed DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

DON'T RENT
BUY A HOME IN MICHIGAN.
$5 TO $10 PER ACRE!
Strong Soils! Sure Crops! Railroad through Center of Lands. Healthy Climate. Schools and Churches. Intelligent Population.
HIGHEST REWARD TO FARMERS.
These lands are a long distance East of the Mississippi River. Large amount saved in travel and transportation of crops. Descriptive pamphlet in English and German. Address W. O. HUGHART, Commissioner, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

THERMALINE
A Safe and Reliable substitute for Quinine
The only 25 cent
AGUE REMEDY
IN THE WORLD
CURES
CHILLS & FEVER
and all MALARIAL DISEASES.
Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York, for their ten cent book, mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT.
An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box
Gives Immediate Relief.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.
Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or Chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions, Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.

The above four preparations for sale by F. K. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers, druggists, Auburn, Indiana.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 Cents per box. All Drug Stores.

SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant to take as a glass of Lemonade. 7 cents each. All Drug Stores.

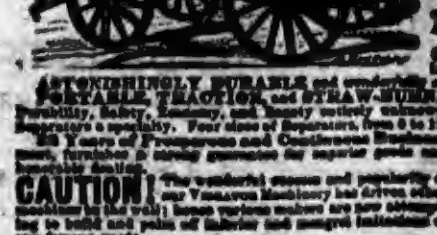
WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES
Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)
A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.
☞ Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.
☞ For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.
☞ For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.
It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.
It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.
Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.

WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, over-work, mental shocks, and other causes.
Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhea, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. No other Pills require such small doses for thorough work. Price 25 cts. a box. Warner's Safe Remedies are sold by Druggists & Dealers in Medicine everywhere.
H. H. Warner & Co., Proprietors, ROCHESTER, N. Y.
☞ Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.

NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO. Battle Creek, Mich.
Established in 1848.
ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE
"VIBRATOR"
Threshing Machinery and Portable and Traction Engines.



THE STANDARD of excellence throughout the Grain-Raising World.
MATCHLESS for Grain-Saving, Time-Saving, Perfect Cleaning, Rapid and Thorough Work.
INCOMPARABLE in Quality of Material, Perfection of Parts, Thorough Workmanship, Elegant Finish, and Beauty of Model.
MARVELOUS for vastly superior work in all kinds of Grain, and universally known as the only successful Thresher in Flax, Timothy, Clover, and all other Seeds.
ASTONISHINGLY DURABLE and wonderfully simple, using less than one half the usual gears and belts.
PORTABLE, TRACTION, and STRAW-BURNING STEAM-ENGINES, with special features of Power, Durability, Safety, Economy, and Beauty entirely unknown in other makes. Steam-Power Outfits and Steam-Power Separators a specialty. Four sizes of Separators, from 6 to 12 horse-power; also 2 styles Improved Mounted Horse-Powers.
32 Years of Prosperous and Continuous Business by this house, without change of name, location, or management, furnishes a strong guarantee for superior goods and honorable dealing.
CAUTION! The wonderful success and popularity of our Vibrator Machinery has driven other machines to the wall; hence various makers are now attempting to build and palm off inferior and mongrel imitations of our famous goods.
BE NOT DECEIVED
by such experimental and worthless machinery. If you buy at all, get the "ORIGINAL" and the "GENUINE" from us.
☞ For full particulars call on our dealers, or write to us for Illustrated Circulars, which we mail free. Address
NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

—ON—

Coffee, Sugar, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18 cents now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents per pound; and the Extra A Sugar we sold at 9 cents, now down to 8 cents; and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound. We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

TEAS! TEAS! TEAS!

The boom in teas last fall has not been maintained. Prices, in place of advancing, have declined so much that we are now selling the best Young Hyson tea lower than it has sold in ten years.

Good Young Hyson, 25c; Choice Young Hyson, 50c; Extra Young Hyson, 40c; Best young Hyson, 65c; Good Imperial tea, 40c; Best Imperial tea, 50 and 65c; Good Gunpowder tea, 40c; Best Gunpowder tea, 50 and 65c; Good Oolong tea, 30c; Best Oolong tea, 40 and 60c; Good uncolored Japan tea, 25, best 40 and 60c.

WHITE AND YELLOW SUGARS.

Cut Loaf, 10c; Coffee A, 9 1-2; Granulated, 10c; Extra C, 8c; Powdered Sugar, 10c; Yellow Sugar, 7c.

COFFEES--RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Bengal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 90c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c;

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickeled pork, 6c.

Fish--Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1; Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound, 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c. Oranges per dozen 35c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16–tf. ISAAC HAGUE

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

Wm. ELLERY.
WALTHAM, MASS.

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE, SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS, Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains, Ladies Gold Chains, Castors Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars, Banjos, Accordions Violin Strings.

Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at

JOE. ABRIGHT'S,

Second door north of Postoffice Auburn, Indinas,

On the Rail.

[Norristown Herald.]

One day last week Jeems and I boarded the train at D—— for Philadelphia. Jeems said he wasn't used to boarding; and when the conductor shouted "all aboard!" he shuffled uneasily on his wooden seat—we were in the smoking car—and replied: "That's so; it's all aboard!"

The only occupant of the car besides ourselves was a brakeman. He was amusing himself with a gem puzzle. Jeems said he must be an iconoclast—he was an idle braker. I rather compared him to a bad poet, mixing up his figures.

Soon the conductor appeared, and shouted, "tickets!" I handed him a tenspot of diamonds, which must have been left in my possession by some pickpocket who had abstracted my genuine ticket. The captain wouldn't take it. Probably he thought I was a "spotter." So I said, "do you ever knock down?" This seemed to make him mad. "Well, I reckon not," he replied. "All right," says I, "as long as there's no knocking down or kicking out I'll ride free." That checkmated him. Then he went for Jeems. Mr. J. handed him a five dollar bill, accompanied by a religious tract, entitled, "I Know that My Redeemer Liveth!"

The peculiar title of the tract made the conductor look at the V suspiciously a moment. Finally he returned it, with the remark: "A bill that won't pass without a printed affidavit along with it is too thin." So Jeems had to fish in his trousers for another.

Presently we slid around a curve, and the danger signal sounded. Jeems stuck his head out of the window to see what was going on. It was an old cow. She was going on the track just ahead of the engine. Nobody said anything to her, and she died. Jeems wrote her epitaph on the seat. It runs as follows:

Gentle muley, thou hast left us,
Thou hast left us hide and hair;
We were shocked when thou wert taken,
For thou wast too much too spare.
Gone to meet the bologna man.

After a while we passed an old horse, leaning up against a fence, coughing. He evidently had the heaves. Jeems thought it was a fine specimen of a patent air-brake. The spirit of Mrs. Partington prompted me to say that I rather regarded it as a distemporaneous ex-course.

Consequent upon this fearful flight in the face of Providence, all grew dark about us. It was only a tunnel. Jeems whispered, "take it cool." So we took it. It was a little too cool for the weather. A hot "smash" would have been better, and also more natural on the railway. But we emerged from the cavern very much refreshed.

By and by we ran over a tramp. We didn't know him. We never know anybody when we get our Sunday clothes on. Then we smashed a colt. Jeems said he was getting tired of this fillybustering business. But it didn't matter. The engineer wasn't satisfied until he had knocked splinters out of the tail of a freight train just ahead of us. The concussion caused by this last exploit made Jeems so desperate as to declare "that the chances were even for getting to Hellertown." I don't know what he meant. He must have been excited. Anyway we crept into Philadelphia next morning in time for breakfast.

A Texas Story.

[Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette.]

Texas preachers are said to be very eccentric, and their mild unnaturalness has given rise to a great many remarks and a few stories. The following narrative was told us by a slanderer.

A minister arose before a large audience, took his text and began preaching. A brisk firing of pistols began on the out side of the church.

"Brother deacon," said the minister, "I believe those fellows are casting insinuations at me. In fact, I am very nearly convinced," he continued, as a piece of plastering fell from the wall close to his head.

"I think, parson, that it refers to some one else," replied the deacon.

The minister raised a tumbler of water, and was in the act of applying his lips, when the glass fell, shattered by a shot.

"This is an innuendo no longer," said the minister, wiping the water from his vest. "This is what I term an unmistakable thrust. The congregation will please sing while I go out and investigate this matter. Is there another preacher in the house?"

"Yes," said a man, throwing down a stick which he had been whittling, arising and pulling at the waist of his pants like a man who had just straightened up after setting out a row of tobacco across a broad field.

"Got on an extra?"

"Yes."

"Unlimber."

"The whittling preacher handed over a large Remington pistol, which the insulted preacher took, and, drawing one from his belt, started out. After going out there was an immediate improvement in the firing business. It was decidedly more lifelike, insomuch that the deacons sat working their fingers. After a while the minister returned, and, placing an ear and the nostril and the half of a nose on the pulpit, remarked: 'He that hath ears to hear, let him behave himself.' The sermon then proceeded without interruption."

RAILROADS.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 10, 1878.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Night ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 12	2 55	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 50	2 26	7 13	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 30 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 50	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 00	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 30 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 48	8 55
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 35 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 20	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 27	2 33
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 05
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 15	6 05 am
Mansfield	12 35	7 45	4 55	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 06	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 6	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15 pm	3 30

Trains Nos. 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

WABASH St. LOUIS AND PACIFIC R'Y.

The Great Through Car Route to

Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.	WEST.
Mail.........12:34 p. m.	Mail........3:20 p. m.
Accom'n......12:57 a. m.	Accom'n......3:57 a. m.
Local F't......4:15 p. m.	Local F't......6:58 a. m.
M'l tr'n arrives at Butler....1:00 p. m.	M'l tr'n arr. at Logansport. 6:45 p. m.

No Change of Cars From

TOLEDO OR FT WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison,

No Change of Cars From

St. Louis To | Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the

Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific

Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

☞ Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West Southwest, North or Northw'st

Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager, H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent, St. Louis, or

LOUIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn Ind.

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE.

Time-Card takes effect April 11, 1880.
(CHICAGO TIME.)

GOING NORTH.

Leave Auburn:

4:10 A. M.—From Fort Wayne 3:55 a. m.; arrive at Waterloo 4:40; Pleasant Lake, 5:30; Angola, 6:20; Fremont, 6:15; Reading, 6:35; Bankers, 7:30; (connecting closely with D. H. & S. W. R.;) Jonesville, 8:13; Jackson, 9:20 a. m, there connecting for Ann Arbor 10:35, Detroit, 11:50 a. m.; Grand Rapids, 4:31 p. m

12:31 P. M.—From Fort Wayne 11:30 a. m., Academie, 11:46; Huntertown, 11:56; New Era, 12:10 p. m.; Auburn Junction, 12:28; arrive at Waterloo 12:42, connecting with L. S. & M. S. train east and west; Summit, 12:52; Pleasant Lake, 1:01; Angola, 1:11; Fremont, 1:30; Reading, 2:10; Bankers, 2:20, making close connection with D. H. & S. W. R. R.; Jonesville, 2:35, making connection with L. S. & M. S. for points east: Hillsdale, 2:48; Adrian 4:05; Toledo, 5:25, p. m.), Jackson, 3 40 p. m., making close connection for Ann Arbor, Detroit, Lansing, Ionia, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Battle Creek, etc.

5:50 P. M.—From Fort Wayne, 5:30 p. m; New Era, 5:40 arrive at Waterloo 6:11; Summit, 6:25; Pleasant Lake, 6:38; Angola, 7:05; Fremont, 7:35; Reading, 8:35; Jonesville, 9:20; Jackson, 11:05 p. m.; connecting closely for Chicago, Detroit and Grand Rapids.

GOING SOUTH.

Leave Auburn:

9:31 A. M.—From Jackson, 5:05 a. m; closely connecting from Chicago; Jonesville, 6:50; connecting from Chicago, etc.; Reading, 7:45; Montgomery, 7:58; Fremont, 8:17; Angola, 8:34; Pleasant Lake, 8:44; Summit, 8:55; Waterloo, 9:10; arrive at St. Johns, 9:36; New Era, 9:45; Huntertown, 9:55; Academie, 10:05; Ft. Wayne, 10:20 a. m. connecting closely with Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, etc.

3 17 P. M.—From Jackson 12:25 p. m.; (connecting from Detroit 9:35 a. m., Ann Arbor, Saginaw, Lansing, Grand Rapids, etc;) Jonesville, 1:21, close connection from Toledo; Bankers, 1:35; Reading, 1:46; Montgomery, 1:58; Fremont, 2:15; Angola, 2:3; Pleasant Lake, 2:49; Summit, 2:58; Waterloo, 3:08; arrive at Auburn Junction, 3:20; St. Johns, 3:31; New Era, 3:36; Stoner's, 3:46; Huntertown, 3:51; Academie, 4:00 Fort Wayne, 4:15 p. m.; connecting for Indianapolis, Louisville, Lima, Cincinnati, etc.

11:30 P. M.—From Detroit, 4:05 p.m.; Grand Rapids 11:50 a. m.; Kalamazoo, 1 40 p.m.; Jackson, 6 45 p. m.; Jonesville, 8 00; Reading, 8 35; Fremont, 9 45; Angola, 10 15; Pleasant Lake, 10:35; Waterloo, 11 10; arrive at New Era 12 20 a. m.; Fort Wayne, 1 25 a. m., connecting with early trains west, south and east.

4 10 a. m. train run daily. All other trains daily except Sundays.

M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Supt.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Frt. & Pass'r Agent.

Fort Wayne, Muncie and Cin.

—AND—

White Water Railroads.

Time Card in effect November 16, 1879.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1. Mail.	3. Express.
FORT WAYNE...	10 40 am	5 40 pm
Bluffton	11 52 am	6 55 pm
Montpelier	12 31 pm	7 [illegible] pm
Hartford	12 57 pm	8 04 pm
MUNCIE	1 45 pm	9 [illegible] pm
Newcastle	2 [illegible] pm
Cambridge City	3 14 pm
Connersville	3 45 pm
Cincinnati	5 55 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	5 35 pm	10 [illegible] pm
Louisville
Terre Haute
St. Louis

STATIONS	GOING NORTH 2. Mail.	4. Express	6. Accom.
St. Louis
Terre Haute
Louisville
Indianapolis	11 30 am	6 40 pm	4 05 am
Cincinnati	6 40 am
Connersville	11 51 am
Cambridge City	12 26 pm
New Castle	1 10 pm
Muncie	2 20 pm	9 20 pm	6 [illegible] am
Hartford	3 09 pm	10 08 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	3 34 pm	10 32 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	4 10 pm	11 09 pm	9 10 am
Fort Wayne	5 15 pm	12 15 am	11 00 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.

Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.

All trains daily except Sunday.

Trains run on Columbus time.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R

CHICAGO DIVISION.

IN EFFECT FROM JAN. 1, 1880.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.
CHICAGO	8 50am	9 40pm
Walkerton Junction	12 10pm	1 [illegible]am	10 42am
Milford Junction	1 20	2 18	2 20pm
Cromwell	1 48	2 45	3 30
Albion	2 06	3 [illegible]	4 25
Avilla	2 34	3 30	5 20
Garrett ar.	2 50	3 45	5 55
Garrett lv.	3 10	3 55	4 15
Auburn Junction	3 24	4 08	4 38
St. Joe	3 44	4 25	5 40
Hicksville	4 00	4 42	6 22
Defiance	4 45	5 27	8 50
Fostoria	6 40	7 25	2 30pm
Tiffin	7 09	7 54	3 37
CHICAGO JUNCTION	8 10	9 00	6 00

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.
CHICAGO JUNCTION	6 40pm	8 15am	5 20am
Tiffin	7 56	9 12	8 20
Fostoria	8 34	9 35	9 35
Defiance	10 32	11 1[illegible]	4 45pm
Hicksville	11 10	12 15pm	6 18
St. Joe	11 33	12 30	6 50
Auburn Junction	11 54	12 50	7 35
Garrett ar.	12 10am	12 58	8 20
Garrett lv.	12 15	1 25	6 30am
Avilla	12 29	1 40	7 10
Albion	12 45	2 08	7 58
Cromwell	1 10	2 32	8 48
Milford Junction	1 33	3 00	9 50
Walkerton Junction	2 58	4 12	12 51pm
CHICAGO	5 50	7 05

C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent
SAM'L POWELL, Act. Gen. Ticket & Pass. Agent, Chicago.
L. M. COLE, Gen. Ticket Agent, Baltimore, Md

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
6-tf Auburn, Ind.

ROBERT OGDEN,
Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,
IRON AND LEAD PIPE,
BRASS GOODS
OF ALL KINDS.
135 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indian

SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1, the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

☞ For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

Agricultural Implements!

THE

Latest Improved Farm Machinery

OF ALL KINDS.

The ThreeRivers "Invincible" VIBRATOR.

The Renowned Atlas Engine! For farm use.

THE PEERLESS Reaper and Mower!

Over 20 000 now in use.

DEERING'S WIRE AND TWINE BINDER,

The only successful TWINE Binder in this or any other market. Greatly improved for 188.

LEADER ONE-WHEEL HARVESTER,

Which created so much excitement among the farmers last year.

ELLWOOD CULTIVATORS.

Riding or Walking, with four, six or nine blades. They have more good points and are less complicated than any other cultivator made.

The Steel-beam Red-Jacket Plow

And many other kinds. Also dealers in the

Archer Self-Dumping Hay-Rake.
Adjustable Bar Spring Tooth Harrow.
And The Harris' Double Harpoon Horse Hay-Fork.

Examine our samples carefully, and get our prices before you contract. We guarantee you a bargain.

J. N. MYERS & CO.,
Odd Fellows' Building, AUBURN, IND.

NORMAN STALLION

JOCK, Jr.

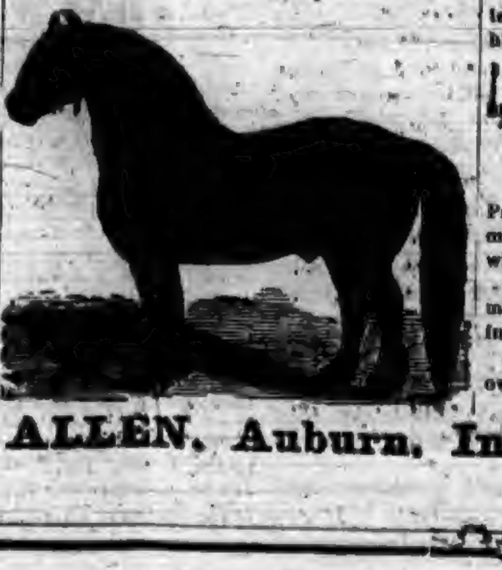
SIRED BY

Imported Jock!

Out of a thorough-bred

Norman Mare

JOCK, JR. will stand for mares during the season of 1880 commencing April 1st, at my barn in Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind.



This powerful horse is a bay-roan, 16 hands high, and weighs full

1,700 Pounds,

TERMS:

$10.00

Payable when the mare is known to be with foal.

Owners parting with mares are liable for insurance.

All accidents are at owners risk.

A. W. ALLEN, Auburn, Indiana.

Recorders Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, MAY 27, 1880. Number 22.

The Auburn Courier
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY THE COURIER COMP'Y.
EDITORS,
THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5,00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gansenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET. EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Grose. Prop'r Auburn, Ind,

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Application for License.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN TO THE CITIZENS of the incorporated town of Auburn, Union township, DeKalb county, Ind., that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county, at their next regular session to be held in the court-house in said county, on the 7th day of June, 1880, for a license to sell spiritous, vinous and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, with the privilege of permitting the same drank on the premises where sold, viz: On the middle one-third of lot number twenty-seven [27], in the original plat of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana.

20-3w. JOHN MEISER.

MONEY TO LOAN

By the Union Central Life Insurance company, from 1 to 5 years at 9 per cent secured by first lien on real estate worth at least double the amount of the loan (exclusive of improvements). We charge no commission, and your mortgage is held here within a few hours ride of your home. If you live, you are here to look after it yourself; if you die, you have made provisions to pay the debt just where you contracted it. For further particulars, apply to Thos. H. Sprott, Auburn Indiana.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 23-1y

$1500 TO $6000 A YEAR, or $2 to $20 a day in your own locality. No risk. Women do as well as men. Many make more than the amount stated above. No one can fail to make money fast. Any one can do the work. You can make from 50c to $2 an hour by devoting your evenings and spare time to the business. It costs nothing to try the business. Nothing like it for money making ever offered before. Business pleasant and strictly honorable. Reader, if you want to know all about the best paying business before the public, send us your address and we will send you full particulars and private terms free; samples worth $5 also free; you can then make up your mind for yourself. Address, GEORGE STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-1

G. R. & I. R. R. Co.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS,
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., April 1, '80.

To the Stockholders of the Grand Rapids & Ind. R. R. Co.:

Take notice that there will be a meeting of the stockholders of said company, at the general office, in the city of Grand Rapids, state of Michigan, on

THE NINTH (9th) DAY OF JUNE, 1880,

at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of said company to the sum of five million dollars; and it is proposed at such meeting to increase said capital stock to that amount.

DIRECTORS:

W. O. Hughart,	C. A. Zollinger,
W. R. Shelby,	Thos. A. Scott,
H. J. Hollister,	Geo. B. Roberts,
S. S. Cobb,	Wm. Thaw,
J. G. Wait,	Thos. D. Messler,
Piling Hoogland,	J. N. McCullough,

Rob't. B. Potter.

18-tf. J. H. P. HUGHART, Secretary.

The Blue and the Gray.

By the flow of the inland river,
Whence the fleets of iron have fled,
Where the blades of the new grass quiver,
Asleep are the ranks of the dead.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment day,
Under the laurel the Blue,
Under the willow the Gray.

These in the robing of glory,
Those in the gloom of defeat,
All with the battle-blood gory,
In the dusk of eternity meet.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment day,
Under the laurel the Blue,
Under the willow the Gray

From the silence of sorrowful hours
The desolate mourners go,
Lovingly laden with flowers,
Alike for the friend and the foe.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment day,
Under the roses the Blue,
Under the lilies the Gray.

So with an equal splendor
The morning sun rays fall,
With a touch impartially tender,
On the blossoms blooming for all.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment day,
Broidered with gold the Blue,
Mellowed with gold the Gray.

So when the summer calleth
On forest and field of grain,
With an equal murmur falleth
The cooling drip of rain.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment day,
Wet with the rain the Blue,
Wet with the rain the Gray.

Sadly, but not upbraiding,
The generous deed was done,
In the storms of the years that are fading,
No braver battle was won.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment day,
Under the blossoms the Blue,
Under the garland the Gray.

No more shall the war cry sever,
Or the winding river be red;
They banish our anger forever,
When they laurel the graves of our dead.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment day,
Love and tears for the Blue,
Tears and love for the Gray.

Fatal Precocity.

The London Era says: "Benedict Tacagni, aged six years and seven months, died on March 26th of acute rheumatism. He was the 'Midshipmite' in the The Children's Pinafore at the Opera Comique, and his clever performances had elicited commendations from, among others, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke of Edinburgh, and the Princess Mary, of Cambridge. He was taken ill Saturday, March 20th, the last day of the season, and was given up by his physician on the Monday night. During the delirium consequent on his his illness he continually sang snatches of the Pinafore music, the last audible sounds he uttered being his childish version of 'For he is an Englishman.' He was buried at Kensal Green on Wednesday afternoon." The announcement of the little fellow's death called out the following letter to the editor of the Standard: "The merest tyro in physiology ought to know that the cerebral tissues are not fully developed before seven, and the brain of every young person, for at least a dozen years afterward, is peculiarly sensitive to the results of continuous mental application. Yet this unhappy child was exposed night after night for a considerable period to the exciting gaze of spectators, whose admiration ought to have been more tempered by pity. Little Tacagni—otherwise giving promise of sound health and extended life—succumbed to the abnormal strain on his tender nervous system, and the disease of which he died clearly demonstrates this to be the case. It is to be hoped that the heartless immolation of this child phenomenon may be turned to account in the effectual prevention in future of performances by little children so inevitably attended by mortal consequences."

◆

The ancient drama of Potiphar's wife has recently been re-enacted in Russell, Kansas. Mrs. Potiphar was the young wife of a doctor. She was musical, and attended a musical society, and her husband was too much engaged in his practice always to accompany her. This duty, consequently, often fell upon Joseph, who was a highly moral young man, a church member, &c. A fortnight ago, on reaching her home with him, she averred her passion, and, on his solemn remonstrance, declared that she would kill herself. Joseph, in pious perplexity, sought his pastor. The pastor told him to go straight to a justice of the peace. Somehow, before noon, all Russell was informed of the distressing affair, and Mrs. Potiphar, instead of slaying herself, promptly left home, followed by Dr. Potiphar. It is not stated whether she is a woman of personal charms, and the story of the occurrence in Egypt is also silent on that point; and yet makes considerable difference, so far as the Josephs are concerned.

Ralph Keeler.

Ralph Keeler, whose personal experiences are well told in a clever volume called "Vagabond Adventures," ran the gantlet of good and evil luck and died a mystery. He had been a clog-dancer in a traveling show, a stowaway, a traveler in many lands, a peddler, a teacher of Latin and Greek, a novelist, a lecturer, and was at one time sub-editor of the Atlantic Monthly—"cub-editor," he called it. Writing his novel, entitled "Gloverson and His Silent Partner," he strove to make it so perfect in every part that its success would be inevitable. His descriptions of architecture were submitted to an architect, and a patent window-case—his own invention—was meant to be one of the hits of the volume. A song, introduced through the medium of one of the characters, was set to music in advance of the publication of the volume, and a foot-note announced it "for sale by all music dealers." There were humorous passages which were re-written until the listener was bound to laugh; and pathetic chapters meant to draw a tear. These were for the benefit of the softer sex; and if, on the first reading, the ladies' eyes were dry, these chapters were toiled over until they rose to high-water mark. What was the result? The book was a failure. Poor Keeler! Fond of adventure, and reckless to a degree, he went to the West Indies as a correspondent for the New York press. The steamer touched at a port in one of the islands, and when ready to sail on the morrow Ralph was nowhere to be found; nor has any clew to his death yet come to light. It was his boast that he had made the tour of Europe on $131, greenbacks. He was a laughing philosopher, who, even on this pittance, must have carried sunshine wherever he went. It is said of him that, having submitted a play to Henry J. Borgu, in London, his chief anxiety was to know what manner of hat to select and carry in his hand when responding to the enthusiastic call for the author at the close of each act—whether a soft hat, crushed carelessly in the hand, or an opera hat, flattened under the elbow, or a tile, such as is worn by the Britisher from his youth up. He consulted his friends with an earnestness that was deeply impressive, but—the play was declined.—The California.

◆

General Ewing of Ohio thinks Jewett is the strongest man the democrats can nominate, for the following reasons:

He has always been a straight-out democrat, but yet a thorough supporter of the war measures of the Lincoln Administration. He is distinguished as a successful business man. He has always adopted a liberal policy toward the employes of the great Erie railroad, and has nothing in his record offensive to any class of citizens, or any wing of the democratic party.

EXTRAORDINARY DREAMS.

Discoveries Made Through Them.

A writer in the April number of Temple Bar has the following about dreams: A certain lawyer was seriously perplexed with a complicated law case. In the night his wife saw him get up, walk to a writing table, compose an elaborate "opinion," place it carefully in a drawer and return to bed. Next morning he remembered nothing of his dream, and could not believe it till his wife gave him occular demonstration of the fact by pointing out the drawer where the "opinion" lay complete.

Students and poets are often indebted to dreams for their bright ideas, and the marvelous composition of the fragment "Cubla Khan," by Coleridge, will occur to every reader. He says he had fallen asleep in his chair while reading in "Purchas' Pilgrimage" of a palace built by Khan Kubla, and remained asleep about three hours, during which time he "could not have composed less than two or three hundred lines." The images rose before him as things, and with them the corresponding expressions, "without any sensation or consciousness of effort." When he awoke he instantly sat down to commit his composition to paper, but was called away by a person on business; and when he returned to resume the poem it had utterly vanished from his memory.

Languages long forgotten, or apparently but imperfectly known in waking life, have been known to recur in dreams and delirium. Abercrombie relates several authenticated instances of this sort; and the writer knew an able clergyman who, when a boy, preached over in his sleep the sermon he had just heard, seemingly word for word, and it was no uncommon occurrence for his friends to gather round his bedside to hear his discourse. But he was endowed with a marvelous memory in his waking hours; and on one occasion, it is said, he learned three books of Euclid on his way home from school.

Missing documents and forgotten places are sometimes recovered in dreams. Sir Walter Scott, in his notes to the "Antiquary," speaks of a gentleman sorely troubled in his mind because he was pressed for the payment of some tithe-money which he believed was unjustly charged, and which he had a confused recollection of as having been bought out by his deceased father many years ago. In his dreams he thought the shade of his father appeared to him and inquired the cause of his grief. Not at all started by the apparition, he gravely stated the facts of the case. The shade told him that he must seek out an old lawyer who had retired from professional business, and was now living at Inveresk. He gave the lawyer's name, and remarked that the papers relating to the purchase of the tithes were in his hands now, but that as the transaction had occurred many years ago, and this was the only one in which the lawer was ever engaged on his account, it would be necessary to call it to his recollection by this token, that, "when I went to pay his account there was a difficulty in getting change for a Portugal piece of gold, and we were forced to drink out the balance at a tavern." On reaching Inveresk the gentleman called upon the lawyer, who could not remember the transaction till the incident of the Portugal coin was mentioned, when it all recurred to his memory. The documents were handed over to him and carried to Edinburgh to prove the case.

◆

General Grant Presented With an Old Bill.

While General Grant was in the parlors at the Lanadrid house, in Vicksburg, a card from "William Scott" was handed him with a request for an interview. The interview was granted and the general recognized William Scott as a colored man who had been chief cook to the general and his staff during their sojourn in the country back of Vicksburg during the siege of 1863. The general shook hands with William and was "glad to meet him." Whereupon William presented him with the following bill:

Jackson, Miss., June—1869.
General U. S. Grant,
To William Scott, Dr.
For balance due for services as cook, $10

On the back of the bill was written: "General, if you haven't time to attend to this, please address William Scott, Vicksburg, Miss., care of Mrs. Jacob Latcher." The general read the bill over and assured William that it should be attended to. Scott was a slave before the war and belonged to Colonel Ruben Dunbar, with whom he remained until General Grant's army passed Vicksburg, just previous to the surrender, but during the excitement and rapid movements he lost sight of the general and failed to collect the balance due him, and now, after a lapse of nearly seventeen years, he presents his account for the same. As to whether or not General Grant will avail himself of the benefit of the statute of limitation, the Vicksburg Commercial is not advised.

A SPRING-TIME ROMANCE.

How a Stern "Parient" Treated His Daughter's Lover.

[Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.]

It is moonlight on the hill. From out the trees a gentle zephyr creeps to rob the hyacinth of its perfumed breath, and adown the garden walk the whip-poorwill lends his monotone of sadness unto the balmy night. Sleep, with brooding wings, sits silent o'er the scene. But hark! It is the tinkling guitar strummed by the lonely Agusta. He comes. Beneath the vine-clad window in the ghostly gloaming he pauses, and up the flowery-trellised wall he shoots a melancholy tenor fraught with the passionate inquiry "Must I leave thee here alone?" No answer returns save the haunting echo and the low clicking of a distant door. The scene changes.

It is the back-yard tableau. A white-robed old man bends above a chained dog and soothes his too eager spirit as he loosens the collar. A low voice says: "S-ee-ceck him, Bull; take a short cut around the rose-bush." A flash—and the old man is gone. The clatter of a fallen guitar comes from the front; a sound like the rush of a steeple-chase nearing a hedge is borne back, and neck and neck two figures cross the picket fence to disappear down the dim perspective of the deserted street. Then the old man meets Bull as he returned on the outer walk, and removes in a discouraged manner a dark object from his foaming mouth, while the animal returns to his kennel in silence. The door opens and shuts upon the white-robed form, and all is still again. But as he gets into bed, and shoves the old lady's feet out of the warm place, he mutters: "Bull is gettin' old, an' serenades don't pay dividends like they used to; but if that business keeps up I think you will be justified in startin' another patch-work quilt, Malia. That last fellow left real cassumur."

"What sorter sample did you get?"

"Tolerable fair. There was a long strip with a pistol-pocket hangin' to it, and one gallus' butt'n."

◆

How to Make Good Coffee.

[New York Tribune.]

The prices in the coffee market do not change very materially throughout the year. Wholesale merchants sometimes succeed in producing a fluctuation of a fraction of a cent, but such changes have little or no effect upon the retail trade. At present the best Java is selling for thirty-five cents per pound; Mocha, thirty eight cents; Ceylon, forty centy, and Rio, thirty cents. It is generally supposed by coffee drinkers that the best coffee is made from a mixture of Java and Mocha in proportion of two-thirds Java to one-third Mocha. The Mocha is supposed to give flavor and aroma, while the Java supplies the strength. The best coffee, however, is made from plantation Ceylon, the flavor of which cannot be surpassed by any coffee in the market. The only objection possible is the fact that it takes a very much greater quantity to secure a rich color in preparing French coffee, which is the only way coffee should be cooked. One method of remedying this fault is to mix with the dry coffee a very little licorice, and then filter the boiling water through the whole; say to a pint of ground coffee, licorice the size of a small bean. Some of the recipes for cafe au lait in our cook books are really amusing; for instance, when a wise authority tells the reader to put a spoonful of coffee into a pint of milk and boil it fifteen minutes. It would be hard to say what sort of a beverage would be the result of such performance, but certainly it would never make the delicious coffee served in Paris, and for that matter throughout France, under the name of cafe au lait.

The French cook strains a pint or less of boiling water slowly through a pint of ground coffee. This is done by pouring on a little at a time, always being sure that the water is really boiling, and keeping the pot covered tightly while the process of filtering is going on. When finished, the coffee will be very dark and bitter, a concentrated extract. The milk should never be allowed to remain on the fire after it has boiled up once, but be served up immediately in a separate vessel; to three-quarters of a cupful of boiled milk add a quart of the coffee, and sweeten to taste. Here you have the full virtue of the stimulant, and a wholesome, nourishing drink at the same time, which is more than can be said of the great bowlful of colored water made palatable by the addition of a few spoonfuls of cream or condensed milk, and drunk by thousands of Americans every morning throughout the country.

"This, dear children, is the shoe of Chinese lady; see how little it is; what a very narrow sole it has." "I'll bet it ain't as narrow as Deacon Johnson's. Father says his soul will fall through a crack in the floor some day and get lost," was the shrill comment of a boy given to sharp listning. The superintendent put the Chinese shoe in his pocket, and requested the school to sing "Pull for the Shore."—Exchange.

◆

Meissonier to Paint a Drop-Scene.

The enterprising manager of a theater called upon a famous artist and asked him to paint a drop-scene for a certain theater and name his own terms. "You have seen my pictures, then?" asked Meissonier. "Oh, yes!" exclaimed the manager; "but it is your name, your name I want; it will draw crowds to my theater." "And how large is it you wish that curtain to be?" inquired the artist. "Ah! well, we will say 15 metres by 18." Meissonier took up a pencil and proceeded to make a calculation. At last he looked up and said, with imperturbable gravity, "I have calculated, and find that my pictures are valued at 80,000 frances per metre. Your curtain, therefore, will cost you just 21,600,000 francs. But that is not all. It takes me twelve months to paint 25 centimetres of canvas. It will, therefore, take me just 100 years to finish your curtain. You should have come to me earlier, Monsieur; I am too old for the undertaking now. Good morning."—Notes and Queries.

◆

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchites, Catarrh, Ashma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper W. W. SHERAR, 149 Powers' Block, Rochester, New York.

◆

Read This.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, agent for the GENUINE SINGER, at Spencerville, Ind. Horses and cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office at Cahill's tin-shop. 14-tf.

Application for License.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county, at their next regular session, to be held in the court-house in said county on the 7th day of June, 1880, for a license to sell spiritous, vinous and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, with the privilege of permitting the same to be drank on the premises where sold. The premises on which I desire to sell are located as follows: Commencing at a point eighteen (18) feet west of the northeast corner of lot number ninety-five (95), in the original plat of Auburn, said county, and running thence south to the south line of said lot, thence west twenty two (22) feet, thence north to the north line of said lot, thence east to the place of beginning.

WILLIAM KAINIER.

ECKHART

Carriage Works

One-half mile east of Court House.
I have constantly on hand a large stock of the latest styles of

CARRIAGES, PHAETONS, & PLATFORM SPRING WAGONS.

Three years ago my business only required a shop 18x24, and I could do all the work myself, excepting the smith work, but since then there has been such a demand for my work that I have

Greatly Increased

my facilities, and at present my shops, stock rooms and ware-rooms occupy nearly

10,000 Square Feet,

and I employ eight hands, not including myself. Having had twenty-three years experience, and being a practical mechanic in painting, wood-work and trimming, I flatter myself that I can turn out as goodwork for the money as any one in the state. Please remember that my work is fully warranted, and no misrepresentation is used to sell work

We are now turning out a finished Buggy from the rough every four days. Be sure and call at ECKHART CARRIAGE WORKS when in need of a buggy.

C. ECKHART,
Auburn, Ind.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, MAY 27, 1880.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

THE village of Stuyvesant, N. Y., has been almost entirely destroyed by an incendiary fire. Loss, $200,000....There was a triple hanging at Lebanon, Pa., on the 13th inst., the victims being Brandt, Humel and Wise, convicted of the murder of old man Raber for the purpose of securing the insurance on his life. Two men had previously been executed for the same murder.—Edwin Hunt was hanged the same day at Bridgeport, Ct., for the murder of his father.

MILTON, Pa., has been almost entirely destroyed by fire. Six hundred buildings were burned and one life lost. The loss of property is estimated at from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000, and the insurance at $500,000.... Jacob Painter, one of the founders of the iron industry of Pittsburgh, has just died, at the age of 80 years.... A murderer named Carl Manke was executed last week at Buffalo, N. Y. The monster expressed not the least regret for having killed a fellow-being, refused to see his wife, swore at those who suggested a clergyman, and went to the foot of the gallows using blasphemous and vulgar expressions.... An express-train, drawn by a new locomotive with but one six-and-a-half-foot driving wheel at each side, was run between Philadelphia and Jersey City, a distance of ninety miles, in ninety-seven minutes. The return trip was made in ninety and a half minutes.... The death is announced of Hon. Sanford E. Church, Chief Justice of the New York Court of Appeals. Judge Church was exceedingly popular with all parties in New York State. He has been frequently mentioned in connection with the Democratic Presidential nomination. He was 65 years old.

THE body of Dennis Coppers was some time ago refused burial in Calvary Cemetery, New York, on the ground that he was a Free Mason and a Protestant. The lower court gave a decision on this case adverse to the Catholic Trustees of the cemetery, but the general term of the Supreme Court has just unanimously decided that those who control the cemetery may make conditions as to the persons to be buried there, and that the burial of Dennis Coppers in Calvary Cemetery cannot be compelled.

FOREST fires still prevail in the coast counties of New Jersey, in some of which the destruction of property has been almost total. The people have fought the flames for weeks and are now exhausted and disheartened....A fire, originated by friction, broke out in the malt house of a Philadelphia brewery and damaged the concern to the extent of $200,000.

FORTY houses have been destroyed by fire at Condersport, Potter county, Pa. Loss estimated at $200,000. A planing mill and lumber yard at Pittsburgh were also burned, involving a loss of $100,000.

THE WEST.

THE Mihills Manufacturing Company's works at Fond du Lac, Wis., have been destroyed by fire. The loss is placed at $200,000, and the insurance, divided among thirty-six companies, at $69,000....Twenty-one business houses and several dwellings have been destroyed by fire at West Liberty, Ohio. The loss is placed at $300,000.

A MAN named John Allendorf, claiming to be a resident of Linn county, Kan., has arrived at Leadville with a harrowing report of a massacre in the Ute country. He says he left home in company with seventeen companions, weeks ago, and that after taking out considerable metal on the reservation his party was attacked by the savages, he only escaping to tell the story of the slaughter.

A SECRET organization has been formed at Denver, with which some 150 persons, some of them being respectable citizens, are connected, for the purpose of exploring the Gunnison country and driving out the Ute Indians.

TWENTY-FIVE men from Deadwood, Dakota, in pursuit of the murderers of John Daffenbach, the wealthy herder, have had a fight with a party of eighteen Indians, on a tributary of the Little Powder river. The conflict lasted two hours, and resulted in the death of one white man and four savages, the scattering of the remaining redskins, and the recapture of about eighty of the ponies stolen from the slaughtered frontiersman.... In the contest for the base-ball championship of 1880 the Chicago Club leads all competitors. ....A drunken man attempted to force an entrance into the house of Miss Charlotte Joiner, of Huron, Ohio. She called on him to desist, but he refused, whereupon she took down her shotgun and lodged the contents of it in his body. The intruder died of the effects soon after....David Fry and three children were burned to death near Fort Wayne, Ind.

REPORTS from the troops in pursuit of Victoria, the hostile Apache chief, show that for the last month the savages have evaded the bluecoats and killed and robbed settlers in all directions. More soldiers will be sent against the raiders....A Kansas City youth who went to a beer-garden to take charge of his brother, who was lying there in an intoxicated condition, got drunk himself, and on the way home late at night was shot and killed by a desperado.

BISHOP WILLIAM STANLEY, of the United Brethren Church, has just died at his home in Westerville, Ohio. He was one of the founders of Otterbein University. He was the father of the author of "Nellie Gray."

TELEGRAMS from Santa Fe, New Mexico, state that a band of Indians, numbering about 100, attacked Lumas' ranch, about seventy-five miles from Rito Quorado, and killed seven—two men, three women and two children. They also carried away two girls as captives. On the same day the band killed three of Placido Romero's herders. Gen. Hatch was following Victoria. The horses of the command having given out, the soldiers were walking afoot, sore and shoeless. Many of them were still plucky and persevering.....Dakota wheat is 20 per cent. better than at this time last year, and the wheat acreage along the line of the Northern Pacific railroad is about 10,000,000 against 6,000,000 last year.

POLITICAL.

S. B. CONOVER has been nominated for Governor by the Republicans of Florida.

THE Vermont Greenbackers met in convention at Montpelier on the 13th inst., and selected delegates to their National Convention. ....The following is from the Boston Advertiser of the 14th inst.: "In an interview with E. B. Washburne, visiting his brother at Portland, he states his candidacy for the Presidency is out of the question. He is for Grant first, last and all the time, repudiates all combinations with other candidates, and will not be a candidate under any circumstances. The charge that he is guilty of duplicity toward Grant he denies, and says the result of the Cook County Convention was a greater surprise to him than any one else."

A LETTER has been sent to Senator Don Cameron, Chairman of the National Republican Committee, signed by 118 Republicans of the Senate and House, asking that seats be provided at Chicago for seventy-six women citizens, delegates of the State and National Women-Suffrage Associations. A similar letter to the National Democratic Committee is in circulation on the Democratic side of the House.

THE California Workingmen's Convention adopted resolutions favoring the nomination of Senator Thurman for President.

THE Minnesota Republican Convention, held at St. Paul, May 19, instructed the delegates to Chicago to vote for Senator Windom for President. A resolution declaring Blaine to be the second choice of the convention was voted down. An anti-third-term resolution was referred to a committee and not reported back.... The Dakota Republicans have selected two delegates to the Chicago Convention for Windom first, and Blaine second....The Virginia Democratic Convention selected twenty-two delegates to the National Convention at Cincinnati. They are uninstructed, but are understood to be favorable to Judge Field.

THE SOUTH.

A SOUTH CAROLINA man chopped his wife's head off with an ax, and drowned himself in a mill pond in the presence of a pursuing party.

A TEXAS desperado named Burr had a disagreement with his wife. The latter proceeded to her mother's house, whither Burr followed her, fired at her twice, assaulted her sister with the butt end of his revolver, and fatally shot his mother-in-law. The ruffian then used the muzzle of the revolver on himself, happily with deadly effect.

SENATOR GORDON, of Georgia, has resigned, and Joseph E. Brown has been appointed his successor....Ex-Gov. Henry S. Foote, Superintendent of the United States Mint at New Orleans, died at his home near Nashville, Tenn., a few days ago. Foote has been a prominent figure in Southern politics for nearly fifty years. He was formerly United States Senator from Mississippi, and defeated Jeff. Davis for Governor of that State thirty years ago.

SEVEN Mexicans recently crossed the Rio Grande into Texas, robbed a store, murdered the storekeeper and outraged a servant girl. The Mexican commander was notified, and he has arrested five of the scoundrels and hopes to capture the other two.

GENERAL.

THE steamship companies are unable to accommodate all the persons who wish to leave Great Britain and Ireland for this country. Twenty-two emigrant vessels left Queenstown, last week, for New York....Gen. Sherman and Quartermaster General Meiggs have written to the Secretary of War urging the completion of the Northern Pacific railroad. They agree in saying that it would be of great advantage in conveying troops, would save considerable expense to the War Department, and would facilitate the establishment of new military posts in closer proximity to the Indian tribes than present circumstances will permit.

IN the Whittaker investigation at West Point, all the five experts in penmanship expressed the belief that Whittaker wrote the note of warning, and one of them created a sensation by testifying that the note of warning was written on a piece of paper torn from a sheet on which Whittaker commenced a letter to his mother. Whittaker still stoutly maintains his innocence.

A PARTY of filibustering patriots has landed in Cuba. They are said to be provided with large quantities of dynamite and blasting powder, and a goodly number of excellent rifles. There is a pretty fair percentage of Americans reported among the party.

WASHINGTON.

THE Chief of the Bureau of Statistics furnishes the following information in regard to immigration into the port of New York. There arrived during the month of April, 1880, 49,413 passengers, 46,821 of whom were immigrants. During the corresponding period of 1879 the total number of passengers arrived was 14,394, of whom 11,601 were immigrants. The arrivals at the port of New York during the twelve months ended April 30, 1880, as compared with the twelve months ended April 30, 1879, were as follows:

	1880.	1879.
Immigrants	198,875	86,905
Citizens of United States returned	31,798	35,858
Sojourners	6,027	6,129
Total	236,701	128,892

A REPORT transmitted to Congress by the Secretary of the Interior concerning the frauds and corrupt practices of Indian Agents, mentions the names of eight removed or suspended on account of frauds, corrupt practices, etc.: George W. Frost, at the Crow Agency, Montana; W. H. Danilson, at the Fort Hall Agency, Idaho; F. S. Godfroy, Agent at Mescalero Apache Agency, New Mexico; H. W. Jones, at the Quapaw Agency, Indian Territory. The others are at Livingston, Bridgeman, Whiteman, and Hart.

THE President threatens to call an extra session if Congress shall adjourn without making some provision for counting the electoral vote....One J. M. George, a contractor, makes serious charges of corruption and bribery against several Congressmen and Senators in connection with the Texas and Pacific land-grants. He says $900,000 in money and $200,000 worth of land-grant bonds were used to induce Senators to vote for the land-grant, and about $1,000,000 was distributed among the members of the House to influence their votes.

DURING the debate on the Agricultural bill in the House of Representatives, Mr. Gillette (of Iowa) offered to amend by setting apart $50,000 to be expended in experiments for the manufacture of sugar from corn-stalks. He made the startling statement that after the corn has been gathered the stalks will yield a sugar crop equal in value to the corn crop at 50 cents a bushel. In the Northwest, where corn is worth 20 cents a bushel, the sugar crop from the dry stalks would be worth from two to three times that of corn itself. This immense capacity to produce sugar, if taken advantage of, would put the country beyond the necessity of importing any sugar at all....The President has decided to appoint Horace Maynard, at present Minister to Turkey, to succeed Judge Key as Postmaster General.

THE President has nominated Horace Maynard, at present Minister to Turkey, to be Postmaster General; Gen. James Longstreet, of Georgia, to be Minister to Turkey, and ex-Postmaster General Key to be District Judge for the Eastern and Middle districts of Tennessee.....The Hanlan-Courtney rowing match occurred at Washington last week. Hanlan won in thirty-six and a half minutes. Courtney did not complete the course; he had been complaining of headache all day.

FOREIGN.

RUSSIA is placing the roads to China in condition to transport troops and supplies in the event of war with the Celestials....The Emperor of Russia will visit the Emperor of Germany next summer....The Afghan war has cost England and India the handsome sum of $65,000,000.

JAPAN rejects the proposals of China for an alliance against Russia....Russia proposes to place five ironclads in the Pacific to be in readiness should a war with China become necessary....It is thought in Berlin that when the German army is fully recruited under the recently passed Army act its effective strength will be 2,000,000.

QUEEN VICTORIA has been on a few days' visit to London. She drove in Hyde Park through an immense concourse of people and carriages. The Queen was in an open barouche with outriders, John Brown occupying the dickey. She drove from Hyde Park corner to Victoria gate through a double lane of carriages filled with fashionable people, and dense crowds of lower classes concentrated at different points. Gentlemen raised their hats, ladies bowed, but not a single cheer was given along the whole route....A boiler explosion in London killed twenty-five persons and injured twenty others, several of whom will die.

THE Italian elections have resulted in the triumph of the Ministerial party....The revolutionary patriots in the island of Cuba have formed a provisional Government, with Gen. Ynignez as President; P. O. Rosad, Minister of the Interior and War; Senor Fonseca, Minister of Foreign Affairs; and Senor Lamadrid, Diplomatic Commissioner to the United States....A letter from Aleppo states that the famine now raging there is appalling. Hundreds of men, women, and children throng the streets in the vicinity of the Governor's residence praying and fighting for bread.... Resistance to eviction seems to be the order of the day in the West of Ireland. Bailiffs and constables and Sheriffs have a rather rough time, and retire from the field with heads needing surgical treatment. The peasants usually retire to their intrenchments behind shillalahs. ....There is a prospect that the war in Afghanistan will soon be brought to a close. The native tribes evince a desire to make submission on anything like fair terms.

THE Rev. Mr. Larabee, an American missionary residing in Persia, sends the most alarming accounts of the extent and severity of the famine in the northern provinces of that country. The majority of the people, he says, are living on a few scanty roots....Thirteen persons concerned in wrecking a train in one of the Spanish provinces have been sentenced to death, and thirteen others to imprisonment for twenty years each.

CABLE dispatches indicate that the last extremity of distress has been reached in the famine-stricken regions of Northern Hungary. At three minor towns no less than 1,400 people are reported to be without other food than nettles, mushrooms, and grass.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

The President pro tem. of the Senate laid before that body, on Thursday, May 13, a communication asking for $57,000 for deficiency in the service of the land offices. Mr. Voorhees submitted a resolution directing the Secretary of the Interior to report to the Senate the names of all railroad corporations in the United States to whom grants of land have been made by compliance with the terms of the grants within the time specified therein; also the number of acres of unearned lands claimed by each of such railroad corporations, and the period of time when their right to them expired under the limitation contained in said grants. Adopted. A bill abolishing tolls on the Louisville and Portland canal, and authorizing the Government to operate the waterway was passed. Messrs. Hampton and Carpenter debated the Kellogg case, both in favor of Mr. Kellogg retaining his seat. Ralph P. Buckland, of Ohio; Charles C. Housel, of Nebraska; George B. Smyth, of Iowa, and Daniel Chadwick, of Connecticut, were appointed Government Directors of the Union Pacific Railway Company....At 10:30 Wednesday's session of the House was continued. The Speaker announced the appointment of Mr. Culbertson in place of Bregan as member of the committee to investigate the alleged corruption in the election case of Donnelly vs. Washburn. The House went into committee of the whole on the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill. At noon the session became the regular Thursday meeting, and the committee consideration of the Legislative bill was continued. Mr. Springer replied to Mr. Orth's explanation of the Venezuela matter. Mr. Cobb introduced a bill appropriating $9,000,000 to supply the deficiencies in the appropriations for the payment of pensions for the present fiscal year, and asked for its present consideration. It went back to the committee.

In the Senate, on Friday, May 14, Mr. Thurman called up a joint resolution authorizing a court of inquiry in the case of Thomas Worthington, late Colonel of the Forty-sixth Ohio Volunteers, and it was passed, with amendment. The bill providing for additional accommodations for the Congressional Library was passed as amended. Messrs. Pendleton and Cameron, of Wisconsin, spoke upon the case of Kellogg, both against unseating the sitting member. Adjourned to Monday. The President appointed N. G. Ordway, of New Hampshire, formerly Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives, Governor of Dakota Territory....In the House, the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill was considered in committee and afterward passed. Mr. Gibson reported a resolution for adjournment May 31, which met with much opposition, and threatened filibustering by members who favored legislation upon the tariff at the present session. The matter was undecided. The House met at 7:30 and immediately went into committee of the whole on the bill regulating the municipal code of the District of Columbia.

The Senate was not in session on Saturday, May 15....By a vote of 121 to 90 the House of Representatives adopted a resolution to adjourn May 31. The resolution was vigorously opposed by some of the low-tariff members and by the friends of some pending bills which do not relate to the tariff. Almost all the Republicans voted for the resolution, and a majority of the Democrats voted against it.

Copies of reports upon Alaskan affairs were received by the Senate on the morning of Monday, May 17, from the Secretary of the Treasury, in response to a request. A communication from the Secretary of War was received, transmitting the petition of officers of the army for the enactment of such legislation as will entitle all Lieutenants of the army who have served fourteen years in the grade of Lieutenant to the rank of Captain. A bill passed for the construction of a public building at Peoria, Ill. Mr. Bayard, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported the bill lately introduced by him, regulating the pay and appointment of Deputy Marshals. Mr. Vance submitted a resolution directing the Secretary of the Treasury to inform the Senate what method is observed in the revenue service in subtracting tare on foreign sugars imported in boxes. Adopted. On motion of Mr. Pendleton, the Senate passed the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to furnish artillery, tents, etc., for use at the soldiers' and sailors' reunion at Columbus, Ohio, in August, 1880. The Postoffice Appropriation bill was taken up and passed, as amended. A message from the President was received, inclosing a synopsis by Secretary Evarts of the correspondence between this Government and that of Great Britain in relation to the Fortune bay outrages. Mr. Hayes and the Secretary agree that it is the imperative duty of the United States to consider what measures should be taken to maintain the rights of Americans under the treaty of Washington, and to obtain redress for the denial of those rights. Mr. Evarts advises the President to recommend that Congress reinforce the duties on fish and fish oil, the product of provincial fisheries, as they existed before the treaty of Washington came into operation, to so continue until the two Governments shall arrive at an agreement regarding the interpretation of the treaty....In the House bills were introduced: By Mr. Cox, requesting the President to communicate to the House all correspondence in regard to the persecution of the Jews by the Russian Government; by Mr. Young (Ohio), to tax and regulate the manufacture and sale of glucose or grape sugar; by Mr. Young (Tenn.), calling on the Secretary of the Interior for copies of the written testimony taken by the commission to investigate the charges against the Indian Bureau; by Mr. Turner, proposing a constitutional amendment prohibiting Congress passing a bill appropriating more than $10,000, except by vote of a majority of the members elected; by Mr. Whitthorne, for the adoption of a suitable meter to accurately measure the quantity and test the gravity and temperature of distilled and malt liquor. After a short debate the motion to suspend the rules and pass the River and Harbor Appropriation bill was agreed to—yeas, 179; nays, 47. The bill authorizing national banks to loan money on mortgages was defeated. A bill was passed providing times and places for holding United States Circuit Courts for the District of Iowa.

Mr. Davis, of Illinois, from the Judiciary Committee, reported favorably to the Senate, May 18, on the bill to establish a District and Circuit Court at Chattanooga, and to add the county of Grundy to the Eastern district of Tennessee. The bill passed. The bill for a public building at Pittsburgh was passed, as were the bills for an additional land district in Kansas, and to construe and define the act to cede to the State of Ohio unsold lands in Virginia, the military district of that State. A resolution was agreed to asking what action had been taken in regard to the claim of Kansas for 5 per cent. of her sales of public land. Messrs. Withers, Beck and Booth were appointed members of the conference committee on the Postoffice Appropriation bill. Messrs Saulsbury and Morgan spoke in favor of Spofford in the contested-election case from Louisiana. It was resolved that on and after Thursday next the Senate meet at 11 a. m. The Committee on Appropriations was given leave to sit during the daily sessions of the Senate for the remainder of the session. The President nominated Nathan Goff, Jr., of Clarksburg, to be United States Attorney for West Virginia, and Andrew J. Evans, of Waco, to be United States Attorney for the Western district of Texas....In the House, Mr. Loring introduced a bill to give effect to the message of the President relative to the outrages upon our fishermen under the Washington treaty. An act to place colored persons who enlisted in the army on the same footing as other soldiers as to bounty and pension was passed. The Pension Deficiency bill was passed. The Agricultural Appropriation bill was referred to the committee of the whole, where it was discussed at length and amended. An evening session was held, when the Court of Pensions bill was debated.

On the meeting of the Senate on Wednesday, May 19, Mr. McMillan presented various communications favoring the bill for establishment of a school of forestry. Mr. Cameron presented the petition of the widow of Gen. Heintzelman praying a pension of $50 per month. A short debate upon the Political Assessments bill took place. Senator Butler, of South Carolina, opposed reopening the Louisiana contested-election case in a speech. The President nominated Horace Maynard, of Tennessee, for Postmaster General; James Longstreet, of Georgia, Minister to Turkey, and David M. Key to be United States District Judge for the Eastern and Middle districts of Tennessee....In the House, the Agricultural Appropriation bill passed with several amendments, and then, by a vote of 106 against 97, the House went into committee of the whole on motion of Mr. Tucker, who stated his intention to call up the Tariff bill. The opponents of the tariff succeeded in postponing consideration of this bill, and the House adjourned till evening, when a session was held for consideration of the District Code.

CURIOUS AND INTERESTING.

THE full capacity of the lungs is about 320 cubic inches.

THE human skeleton consists of more than 200 distinct bones.

ABOUT two-thirds of a pint of air is inhaled at each breath in ordinary respiration.

THE weight of the heart is from eight to twelve ounces. It beats 100,000 times in twenty-four hours.

AN amount of blood equal to the whole quantity of the body passes through the heart every minute.

THERE are more than 500 separate muscles in the body, and an equal number of nerves and blood vessels.

THE skin contains more than 2,000,000 openings, which are the outlets for an equal number of sweat glands.

A MAN breathes eighteen times a minute, and uses 3,000 cubic feet, or about 375 hogsheads of air per hour.

EACH perspiratory duct is one-fourth of an inch in length, which will make the aggregate length of the whole about nine miles.

EVERY adult man has 1,400 square feet of lungs; or rather the mucous membranes lining the air-cells of his lungs, if spread upon a smooth, plane surface, would cover an extent of 1,400 square feet.

THE changes in the color of the sea have attracted the attention of seafaring men from the earliest times. They struck with wonder the Phœnicians when first they ventured out of the Mediterranean into the Atlantic; they excited the astonishment of Columbus and terrified his companions, while in search of the far-famed Indies; and they are no less a surprise to the modern navigator, to whom the march of discovery has left few unexplored regions in store. One of the most remarkable and most widely distributed contrasts of color is that which is known to exist between the intensely blue seas situated between the tropics and the green seas of higher latitudes. It appears as the result of recent observations, and more especially of a series of experiments made on board the German frigate Gazelle, that there is an intimate relation between the color of sea water and the proportion of salt held in solution by the latter. On comparing the specific gravity of green water with that of blue water, it was found that the latter is always heavier than the former, and, therefore, at the same time more salt, the two differently colored waters being supposed to have the same temperature. In other words, the greater or lesser intensity of the blue color of sea water may be taken as a direct index of its saltness and of its specific gravity, so that when we observe the color of the water successively change from deep blue to a bluish green and a dark green, we may conclude that the water has become at the same time less salty and less heavy.

A New Kind of Foppery.

It is one of the least of Mr. Weed's merits that he has thoroughly learned the art of making politics interesting to the middle classes.—New York Tribune.

The middle classes!

A day or two ago we received a letter from a friend, saying: "We rode up from Albany in a palace car, and felt quite above the middle classes."

A great metropolitan journal and our friend employ a phrase, the meaning of which puzzles us a little.

In this country all men are supposed to be equal. The constitution was framed with that intent. Five hundred thousand men laid down their lives to wipe out the color-line at the South. The laws recognize no class distinction.

What puts a man in the "middle class," as the term is applied above? What individuals are we to recognize as members of the higher class? Whom shall we place in the third? It is easy enough to rate some things in this way, but how establish titles and cast among the American people? Is Mrs. Ignorant Commonplace to be put in the first rank because she has money? Is Mr. Incompetent Meekface to be equally distinguished because his father served in Congress? Shall we understand that Miss Intelligence goes down a peg because she teaches school? and that young Mr. Worthless belongs to the inner circle because he has never learned how to make a living by honest labor? It is for thoughtful people to ponder on these forced distinctions, and what they imply.—Albany Journal.

Mark Twain as a German Scholar.

I went often to look at the collection of curiosities in Heidelberg Castle, and one day surprised the keeper of it with my German. I spoke entirely in that language. He was greatly interested, and, after I had talked awhile, he said my German was very rare, possibly a "unique," and wanted to add it to his museum. If he had known what it cost me to acquire my art he would also have known that it would break any collector to buy it. Surely there is not another language that is so slipshod and systemless, and so slippery and illusive to the grasp. One is washed about in it, hither and thither, in the most helpless way, and, when at last he thinks he has captured a rule which offers firm ground to take a rest on amid the general rage and turmoil of the parts of speech, he turns over a page and reads, "Let the pupil make careful note of the following exceptions." He runs his eye down and finds there are more exceptions to the rule than instances of it. So overboard he goes again to hunt for another Ararat and to find another quicksand. German books are easy enough to read when you hold them before the looking-glass or stand on your head—so as to reverse the construction—but I think that to learn to read and understand a German newspaper is a thing which must always remain an impossibility to any foreigner.

COL. DAHLGREN.

The Story of His Death Retold.

[R. Bartley in Philadelphia Times.]

It was now beginning to get dark, and we wanted some rest and something to eat, and crossing a creek we halted in an old field, where Col. Dahlgren took a short nap. We were soon moving again, and had not marched above half a mile, when the advance was stopped by an obstruction in the road. Lieut. Merritt rode back and met the Colonel and asked for more men. The Colonel, Maj. Cook, myself and ten or twenty men rode rapidly to the front, and upon arriving at the trees that were across the road we were met by an order to surrender, both parties demanding a surrender at the same time. Col. Dahlgren then leveled his revolver at the person who seemed to be the officer in command of the Confederates, but his pistol missed fire. In an instant a volley was poured into our left flank the whole length of our line, and so close that the flashes almost reached our horses. This caused a stampede, as every horse in our command turned and broke down the road. After going a few yards we checked up and crossed a fence on our right, and formed on the top of a ridge a few rods from the road. We now began to look who was missing, and found the Colonel was not on hand. This a number of us were aware of before, having seen him fall off his horse by the light of the flash of the guns. Maj. Cooke was not on horseback, for when we reached the ridge his horse fell at the same fire that killed the Colonel. In fact, there was only one volley; not a shot fired afterward nor a man to be seen. We were allowed to form in the field in peace, and had we a guide we might still have reached Gloucester Point, on Gen. Butler's lines; but we were now entirely without any knowledge of the surroundings; the men almost dead for sleep and out of ammunition; the horses about played out and every one more or less demoralized. And was it strange? We had been in the saddle for seventy-six hours without a halt long enough to get any sleep. A council was now held to determine what should be done, for we did not intend to give up. It was finally agreed upon to fasten the horses in a hollow square by fastening the sabers into the ground, and then every one try to make his escape. The commissioned officers—Maj. Cooke, Lieut. Merritt and myself—together with four scouts and guides, were to go in a party. We intended to cross the country, going north, and strike the Rappahannock river below Fredericksburg and get one of our picket boats.

We left the men and horses and crep like cats to the woods (the same we had ambushed from) and through the bushet about a mile, when it began to break day, March 3. We hid in a pine thicket all day, and at dark set out. I had with me a compass and a good topographical map of that part of Virginia, which enabled us to select our route. We traveled this night about two miles, when we were getting weak for lack of something to eat, and, coming to a log cabin near the woods, we made a reconnoissance of the premises, and found the occupants to be a white man and woman. We went in and asked for something to eat, and, while we were sitting in the house waiting for it to be got ready, the door was opened, and we were politely told to surrender, which Maj. Cooke, being the ranking officer, very politely did. And thus ended one of the most extraordinary expeditions of the war, when we consider the number of men and the distance traveled, the number captured and the amount of damage done the enemy, and the fact that we were closer to the city of Richmond than any other Union troops had been or were until the city fell into our hands in 1865. We were taken the next day, March 4, to Stevensville, and from there started to Libby in charge of Capt. Magruder's company of cavalry. These troops were gentlemen, and treated us as well as circumstances would permit.

Col. Scott's Successor as President of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Thirty years ago George B. Roberts, then sitting at his desk in a surveyor's office, and serving the Pennsylvania railroad as a rodman, is reported to have said that he had rather be President of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company than of the United States. In little more than a month he will attain his ambition, for his succession is almost absolutely certain. He has been close beside Col. Scott for many years. He first entered the service of the company, five months later than Col. Scott, as rodman in the engineer corps. During the summer following his accession to the road, in March, 1851, he became assistant engineer in charge of the division on the summit that included the great tunnel. In 1852, in the fall, he left the Pennsylvania to become assistant engineer of the Philadelphia and Erie, and, during the years that followed, he was actively employed in building railroads. He was an engineer on the North Pennsylvania, which was opened in 1855, and on the Northwestern. On the Allentown, the Mahony and Broad Mountain, and the West Jersey he was Chief Engineer, and filled that office when they were completed. In 1862, on May 28, he was called to the position of assistant to the President of the Pennsylvania railroad, on account of his engineering skill and ability as an administrative officer. Seven years later, on May 3, 1869, he was made Fourth Vice President, and March 26, 1873, Second Vice President. When Col. Scott was elected President, June 3, 1874, Mr. Roberts succeeded him as First Vice President, and, during Col. Scott's absence in Europe for a year and a half, he was acting President. He has for many years occupied a prominent position in the boards of roads controlled by the Pennsylvania, and, as has been stated above, has already succeeded Col. Scott in most of the Western boards.—Philadelphia North American.

The Best Vehicle.

An anecdote is told of a physician who was called to a foreign family to prescribe for a case of incipient consumption. He gave them a prescription for pills, and wrote the direction: "One pill to be taken three times a day, in any convenient vehicle." The family looked in the dictionary to get at the meaning of that prescription. They got on well until they got to the word vehicle. They found "cart, wagon, carriage, buggy, wheelbarrow." After grave consideration they came to the conclusion that the doctor meant the patient should ride out, and while in the vehicle he should take the pill. He followed the advice to the letter, and in a few weeks the fresh air and exercise secured the advantage which otherwise might not have come.

Reminiscences of Early Railroading.

Mr. J. H. Jackman in a recent letter shows that, in the matter of speed, locomotive engines of to-day are not greatly superior to those of earlier times. He says: "In 1840 Ross Winans, of Baltimore, built a locomotive for the Boston and Worcester railroad. It had a seven-foot driving-wheel, and was intended for very high speed. It had steel springs to support the weight, and was fitted with many new devices. I was sent to Baltimore to look after the construction and delivery of this locomotive, and also to study the matter of coal-burning, which was a new thing on roads in New England at that time. I ran the engine for about six weeks, and should have run her longer but from the fact of her driving-wheels breaking. They were made entirely of cast iron, with chilled faces. These broken drivers were replaced with imported wrought-iron wheels, the first of the kind ever imported. The locomotive was named the Carroll of Carrollton. Its speed, under favorable circumstances, was one mile in sixty seconds, the fastest I ever ran it; the trial was not accurately noted, I having enough to do to attend the machine, and those with me were too much flustered with the excitement to accurately note anything. I have traveled many thousand miles on locomotives since that day in order to test speed; and, while I have seen some high speed made, still I have never seen the locomotive that could lay right down to it and outrun the Carroll of Carrollton. In those days we had no power brakes, and to run at such high rates of speed sometimes became dangerous. I remember one instance in the night time of rounding a curve at about sixty miles an hour, when a danger signal met my view; I shut off steam and whistled down brakes, but they did not seem to check me. I whistled again. Still the speed kept up. I gave the third signal for brakes, and then reversed my engine, saying to her: 'Do your duty, my beauty, or in twenty seconds it is good-by to railroading.' We came to a stand-still eighty rods from a train on the main track, having run one mile and a quarter from the place where I first discovered the red light."

A Plug of Tobacco.

One day last month when trade was dull a grocery clerk procured a piece of sole leather from a shoemaker, painted it black and laid it aside for future use. Within a few days an old chap from back in the country came in and inquired for a plug of chewing tobacco. The piece of sole leather was tied up, paid for, and the purchaser started for home. At the end of the sixth day he returned, looking downcast and dejected, and, walking into the store, he inquired for the clerk:

"'Member that terbacker I got here the other day?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, was that a new brand?"

"Yes."

"Regular plug terbacker was it?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, it's me. It's right here in my jaws," sadly replied the old man. "I knowed I was getten purty old, but I was allus handy on bitin' plug. I never seed a plug afore this one that I couldn't tear to pieces at a chaw. I sot my teeth on this one and bit and pulled and twisted like a dog at a root, and I've kept biting and pulling for six days, and thar she am now, the same as the day you sold her to me."

"Seems to be a good plug," remarked the clerk, as he smelt of the counterfeit.

"She's all right; it's me that's failing," exclaimed the old man. "Pass me out some fine cut and I'll go home and deed the farm to the boys and get ready for the grave myself."—Fort Worth (Tex.) Advance.

THE weight of the average male adult is 140 pounds.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$8 50	@10 50
Hogs	4 63	@ 5 50
Cotton	11⅛	@ 12
Flour—Superfine	4 00	@ 4 80
Wheat—No. 2	1 22	@ 1 31
Corn—Western Mixed	50	@ 54
Oats—Mixed	41	@ 46
Rye—Western	90	@ 92
Pork—Mess	11 00	@11 30
Lard	7¼	@ 7½
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	4 45	@ 4 85
Cows and Heifers	2 60	@ 4 05
Medium to Fair	4 00	@ 4 15
Hogs	3 80	@ 4 55
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex.	5 50	@ 6 25
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 00	@ 5 50
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	1 15	@ 1 17
No. 3 Spring	93	@ 95
Corn—No. 2	37	@ 38
Oats—No. 2	31	@ 33
Rye—No. 2	81	@ 82
Barley—No. 2	78	@ 79
Butter—Choice Creamery	20	@ 21
Eggs—Fresh	9	@ 9½
Pork—Mess	10 40	@10 50
Lard	6¾	@ 7
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	1 16	@ 1 18
No. 2	1 11	@ 1 12
Corn—No. 2	37	@ 38
Oats—No. 2	31	@ 32
Rye—No. 1	84	@ 85
Barley—No. 2	69	@ 70
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red Fall	1 07	@ 1 08
Corn—Mixed	34	@ 35
Oats—No. 2	31	@ 32
Rye	87	@ 88
Pork—Mess	10 50	@10 60
Lard	6¾	@ 7
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	1 15	@ 1 16
Corn	40	@ 41
Oats	36	@ 37
Rye	93	@ 94
Pork—Mess	10 50	@10 75
Lard	6¾	@ 7
TOLEDO.
Wheat—Amber Michigan	1 17	@ 1 18
No. 2 Red	1 18	@ 1 19
Corn—No. 2	41	@ 42
Oats—No. 2	34	@ 35
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	5 50	@ 5 75
Wheat—No. 1 White	1 15	@ 1 16
No. 1 Amber	1 14	@ 1 15
Corn—No. 1	43	@ 44
Oats—Mixed	37	@ 38
Barley (per cental)	1 25	@ 1 65
Pork—Mess	11 50	@12 00
INDIANAPOLIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	1 09	@ 1 10
Corn	36	@ 38
Oats	33	@ 36
Pork—Clear	12 00	@12 50
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	5 00	@ 5 25
Fair	4 50	@ 4 90
Common	3 50	@ 3 75
Hogs	4 20	@ 4 55
Sheep	4 25	@ 5 25

THE AUBURN COURIER.

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED, ROB. J. LOWRY, Editors.

THE [illegible] of Harvard [illegible] statistics showing that out of 942 Harvard students who graduated between 1869 and 1875, inclusive, 369 were Unitarians or Liberals, 217 Episcopalians, 126 Orthodox Congregationalists, 48 Baptists, 12 Swedenborgians, 4 other trinitarians, 2 Quakers, 29 Catholics, 2 Jews, 1 Mormon, and 118 undecided. Seats are furnished the students at the expense of the college at any church of their own election.

A GIRL at [illegible], who was very disconsolate over the loss of a lover, but was uncertain whether she really wished to commit suicide. In order to test the question, she let herself down into a stream with a rope, so that she could either let go and drown, or hold fast and save herself. She found that immersion in the water did not make her desire to live, and she discarded the rope. But her suicide was prevented, after all, by boatmen.

THE United States District Attorney of New York city, at the instance of Collector Merritt, has commenced proceedings against the proprietors of fifteen ocean steamships for carrying more passengers than the law allows. The practice of overcrowding emigrant vessels during the spring months has grown to be a gross abuse. Unfortunate immigrants to this country have been scandalously treated for several years, and it is time that some restraint should be placed on the greedy ship corporations.

W. L. FOX, a young oil producer, said to be worth $3,000,000, the largest owner of private iron tankage in the oil regions and the only producer owning an individual pipe line of any size, recently died on a railroad train near Clarion, Pa. He was to be witness in a murder trial, and, having forgotten a revolver he was to produce and identify, had the train stopped and ran some distance to his house and back. He sank into a seat exhausted by the effort, and when the conductor came to speak with him in a few minutes he was dead.

A CORRESPONDENT writes that the spider which hanged a mouse at Fort Wayne recently did not set the fashion. A similar performance was witnessed many years ago in Albion. A young garter snake, six or seven inches long, was discovered under an old counter partially suspended by a spider's web. In a few hours it was noticed that the snake was being gradually lifted from the floor. Whenever he struggled the spider could be seen darting about from line to line, evidently drawing in the slack. The operation continued till the body of the snake was dangling in the air.

WILLIAM P. [illegible] was on his death-bed at Columbus, Ind. The physician told him that he could not live many hours. "Are you sure I can't get well?" the patient asked; "I don't want you to make a mistake about it. Is there a possibility of recovery?" He was assured that his speedy demise was absolutely certain. Then he explained why he was so anxious to get exact information. He had murdered a man twelve years before, and had never been suspected of the crime. He desired to confess and be forgiven, if he was really going to die, but not otherwise. He died, and the truth of his statement has been amply sustained.

THE curious fact that a bullet fired into a person loses weight, although unaccountably so, has just been made evident by Prof. Lewis Balch, of Albany, N. Y., in the progress of the Billings murder trial. Defense laid great stress upon the point that the bullet which caused Mrs. Billings' death weighed fifty-five grains less than the bullet carried by Billings' carbine, with which he was said to have committed the deed; but Prof. Balch testified that he had shot two bullets through two heads and found that each weighed 221 grains before they were fired, but that afterward they weighed 169 and 159½ grains each, although, after taking every precaution, he could only find one particle of lead which weighed less than one-seventh of a grain.

PROF. WICKERSHEIMER, the celebrated taxidermist attached to the Anatomical Museum of Berlin, has just discovered a liquid which, injected into the veins of dead meat, not only preserves it for several weeks from decay, but keeps it perfectly fresh and in possession of its natural flavor. Having treated a slaughtered calf with his new preparation, and subsequently caused it to be exposed for a fortnight to the air and weather changes, hanging in the open front of a butcher's shop, he invited a select party of scientific celebrities to partake of the meat thus tested, providing for them, however, other viands in case the prepared veal should fail to suit their palates. The professor's guests, however, found his piece de resistance so toothsome and delicate that they confined their attentions to it exclusively, neglecting all the other solid items in his menu.

A MILITARY small-arm manufacturer at Wurzburg has invented a simple apparatus which will enable any ordinary breech-loading rifle or gun with central ignition to be used as a saloon rifle, thus enabling men to be exercised at target practice in the drill shed, or even in their rooms. The invention consists of a tube of cast steel of the same length as the barrel of the rifle, with which it is to be used, but of very small caliber. This tube is fitted with brass rings about an inch wide, which enable it to be pushed into and pulled out of the barrel of a rifle without in any way injuring the interior of the piece. The cartridge used is of steel, and is so designed that none of the gas generated by the explosion of the small charge of detonating substance used to propel the bullet can escape to injure the bore of the rifle.

IT is said that Martin Battles, who, twenty years ago, murdered a man through jealousy in Chautauqua county, N. Y., has lately become insane through remorse, imagining that the ghost of his victim continually follows him. His escape from punishment was curious. He was tried, convicted and sentenced to death. During the previous year the Legislature had passed a law defining the degrees of murder and declaring the penalty for murder in the first degree should be imprisonment for one year, after which, upon a warrant issued by the Governor, the convicted person should be taken out and executed. Under this statute Battles was sentenced and incarcerated at Auburn. During his imprisonment the Court of Appeals declared the statute under which he was convicted unconstitutional, and he was released.

INDIA is coming forward as a tea-growing country, and in 1879 furnished Great Britain nearly one-fifth of its annual supply. The tea product of India is steadily increasing, having risen from 27,814,000 pounds in 1876 to 35,420,000 in 1878. The tea is stronger and cheaper than the Chinese teas, but is said to be not so mildly flavored. Small consignments which have reached this country, however, have been highly praised by New York tea-tasters. As the English statutes against adulteration are vigorously enforced in India, 7,000 chests of tea adulterated by "dust" were burned recently. Indian teas are not "faced" or colored as Chinese teas are, and the leaf presents a more irregular appearance. The new teas as they come into use are likely to displace the Chinese teas of the lower grade, a result generally desirable.

PHILADELPHIA is astonished to find that it is to have an elevated railroad. The enterprise was kept a secret until very lately, and the first public intimation of it was the rapid demolition of [illegible] within the city. [illegible] to run on property owned by the company, except where it crosses streets. The projectors are the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and it is to run from their present depot in West Philadelphia, to Broad and Market streets, in the heart of the city. The [illegible] purchasing the ground of its 250 owners was undertaken a year ago by trusty agents, and the buyers were over 100 different persons, who resold to the company at the proper time. By this plan the property was all acquired at reasonable prices. The structure is to be of brick and iron, and the Schuylkill is to be crossed by a massive bridge.

Two Children Commit Suicide Together.

Our Hungarian contemporaries report a peculiarly painful case of double suicide committed by two shepherd boys, respectively aged 10 and 12, near Karlsburg. These lads were in charge of a flock of sheep turned out to graze on some grass land abutting upon the Karlsburg-Arad railway, and had been several times reproved by the watchman stationed near the pasturage ground for allowing the sheep to stray on the line. On the 6th inst., just as the Arad express was sighted, several sheep had wandered on the embankment and were in imminent danger of being crushed by the train, from which, however, they were rescued by the timely intervention of the watchman in question, who, as soon as the train had passed, seized up the boys and told them that he would have them severely punished for neglecting their duty and his repeated warnings. The terrified lads held consultation together as to how they might escape the threatened penalty, and speedily came to the conclusion that the best way of getting out of their scrape would be to drown themselves. One of them had just had a new hat, adorned with a gay peacock's feather, given to him, which he sold for 13 kreuzers to a little peasant girl, who had been at play with the boys when the dreadful menace of punishment was imparted to them. With the price of this hat he purchased some small loaves, and the three children sat down by the Maros to hold their "Pamona," or death-feast, and, this being terminated, the boys climbed the parapet of the Maros bridge; their tiny playmate counted aloud, "One, two, three," and at the word "three" they sprung, hand-in-hand, into the river, sinking immediately under the broken ice with which the surface of the rapid stream was partially covered.—London Telegraph.

NEW ORLEANS has shipped to France and Italy within a year 2,400,000 gallons of cotton-seed oil.

FARM NOTES.

MR. ERASTUS BAILEY, Little Compton, R. I., has kept 1,000 to 1,200 hens during the past five years, and realized from each an annual profit of $1.75.

FOR applying to wounds made by removing large limbs in pruning fruit trees nothing is better than gum shellac, dissolved in alcohol to the consistency of paint.

FRENCH poultry fanciers are now feeding fowls designed for market with barley and steamed yellow carrots. This feed is remarkable for its rapid fattening qualities.

PEARL millet, which has proved a failure in Massachusetts, is grown with success in Kansas. Some growers say that it is 50 per cent. better than corn fodder, and stands dry weather much better than corn, or any other kind of millet.

AIR-SLACKED lime will destroy currant worms. In the spring examine the bushes often, and when the lower leaves are perforated there the worms are to be found. If the bush is dry, first sprinkle with water, and then with lime. Two or three applications will be sufficient for the season. The lime will injure neither the bush nor the fruit.

THOSE who have soot, either of wood or bituminous coal, should carefully save it for use in the garden. It is valuable for the ammonia it contains, and also for its power of absorbing ammonia. It is simply charcoal (carbon) in an extremely divided state, but from the creosote it contains is useful in destroying insects, and is at the same time valuable as a fertilizer for all garden crops.

THE first year a sheep's front teeth are eight in number, and are of equal size; the second year the two middle teeth are shed, and replaced by two much larger than the others; the third year two very small ones appear on either side of the eight; at the end of the fourth year there are six large teeth; the fifth year all the front teeth are large; the sixth year all begin to show signs of wear.

CHARCOAL AS MANURE.—Although charcoal is nearly pure carbon, a large constituent of all vegetation, still it is not claimed that this substance furnishes direct food to plants. Its action is thus described by Liebig: "Plants thrive in powdered charcoal, and may be brought to blossom and bear fruit if exposed to the influence of rain and atmosphere. Charcoal is the most unchangeable substance known. It may be kept for centuries without change. It possesses the power of condensing gases within its pores, and particularly carbonic acid; and it is by virtue of this power that the roots of plants are supplied with charcoal as is humus, with an atmosphere of carbonic acid, which is renewed as quickly as it is abstracted. Plants do not, however, attain maturity, under ordinary circumstances, in charcoal powder, unless moistened with rain or rain-water. Rain-water contains one of the essentials of vegetable life, a compound of nitrogen, the exclusion of which entirely deprives humus and charcoal of their influence upon vegetation."

BARLEY AND OATS.—A fine condition of the soil is indispensable for the barley crop. Old barley-growers know all about this, but many want to grow barley because it is a profitable crop when successful. It will succeed in any good, well-prepared soil, but a mellow clay loom, which can be brought to good tilth, is to be preferred. But good crops of bright grain may be grown on lighter loams if in good heart. It may be made an excellent soiling crop to follow clover, and as a change from oats. We prefer to sow thickly, say two and a half bushels per acre, but opinions vary in this respect, and from one and a half to two and a half bushels is the range. Early-sown oats in our hot climate are, as a rule, better than the late sown. Our climate is not so favorable for oats as the cooler Northern and Northeastern ones. There oats are heavy and plump, and seed from Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick will produce well for two or three years. By using seed from these Northern localities, oats may be grown in the Middle States weighing from thirty-five to forty-five pounds per bushel.

BEANS AS FOOD FOR STOCK.—Chemical analysis and observation in feeding alike show the large amount of nutriment contained in beans. There is no more valuable food for forming muscle than beans. In the production of fat they are greatly inferior to corn and the small grains, but they are superior to them in the production of flesh. All young animals are benefited by an occasional ration of beans. Sheep are as fond of beans as boys are of watermelons, but they are not relished by most domestic animals when they are first given them to eat. Many animals need to be educated to eat beans, but, after a short time, they will acquire a taste for them. Hogs, cows and fowls will acquire a taste for beans as readily as human beings will for tomatoes, celery and ripe figs. If beans are ground with corn or any kind of small grain in the proportion of one bushel of the former to four of the latter, the meal will be eaten by all kinds of stock. Beans may be soaked till they are quite soft, or boiled and mixed with bran or cornmeal to excellent advantage.

TO CURE FOOT-ROT IN SHEEP.—The preparation of the foot is just as essential as the remedy, for, if every part of the disease is not laid bare the remedy will not effect a cure. A solution of blue vitriol as strong as can be made and as hot as you can bear your hand in, even for a moment, having the liquid three or four inches deep, or deep enough to cover all the affected parts; then hold the diseased foot in this liquid ten minutes, or long enough to penetrate to all the diseased parts; put the sheep on a dry barn floor for twenty hours to give it a chance to take effect. In every case where I have tried it, it has effected a cure, and I have never given a sheep medicine internally for foot-rot. This remedy I call a dead shot when the foot is thoroughly prepared, but a more expeditious way, and where you don't hardly hope to exterminate the disease, but keep it in subjection, is this: After preparing the feet as for the vitriol cure, take butter of antimony, pour oil of vitriol into it slowly until the heating and boiling process ceases, and apply with a swab. This remedy works quicker, is stronger than the vitriol, and is just as safe, but its mode of application renders it less sure.—Ohio Farmer.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

NUT CAKE.—One and one-half cups sugar, one-half cup butter, three cups flour, one-half cup sweet milk, three eggs, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one cup of hickory nuts (chopped), one teaspoonful vanilla.

WALNUT CAKES.—One pound of flour, one pound of sugar, three-quarters of a pound of butter, one and one-half pounds of raisins, one nutmeg, six eggs, one wine-glassful of wine, two quarts of walnuts (before cracked); bake in a quick oven.

OATMEAL BLANC MANGE.—A delicious blanc mange may be made by stirring two heaping teaspoonfuls fine oatmeal into a little cold water and then stirring in a quart of boiling milk; boil a few minutes; flavor; turn into molds when cold; eat with jelly or cream.

TO CLEAN HAIR BRUSHES.—As hot water and soap soon soften the hairs, and rubbing completes their destruction, use soda dissolved in cold water. Soda, having an affinity for grease, cleans the brush with very little friction. After well shaking them, stand them on the points of the handles in a shady place.

INDIAN MEAL PUDDING.—One pint of Indian meal cooked, one quart of milk, half a cup of butter, one pint of molasses, four eggs, with a little cinnamon or nutmeg; boil the milk, stir in gradually the meal, mix all together and let it stand two hours, add the eggs when the pudding is ready to put in the oven; let it bake two hours.

SUPERIOR SPONGE CAKE.—One pound of sugar, sifted; half pound of flour, rind of a lemon, grated, with the juice. Beat the yolks very light and mix them well with the sugar; add the lemon; beat them well together; add the whites, beaten stiff; shake the flour in very gently—should not be stirred when the flour is well mixed. If in one pan, two hours, if in two pans, one and a half hours.

TO FRESHEN PAINT.—Tea leaves may be saved from the table for a few days, and, when sufficient are collected, steep, and not boil, them for half an hour in a tin pan; strain the water off through a sieve, and use this tea to wash all varnished paint. It removes spots, and gives a fresher, newer appearance than when soap and water are used. For white paint, take up a small quantity of whiting on a damp piece of old white flannel, and rub over the surface lightly, and it will leave the paint remarkably bright and new.

TO BOIL A HAM.—Scrape and wash carefully in plenty of cold water. Put it to cook in boiling water enough to cover it entirely, hock end up; let it remain on the front of the stove till the ham begins to boil; then put it back and let it simmer steadily for three hours. Take it off the fire, and let the ham remain in the water it is boiled in till cool enough to handle; then skin it; put in a baking-pan, and sprinkle with about three ounces of brown sugar; run your pan in a hot oven, and let it remain a half hour, or until the sugar has formed a brown crust. This not only improves the flavor of the ham, but preserves its juices.

Josh Billings on Marriage.

By awl means, Joe, git married, if you hav a fair show. Don't stand shivering on the bank, but pitch rite in and stick your head under and shiver it out. Thar ain't any more trick in getting married than there is in eating peanuts. Many a man has stood shivering on the shore until the river run out. Don't expect to marry an angel—they have been all picked up long ago. Remember, Joe, you hain't a saint yourself. Do not marry for beauty exclusively; beauty is like ice, awfully slippery and thaws dreadfully easy. Don't marry for luv, neither; luv is like a cooking-stove, good for nothing when the fuel gives out. But let the mixture be some beauty, becomingly dressed, with about $250 in her pocket, a good speller, handy and neat in her house, plenty of good sense, tuff constitution and by-laws, small feet, a light step; add to this sound teeth and a warm heart. The mixture will keep in any climate and will not evaporate. Don't marry for pedigree unless it's backed by bank notes. A family with nothing but pedigree generally lacks sense.

A Good Paper-weight.

Lately an inhabitant of Naples informed his friends that he was about to make a trip to Paris. Immediately he was overrun with commissions. Upon his return to Naples the traveler brought with him, however, only a part of the purchases ordered through him. "How in the world could you be so forgetful?" said several of those whom he thus disappointed. "I will tell you how it happened," said the Neapolitan; "such and such a one in giving me their commissions gave me the money at the same time. I folded each one's money in the paper on which his commissions were written and placed all the papers on my table. A sudden gust of wind came and blew away every paper that did not contain money—possibly your commission was among them."

Circus Time.

"The circus is coming," remarked Mrs. Goodington, laying down her paper, "with no end of trained horses and camels, hypothenuses and other bedigens of the forest and jungle. How well I remember the first time Daniel took me to the circus! As we entered the tinted inclosure I said to him: 'How terribly the wild animaleples growl, don't they?' I was eenamost frightened to death till Daniel told me it was only the vendors of peanuts and prize packages plying their vocation."—Boston Transcript.

A Leaky Church.

Bishop Butler was once holding service in a dilapidated church in the North of England, and, a storm coming on, was nearly "drowned out" by the torrent of water that filtered through a thousand rents in the roof. He mildly remonstrated at the leaky condition of things, and suggested that the first sunshiny day should be devoted to repairing the edifice. "But it don't need repair, your Worship, when it doan't showar," was the answer of the worthy churchwarden.

PRESIDENTIAL.

Names of Persons Who Have Been Voted for for President and Vice President.

Below will be found a complete list of all the persons who have been voted for for President and Vice President since the formation of the Government. The table also includes all persons voted for by the Electoral College. Many of them, of course, were not candidates before the people. The names of the successful candidates are printed in italics:

	PRESIDENTS.	VICE PRESIDENTS.
1878—	George Washington. John Adams. John Jay. R. H. Harrison. John Rutledge. John Hancock. George Clinton. Samuel Huntington. John Milton. James Armstrong. Benjamin Lincoln. Edward Telfair.
1792—	George Washington. John Adams. George Clinton. Thomas Jefferson. Aaron Burr.
1796—	John Adams. Thomas Jefferson. Thomas Pinckney. Aaron Burr. Samuel Adams. Oliver Ellsworth. George Clinton. John Jay. James Iredell. George Washington. John Henry. S. Johnson. Chas. C. Pinckney.
1800—	Thomas Jefferson. Aaron Burr. John Adams. Chas. C. Pinckney. John Jay.
1804—	Thomas Jefferson. Chas. C. Pinckney.	Geo. Clinton. Rufus King.
1808—	James Madison. Chas. C. Pinckney. George Clinton.	George Clinton. Rufus King. John Langdon. James Madison. James Monroe.
1812—	James Madison. De Witt Clinton.	Elbridge Gerry. Jared Ingersoll.
1816—	James Monroe. Rufus King.	D. D. Thompkins. John E. Howard. James Ross. John Marshall. Robert G. Harper.
1820—	James Monroe. John Q. Adams.	D. D. Thompkins. Richard Stockton. Daniel Rodney. R. S. Harper. Richard Rush.
1824—	John Q. Adams. Andrew Jackson. Wm. H. Crawford. Henry Clay.	John C. Calhoun. Nathan Sandford. Nathan Macon. Andrew Jackson. Martin Van Buren. Henry Clay.
1828—	Andrew Jackson. J. Quincy Adams.	John C. Calhoun. Richard Rush. Wm. Smith.
1832—	Andrew Jackson. Henry Clay. John Floyd. Wm. Wirt.	Martin Van Buren. John Sergeant. Henry Lee. Amos Ellmaker. Wm. Wilkins.
1836—	Martin Van Buren. Wm. H. Harrison. Hugh L. White. Daniel Webster. W. P. Mangum.	R. M. Johnson. Francis Granger. John Tyler. Wm. Smith.
1840—	Wm. H. Harrison. M. Van Buren. James G. Birney.	John Tyler. R. M. Johnson. L. W. Tazewell. James K. Polk.
1844—	James K. Polk. Henry Clay. James G. Birney.	Geo. M. Dallas. T. Frelinghuysen.
1848—	Z. Taylor. Lewis Cass. M. Van Buren.	Millard Fillmore. Wm. O. Butler. Chas. F. Adams.
1852—	Franklin Pierce. Winfield Scott. John P. Hall.	Wm. R. King. Wm. A. Graham. Geo. W. Julian.
1856—	James Buchanan. J. C. Fremont. Millard Fillmore.	Jno. C. Breckinridge. Wm. L. Dayton. A. J. Donelson.
1860—	A. Lincoln. J. C. Breckinridge. John Bell. S. A. Douglas.	Hannibal Hamlin. Jos. Lane. Edward Everett. H. V. Johnson.
1864—	A. Lincoln. Geo. B. McClellan.	Andrew Johnson. G. H. Pendleton.
1868—	U. S. Grant. Horatio Seymour.	Schuyler Colfax. F. P. Blair, Jr.
1872—	U. S. Grant. Horace Greeley. Charles O'Conor. James Black. T. A. Hendricks. B. Gratz Brown. Chas. J. Jenkins. David Davis.	Henry Wilson. B. Gratz Brown. Geo. W. Julian. A. H. Colquitt. John M. Palmer. T. E. Bramlette. W. S. Groesbeck. W. B. Machen. N. P. Banks.
1876—	R. B. Hayes. S. J. Tilden. Peter Cooper.	Wm. A. Wheeler. T. A. Hendricks. G. C. Smith.

Colored Heroes.

Two colored laborers, named Telfair and Stewart, went down into a fire-well in Charleston. A few moments later, overcome by poisonous vapors, they were lying in the mud and water gasping for breath. A colored laborer named Simons hastened to their relief. As soon as he felt the first effects of the noxious gas he was hauled out. Undismayed, a colored man named William Robertson insisted on being lowered down the well. As he touched the bottom he fell forward as if shot. There were now three helpless, dying men in the well. Volunteers were not wanting. A colored man named James Seymour descended into the depths, and fell as those who preceded him had done.

Stewart, one of the two men who went down to clean out the well, was taken out alive. Telfair, his companion, was dead. These two, Stewart and Telfair, were engaged in their usual work. Robertson and Seymour, who endeavored to save the stricken laborers, were dead when their bodies were removed. They died for their friends. Brave and loyal hearts had throbbed under the dusky skin. Knowing that they risked their lives they demanded that they be allowed to make an effort to rescue the men of their own race who were breathing their last. They shared the lot of the man whom they hoped to preserve to his wife and children. Their own wives are widows, and their children are orphans.

When white men bear themselves as Seymour and Robertson did, their names ring through the land as heroes and martyrs. Shall less honor be paid to the two colored men who, with no hope of reward or expectation of fame, sacrificed their lives on the altar of humanity? They are heroes and martyrs—an honor, an example and, we trust, an inspiration to their race. The spirit of true freedom is indeed abroad when unlettered colored laborers can rise to such a height.—Charleston (S. C.) News.

Sir Richard Wallace.

Lord Beaconsfield was desirous of making Sir Richard Wallace, who inherited the late Marquis of Hertford's estates, a peer; but the Queen, it is said, objected, though so many of the first creations in the Peerage were illegitimate children. Any honor to Sir Richard would be very popular in Paris, where he was brought up and has chiefly resided, and to which he has been a benefactor in many ways, especially by his magnificent gifts of drinking fountains of clear water for the public. It is quite common now at the cafes, when the waiter pours from the decanter on the absinthe or brandy, for the customer to say, "A little more Wallace, garcon, if you please."

IT is notorious that dogs take their manners from the human society in which they have been brought up. Thus the coach-dog, having associated all his life with grooms and stable men, is deficient in sagacity and only fit to follow the rumbling of the wheels. Fighting, gripping, and holding on with iron tenacity are the congenital attributes of the bull-dog, while the greyhound has little of the reasoning faculty which is born in the colley or sheep dog. A parlor dog, which, like Lever's Mrs. Rooney, "comes o' dacent people," would repudiate the company of a street cur, whom the gentleman and scholar of Burns would nose and find out, just as honest Launce's cur Crab was spotted by the two or three gentleman-like dogs with which he came in contact under the Duke's table.

Children

CRY

FOR

Pitcher's

Castoria.

Mothers like, and Physicians recommend it.

IT IS NOT NARCOTIC.

CENTAUR LINIMENTS; the World's great Pain-Relieving remedies. They heal, soothe and cure Burns, Wounds, Weak Back and Rheumatism upon Man, and Sprains, Galls, and Lameness upon Beasts. Cheap, quick and reliable.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Bilious Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite—they will tell you by taking

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c.,

IT HAS NO EQUAL.

This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

PURELY VEGETABLE.

If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

It is given with safety and the happiest results to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest-Selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per ct. National Publish'g Co., St. Louis, Mo.

PILES fully described with scientific mode of cure. Prof. Harris' illustrated pamphlet sent free on application. HARRIS REMEDY CO., Mf'g Chemists, 8th & Market Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

Book for the Million

A large, new and complete Guide to Wedlock, containing, with many others, the following chapters: A Competent Womanhood, Selection of Wife, Temperaments compatible and incompatible, Sterility in Women, cause and treatment, Advice to Bridegroom, Advice to Husbands, Advice to Wives, Prostitution, its causes, Celibacy and Matrimony compared, [illegible]

"THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER"

On Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Varicocele, &c., also on Spermatorrhoea, Sexual Debility, and Impotency, [illegible]

"Medical Advice," Lecture on Manhood & Womanhood, 10c.

FOR ONE DOLLAR [illegible]

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY [illegible]

DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Seminal Pastille

An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Unsolicited testimony to the Efficacy of Prof. Harris' Seminal Pastille, taken from Letters received from Patrons.

Indiana, April 11th, 1879.—The remedy is working perfectly. Had epilepsy from weakness, for eight years past.

[illegible]

From a Physician and Surgeon.

[illegible]

From a Druggist.

[illegible]

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., MAY 27, 1880.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,

Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

"NO SOLID SOUTH, NO SOLID NORTH, BUT A SOLID UNION."

Democratic County Central Committee

OFFICERS.

Wm. L. Blair, Chairman.
Theo. Reed, Secretary.
J. J. Van Auken, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Wm. L. Blair, Jas. A. Barns, S. S. Shutt, J. Wm. Wagner, T. F. Jordan, Guy Plumb.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEEMEN.

C. M. Merica, Butler township.
J. J. Walter, Jackson township.
T. S. Murray, Concord township.
Geo. A. Mann, Newville township.
Jacob Christoffle, Stafford township.
Geo. W. Maxwell, Wilmington township.
M. Houston, Auburn precinct.
D. Y. Husselman, Waterloo precinct.
W. J. Frederick, Keyser township.
L. D. Britton, Richland township.
J. M. Brumback, Fairfield township.
Fred. Waterman, Smithfield township.
T. H. Tomlinson, Franklin township.
B. F. Cornelius, Troy township.

Joint Representative Convention.

Delegates from the counties of DeKalb, Noble, and Elkhart, the same constituting a joint representative district, will meet in convention at Kendallville, Ind.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 6th, 1880,

for the purpose of nominating a democratic candidate for joint representative for the counties named. The ratio of representation will be one delegate for each 100 votes cast for Gov. Jas. D. Williams in 1876, and one for each fraction of 50 or over, as follows:

DeKalb county	26
Noble "	24
Elkhart "	34
Total	[illegible]

By order of the district committee.

Judicial Convention.

The democracy of Noble, DeKalb and Steuben counties, constituting the 35th judicial district, will meet in delegate convention at Kendallville, Ind., on

FRIDAY AUGUST 6th, 1880,

for the purpose of nominating a judge of the circuit court and prosecuting attorney. The ratio of representation will be the same as that in the joint representative convention, which will be held at the same time and place.

By order of the district committee.

Democratic County Convention.

Delegates from the several townships in DeKalb county will meet at the court-house, in Auburn,

Saturday, June 5, 1880,

at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the following offices, to-wit:

Representative in the legislature.
County clerk.
County auditor.
County treasurer.
County sheriff.
County recorder.
County surveyor.
County coroner.
County commissioner, north district.
County commissioner, southwest district.

The convention will transact such other business as may come before it.

SELECTION OF DELEGATES.

In accordance with a resolution passed at the last meeting of the county central committee, all democrats and others who intend to support the ticket nominated by the convention above named, are requested to meet at the usual voting place in their respective township or precinct,

Saturday, May 29, 1880,

at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the county convention, in accordance with the following apportionment, based upon the number of democratic votes cast for secretary of state at the last state election:

Butler township	10	delegates.
Jackson "	19	"
Concord "	21	"
Newville "	8	"
Stafford "	7	"
Wilmington "	19	"
Auburn precinct	31	"
Waterloo "	10	"
Richland township	17	"
Fairfield "	21	"
Smithfield "	12	"
Franklin "	9	"
Troy "	5	"
Keyser "	27	"
Total,	216.	"

The democrats of each township and precinct will at the same time, (May 29), appoint one delegate to the judicial convention to be held at Kendallville on the 6th day of August, 1880.

By order of the committee.

W. L. BLAIR, Chairman.
THEO. REED, Secretary.

* * *

A card from Mr. Frank Seiler, who is attending Eastman's Business College, at Poughkeepsie, New York, reports that celebrated institution in a flourishing condition, with over four hundred students in attendance, representing almost every part of the globe. The work of that institution is thorough and practical. We know whereof we speak.

* * *

In the selection of delegates from Indiana to the Cincinnati convention, it will not be enough to know that each and every delegate and alternate is for Hendricks as first choice; it must be well understood that each and every representative in that convention is unalterably opposed to the nomination of Samuel J. Tilden. The anti-Tilden men have a large majority in each district, and they should see to it that no treachery is practiced in the selection of delegates.

Send us a list of your delegates to the county convention.

* * *

Attend the democratic caucus next Saturday and help select good men for delegates.

* * *

The action of the Illinois republican convention virtually nominates Grant as the republican candidate for president.

* * *

The Delaware democrats have instructed their delegates to the Cincinnati convention, to cast the vote of that state for Senator Bayard.

* * *

Grant is now at Galena, Ill. B. Brown, the editor of the Gazette of that city, has telegraphed the Chicago News an authoritative statement that Grant will not withdraw from the presidential contest.

* * *

It is the opinion of the best politicians of both parties, that the only necessity for holding the Chicago convention next week is to ratify the nomination of Grant for a third term, and to put a tail to the ticket.

* * *

The committeeman of each township and precinct will oblige us by sending us a complete list of the delegates to the county convention, so that the list can be published next week. Send the list Monday without fail.

* * *

Democratic candidates for county offices will please bear in mind that no good will result from speaking disparagingly of their opponents. Let each candidate conduct his canvass upon his own merits, and there will be better feeling in the party after the nominations are made.

* * *

What will American citizens of foreign birth have to say about the nomination of Grant,—how will they relish his imperial notions? We incline to the opinion that Germans, Irishmen and Frenchmen will not consent to the wearing of royal robes in the country of their adoption.

* * *

The Masonic Grand Lodge of Indiana met in Indianapolis last Tuesday. Calvin Prather was elected Grand Master; E. L. McLallen, of Columbia City, is chairman of the committee on foreign correspondence; F. E. Davenport, of Auburn, was chairman of the committee on unfinished business.

* * *

Conkling, Cameron and Logan are all in Chicago making the necessary arrangements to give Grant and imperialism a grand send-off on the second of next month. John C. New, the chairman of the republican committee of this state, is also there learning the ropes, and by the time the Indiana delegates arrive, will be prepared to offer such arguments as will perhaps place the republicans of Indiana in a false position by having the vote of this state cast for U. S. Grant.

* * *

Next Saturday is the day fixed for the holding of democratic caucuses in the several townships and precincts in this county, for the purpose of appointing delegates to the county convention, to be held one week later. Every democrat should attend the meeting in his township and see that none but good men are put upon the delegation—men who will work for the success of the party rather than any individual. Allow no candidate to dictate who the delegates shall be. Send men who are capable of judging as to the availability of candidates.

* * *

The number of delegates in the democratic county convention will be 216 instead of 214, as heretofore published. The official vote for J. G. Shanklin, for secretary of state, in 1878, as shown by the canvasser's sheet on file in the clerk's office, is as follows:

Butler township	96	votes
Jackson "	193	"
Concord "	207	"
Newville "	76	"
Stafford "	66	"
Wilmington "	187	"
Auburn precinct	309	"
Waterloo "	103	"
Richland township	173	"
Fairfield "	208	"
Smithfield "	116	"
Franklin "	91	"
Troy "	47	"
Keyser "	265	"

The corrected list will be found in the call of the central committee.

* * *

Mr. B. S. Sutton, of Shelby county, is spoken of as a prominent candidate for clerk of the supreme court. The Shelbyville Democrat-Volunteer says of him:

"Mr. Sutton is in every way qualified to fill the office acceptably. As circuit clerk of the county he served the people honestly and with ability, and no man ever left the office with a clearer and better record. We have no hard words to offer as against any other candidate who may be seeking the same office. Nor do we think because the present incumbent is seeking a re-election, that he should be accorded any prior claims. The office is one of four years, and the custom has heretofore been to invariably accord but one term. Mr. Sutton is at present holding the honorable and responsible position of Grand Master of the Masonic fraternity of Indiana. He has many warm and enthusiastic friends in all portions of the state. He is a good political speaker, a thorough canvasser, and if nominated would add largely to the success of the ticket."

The legality of the first amendment to the constitution, which is said to have been ratified by the people at the April election, will be tested in the supreme court by James V. Kelso, a prominent attorney of New Albany. It appears that at the May election in the city named, Mr. Kelso offered his ballot at the polling place, but it was refused by the inspector on the ground that Mr. Kelso had not resided long enough in the ward to entitle him to a vote. Although a life-long resident of the city, he had moved from one ward to another a few days before the election, and the inspector held that the first amendment debarred him from the right of suffrage. A few days ago Mr. Kelso appeared before the grand jury and procured an indictment against the inspector for refusing his (Kelso's) vote, the object of the indictment being to take the case as a test one before the supreme court, in order to determine the vexed question as regards the constitutionality of the amendments. It is to be hoped that the court will render an opinion before the time for the next election.

Memorial Day.

Next Sunday, the 30th instant, is the day set apart for the annual decoration of soldiers' graves. This custom has become general throughout the north, and is observed as often as the 30th day of May comes around. It is but natural that the surviving comrades and friends of deceased soldiers should delight in commemorating the ceremony of strewing flowers upon the graves of those who went out to risk their lives for the preservation of the Union. The noble act of giving up their lives to secure continued peace and civilization to surviving generations has gained for deceased soldiers an everlasting abiding place in the memory of every true American. As it was impossible to sever the ties of comrades in arms when our nationality was threatened with a loss of existence, so it is now—nineteen years after the first attempt to destroy the Union—impossible to sever the ties which a father, mother, wife, brother, sister, son or daughter bore to him who suffered the many trials and vicissitudes of a soldier's life, and whose remains now fill an honored sepulchre. None so degraded as to forswear cherishing a deep-rooted affection for those earthly ties which bound each one to another. No soldier can forget him who stood by his side, and who, perhaps, delivered his last message as he fell on the battlefield, to be transmitted to an anxious father or a loving mother. Soldiers who were sworn to be true to their country, were also true to each other in time of danger; and may each survivor continue to be true, in rendering kind services to survivors and in cherishing and perpetuating the memory, virtues and deeds of valor of those who fell in death, vindicating the cause of self-government as established by the blood of martyrs and handed down from the founders of a free government.

> "Cover them over with beautiful flowers;
> Deck them with garlands, those brothers of ours;
> Lying so silent, by night and by day,
> Sleeping the years of their manhood away."
>
> "Cover the thousands who sleep far away—
> Sleep where their friends cannot find them to day;
> They who in mountain and hill side and dell
> Rest where they wearied, and lie where they fell."
>
> "So in our minds we will name them once more
> So in our hearts we will cover them o'er;
> Roses and lilies and violets blue
> Bloom in our souls for the brave and the true."

School Trustee.

With reference to the election of a school trustee at Fort Wayne, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the expiration of Mr. Hoagland's term, the following compliment is paid by the Fort Wayne Journal to Mr. Max Nirdlinger, whose name is receiving favorable mention in connection with that position:

"With the expiration of Pliny Hoagland's term as school trustee, a vacancy will occur, which cannot be filled too carefully, and with too much discretion. The of name Max Nirdlinger has been proposed as a candidate for the office, and we believe a wiser choice cannot be made. Mr. Nirdlinger is a man of education, and is fully informed as to the requirements and duties of a board intrusted with the great interests of our public schools. He is a man of good executive ability, a quality much needed by a trustee of this character. It is a position that few aspire to, in fact none, save those who have the good of the public at heart. While the remaining members of the board are men of sterling integrity, having always discharged their duties conscientiously and faithfully, it is to the interests of the people that the newly elected member be as entirely competent and ready to do his duty with equal zeal and faithfulness. Mr. Nirdlinger, we believe, possesses the qualities for a good trustee, and we believe that a sufficient number of voters hold the same opinion to elect him to the office."

To the Teachers of DeKalb County.

Fellow-Workers: Now would be a good time to say to the authorities and "powers that be" that, inasmuch as you have compelled us to come up to the standard without any increase of wages, and knowing that you are abundantly able to comply with our reasonable requests, we respectfully ask you to consider our just claims and let us have some of the benefits of the improved times and the general increase in the price of labor.

All other trades and professions combine and secure their just claims by concert of effort and action, and there is no reason why the teachers should not do the same

Will we do so? If you wish to move in the matter let us hear from you through the county papers or by letter.

AN OLD TEACHER.

Soldiers' Re-union at Waterloo.

The following partial programme has been decided upon for the old soldiers' re-union at Waterloo, Indiana, June 10 and 11, 1880:

JUNE 10.

9:30 a. m.—Reception of Loomis' battery, Michigan artillery, Coldwater, Michigan, Capt. Pratt commanding.

1:15 p. m.—Reception of visitors from the south.

2½ p. m.—Reception of company E, 16th regiment of Ohio National Guards, Capt. Foote, of Bryan, Ohio, commanding, and Fourth Battery of Ohio light artillery, Capt. O. J. Hopkins, of Toledo, Ohio, commanding, with visitors from the east.

3 p. m.—Reception of visitors from the north and west.

3:30 p. m.—Regimental and company re-unions.

Sunset salute.

JUNE 11—FORENOON.

Sunrise—Reveille and National salute.

8 to 9:30—Regimental and company re-unions.

9:30 a. m.—Form procession and march to grounds.

10 a. m.—Exercises at the stand in the following order:

1st, Music by the band; 2nd, prayer; 3rd; song by the club; 4th, oration; 5th, song by the club—"Marching through Georgia;" 6th, toasts and responses; 7th, chorus—"Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," and "Old John Brown," by everybody, led by the club; 8th, break ranks for dinner.

AFTERNOON.

1:30—Artillery drill by Loomis' Michigan battery, commanded by Captain Pratt, of Coldwater, Michigan, and 4th battery, Ohio light artillery, commanded by Capt Hopkins, of Toledo, Ohio.

2 p. m.—Infantry drill by company E, 16th regiment of Ohio National Guards, Lieut. Wm. Harding, of Bryan, Ohio, commanding, and the Waterloo Rifles, Capt. R. Wes. McBride, of Waterloo, Indiana, commanding.

3 p. m.—Sham battle, participated in by the above-named military organizations, and independent companies of Butler, Auburn, Angola, Waterloo and elsewhere, and also by a detachment of the signal corps, under command of Capt. Sam. Edge, and a squad of sharpshooters, commanded by Sargeant J. B. Bixler.

4:30—Prisoners marched to headquarters and paroled

Every soldier or sailor who was honorably discharged is invited. All are requested to report at headquarters immediately on their arrival, when they will be enrolled and furnished appropriate badges. Survivors of regiments and companies present will march together, and each organization will be commanded by the senior officer of such organization in attendance. The committee intend that the utmost punctuality and promptness shall be observed in carrying out the programme. Each person participating is earnestly requested to come resolved to be on hand promptly to the minute to perform any duty assigned him. We will advertise nothing we do not expect to give precisely as advertised.

R. WES. MCBRIDE,
L. J. BLAIR,
S. B. JOHNSON,
S. J. LOCKE,
Committee.

Waterloo, Ind., May 25, 1880.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The announcement of the names of candidates for county offices will be inserted under this head for $2.00—IN ADVANCE; no announcement to exceed six lines in length without extra charge. All announcements are made subject to the decision of the democratic county convention.

REPRESENTATIVE.

CLERK.

The democratic friends of Mr. D. Y. Husselman, of Union township, will present his name in the county convention and ask that he be nominated for county clerk.

The democratic friends of Mr. John W. Baxter, of Wilmington township, will present his name in county convention and ask that he be nominated for county clerk.

AUDITOR.

EDITORS COURIER: The democrats of Franklin township desire you to announce the name of Thomas H. Tomlinson, of the township named, as a candidate for county auditor

The many friends of John W. Dills, of Concord township, will present his name to the democratic county convention as a candidate for county auditor.

TREASURER.

The democratic friends of L. J. Miller, of Richland township, will announce his name in convention as a candidate for county treasurer.

SHERIFF.

The many friends of John W. Boyle, of Wilmington township, will present his name as a candidate for sheriff in the democratic convention, and ask his nomination.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Please announce that Mr. Philip Flaval, of Waterloo precinct, will be presented by his friends as a candidate for sheriff of DeKalb county.

J. J. VanAuken's friends will present his name, and ask that he be nominated for Sheriff by the democrats of DeKalb county, in convention assembled.

RECORDER.

The democrats of Jackson township present the name of Samuel M. High, and ask that he be nominated for county recorder.

We are authorized to announce that James Quince, of Butler township, will be a candidate in the county convention for the office of recorder.

Mr. George H. Mann, of Newville township, is named by his many democratic friends in that township as a candidate for county recorder.

SURVEYOR.

William Husley, of Auburn precinct, will be a candidate in the democratic county convention for the nomination for county surveyor.

Mr. George L. Lanning, of Auburn precinct, has been named by his democratic friends as a candidate for county surveyor.

The many democratic friends of Azam P. Foltz, of Auburn precinct, announce his name for county surveyor, believing him to be well qualified for that position.

CORONER.

COMMISSIONER, NORTH DISTRICT.

COMMISSIONER, SOUTHWEST DISTRICT.

Mr. Edward Kelham, the present incumbent, is named as a candidate for re-nomination for county commissioner in the southwest district.

Summer

Underwear for Ladies, Gentlemen and Children, in light-weight Merino, Gauze, Lisle Thread and Balbriggan, all sizes and qualities now in stock. Our stock of Summer Hosiery and Gloves is large and well assorted with all the staple and Fancy Novelties of the season. Black and Colored Lace Mitts, Lace top Lisle Gloves, Kid Gloves of our various popular brands, in 2 to 8 buttons in street, Opera shades and black, at reduced prices.

ROOT & COMPANY.

Parasols.

Just opened—An elegant new lot of Black Satin Parasols, Rich Black Brocade Parasols, Fancy Colored Parasols, Children's Parasols, both lined and unlined, $2.50 to $15.00 each. Also an immense new line of Sun Umbrellas, 20, 22 and 24 inches. Blues and Browns in a great variety of Ebony, Horn, Ivory, Bamboo, Natural Stick, Tortoise Shell and Agate Handles; $1.50 $1.75, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 each and upwards. Please examine them.

ROOT & COMPANY.

Light-Weight Suitings.

For gentlemens Wear.—Our stock is probably the largest and best-assorted in the city. Our Goods are of the best Scotch, English, French and German manufacture. Our prices are VERY LOW, as the goods were ordered before the great advance in prices of Woolen took place. Gentlemen wanting Business Suits, Dress Suits, or anything in the way of Cloths, Cassimeres, Doeskins, Diagonals, Meltons or Cheviots, should not fail to examine before they purchase.

ROOT & COMPANY.

Lawns.

550 pieces New lawns this week in Tinted and White Ground, with and without Side Bands, 10, 12 1-2, and 15 cents per yard. Also New Linnen Lawns, Organdies, Jaconets, new Foulard Cambrics, French Chints, Zephyr Ginghams, Canton Ginghams, Seer-suckers, etc., etc., 10, 12 1-2, 15, 20 and 25 cents per yard. Our stock of Wash Fabrics is very large and worth looking at. Black and Colored Bunting in great variety.

ROOT & COMPANY, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The Auburn Fruit-House.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

Sugars Down.

Ligh Brown, 8 cents; Light yellow, 8 1-2 cents; Extra Yellow C, 9 cents; Coffee A 10 cents; Granulated, 11 cents.

Coffees Down.

Good Rio, 15 cents; Best Marracaibo, 20 cents; Fancy Rio, 21 cents.

South Carolina Rice, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; New Prunes, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; A No. 1 Fine-Cut Tobacco, 40, cents; Extra Fine-Cut Tobacco, 50 cents; Plug Tobacco of all brands very cheap; Parlor Matches, 7c., or 4 for 25 cents; the very best Syrups, 70 cents; Splendid Teas at from 30 to 75 cents.

Fish of all Kinds.

No. 1 White Fish, Family White Fish, Pickerel, Lake Fish, Codfish, Mackerel, Herring, Smoked Halibut, Boneless Codfish, etc., etc., all sold cheap and warranted as represented.

Crocks and Jars of any size at 7 cents a gallon.
Entrance on Seventh or Eighth Streets

Frank A. Hoff.

KIBLINGER & CO.

We are always busy behind the counters, in the ware-house, and on 1st, 2d and 3rd floors, selling Hardware, Nails, Doors, Sash, Glass, Paints and Oils by the wagon-load. Call on us when in want of anything in the Hardware line. We will sell you cheaper than the lowest. Thanks for past patronage.

KIBLINGER & CO.

S. B. HARTMAN, D. D. S.
DENTIST,
88 Calhoun st. Fort Wayne, Ind
Artificial TEETH on Gold, Silver, Porcelain or Rubber Plate.

The Morbid Liver.

An eminent clergyman says "that a change of stomach and liver would benefit the morbid sinner almost as much as a change of heart." Yet many attribute an irritable temper and a morose disposition to the ingenious workings of the devil, while they are simply the symptoms of dyspepsia, indigestion, torpid liver, constipation or general or nervous debility, and are readily removed by a few doses of Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative. For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug store. 21-3w.

Notice of Administration.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THE undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Rudolph Bechler, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

S. S. SHUTT, Administrator,
Spencerville, Indiana,

12-3w April 29, 1880.

WOODWELL & CHAPMAN, Plaintiff's attorneys.

Notice to Non-Residents.

State of Indiana, DeKalb county, ss. No. 729. In the DeKalb circuit court, May term, 1880.

Oliver S. Miller, Theodore F. Miller, Eliza Strauss, Lewis W. Moore, Isaac J. Bolt, Sigmond Bolt, and Frank Elberson are hereby notified that an action has been commenced against them in said court, by Leopold Warner, John Warner, Louis E. Warner, John R. Warner, Edward Warner, Kaufman, Greenberry and Simeon Kemper, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 30th judicial day of the next term of said court, which commences May 24, 1880, to-wit: July 30, 1880.

Witness, the clerk of said court, this 20th day of May, 1880.

JOHN W. BAXTER, Clerk.

W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

—Mortgages,
—Warranted Deeds,
—Quit Claim Deeds,
—Guardian's Receipts, (bound),
—Administrator's Receipts (bound,)
—For sale in large or small quantities at the Courier office. tf.

THE GARFIELD CASE.

His Trial, Conviction and Sentence—Vigorous Defense and Sharp Contest.

The trial of Lewis Garfield, the last of the three parties captured and charged with being participators in the startling midnight raid upon the quiet sleepers in the dwelling of Solomon Barney, at Spencerville, on the night of the first of December last, was promptly entered upon in this place, before Judge Lowry of Fort Wayne, last Monday. A motion for a change of venue, based upon some seven or eight affidavits and met by over two hundred and fifty affidavits, had been overruled at a former term of court. Further motions of a preliminary character were made at this term on the part of the defendant, first to require the state to say on which of the various counts or charges contained in the indictment the prosecution would elect to proceed, and after that another was interposed, based upon an affidavit of the defendant, asking a postponement on account of absent testimony. The motion to require the state to elect was sustained, and the prosecution selected, as the counts on which to proceed, three, charging in each of them a violent and burglarious entry of Mr. Barney's dwelling in the night time, and one of them charging the entry to be with intent to steal, another with intent to murder Solomon Barney, and the other with intent to murder his wife. Judge Lowry held the affidavit for a postponement insufficient, and overruled the motion. A jury was then selected without much difficulty, and the case has proceeded rapidly. A much larger amount of testimony is embodied in the report—a short-hand writer being employed for the purpose—than was adduced in the cases of either Stover or McDonald. It was fuller and more complete than in these cases, in showing the origin and formation of the combination amongst the desperadoes to commit the act; in tracing them from Bryan to Butler and Auburn Junction, and down the Baltimore and Ohio railway to a point between Concord and St. Joe, to a point beyond where a highway runs to Spencerville, and thence to the latter place. The taking, by Mr. Barney, of his $2,500 from the store to the house, his counting the money there with uncurtained windows around him and placing it on the floor by the bureau, the manner in which the defendant and his coadjutors had obtained their information as to the presence there of the treasure, their assault upon and the crushing in of the door, the command of the brigands to the inmates, "Lie still for your lives!" the trepidation of young Erick, the coolness of Mr. Barney and his wife in making provision for the safety of their children, the rapid rattle of the five successive pistol shots, the otherwise death-like stillness and quiet skipping to and fro of the assailants and assailed, and the intrepid valor of the brave Mrs. Barney in pursuing the desperadoes, deliberately aiming at and "fetching" one of them, so as to compel a retreat, and their flight and escape from town with the team and carriage of Dr. Emanuel, were all detailed with a high degree of dramatic interest. A much greater effort was also made by the defense to get up proof of an "alibi"—that the defendant was elsewhere at the time of the occurrence—than on the former occasions, but as will be seen by the result without success. The case went to the jury, after eight hours argument by counsel and the giving of written instructions by the court, at 11 o'clock to-day. After deliberating for a trifle over two hours, the jury returned a verdict of guilty, affixing the penalty at ten years in the penitentiary and a fine of five dollars.

Crooked Clerks.

The report reached Auburn a day or so ago that three young men employed in the general offices of the Ft. Wayne and Jackson railroad, had for some time past been carrying on a systematic method of stealing from the company, and that on Sunday night, becoming alarmed lest they were soon to be discovered, they jumped on an express train and lost no time in putting territory between themselves and Jackson. Their names, as reported, are J. McLean, who was Mr. Bromley's chief clerk, A. C. Fay, freight and ticket agent, and James Wilson, who acted as Fay's assistant. The amount of their shortage cannot yet be definitely known, though up to yesterday the officials had checked them up for a few months back and found a discrepancy of about $3,000. This, of course, being mere floating rumors, cannot be vouched for as reliable, but it embraces the facts as near as we can obtain them at this time.

Barn Raising.

One of the largest and finest barns in this county was raised last week on the farm of 'Squire Henderson, of Jackson township. The dimensions of the building are 40x64 feet, in the construction of which 4,000 feet of hewn timber were used, and the total cost will reach about $1,000. Eighty-four persons were present at the raising, for whom Mrs. Henderson prepared a sumptuous dinner and supper. No person went away hungry, and a general jollification was the result.

—Fans are on the fly.

—The wool market has opened.

—The show showed. It was gorgeous.

—Go to Miss McKay's for your summer hat.

—Wall paper cheap at Davenport's drug store. 14-tf.

—The old settlers are settled all over town to-day.

—There hasn't been a circus in town since last Monday.

—Ladies' hats of the very latest styles at Miss Allie McKay's.

—Alex Potter got home Tuesday from a three weeks' jaunt in Ohio.

—Go to McQuiston & Ralston's for spring shawls and linen suits. 20 3w

—For white goods and embroideries go to McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—1,000 yards of French gingham for sale at eight cents a yard, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—Can't somebody arrange with the weather clerk to get a little rest on this flood business?

—Hank Mader says he did a hard day's work Monday,—sold four buggies. Such work!

—Many needed improvements are going on in the residence and business portion of our town.

—5,000 yards of new-style calicoes, at seven and eight cents a yard, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—All the hotels have been doing a land-office business this week. Court and the shows did it.

—2,000 yards of dress goods—good styles—from 10 to 15 cents per yard, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—It will pay you to see Davenport's patterns before you purchase wall paper and window shades. 14-tf.

—Bargains in bleached and brown muslins, toweling and table-linen, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—Elegant ribbons, laces, ties, flowers and all kinds of millinery goods just received at Miss McKay's.

—Decoration day comes next Sunday. Saturday, however, is the day set for its observation in Auburn.

—The Garfield case goes to the jury to-day. Public opinion says he will go "over the road" for a few years.

—Ask for "Sellers' Liver Pills." No other possess half their virtue. 25c. per box. Sold by all druggists.

—Miss McKay, at Willis' book store, will trim hats to suit the ladies who patronize her, at very reasonable rates.

—The Eagle mills building is being generally overhauled and repaired, one of the chief improvements being a new roof.

—The heavy rain of last Friday caused Cedar creek to get on a high which lasted over Saturday and Sunday.

—Likewise; simply call on your druggist for "Dr. Sellers' Cough Syrup," when you have a cold or cough. 25c. a bottle.

—An application for the pardon of George Hazzard has been filed. A great effort is being made on the part of his friends to secure it.

—"French Pete" has put in a boss tile drain for F. E. Davenport, at the latter's residence. Pete is hard to beat on laying drain pipe.

—Frank Hoff and family now occupy the brick house on Seventh street which he lately bought of D. P. Hale. It makes a nice little home.

—Frank A. Hoff will add a large stock of dry-goods and notions to his present stock of groceries and provisions this week. Call on him for bargains.

—The woman with red hair. For additional information, apply to any member of that stag party which went to Churubusco last week on a fishing (?) excursion.

—Miss Lulu Carpenter, of Antwerp, O., arrived in Auburn last Friday, where she will probably spend the summer with her sister, Mrs. P. J. Lockwood.

—Norm. Clark, of Detroit, has been resuming his visit here this week. He only had it half out the other time. He leaves under the impression that Rome City is n. g.

—By the way our dealers are disposing of farm machinery, one would suppose that every farmer in the country had his place covered with agricultural implements.

—The first man visible on the streets Monday, early in the morning, was munching a twenty-inch section of ginger-bread. Monday, by-the-way, was show-day.

—Couriers of March 11th, April 1st and April 8th, 1880, are missing from our files; if some subscriber will furnish copies of the dates named, we will consider it a favor. tf

—The surest way to prevent being swindled, is to trade with your home merchants—men who have an established business and who advertise it in their home paper.

Cas. J. Coats is again in our midst, having resumed his studies in the law-office of Rose & Hartman. Cas. graduated at the Indianapolis law-school last winter.

—Some of the girls from the rural districts, who came in Monday to catch "fellers" for the show, got unmercifully left. Their disappointment, as betrayed by the sad expression of their eyes, was distressing.

—Messrs. Root & Co., of Fort Wayne, ask your attention to their new advertisement in this issue. Read what they have to say.

—We would like to hear from "Itemizer," at Sedan, every week, and at greater length. Give us all the news items of your neighborhood.

—The merchants of Auburn all agree that last Saturday's trade was excellent. Lots of people in town, and they all wanted to spend their money.

—Frank Culbertson says that the band boys are about $[illegible] ahead, clear money, as a result of the benefit in Ensley hall, last Saturday night.

—Dills says he has a very fine dog which he has named "Christian," because when he asks for something to eat and it is given him, he eats it.

—A communication concerning the church social, signed "A Lady," is withheld from publication for the reason that the writer's name was not given.

—The M. E. society will meet at the lecture-room Wednesday afternoon. Refreshments served at 5:30. All are invited. Mrs. J. Anderson, Sec'y.

—Half fare tickets will be sold on the Jackson road to-morrow (Friday), for the benefit of those who wish to attend the grand opening at Pleasant Lake.

—F. Huelsenbeck is erecting a new brick building on Seventh street, next to Edgington's barber-shop, which he will move his saloon fixtures into as soon as completed.

—Another excursion to Pleasant Lake, from Fort Wayne, comes off Sunday next on the Jackson road. Picnics are thicker than four in a bed,—four people, not picnics.

—A man stands a remarkably favorable good chance of getting jagged in the eye with a fish-hook, these days, at every turn. Fish-hooks and eyes ought to be served separately.

—Jacob VanOrden, the well-known ice dealer of Pleasant Lake, was in town the fore part of this week. He says he has dead loads of good thick ice on hand for the season.

—Dr. J. J. Littlefield has purchased the property of Ed. Bodine, on Tenth street, near Jackson, and is making some desirable improvements therein, preparatory to its occupancy.

—Despite all the drawbacks in its erection, Kiblinger's new store on the corner will be one of the finest around the square. The cornice was adjusted to-day, and all it now needs is the roof.

—The interest in the Spencerville burglary cases has apparently died out, somewhat from lapse of time, as the attendance at Lew. Garfield's trial, this week, is not as large as the trials of Stover and McDonald.

—Last week's Republican says that Billy Rainier is afflicted with heart disease. The item struck Billy so forcibly that he hasn't been well since, besides being scared out of some four years growth.

—The recent changes in Francis Picker's residence have made a material improvement. It now has a new front and cornice, while the brick walls will be tuckpointed—or "lined" as the Republican calls it.

—A cloth-peddler has been getting in his work on the streets this week, selling a pants pattern worth six dollars (?) for half the money. They always lose money just that way; it's one of their little eccentricities.

—The B. & O. railroad sells round-trip-tickets for one fare, to the Chicago convention next Wednesday. The sale of these tickets commences on the 31st and continues through the 1st and 2nd. See particulars on the eighth page.

—Joe Abright and Dave Hampton put in the day yesterday at Blue River lake, Churubusco, concocting schemes against the finny tribe. A special train has been chartered on the Wabash to bring home the spoils;—spoiled clothes.

—Tuesday evening of last week a highly enjoyable social hop was given at the residence of G. W. Link, of Auburn Junction, in honor of his son, William, who left the following day for the far west. Every one who attended reports a pleasant time.

—We cannot conscientiously assert that Charlie Bartine's "five-clown show" is an unparalleled success; on the contrary, it is a rather inferior concern. The trapeze performance of the two children was the principal feature of the entire programme.

—Rev. W. L. Meese has sold his residence property to Mr. Ed. Baker, who will take possession soon. Rev. and Mrs. Meese will be absent in St. Joe county visiting friends and relatives for the next two weeks, when they will return to Auburn and purchase another home.

—The "opening" at Pleasant Lake, which was to have opened up last Friday, was an open fizzle, owing to the openness of the weather. The rain had a "dead open and shut" on the crowd, of which the writer was one, and he makes this acknowledgement openly. (Opening chorus by the band).

—Lew Scalf, of Millersburg, who has been pushing through the masonry work on Kiblinger's building, expects to finish it this week. He has had bad weather to contend with almost from the start, and, considering other adverse circumstances, he has done remarkably well and is to be credited for his stick-to-itiveness.

—All persons in need of wall paper and window-shades are respectfully invited to call and examine the fine stock on exhibition at the Physicians' drug-store. The styles are the latest, the quality of the best, and the prices cheap as the cheapest. It will pay you to go and see for yourself. 19-4t.

—Johnnie Hebel has renovated and revivified the little store down on the corner, having put in a fresh stock of confectionaries and cigars, and he will run it hereafter so that it will demand a good share of patronage. Everything is clean and fresh, loafing has been abolished, and ice-cold soda-water is "on tap" at all times.

—That always-beautiful poem, "The Blue and the Gray," will be found on the first page of this issue of the Courier, it being particularly appropriate at this time, when we are so near the day set apart for the decoration of the soldiers' graves. From a standpoint of impartiality, it is one of the sweetest poems ever written.

—Frank Davenport left Monday morning for Indianapolis, where he takes in the grand lodge of Masons now holding its meeting there. A crazy man was being conveyed to the asylum on the same train, and John Davis says they had to put a chalk-mark on Davenport's back, so that no awkward mistake would occur at the asylum.

—Miss Lillie Morse returned Thursday to Auburn, where she joined the same party and undertook another voyage to Rome City. They went, they saw, they—got disgusted and wet. Miss Morse left Monday noon for her home in Angola, and she will not visit Auburn again until it rains. It rains next week.

—We are under obligations to Mr. Jacob VanOrden, of Pleasant Lake, for a sack of most excellent flour manufactured at the White Rose Mills. The flour recommends itself and those who use it once will want it again. We understand that the White Rose flour has been placed on sale in the Auburn market, and will be delivered to the residence of purchasers. Try it.

—If some of the smart alecks from the country could see themselves as others see them, when they come in town to see the elephant, the probabilities are that they would sneak away from the busy haunts of man and start a hermit shop. As a matter of course, they have all the privileges that others have, but that doesn't give them a license to make other people sick at their stomachs.

—The dedication of Lakeside park, which was to have taken place last Friday at Pleasant Lake, was necessarily postponed on account of the flood. Additional preparations have been made, however, and Mr. Ball intends to make up for lost time next Friday, May 28, if Providence and the weather permit. A large crowd will be there, in view of which the Fort Wayne and Jackson road will sell tickets at half fare. Go.

—Judge Lowry is trying a case, at Auburn, of a woman for assault and battery with intend to kill.—Ft. Wayne News, Tuesday.

You are slightly off your eggs, Gart. It is the case of Lewis Garfield, charged with burglarizing Sol. Barney's house at Spencerville, last December, wherein one of the burglars (who is now in the penitentiary) was shot in the arm by Mrs. Barney. With this trifling correction, you had it all right.

Waterloo, Iowa, Jan. 22, 1876.

I was taken with an acute attack of Rheumatism last fall, and confined to bed. At first employed a physician, without benefit; then sent to Wangler Bros'. Drug Store, and obtained a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, the use of which soon gave me relief, and cured me of the attack. I can safely recomend it to all suffering with Rheumatism. Respectfully,

Matt. McDermott, I. C. R. R., Shops.

Sedan.

—There is one widow less here.

—Mother McIntyre is very low on a bed of sickness, and fears are entertained by her friends that she will not recover.

—The Richland township Sabbath-school picnic, which was to have been held in the month of June, has been postponed until after harvest.

—The children's service at the Lutheran church, last Sunday evening, was well attended. A. C. Jackman and F. W. Willis, of Waterloo, entertained the young people with addresses appropriate to the occasion. These services call out a mass of young people, and are growing popular, much of the credit for which is due to L. W. Treah, the superintendent, and H. Gets, chorister. Itemizer.

Mr. A. Neigher, Tayloryine, Pa., writes:

My mother, an old lady of sixty years, suffered for thirty years with Rheumatism, to such an extent that she was at times entirely lame. We procured from Messrs. Ludwig Bros'. Druggists in Scranton, Pa., a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, used it according to directions, and saw our effort crowned with perfect success. Mother was relieved.

Boarding and Lodging.

The Misses Baldock will take boarders by the day or week, at reasonable rates. Their place is conveniently located, being on the first block east of Odd Fellows' building. Patronize the young ladies and they will do their best to furnish good meals and good rooms. 22-4w

—Thos. Dalton was conveyed to the insane asylum from this place, last Monday morning, by J. C. Somers and O. W. Rummel.

—Rev. H. J. Norris has returned and will fill the pulpit of the M. E. church, as usual next Sunday.

Carr's Corners.

The farmers are washing sheep this week. They have plenty of water for that purpose.

—A number of the youngsters of this place attended a hop at Auburn Junction last Tuesday evening, and report a jolly time.

—Berry Penland and Sile Nugen attended Bartine's five-clown show last Monday evening. Sile says he saw one clown five times.

—Frank Shugers took a flying trip to Pleasant Lake last Saturday, returning home Monday. He says he caught some fine fish while at that place.

Owing to the recent high waters Cedar-Creek Sabbath-school was not very largely attended last Sabbath. Milt. Swisher brought two loads of people from the other side of the creek, and a number went back home.

C. O. D.

Mr. Philip Remlinger, an old subscriber to our paper, and well known in the whole surrounding country, informed us the other day that his wife, who for two weary years had suffered with Rheumatism in the shoulder, during which time she had been treated by several physicians without success, had been completely cured by a single bottle of St. Jacobs Oil.—Bucyrus, Ohio, Courier, Feb. 13, 1879.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. Martin, Ag't, B. & O. R. R. tf Auburn, Ind.

Wanted,

To Rent, a good, large, conveniently-arranged dwelling-house. Also

To Purchase, an organ box or case for shipping purposes.

Enquire of Thomas H. Sprott.

Look at This!

Best green-gage plums, 16 cents; sugar corn, three cans for twenty-five cents; whortleberries, two cans for twenty-five cents; tomatoes, three cans for twenty-five cents; best tomatoes, two cans for twenty-five cents, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

The use of St. Jacobs Oil is indeed followed by the most wonderful results. More than a dozen cases have come to my knowledge, where St. Jacobs Oil effected speedy cures, but I will only mention one instance. A man suffering for twenty-four years with Rheumatism was induced to try the St. Jacobs Oil. He used a few bottles of this truly wonderful remedy, and is now entirely well once more

W. Reinhardt, Elmore, Wis.

Over 1,500 Cases of Fits Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind.

Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-tf.

$100
Reward
For any case of
CATARRH
That cannot be cured with
HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an Internal Remedy Acting upon the Blood, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of Hall's Catarrh Cure is Not Cured or Benefited more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

Price 75 cents per bottle.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists

This Spring!

We are making some extraordinary efforts to do about two-thirds of the

CLOTHING BUSINESS

of this city. Heretofore we have, probably, done one-half of it. With our increased facilities, and having bought largely before the advance, etc., our belief remains unchanged, and we shall act upon it, that the best time to sell cheap is when others sell dear; and that more fortunes have been made by selling at low than high prices. Call and see the most complete stock of

Men's Clothing,
Boy's Clothing,
Children's Clothing,
Hats and Caps,
Gents' Furnishing Goods

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.
C. O. D.
One-price clothiers and displayers of the best goods for the least money.
Opposite North Door Court House.

A MEDLEY OF MERIT.

A FINE
DRESS SUIT.

Black Cloth Frock Coat	$10.00
Black Doeskin Pants	5.00
Black Cloth Vest	2.50

PANTS.

Men's Fine Rock or Harris	$5.00
Men's All-Wool	3.00
Boys' Very Durable	2.00

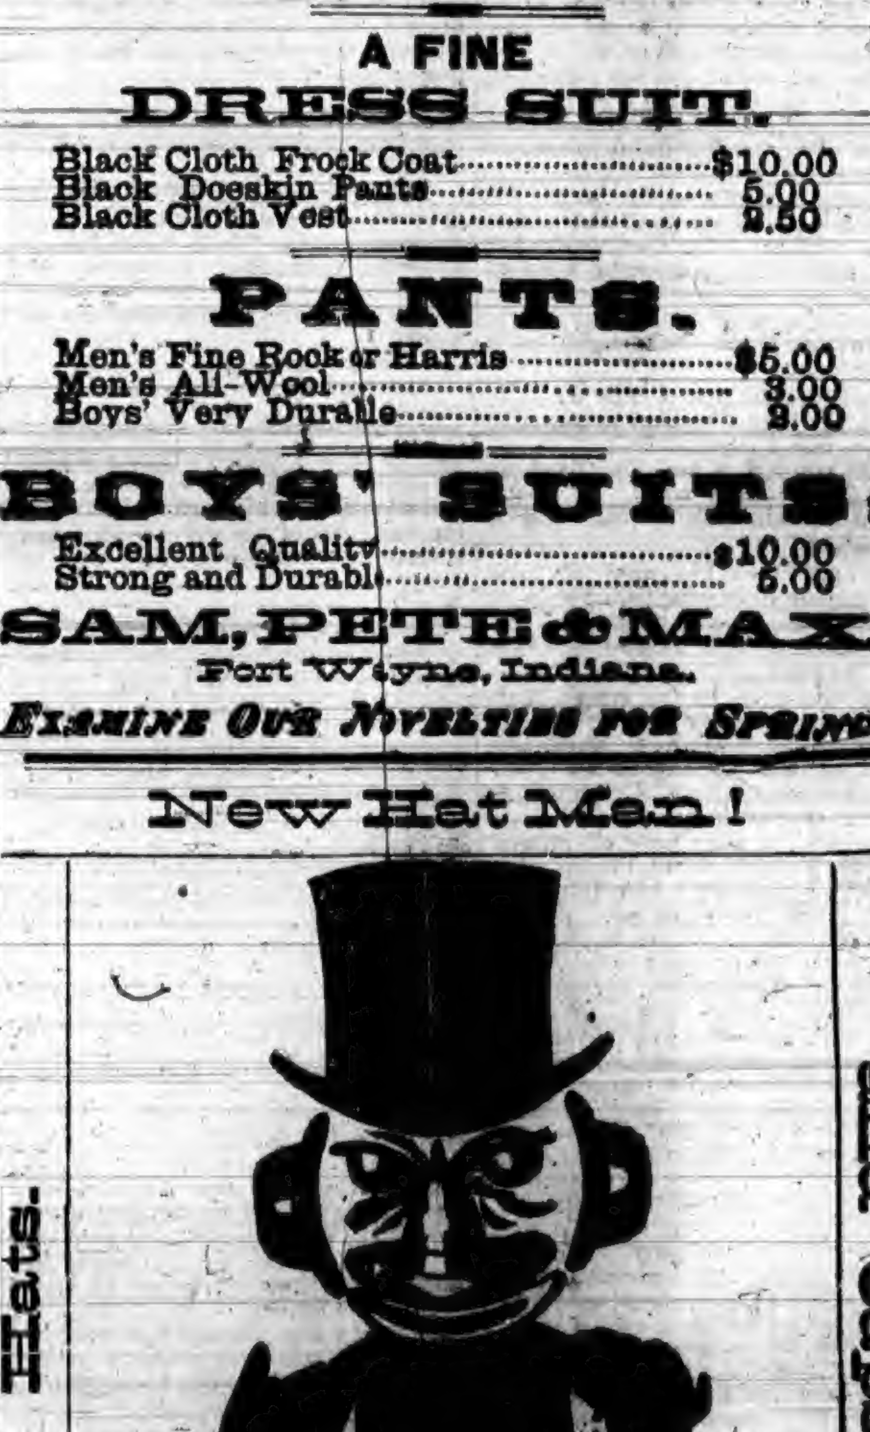
BOYS' SUITS.

Excellent Quality	$10.00
Strong and Durable	5.00

SAM, PETE & MAX
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

EXAMINE OUR NOVELTIES FOR SPRING.

New Hat Man!



New Hat Man!

C. H. YESBERA,
Auburn, Indiana.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., MAY 27, 1880.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,

THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,

Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

"NO SOLID SOUTH, NO SOLID NORTH, BUT A SOLID UNION."

Democratic County Central Committee

OFFICERS.

Wm. L. Blair, Chairman.
Theo. Reed, Secretary.
J. J. Van Auken, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Wm. L. Blair, Jas. A. Barns, S. B. Shutt, J. Wm. Wagner, T. F. Jordan, Guy Plumb.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEEMEN.

C. M. Merica, Butler township.
J. J. Walter, Jackson township.
T. S. Murray, Concord township.
Geo. A. Munn, Newville township.
Jacob Christoffle, Stafford township.
Geo. W. Maxwell, Wilmington township.
M. Houston, Auburn precinct.
D. Y. Husselman, Waterloo precinct.
W. J. Frederick, Keyser township.
L. D. Britton, Richland township.
J. M. Brumback, Fairfield township.
Fred. Waterman, Smithfield township.
T. H. Tomlinson, Franklin township.
B. F. Cornelius, Troy township.

Joint Representative Convention.

Delegates from the counties of DeKalb, Noble, and Elkhart, the same constituting a joint representative district, will meet in convention at Kendallville, Ind.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 6th, 1880,

for the purpose of nominating a democratic candidate for joint representative for the counties named. The ratio of representation will be one delegate for each 100 votes cast for Gov. Jas. D. Williams in 1876, and one for each fraction of 50 or over, as follows:

DeKalb county	28
Noble "	21
Elkhart "	34
Total	83

By order of the district committee.

Judicial Convention.

The democracy of Noble, DeKalb and Steuben counties, constituting the 35th judicial district, will meet in delegate convention at Kendallville, Ind., on

FRIDAY AUGUST 6th, 1880,

for the purpose of nominating a judge of the circuit court and prosecuting attorney. The ratio of representation will be the same as that in the joint representative convention, which will be held at the same time and place.

By order of the district committee.

Democratic County Convention.

Delegates from the several townships in DeKalb county will meet at the court-house, in Auburn,

Saturday, June 5, 1880,

at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the following offices, to-wit:

Representative in the legislature.
County clerk.
County auditor.
County treasurer.
County sheriff.
County recorder.
County surveyor.
County coroner.
County commissioner, north district.
County commissioner, southwest district.

The convention will transact such other business as may come before it.

SELECTION OF DELEGATES.

In accordance with a resolution passed at the last meeting of the county central committee, all democrats and others who intend to support the ticket nominated by the convention above named, are requested to meet at the usual voting place in their respective township or precinct,

Saturday, May 29, 1880,

at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the county convention, in accordance with the following apportionment, based upon the number of democratic votes cast for secretary of state at the last state election:

Butler	township	10	delegates.
Jackson	"	19	"
Concord	"	21	"
Newville	"	8	"
Stafford	"	7	"
Wilmington	"	19	"
Auburn precinct		31	"
Waterloo	"	10	"
Richland township		17	"
Fairfield	"	21	"
Smithfield	"	12	"
Franklin	"	9	"
Troy	"	5	"
Keyser	"	27	"
Total,		216.	"

The democrats of each township and precinct will at the same time, (May 29), appoint one delegate to the judicial convention to be held at Kendallville on the 6th day of August, 1880.

By order of the committee.

W. L. BLAIR, Chairman,
THEO. REED, Secretary.

A card from Mr. Frank Seiler, who is attending Eastman's Business College, at Poughkeepsie, New York, reports that celebrated institution in a flourishing condition, with over four hundred students in attendance, representing almost every part of the globe. The work of that institution is thorough and practical. We know whereof we speak.

In the selection of delegates from Indiana to the Cincinnati convention, it will not be enough to know that each and every delegate and alternate is for Hendricks as first choice; it must be well understood that each and every representative in that convention is unalterably opposed to the nomination of Samuel J. Tilden. The anti-Tilden men have a large majority in each district, and they should see to it that no treachery is practiced in the selection of delegates.

Send us a list of your delegates to the county convention.

Attend the democratic caucus next Saturday and help select good men for delegates.

The action of the Illinois republican convention virtually nominates Grant as the republican candidate for president.

The Delaware democrats have instructed their delegates to the Cincinnati convention, to cast the vote of that state for Senator Bayard.

Grant is now at Galena, Ill. B. Brown, the editor of the Gazette of that city, has telegraphed the Chicago News an authoritative statement that Grant will not withdraw from the presidential contest.

It is the opinion of the best politicians of both parties, that the only necessity for holding the Chicago convention next week is to ratify the nomination of Grant for a third term, and to put a tail to the ticket.

The committeeman of each township and precinct will oblige us by sending us a complete list of the delegates to the county convention, so that the list can be published next week. Send the list Monday without fail.

Democratic candidates for county offices will please bear in mind that no good will result from speaking disparagingly of their opponents. Let each candidate conduct his canvass upon his own merits, and there will be better feeling in the party after the nominations are made.

What will American citizens of foreign birth have to say about the nomination of Grant,—how will they relish his imperial notions? We incline to the opinion that Germans, Irishmen and Frenchmen will not consent to the wearing of royal robes in the country of their adoption.

The Masonic Grand Lodge of Indiana met in Indianapolis last Tuesday. Calvin Prather was elected Grand Master; E. L. McLallen, of Columbia City, is chairman of the committee on foreign correspondence; F. E. Davenport, of Auburn, was chairman of the committee on unfinished business.

Conkling, Cameron and Logan are all in Chicago making the necessary arrangements to give Grant and imperialism a grand send-off on the second of next month. John C. New, the chairman of the republican committee of this state, is also there learning the ropes, and by the time the Indiana delegates arrive, will be prepared to offer such arguments as will perhaps place the republicans of Indiana in a false position by having the vote of this state cast for U. S. Grant.

Next Saturday is the day fixed for the holding of democratic caucuses in the several townships and precincts in this county, for the purpose of appointing delegates to the county convention, to be held one week later. Every democrat should attend the meeting in his township and see that none but good men are put upon the delegation—men who will work for the success of the party rather than any individual. Allow no candidate to dictate who the delegates shall be. Send men who are capable of judging as to the availability of candidates.

The number of delegates in the democratic county convention will be 216 instead of 214, as heretofore published. The official vote for J. G. Shanklin, for secretary of state, in 1878, as shown by the canvasser's sheet on file in the clerk's office, is as follows:

Butler	township,	96	votes
Jackson	"	193	"
Concord	"	207	"
Newville	"	76	"
Stafford	"	66	"
Wilmington	"	187	"
Auburn precinct		309	"
Waterloo	"	103	"
Richland township		173	"
Fairfield	"	208	"
Smithfield	"	116	"
Franklin	"	91	"
Troy	"	47	"
Keyser	"	265	"

The corrected list will be found in the call of the central committee.

Mr. B. S. Sutton, of Shelby county, is spoken of as a prominent candidate for clerk of the supreme court. The Shelbyville Democrat-Volunteer says of him:

"Mr. Sutton is in every way qualified to fill the office acceptably. As circuit clerk of the county he served the people honestly and with ability, and no man ever left the office with a clearer and better record. We have no hard words to offer as against any other candidate who may be seeking the same office. Nor do we think because the present incumbent is seeking a re-election, that he should be accorded any prior claims. The office is one of four years, and the custom has heretofore been to invariably accord but one term. Mr. Sutton is at present holding the honorable and responsible position of Grand Master of the Masonic fraternity of Indiana. He has many warm and enthusiastic friends in all portions of the state. He is a good political speaker, a thorough canvasser, and if nominated would add largely to the success of the ticket."

The legality of the first amendment to the constitution, which is said to have been ratified by the people at the April election, will be tested in the supreme court by James V. Kelso, a prominent attorney of New Albany. It appears that at the May election in the city named, Mr. Kelso offered his ballot at the polling place, but it was refused by the inspector on the ground that Mr. Kelso had not resided long enough in the ward to entitle him to a vote. Although a life-long resident of the city, he had moved from one ward to another a few days before the election, and the inspector held that the first amendment debarred him from the right of suffrage. A few days ago Mr. Kelso appeared before the grand jury and procured an indictment against the inspector for refusing his (Kelso's) vote, the object of the indictment being to take the case as a test one before the supreme court, in order to determine the vexed question as regards the constitutionality of the amendments. It is to be hoped that the court will render an opinion before the time for the next election.

Memorial Day.

Next Sunday, the 30th instant, is the day set apart for the annual decoration of soldiers' graves. This custom has become general throughout the north, and is observed as often as the 30th day of May comes around. It is but natural that the surviving comrades and friends of deceased soldiers should delight in commemorating the ceremony of strewing flowers upon the graves of those who went out to risk their lives for the preservation of the Union. The noble act of giving up their lives to secure continued peace and civilization to surviving generations has gained for deceased soldiers an everlasting abiding place in the memory of every true American. As it was impossible to sever the ties of comrades in arms when our nationality was threatened with a loss of existence, so it is now—nineteen years after the first attempt to destroy the Union—impossible to sever the ties which a father, mother, wife, brother, sister, son or daughter bore to him who suffered the many trials and vicissitudes of a soldier's life, and whose remains now fill an honored sepulchre. None so degraded as to forswear cherishing a deep-rooted affection for those earthly ties which bound each one to another. No soldier can forget him who stood by his side, and who, perhaps, delivered his last message as he fell on the battlefield, to be transmitted to an anxious father or a loving mother. Soldiers who were sworn to be true to their country, were also true to each other in time of danger; and may each survivor continue to be true, in rendering kind services to survivors and in cherishing and perpetuating the memory, virtues and deeds of valor of those who fell in death, vindicating the cause of self-government as established by the blood of martyrs and handed down from the founders of a free government.

"Cover them over with beautiful flowers;
Deck them with garlands, those brothers of ours;
Lying so silent, by night and by day,
Sleeping the years of their manhood away."

"Cover the thousands who sleep far away—
Sleep where their friends cannot find them to day;
They who in mountain and hill side and dell
Rest where they wearied, and lie where they fell."

"So in our minds we will name them once more
So in our hearts we will cover them o'er;
Roses and lilies and violets blue
Bloom in our souls for the brave and the true."

School Trustee.

With reference to the election of a school trustee at Fort Wayne, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the expiration of Mr. Hoagland's term, the following compliment is paid by the Fort Wayne Journal to Mr. Max Nirdlinger, whose name is receiving favorable mention in connection with that position:

"With the expiration of Pliny Hoagland's term as school trustee, a vacancy will occur, which cannot be filled too carefully, and with too much discretion. The of name Max Nirdlinger has been proposed as a candidate for the office, and we believe a wiser choice cannot be made. Mr. Nirdlinger is a man of education, and is fully informed as to the requirements and duties of a board intrusted with the great interests of our public schools. He is a man of good executive ability, a quality much needed by a trustee of this character. It is a position that few aspire to, in fact none, save those who have the good of the public at heart. While the remaining members of the board are men of sterling integrity, having always discharged their duties conscientiously and faithfully, it is to the interests of the people that the newly elected member be as entirely competent and ready to do his duty with equal zeal and faithfulness. Mr. Nirdlinger, we believe, possesses the qualities for a good trustee, and we believe that a sufficient number of voters hold the same opinion to elect him to the office."

To the Teachers of DeKalb County.

Fellow-Workers: Now would be a good time to say to the authorities and "powers that be" that, inasmuch as you have compelled us to come up to the standard without any increase of wages, and knowing that you are abundantly able to comply with our reasonable requests, we respectfully ask you to consider our just claims and let us have some of the benefits of the improved times and the general increase in the price of labor.

All other trades and professions combine and secure their just claims by concert of effort and action, and there is no reason why the teachers should not do the same.

Will we do so? If you wish to move in the matter let us hear from you through the county papers or by letter.

AN OLD TEACHER.

Soldiers' Re-union at Waterloo.

The following partial programme has been decided upon for the old soldiers' re-union at Waterloo, Indiana, June 10 and 11, 1880:

JUNE 10.

9:30 a. m.—Reception of Loomis' battery, Michigan artillery, Coldwater, Michigan, Capt. Pratt commanding.

1:15 p. m.—Reception of visitors from the south.

2½ p. m.—Reception of company E, 16th regiment of Ohio National Guards, Capt. Foote, of Bryan, Ohio, commanding, and Fourth Battery of Ohio light artillery, Capt. O. J. Hopkins, of Toledo, Ohio, commanding, with visitors from the east.

5 p. m.—Reception of visitors from the north and west.

8:30 p. m.—Regimental and company re-unions.

Sunset salute.

JUNE 11—FORENOON.

Sunrise—Reveille and National salute.

8 to 9:30—Regimental and company re-unions.

9:30 a. m.—Form procession and march to grounds.

10 a. m.—Exercises at the stand in the following order:

1st, Music by the band; 2nd, prayer; 3rd; song by the club; 4th, oration; 5th, song by the club—"Marching through Georgia;" 6th, toasts and responses; 7th, song—"Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," and "Old John Brown," by everybody, led by the club; 8th, break ranks for dinner.

AFTERNOON.

1:30—Artillery drill by Loomis' Michigan battery, commanded by Captain Pratt, of Coldwater, Michigan, and 4th battery, Ohio light artillery, commanded by Capt Hopkins, of Toledo, Ohio.

2 p. m.—Infantry drill by company E, 16th regiment of Ohio National Guards, Lieut. Wm. Harding, of Bryan, Ohio, commanding, and the Waterloo Rifles, Capt. R. Wes. McBride, of Waterloo, Indiana, commanding.

3 p. m.—Sham battle, participated in by the above-named military organizations, and independent companies of Butler, Auburn, Angola, Waterloo and elsewhere, and also by a detachment of the signal corps, under command of Capt. Sam. Edge, and a squad of sharp-shooters, commanded by Sergeant J. B. Bixler.

4:30—Prisoners marched to headquarters and paroled

Every soldier or sailor who was honorably discharged is invited. All are requested to report at headquarters immediately on their arrival, when they will be enrolled and furnished appropriate badges. Survivors of regiments and companies present will march together, and each organization will be commanded by the senior officer of such organization in attendance. The committee intend that the utmost punctuality and promptness shall be observed in carrying out the programme. Each person participating is earnestly requested to come resolved to be on hand promptly to the minute to perform any duty assigned him. We will advertise nothing we do not expect to give precisely as advertised.

R. WES. MCBRIDE,
L. J. BLAIR,
S. B. JOHNSON,
S. J. LOCKE,
Committee.

Waterloo, Ind., May 25, 1880.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The announcement of the names of candidates for county offices will be inserted under this head for $2.00 in advance; no announcement to exceed six lines in length without extra charge. All announcements are made subject to the decision of the democratic county convention.

REPRESENTATIVE.

CLERK.

The democratic friends of Mr. D. Y. Husselman, of Union township, will present his name in the county convention and ask that he be nominated for county clerk.

The democratic friends of Mr. John W. Baxter, of Wilmington township, will present his name in county convention and ask that he be nominated for county clerk.

AUDITOR.

EDITORS COURIER: The democrats of Franklin township desire you to announce the name of Thomas H. Tomlinson, of the township named, as a candidate for county auditor.

The many friends of John W. Dills, of Concord township, will present his name to the democratic county convention as a candidate for county auditor.

TREASURER.

The democratic friends of L. J. Miller, of Richland township, will announce his name in convention as a candidate for county treasurer.

SHERIFF.

The many friends of John W. Boyle, of Wilmington township, will present his name as a candidate for sheriff in the democratic convention, and ask his nomination.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Please announce that Mr. Philip Plumb, of Waterloo precinct, will be presented by his friends as a candidate for sheriff of DeKalb county.

J. J. VanAuken's friends will present his name, and ask that he be nominated for Sheriff by the democrats of DeKalb county, in convention assembled.

RECORDER.

The democrats of Jackson township present the name of Samuel M. High, and ask that he be nominated for county recorder.

We are authorized to announce that James Gaines, of Butler township, will be a candidate in the county convention for the office of recorder.

Mr. George H. Mann, of Newville township, is named by his many democratic friends in that township as a candidate for county recorder.

SURVEYOR.

William Ensley, of Auburn precinct, will be a candidate in the democratic county convention for the nomination for county surveyor.

Mr. George L. Lanning, of Auburn precinct, has been named by his democratic friends as a candidate for county surveyor.

The many democratic friends of Azam P. Foltz, of Auburn precinct, announce his name for county surveyor, believing him to be well qualified for that position.

CORONER.

COMMISSIONER, NORTH DISTRICT.

COMMISSIONER, SOUTHWEST DISTRICT.

Mr. Edward Kelham, the present incumbent, is named as a candidate for re-nomination for county commissioner in the southwest district.

Summer

Underwear for Ladies, Gentlemen and Children, in light-weight Merino, Gauze, Lisle Thread and Balbriggan, all sizes and qualities now in stock. Our stock of Summer Hosiery and Gloves is large and well assorted with all the staple and Fancy Novelties of the season. Black and Colored Lace Mitts, Lace top Lisle Gloves, Kid Gloves of our various popular brands, in 2 to 8 buttons in street, Opera shades and black, at reduced prices.

ROOT & COMPANY.

Parasols.

Just opened—An elegant new lot of Black Satin Parasols, Rich Black Brocade Parasols, Fancy Colored Parasols, Children's Parasols, both lined and unlined, $2.50 to $15.00 each. Also an immense new line of Sun Umbrellas, 20, 22 and 24 inches. Blues and Browns in a great variety of Ebony, Horn, Ivory, Bamboo, Natural Stick, Tortoise Shell and Agate Handles; $1.50 $1.75, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 each and upwards. Please examine them.

ROOT & COMPANY.

Light-Weight Suitings.

For gentlemens Wear.—Our stock is probably the largest and best-assorted in the city. Our Goods are of the best Scotch, English, French and German manufacture. Our prices are VERY LOW, as the goods were ordered before the great advance in prices of Woolen took place. Gentlemen wanting Business Suits, Dress Suits, or anything in the way of Cloths, Cassimeres, Doeskins, Diagonals, Meltons or Cheviots, should not fail to examine before they purchase.

ROOT & COMPANY.

Lawns.

250 pieces New lawns this week in Tinted and White Ground, with and without Side Bands, 10, 12 1-2, and 15 cents per yard. Also New Linnen Lawns, Organdies, Jaconets, new Foulard Cambrics, French Chints, Zephyr Ginghams, Canton Ginghams, Seer-suckers, etc., etc., 10, 12 1-2, 15, 20 and 25 cents per yard. Our stock of Wash Fabrics is very large and worth looking at. Black and Colored Bunting in great variety.

ROOT & COMPANY, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The Auburn Fruit-House.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

Sugars Down.

Ligh Brown, 8 cents; Light yellow, 8 1-2 cents; Extra Yellow C, 9 cents; Coffee A 10 cents; Granulated, 11 cents.

Coffees Down.

Good Rio, 15 cents; Best Marraicabo, 20 cents; Fancy Rio, 22 cents.

South Carolina Rice, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; New Prunes, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; A No. 1 Fine-Cut Tobacco, 40, cents; Extra Fine-Cut Tobacco, 50 cents; Plug Tobacco of all brands very cheap; Parlor Matches, 7c., or 4 for 25 cents; the very best Syrups, 70 cents; Splendid Teas at from 30 to 75 cents.

Fish of all Kinds.

No. 1 White Fish, Family White Fish, Pickerel, Lake Fish, Catfish, Mackerel, Herring, Smoked Halibut, Boneless Codfish, etc., etc., all sold cheap and warranted as represented.

Crocks and Jars of any size at 7 cents a gallon.

Entrance on Seventh or Eighth Streets

Frank A. Hoff.

KIBLINGER & CO.

We are always busy behind the counters, in the ware-house, and on 1st, 2d and 3rd floors, selling Hardware, Nails, Doors, Sash, Glass, Paints and Oils by the wagon-load. Call on us when in want of anything in the Hardware line. We will sell you cheaper than the lowest. Thanks for past patronage.

KIBLINGER & CO.

S. B. HARTMAN, D. D. S.

DENTIST,

88 Calhoun st. Fort Wayne, Ind

Artificial TEETH on Gold, Silver, Porcelain or Rubber Plate.

The Morbid Liver.

An eminent clergyman says "that a change of stomach and liver would benefit the morbid sinner almost as much as a change of heart." Yet many attribute an irritable temper and a morose disposition to the ingenious workings of the devil, while they are simply the symptoms of dyspepsia, indigestion, torpid fever, constipation, or general or nervous debility, and are readily removed by a few doses of Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative. For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug store. 21-3w.

Notice of Administration.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THE undersigned has been appointed by the clerk of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Rudolph Sechler, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

S. B. SHUTT, Administrator,
Spencerville, Indiana.

19-3w
April 26, 1880.

WOODHULL & CROFTON, Plaintiff's attorneys.

Notice to Non-Residents.

State of Indiana, DeKalb county, ss.

No. 739. In the DeKalb circuit court, May term, 1880.

Oliver S. Miller, Theodore F. Miller, Elias Straus, Lewis W. Moore, Isaac J. Behr, Sigmond Behr, and Frank Elberson are hereby notified that an action has been commenced against them in said court, by Leopold Warner, John Warner, Louis E. Warner, John R. Warner, Edward Warner, Kaufman Greenberry and Simeon Kempner, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 50th juridical day of the next term of said court, which commences May 24, 1880, to-wit: July 20, 1880.

Witness, the clerk of said court, this 20th day of May, 1880.

JOHN W. BAXTER, Clerk.

W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

—Mortgages,
—Warrantee Deeds,
—Quit Claim Deeds,
—Guardian's Receipts, (bound),
—Administrator's Receipts(bound,)
—For sale in large or small quantities at the Courier office. tf.

THE GARFIELD CASE.

His Trial, Conviction and Sentence—A Vigorous Defense and Sharp Contest.

The trial of Lewis Garfield, the last of the three parties captured and charged with being participators in the startling midnight raid upon the quiet sleepers in the dwelling of Solomon Barney, at Spencerville, on the night of the first of December last, was promptly entered upon in this place, before Judge Lowry of Fort Wayne, last Monday. A motion for a change of venue, based upon some seven or eight affidavits and met by over two hundred and fifty affidavits, had been overruled at a former term of court. Further motions of a preliminary character were made at this term on the part of the defendant, first to require the state to say on which of the various counts or charges contained in the indictment the prosecution would elect to proceed, and after that another was interposed, based upon an affidavit of the defendant, asking a postponement on account of absent testimony. The motion to require the state to elect was sustained, and the prosecution selected, as the counts on which to proceed, three, charging in each of them a violent and burglarious entry of Mr. Barney's dwelling in the night time, and one of them charging the entry to be with intent to steal, another with intent to murder Solomon Barney, and the other with intent to murder his wife. Judge Lowry held the affidavit for a postponement insufficient, and overruled the motion. A jury was then selected without much difficulty, and the case has proceeded rapidly. A much larger amount of testimony is embodied in the report—a short-hand writer being employed for the purpose—than was adduced in the cases of either Stover or McDonald. It was fuller and more complete than in those cases, in showing the origin and formation of the combination amongst the desperadoes to commit the act; in tracing them from Bryan to Butler and Auburn Junction, and down the Baltimore and Ohio railway to a point between Concord and St. Joe, to a point beyond where a highway runs to Spencerville, and thence to the latter place. The taking, by Mr. Barney, of his $2,500 from the store to the house, his counting the money there with uncurtained windows around him and placing it on the floor by the bureau, the manner in which the defendant and his coadjutors had obtained their information as to the presence there of the treasure, their assault upon and the crushing in of the door, the command of the brigands to the inmates, "Lie still for your lives!" the trepidation of young Erick, the coolness of Mr. Barney and his wife in making provision for the safety of their children, the rapid rattle of the five successive pistol shots, the otherwise death-like stillness and quiet skipping to and fro of the assailants and assailed, and the intrepid valor of the brave Mrs. Barney in pursuing the desperadoes, deliberately aiming at and "touching" one of them, so as to compel a retreat, and their flight and escape from town with the team and carriage of Dr. Emanuel, were all detailed with a high degree of dramatic interest. A much greater effort was also made by the defense to get up proof of an "alibi"—that the defendant was elsewhere at the time of the occurrence—than on the former occasions, but as will be seen by the result without success. The case went to the jury, after eight hours argument by counsel and the giving of written instructions by the court, at 11 o'clock to-day. After deliberating for a trifle over two hours, the jury returned a verdict of guilty, affixing the penalty at ten years in the penitentiary and a fine of five dollars.

Crooked Clerks.

The report reached Auburn a day or so ago that three young men employed in the general offices of the Ft. Wayne and Jackson railroad, had for some time past been carrying on a systematic method of stealing from the company, and that on Sunday night, becoming alarmed lest they were soon to be discovered, they jumped on an express train and lost no time in putting territory between themselves and Jackson. Their names, as reported, are J. McLean, who was Mr. Bromley's chief clerk, A. C. Fay, freight and ticket agent, and James Wilson, who acted as Fay's assistant. The amount of their shortage cannot yet be definitely known, though up to yesterday the officials had checked them up for a few months back and found a discrepancy of about $8,000. This, of course, being mere floating rumors, cannot be vouched for as reliable, but it embraces the facts as near as we can obtain them at this time.

Barn Raising.

One of the largest and finest barns in this county was raised last week on the farm of 'Squire Henderson, of Jackson township. The dimensions of the building are 40x64 feet, in the construction of which 4,000 feet of hewn timber were used, and the total cost will reach about $1,000. Eighty-four persons were present at the raising, for whom Mrs. Henderson prepared a sumptuous dinner and supper. No person went away hungry, and a general jollification was the result.

—Fans are on the fly.

—The wool market has opened.

—The show showed. It was gorgeous.

—Go to Miss McKay's for your summer hat.

—Wall paper cheap at Davenport's drug store. 14-tf.

—The old settlers are settled all over town to-day.

—There hasn't been a circus in town since last Monday.

—Ladies' hats of the very latest styles at Miss Alice McKay's.

—Alm. Potter got home Tuesday from a three weeks' jaunt in Ohio.

—Go to McQuiston & Ralston's for spring shawls and linen suits. 20 3w

—For white goods and embroideries go to McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—1,000 yards of French gingham for sale at eight cents a yard, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—Can't somebody arrange with the weather clerk to get a little rest on this flood business?

—Hank Mader says he did a hard day's work Monday,—sold four buggies. Such work!

—Many needed improvements are going on in the residence and business portion of our town.

—5,000 yards of new-style calicos, at seven and eight cents a yard, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—All the hotels have been doing a land-office business this week. Court and the shows did it.

—2,000 yards of dress goods—good styles—from 10 to 15 cents per yard, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—It will pay you to see Davenport's patterns before you purchase wall paper and window shades. 14-tf.

—Bargains in bleached and brown muslins, toweling and table-linen, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

—Elegant ribbons, laces, ties, flowers and all kinds of millinery goods just received at Miss McKay's.

—Decoration day comes next Sunday. Saturday, however, is the day set for its observation in Auburn.

—The Garfield case goes to the jury to-day. Public opinion says he will go "over the road" for a few years.

—Ask for "Sellers' Liver Pills." No other possess half their virtue. 25c. per box. Sold by all druggists.

—Miss McKay, at Willis' book store, will trim hats to suit the ladies who patronize her, at very reasonable rates.

—The Eagle mills building is being generally overhauled and repaired, one of the chief improvements being a new roof.

—The heavy rain of last Friday caused Cedar creek to get on a high which lasted over Saturday and Sunday.

—Be wise; simply call on your druggist for "Dr. Sellers' Cough Syrup," when you have a cold or cough. 25c. a bottle.

—An application for the pardon of George Hazzard has been filed. A great effort is being made on the part of his friends to secure it.

—"French Pete" has put in a boss tile drain for F. E. Davenport, at the latter's residence. Pete is hard to beat on laying drain pipe.

—Frank Hoff and family now occupy the brick house on Seventh street which he lately bought of D. P. Hale. It makes a nice little home.

—Frank A. Hoff will add a large stock of dry-goods and notions to his present stock of groceries and provisions this week. Call on him for bargains.

—The woman with red hair. For additional information, apply to any member of that stag party which went to Churubusco last week on a fishing (?) excursion.

—Miss Lula Carpenter, of Antwerp, O., arrived in Auburn last Friday, where she will probably spend the summer with her sister, Mrs. P. J. Lockwood.

—Norm. Clark, of Detroit, has been resuming his visit here this week. He only had it half out the other time. He leaves under the impression that Rome City is n. g.

—By the way our dealers are disposing of farm machinery, one would suppose that every farmer in the country had his place covered with agricultural implements.

—The first man visible on the streets Monday, early in the morning, was munching a twenty-inch section of ginger-bread. Monday, by-the-way, was show-day.

—Couriers of March 11th, April 1st and April 8th, 1880, are missing from our files; if some subscriber will furnish copies of the dates named, we will consider it a favor. tf

—The surest way to prevent being swindled, is to trade with your home merchants—men who have an established business and who advertise it in their home paper.

Cas. J. Coats is again in our midst, having resumed his studies in the law-office of Rose & Hartman. Cas. graduated at the Indianapolis law-school last winter.

—Some of the girls from the rural districts, who came in Monday to catch "fellers" for the show, got unmercifully left. Their disappointment, as betrayed by the sad expression of their eyes, was distressing.

—Messrs. Root & Co., of Fort Wayne, ask your attention to their new advertisement in this issue. Read what they have to say.

—We would like to hear from "Itemizer," at Sedan, every week, and at greater length. Give us all the news items of your neighborhood.

—The merchants of Auburn all agree that last Saturday's trade was excellent. Lots of people in town, and they all wanted to spend their money.

—Frank Culbertson says that the band boys are about $6 ahead, clear money, as a result of the benefit in Ensley hall, last Saturday night.

—Dills says he has a very fine dog which he has named "Christian," because when he asks for something to eat and it is given him, he eats it.

—A communication concerning the church social, signed "A Lady," is withheld from publication for the reason that the writer's name was not given.

—The M. E. society will meet at the lecture-room Wednesday afternoon. Refreshments served at 5:30. All are invited. Mrs. J. Anderson, Sec'y.

—Half fare tickets will be sold on the Jackson road to-morrow (Friday), for the benefit of those who wish to attend the grand opening at Pleasant Lake.

—F. Huelsenbeck is erecting a new brick building on Seventh street, next to Edgington's barber-shop, which he will move his saloon fixtures into as soon as completed.

—Another excursion to Pleasant Lake, from Fort Wayne, comes off Sunday next on the Jackson road. Picnics are thicker than four in a bed,—four people, not picnics.

—A man stands a remarkably favorable good chance of getting jagged in the eye with a fish-hook, these days, at every turn. Fish-hooks and eyes ought to be served separately.

—Jacob VanOrden, the well-known ice dealer of Pleasant Lake, was in town the fore part of this week. He says he has dead loads of good thick ice on hand for the season.

—Dr. J. J. Littlefield has purchased the property of Ed. Bodine, on Tenth street, near Jackson, and is making some desirable improvements therein, preparatory to its occupancy.

—Despite all the drawbacks in its erection, Kiblinger's new store on the corner will be one of the finest around the square. The cornice was adjusted to-day, and all it now needs is the roof.

—The interest in the Spencerville burglary cases has apparently died out, somewhat from lapse of time, as the attendance at Lew. Garfield's trial, this week, is not as large as the trials of Stover and McDonald.

—Last week's Republican says that Billy Rainier is afflicted with heart disease. The item struck Billy so forcibly that he hasn't been well since, besides being scared out of some four years growth.

—The recent changes in Francis Picker's residence have made a material improvement. It now has a new front and cornice, while the brick walls will be tuckpointed—or "lined" as the Republican calls it.

—A cloth-peddler has been getting in his work on the streets this week, selling a pants pattern worth six dollars (?) for half the money. They always lose money just that way; it's one of their little eccentricities.

—The B. & O. railroad sells round-trip-tickets for one fare, to the Chicago convention next Wednesday. The sale of these tickets commences on the 31st and continues through the 1st and 2nd. See particulars on the eighth page.

—Joe Abright and Dave Hampton put in the day yesterday at Blue River lake, Churubusco, concocting schemes against the finny tribe. A special train has been chartered on the Wabash to bring home the spoils:—spoiled clothes.

—Tuesday evening of last week a highly enjoyable social hop was given at the residence of G. W. Link, of Auburn Junction, in honor of his son, William, who left the following day for the far west. Every one who attended reports a pleasant time.

—We cannot conscientiously assert that Charlie Bartine's "five-clown show" is an unparalleled success; on the contrary, it is a rather inferior concern. The trapeze performance of the two children was the principal feature of the entire programme.

—Rev. W. L. Meese has sold his residence property to Mr. Ed. Baker, who will take possession soon. Rev. and Mrs. Meese will be absent in St. Joe county visiting friends and relatives for the next two weeks, when they will return to Auburn and purchase another home.

—The "opening" at Pleasant Lake, which was to have opened up last Friday, was an open fizzle, owing to the openness of the weather. The rain had a "dead open and shut" on the crowd, of which the writer was one, and he makes this acknowledgement openly. (Opening chorus by the band).

—Lew Scalt, of Millersburg, who has been pushing through the masonry work on Kiblinger's building, expects to finish it this week. He has had bad weather to contend with almost from the start, and, considering other adverse circumstances, he has done remarkably well and is to be credited for his stick-to-itiveness.

—All persons in need of wall paper and window-shades are respectfully invited to call and examine the fine stock on exhibition at the Physicians' drug-store. The styles are the latest, the quality of the best, and the prices cheap as the cheapest. It will pay you to go and see for yourself. 19-4t.

—Johnnie Hebel has renovated and revivified the little store down on the corner, having put in a fresh stock of confectioneries and cigars, and he will run it hereafter so that it will demand a good share of patronage. Everything is clean and fresh, loafing has been abolished, and ice-cold soda-water is "on tap" at all times.

—That always-beautiful poem, "The Blue and the Gray," will be found on the first page of this issue of the Courier, it being particularly appropriate at this time, when we are so near the day set apart for the decoration of the soldiers' graves. From a standpoint of impartiality, it is one of the sweetest poems ever written.

—Frank Davenport left Monday morning for Indianapolis, where he takes in the grand lodge of Masons now holding its meeting there. A crazy man was being conveyed to the asylum on the same train, and John Davis says they had to put a chalk-mark on Davenport's back, so that no awkward mistake would occur at the asylum.

—Miss Lillie Morse returned Thursday to Auburn, where she joined the same party and undertook another voyage to Rome City. They went, they saw, they—got disgusted and wet. Miss Morse left Monday noon for her home in Angola, and she will not visit Auburn again until it rains. It rains next week.

—We are under obligations to Mr. Jacob VanOrden, of Pleasant Lake, for a sack of most excellent flour manufactured at the White Rose Mills. The flour recommends itself and those who use it once will want it again. We understand that the White Rose flour has been placed on sale in the Auburn market, and will be delivered to the residence of purchasers. Try it.

—If some of the smart alecks from the country could see themselves as others see them, when they come in town to see the elephant, the probabilities are that they would sneak away from the busy haunts of man and start a hermit shop. As a matter of course, they have all the privileges that others have, but that doesn't give them a license to make other people sick at their stomachs.

—The dedication of Lakeside park, which was to have taken place last Friday at Pleasant Lake, was necessarily postponed on account of the flood. Additional preparations have been made, however, and Mr. Ball intends to make up for lost time next Friday, May 28, if Providence and the weather permit. A large crowd will be there, in view of which the Fort Wayne and Jackson road will sell tickets at half fare. Go.

—Judge Lowry is trying a case, at Auburn, of a woman for assault and battery with intend to kill.—Ft. Wayne News, Tuesday.

You are slightly off your eggs, Gart. It is the case of Lewis Garfield, charged with burglarizing Sol. Barney's house at Spencerville, last December, wherein one of the burglars (who is now in the penitentiary) was shot in the arm by Mrs. Barney. With this trifling correction, you had it all right.

Waterloo, Iowa, Jan. 22, 1876.

I was taken with an acute attack of Rheumatism last fall, and confined to bed. At first employed a physician, without benefit; then sent to Wangler Bros'. Drug Store, and obtained a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, the use of which soon gave me relief, and cured me of the attack. I can safely recomend it to all suffering with Rheumatism. Respectfully,

Matt. McDermott, I. C. R. R., Shops.

Sedan.

—There is one widow less here.

—Mother McIntyre is very low on a bed of sickness, and fears are entertained by her friends that she will not recover.

—The Richland township Sabbath-school picnic, which was to have been held in the month of June, has been postponed until after harvest.

—The children's service at the Lutheran church, last Sunday evening, was well attended. A. C. Jackman and F. W. Willis, of Waterloo, entertained the young people with addresses appropriate to the occasion. These services call out a mass of young people, and are growing popular, much of the credit for which is due to L. W. Tresh, the superintendent, and H. Oats, chorister. Itemizer.

Mr. A. Neigher, Taylorville, Pa., writes:

My mother, an old lady of sixty years, suffered for thirty years with Rheumatism, to such an extent that she was at times entirely lame. We procured from Messrs. Ludwig Bros'., Druggists in Scranton, Pa., a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, used it according to directions, and saw our effort crowned with perfect success. Mother was relieved.

Boarding and Lodging.

The Misses Baldock will take boarders by the day or week, at reasonable rates. Their place is conveniently located, being on the first block east of Odd Fellows' building. Patronize the young ladies and they will do their best to furnish good meals and good rooms. 23-4w

—Thos. Dalton was conveyed to the insane asylum from this place, last Monday morning, by J. C. Somers and O. W. Rummel.

—Rev. H. J. Norris has returned and will fill the pulpit of the M. E. church, as usual next Sunday.

Carr's Corners.

The farmers are washing sheep this week. They have plenty of water for that purpose.

—A number of the youngsters of this place attended a hop at Auburn Junction last Tuesday evening, and report a jolly time.

—Berry Pealand and Sile Nugen attended Bartine's five-clown show last Monday evening. Sile says he saw one clown five times.

—Frank Shugers took a flying trip to Pleasant Lake last Saturday, returning home Monday. He says he caught some fine fish while at that place.

Owing to the recent high waters Cedar-Creek Sabbath-school was not very largely attended last Sabbath. Milt. Swisher brought two loads of people from the other side of the creek, and a number went back home.

C. O. D.

Mr. Philip Remlinger, an old subscriber to our paper, and well known in the whole surrounding country, informed us the other day that his wife, who for two weary years had suffered with Rheumatism in the shoulder, during which time she had been treated by several physicians without success, had been completely cured by a single bottle of St. Jacobs Oil.—Bucyrus, Ohio, Courier, Feb. 13, 1879.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. Martin, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
-tf Auburn, Ind.

Wanted,

To Rent, a good, large, conveniently-arranged dwelling-house. Also

To Purchase, an organ box or case for shipping purposes.

Enquire of Thomas H. Sprott.

Look at This!

Best green-gage plums, 16 cents; sugar corn, three cans for twenty-five cents; whortleberries, two cans for twenty-five cents; tomatoes, three cans for twenty-five cents; best tomatoes, two cans for twenty-five cents, at McQuiston & Ralston's. 20 3w

The use of St. Jacobs Oil is indeed followed by the most wonderful results. More than a dozen cases have come to my knowledge, where St. Jacobs Oil effected speedy cures, but I will only mention one instance. A man suffering for twenty-four years with Rheumatism was induced to try the St. Jacobs Oil. He used a few bottles of this truly wonderful remedy, and is now entirely well once more.

W. Reinhardt, Elmore, Wis.

Over 1,500 Cases of Fits Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind. Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-tf.

$100 Reward

For any case of

CATARRH

That cannot be cured with

HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an Internal Remedy Acting upon the Blood, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of Hall's Catarrh Cure is Not Cured or Benefited more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

PRICE 75 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists

This Spring!

We are making some extraordinary efforts to do about two-thirds of the

CLOTHING BUSINESS

of this city. Heretofore we have, probably, done one-half of it. With our increased facilities, and having bought largely before the advance, etc., our belief remains unchanged, and we shall act upon it, that the best time to sell cheap is when others sell dear; and that more fortunes have been made by selling at low than high prices. Call and see the most complete stock of

Men's Clothing,
Boy's Clothing,
Children's Clothing,
Hats and Caps,
Gents' Furnishing Goods

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.

C. O. D.

One-price clothiers and displayers of the best goods for the least money.

Opposite North Door Court House.

A MEDLEY OF MERIT.

A FINE

DRESS SUIT.

Black Cloth Frock Coat	$10.00
Black Doeskin Pants	5.00
Black Cloth Vest	2.50

PANTS.

Men's Fine Rock or Harris	$5.00
Men's All-Wool	3.00
Boys' Very Durable	2.00

BOYS' SUITS.

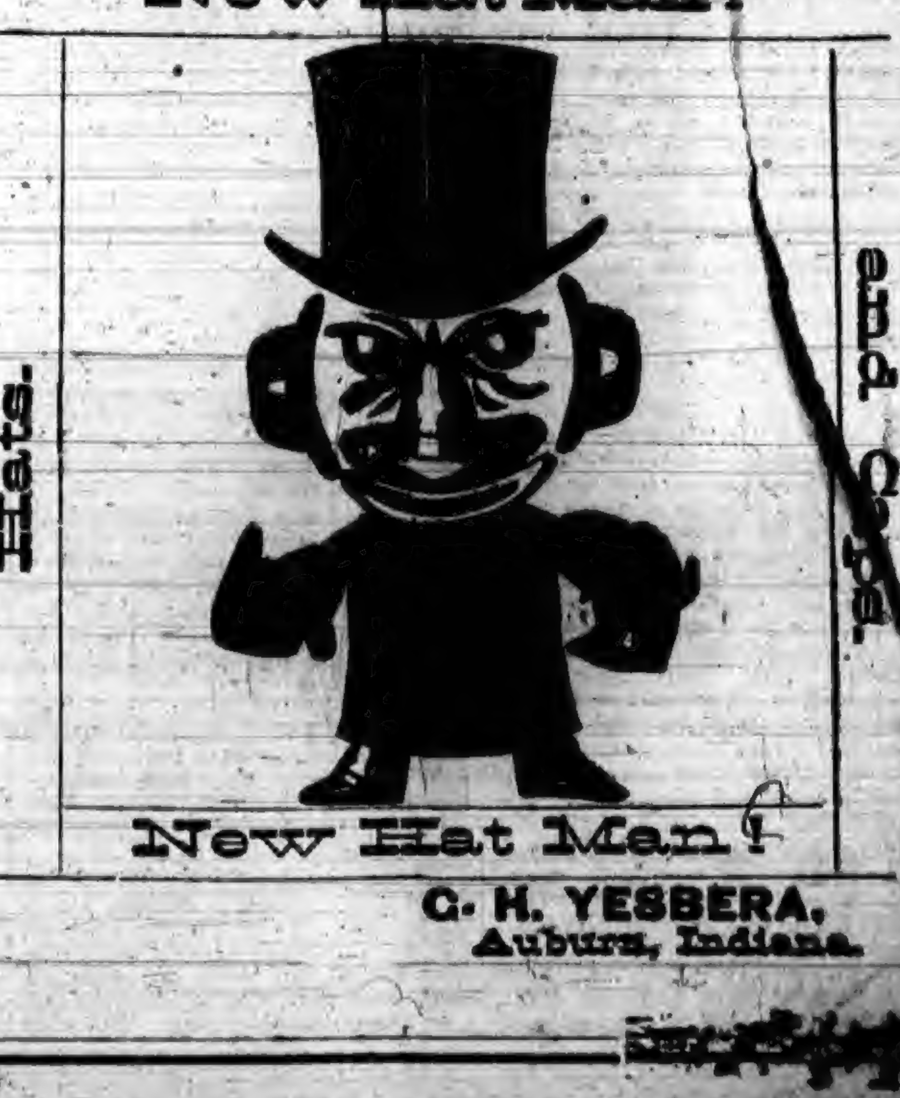
Excellent Quality	$10.00
Strong and Durable	5.00

SAM, PETE & MAX

Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Examine Our Novelties for Spring.

New Hat Man!



New Hat Man!

G. H. YESBERA,
Auburn, Indiana.

A LITTLE CHILD LEADS THEM.

The wind was blowing loud and shrill,
The clouds were scudding fast;
The [illegible] thunder boding ill,
Had reached the church at last.
And crouching 'neath the entry-porch,
With eyes made large with wonder—
A tattered child sought refuge there,
And feared the deaf'ning thunder.

The wind [illegible]
Had thrown the ancient steeple;
The flood that poured from the wrathful cloud
Alarmed the [illegible]
A silent prayer rose from each,
And hearts beat quick with wonder
And parted lips, too weak for speech,
[illegible] the [illegible] thunder.

A song was heard in the lull of storm
(To me it still is ringing!)
From [illegible]
We [illegible]
"Though a little child I be,
Still my Maker cares for me;
And to Him alone I'll raise
Hymns of joy and songs of praise."

The pastor bowed him where he stood,
Said: "Thanks for the trust of babes—for the song
Which quickens our faith in the infinite God,
And comforts this troubled throng."
The lightning flashed like a torch;
No more the flock dispaired;
We heard again from 'neath the porch:
"It is I—be not afraid!"

Chicago Ledger.

ANGEL OF ROCK CAMP.

"It's er dangerous experiment," said Kit Oliver, an old mountaineer, scout and Indian-fighter, as he played nervously with the lock of his rifle, "and I wouldn't like ter risk it, ef I was in yer place, Milt."

"But only think how lonesome Nelly is so far away from me."

And the face of the honest-spoken young miner was covered with blushes like that of a schoolboy when his first love is mentioned.

"I know it am kinder lonely for both of yer. But this am er wild country ter bring er young and handsome woman ter, and it's my opinion that they am much better off in the settlements."

"Do you think there is any one here who would harm her?"

"Not as I knows on. Ther boys am mostly good-hearted, and would be more inclined ter look upon her as er angel than anything else. But they am er ruff set—[illegible] used [illegible] them [illegible] leave [illegible] of [illegible] give [illegible] ging, and that wouldn't do."

"No; I came to get gold—both Nelly and I—and the sooner we get it, the sooner we will be back again to civilization."

"War she brought up in a city?"

"No—in the West. But why did you ask the question? It is a strange one."

"Because I want ter know ef she war one of ther skeery kind—one that got frightened at every shadder."

"Not she. She is as brave as any woman I ever saw."

"I'm glad on't. But thar's plenty ter make er man feel of his ha'r to see ef it am safe, now and agin, what with wild beasts and Injuns."

"There are none of the latter near here—haven't been more than a half-dozen in the gulch where we are working for the last two months."

"It am a fact that they am pretty well driven off, but they come sometimes, and, as I have said, yer'd have ter leave yer wife alone, fer yer couldn't take her with yer when yer working."

"I've explained all this to her, but she insists upon coming and sharing my lot, whatever it may be. Besides, she would make the old cabin so cheerful and so comfortable for us."

"It would be like er sunbeam on er dark day, and make us all more human like and better. I noticed how things changed when ther wives and darters bergan ter come ter ther Bay (San Francisco), and am sartin it would be ther best possible thing fer all on us."

"Then you do not see any particular reason why she should not come?"

"No; only it would be mighty hard [illegible] her. You wasn't married when yer came from ther States?"

"[illegible] found my wife on the way. We became acquainted on board ship. She was an orphan. Her aunt died; her uncle (with whom she came) went to the bad, and she, poor thing, was left alone, and I married her."

"That war right, Milt—right for a thousand others."

"Well, the last time I was down to see her, she begged so hard to come and live here that I couldn't find it in my heart to refuse her, and I've fixed up the cabin as best I could, but—and" he looked sorrowfully around—"it is poor indeed."

"It ain't much, like what city folks have, that am er national fact, but it am ther heart that makes home, after all, and I reckon she'll be happier here than pinin' fer yer."

There was truth in the rough words of the old mountaineer, and it was not long before pretty Nelly Martin was settled with her husband in the little cabin that was perched like an eagle's nest above one of the [illegible]islaus river. A little town of miners' huts had sprung up there, but until her advent no woman had ever been seen within its limits, except some almost-disgusting squaws, whose object was beggary or theft, probably both. As the old scout had said, they looked upon Nellie Martin almost, even if not quite, in the same light that they would have done an angel, having, like most of us, very confused ideas upon that particular subject. They were hard-working, roughly-dressed men, who had but one object, and she instantly brought to their hearts some dear recollection of hope. Their language was softened, their garments somewhat improved, and in the evening they gathered around to hear her singing, and respectfully admire, or, it may have been, envy the husband the possession of such a prize. It was true the surroundings and the utter want of others of her sex made her shine to better advantage than she would otherwise have done—that the jewel was far more dazzling from the uncouth setting of timber, rock and ravine-rent mountain. But Nelly Martin just missed being a beauty, and would have found but few dangerous rivals in any community. She chained the heart of every one in the little settlement, and she came to be familiarly known as "The Angel of Rock Camp."

By degrees Nelly Martin lost all fear. She learned to look upon those around as friends, and she soon saw her husband depart for his daily labors without even a tremor. Her ambition, like his, was to accumulate a sufficiency of gold to enable them to return to civilized life, and her heart yearned for the scenes and associations of her childhood days. Very proud and fond was Martin of his young wife. She was to him an all-in-all of life, and he worked most faithfully for the means that would enable him to turn his back upon the Pacific slopes and purchase a home where he could surround her with luxuries. Early and late he toiled, and she saved his earnings. Day by day their store increased, and both were happy in their prospects for the future. She always walked with him part of the way to the little stream where he labored amid the shining sand, always met him on his return with a smile and a kiss; and, when absent, she, too, earned money with her needle, and the days of plenty and happiness appeared to be swiftly drawing near.

But one morning the husband lingered longer than usual. Something seemed to stay his footsteps, and he bade his wife good-by again and again. It might have been that the little cluster of cabins would be more than usually deserted that day—that, save his wife, no human being would remain. A new flume was to be built; all were interested, and every hand was needed. This being the case, Nelly Martin would be entirely alone; and, as he was turning away for the last time, he paused and asked her if she was not afraid to remain, and if she had better not go with him.

"What should I be afraid of, darling?" she questioned. "There is nothing I can think of. No, I have no fears; and, besides, I have plenty to do. Do you think I would spend my time in idleness when you are working so hard? What would you do for supper when you came back tired, wet and hungry? No, it would not do for me to go."

"But if anything should happen," he continued, "fire off the revolver three times in succession, and you will soon have plenty of help. I will tell all the boys that is a signal—you are in danger."

"What could happen?"

It was a question he could not answer, and, beginning to grow ashamed of his causeless fears, he kissed her again, and soon was out of sight. But all through the day he often paused at his work and listened. Once he was certain he heard the report of a pistol, but it was a single shot—a very common thing—and, when evening drew near, he hastened homeward with a heart as light as his step, satisfied that his wife was safe. Yet, as he came in sight of the cabin, he could see no smoke issuing from it, and instantly all his fears returned with ten-fold force. His pace was quickened to a run, and very soon he stood breathless in the door. His call was unanswered. He repeated it again and again in vain; then he glanced wildly around. There was nothing but cold ashes in the fire-place. The cache where his gold dust had been concealed was torn open, and the floor of the cabin was sprinkled with blood.

In an instant he had given the alarm. It spread like prairie fire through the group of cabins, and the miners gathered. Among the first that came was the old scout, Kit Oliver, and his keen eyes drunk in everything at a glance—[illegible] as plainly as if he had been present.

"Thar has been a foul deed done, boys," he said, as he drew the sleeve of his hunting shirt across his eyes to wipe away the swiftly-gathering moisture; "and thar has been a sharp struggle. You kin see the marks just as plainly as yer kin the print of ther buffler's huff. And it hain't been long, neither."

"What in the name of Heaven can be done?" asked the nearly-distracted husband.

"That am hard to tell."

He knelt down and examined the ground carefully for a few moments, and when he arose his face was black with passion, and he continued:

"It wasn't no Injun, as I fust surmised, but a white man, that has got ther worst kind of blood in his veins."

"Who could it have been?"

"One," and the hand of the old mountaineer clutched the handle of his revolver savagely, "with whom I've got an ercount ter settle. Do yer see this scar on my throat and this bullet-hole in my shirt, boys? Wal, they am his marks."

"Who do you mean?"

"Joaquin, the mountain robber! He is more treacherous than er rattlesnake, savage than er painter, and cunning than er ox, and desperite than er wounded grizzly. I know ther country well, and whar abouts his trail will be likely ter lead. Six of yer get yer rifles and revolvers and foller me. Ther rest, as I have said, must take keer of poor Milt."

The name of Joaquin was at that time a terror upon the Pacific shore, and from his (as no one doubted) having carried away the beautiful young wife, the worst was to be augured. But strong, daring, and brave men were soon upon the trail, and would have overtaken him had not darkness forbidden. As it was, they penetrated to a considerable distance into the fastnesses of the mountain, and with sorrowful hearts waited for the returning light, seated round a little camp-fire, discussing the probable fate of the one who had grown so strangely into their lives.

"It am dangerous," the old scout, Kit Oliver had urged, "ter build er fire. It serves ter let er enemy know whar yer am, and gives er chance ter see ther sights of his rifle, and take good aim without bein' seen hisself," and he withdrew out of the light.

"Then you think," asked one of his companions, "that the black-hearted devil may be lurking in this neighborhood?"

"I don't say that, but I'm acting on principle, and it am always best ter keep on ther safe side, fer—"

The report of a rifle cut the sentence in twain, even as the young man to whom he was talking sank back with a bullet-pierced shoulder. He was instantly dragged into cover and cared for, and every precaution taken against offering themselves as a mark for the midnight murderer.

"The wolf has shown his teeth," growled Kit Oliver; "has hed er taste of blood, and it ain't ter be supposed that he'll give up ther trail. Keep yerselves hid just as much as yer kin, er sharp look out, too. I'm tired, and goin' ter take er nap."

He withdrew quietly into the bushes, and stretched himself at full length upon the ground. But it was far from his purpose to go to sleep, and five minutes after he had lain down he raised his head cautiously, looked around, and then crept noiselessly away. The shot had convinced him that the abductor of Nelly Martin was lurking somewhere in the vicinity, and he was determined to know more of the matter. But it was a dangerous undertaking—needed all his skill and caution, and his own life might at any moment be sacrificed.

All his efforts to find either the robber or the young wife were unsuccessful, and he groped around until the day began to dawn and he could distinctly see his way. Then he looked anxiously around to ascertain his whereabouts—looked at the ground, to see if he could not accidentally find some trail. To his intense satisfaction he found the imprint of a little shoe! It could have been made by none other than the woman he was in search of, and he followed until it suddenly disappeared—was lost even in the middle of a huge ledge of rocks.

"The devil must have lifted her up and carried her," he snapped out, as he saw the accompanying footsteps were more deeply impressed; "and there must be a cave hereabouts."

As he was speaking, a thin scale of stone that had been placed over an opening gave way; he found himself in one. He fell to a considerable distance, lay partially stunned for a few moments, and was recalled to consciousness by a woman's scream.

"Nelly, is that you?"

"Yes."

Her eyes had grown accustomed to the darkness of the cavern, and she saw more distinctly than he could do at first.

"How long have you been here?" he asked again.

"Ever since yesterday; for it must now be morning."

"And the black-hearted man that carried you off?"

"I have seen nothing of him since he left me here, and tied me so I could not possibly escape."

The bonds were instantly cut, and she told me how a man crept into the cabin and dragged her away.

"But the blood upon the floor?" he questioned, with exceeding interest.

"It was his. I struck him with a knife."

From that moment his admiration for her increased, if such a thing were possible. He sat in deep thought for a few moments; and his first plan was to remain and wait for the robber, and shoot him down as he entered. But, though he cared nothing for his own life, there might be a chance of the young wife's being injured, and even revenge could not be thought of when the price might be even one of her precious hairs. No, she must first be placed out of all danger, and having decided upon this, he began to examine as to the means of escape. That was not difficult. The cave had often been used as a place of retreat and concealment, and rude steps had been cut in the rocks. Satisfied that Nelly could ascend without assistance, the old scout crept up, and looked around on every side. There was no one in sight, and not a sound to be heard. He called to her, and they were speedily journeying toward the spot where he had left his companions. He met them following the broad trail he had purposely left, and a little council was held. But, like the one of the previous evening, it was cut short by the report of a rifle, and the whistling of a bullet that cut a shining curl from the head of their angel. Then their wrath burst through all bounds, and the men would have rushed up the hill to where the famous and infamous Joaquin could be seen standing, coolly reloading his weapon.

"Yer'd only go ter yer death—ter be shot down like so many dogs," interposed Kit Oliver, as he commanded them to take to cover. "The devil has got the best of it, and it hain't no use tryin' ter fight him with fair wepans. I said he war a devil, and he am; and, boys, we'll make it hot enuff for him!"

They understood his meaning; and, while one guided Nelly homeward, the rest separated, surrounded the wooded hill, upon whose top the robber was standing, and in a very brief time flames and smoke arose in great volumes. The outlaw was literally hemmed in by fire. There was a blazing, roaring hell upon every side, and escape seemed impossible. Should he attempt to rush through the burning furnace, a bullet would put an end to his career, and the scout grimly watched for the result. They could see Joaquin, as the smoke momentarily lifted, standing upon the same spot. The flames seemed to meet above his head, and blazing cinders fell in immense showers. Long and anxiously they watched, until the flames and smoke had somewhat disappeared. No trace of a man was to be seen, and they returned home exulting in the death of the outlaw, and to rejoice that they had saved Nelly unharmed.

But they were mistaken. Joaquin was not dead. They had forgotten what a safe retreat the cave was, and his death was written in blood long after that of the "Angel of Rock Camp."

Shall Suicides Be Cremated?

The proprietors of the cremating furnace at Washington, Pa., have been a good deal exercised over the question whether they shall cremate the bodies of suicides. At first they decided, without any apparent good reason, that they would not give suicides the benefit of their furnace. Now, equally without any apparent reason, they have changed their minds and consented to cremate the particular suicide concerning whom the question was raised. It used to be the custom to deny suicides Christian burial; but that custom has long since become obsolete. Is it to be revived again when cremation is substituted for interment?

IT is to be decided by legal authority just what constitutes a "gentleman" in England. The election of Mr. Thomas Wood as member of the Local Board of Stapleton, near Bristol, has been objected to on the ground of misdescription on the voting papers, he having set himself down as a "gentleman," whereas he is an eating-house keeper, and was so described at last year's election, when he was beaten.

AN insidious worm called the fluke is causing losses among the sheep in Great Britain, actually exceeding, in the aggregate, the cost of any of the wars which have figured in the indictment upon which the Tory Ministry is said to have been found guilty. In some parts of England, chiefly in the southwestern provinces, whole flocks have perished, and not a sheep is sound.

THE CARE OF CLOTHING.

How It May be Preserved for the Longest Time.

[From the New York Tribune.]

Concerning the fashion of clothing and the various fabrics of which it is made, information is full and frequent. Very little, however, is said about the care of clothing, and the ways in which it may be preserved for the longest time and in the best possible condition. To those who change their garments with every change of style this is a matter of slight importance, but to those who purchase a silk dress or a broadcloth suit only once in a series of years it is a matter of interest and value. Silks, cashmeres, cloths of standard style and quality, are very little affected by the various currents of fashion. They hold their own through all the years, and are always good, always "stylish," always suitable. When new fabrics are for the hour of their popularity high-priced, these standard goods sell at the standard price, and know little of rise or fall in standard value.

Neglect and carelessness deteriorate clothing a great deal faster than steady wear does. The housekeeper who, instead of changing her nice dress when she passes from the street or the church to her kitchen, keeps it on and takes it with her through the various processes of dish-washing, sweeping and cooking will soon rob it of all its nicety, while she who wears her fine clothes only in places where fine clothes are suitable may keep them in good condition for an indefinite time. To dress according to one's work is good taste, good sense, and economy. The careful person will take pains to preserve a new calico no less than a new silk. We knew a young lady once who put on a nice new calico which she had taken great pains to make, and wore it through the morning dew to milk the cows. To keep her arms from being soiled or tanned by the sun, she declined to turn up the sleeves of the dress. In two days the nice new calico looked like the rest of her dresses, dowdy, slatternly, unclean. We knew another young lady who had six silk dresses, and not one of them was fit to wear, though none of them had been made above a year. They were spotted, draggled, tumbled, mussed, abused. We knew another young lady who was the fortunate possessor of one nice black alpaca dress which she wore on all occasions the season through, and always appeared faultlessly dressed. She had no work to do that would specially soil her clothes. If a stray drop of anything that could make a spot fell upon her dress it was at once removed. All dust was brushed off, a sponge dipped in ammonia water brightened faded places, and snowy collars and cuffs suggested dainty habits of cleanliness.

The care of clothing to be easy must be habitual. The hardest part is in forming the habit, and this cannot too early in life be formed. Most children love to make mud pies, and play in the dirt generally, and give little heed to keeping themselves clean. This is all well enough at times, and they should be indulged in their mud pies, provided they are dressed for the work. But it is "poor-folksy" in the last degree to allow a child to play in the dirt with nice clothes on, or to permit a young person to dress inappropriately while at work. It is vastly easier to change a good coat for a poor one than it is to restore to its pristine condition a soiled coat. It is vastly easier to put on a pair of overalls than it is to sponge thoroughly a pair of pantaloons. But the worst of it is that those who neglect to change the coat and to put on the overalls neglect, also, the sponging and cleaning processes, and let dust and spots remain.

A clothes-brush, a wisp broom, a bottle of ammonia, a sponge, a hand-brush, a cake of erasive soap, a vial of alcohol, should form a part of the furnishings of every toilet. After all dust has been removed from clothing spots may be taken out of black cloth with the hand-brush dipped in a mixture of equal parts of ammonia, alcohol and water. This will brighten as cleanse. Benzine is useful in removing grease spots.

A Mountain in Mexico Sinks Out of Sight.

Adjacent to the hacienda of Santa Catarina, about twenty leagues to the east of the city, a very remarkable freak of nature has occurred, the facts concerning which we have received from a gentleman who visited the scene. On the 7th inst. the people of the hacienda and vicinity were aroused by a startling noise resembling thunder. Upon assembling to see what was the matter, it was soon discovered that a small mountain in the immediate vicinity had sunk into the earth, and it must have gone out of sight like a flash. Our informant, with others, made observations, and learned that the aperture thus opened was 200 metres in length, 150 in width, and its depth from 130 to 150 metres. It was with great difficulty the rim of the cavern was approached, as all about there were great yawning fissures which threaten to open still wider. To miss a step there was danger of finding a grave in the depths beneath. Some stones, weighing about two pounds each, were thrown into the cavern, and it took from nine to ten seconds before they struck the bottom, their contact with the surface beneath making a great report. After these brief observations, the exploring party retired hurriedly from the scene, as the earth was trembling and shaking as if upon a balance. The location of this strange phenomenon is situated in the tierra caliente (warm region), and mesquites and palm trees flourish all about. Whenever any portions of the earth along the rim of the cavern fell into the depths immense clouds of white dust issued forth. This dust was carried about by the winds and made all the trees in the vicinity perfectly white. Speculation is rife as to whether the mountain sank owing to earthquake influences or from the result of gas explosions. It could not be attributed to the former very well, as no shocks were felt in the neighborhood.—La Union Democrata, San Luis Potosi, Mexico.

Horse-Biscuit.

A horse-biscuit is being manufactured in Russia to take the place of oats. It is made of crushed oats and the flour of gray peas, mixed with hempseed oil and salt; and is four inches in diameter. A day's rations weighs about four pounds, and is equal to ten pounds of oats. The horses like the biscuit when soaked in water, and if fed exclusively on them, though they lose in flesh, are still fit for fatiguing work.

Cleopatra's Needle.

Our American nation, which is the youngest in the world, is about to receive from the oldest of kingdoms the gift of a monument whose foundation was planted a couple of years since on the banks of the Thames at London.

Think of a single stone which weighs a couple of hundred tons, and that would tower up twice as high as most city dwellings, being floated across 5,000 miles of ocean to us! Surely man, though a dwarf himself in size, is cunning enough to move mountains, and to master the waves of the sea.

This obelisk can tell us a long and wonderful story. Over fifteen centuries before Jesus Christ was born, there reigned in Egypt the great King Thothmes, the third of that title. He was such a brave fighter that no other troops in Africa or Asia could stand against him. He even made the far-off King of Nineveh pay him a tribute of elephants, giraffes, gold, silver and horses, which latter animals the Egyptians had never owned before. He was also a noted hunter, and one painting shows him busy in slaughtering 120 elephants.

Such exploits as these so puffed up Thothmes with pride that he had his name engraven in a temple as "The living good god, lord of the upper and lower world, the lord of diadems!"

At his order, hundreds of men were set to work to hew two obelisks out of the hard granite rocks at Syene, in Southern Egypt, near where the Nile dashes through the cataracts. He was resolved to preserve the memory of his victories forever on the stones.

Think a moment of the difficulty of cutting out such a huge, four-faced monolith (or single stone) without a breakage, and with such poor tools as they had then.

Such feats are not ventured on in our own days, as they are too delicate and costly to undertake.

In the quarry, they used to mark out the stone for the whole length required, and then drive metal wedges into the lines on three faces.

In this manner, after the patient labor of many months, the rocks was cut away on all sides save one. The rough block was finally separated by driving a number of wooden wedges at the same time along its entire length, in the holes previously cut for them; and then these wooden wedges were saturated with water, so as to split the stone by their expansion.

The next step was to transport such a massive block a distance of 800 miles to Heliopolis or On, the City of the Sun, near the delta of the Nile. So the stone was moved across inclined platforms to a raft, which had been brought to the edge of the quarry through a canal, and then it was floated down the Nile during an inundation.

Some scholars believe that large monoliths had to be conveyed all the way by land, on sledges and rollers. Such a gigantic task must have occupied several years.

On its arrival in safety the granite was carefully polished. Next the figures and inscriptions selected were skillfully inscribed by the court sculptor, yet slowly, on account of its extreme hardness. The base of the obelisk was then set within a groove in the pedestal, and the entire monument was raised to the perpendicular by building up a ridge of earth beneath it.

Our special obelisk and its mate stood as guardian deities before the grand entrance of the Temple of the Sun at On. They were symbols of the rays of the rising sun, as the pyramids to the westward were of the slanting or setting rays. In that idolatrous age they were even worshiped as divine images, and oblations were offered to them.

These monuments may have been standing at On when Joseph became Vizier over Egypt; and married a daughter of the Priest of On. It is a nearer certainty, however, that they were in their place when Moses was being cultured in all the learnings of the Egyptians; and he may have often looked upon their faces when a student.

After the Romans had conquered Egypt, centuries later, these two obelisks were removed from On to the city of Alexandria, on the coast. They were then set up before the new temple erected for the worship of Cæsar of Rome, the sovereign of the world. This happened in the reign of either the Emperor Augustus or Tiberius, and more than 1,800 years ago. It was also shortly after the death of Cleopatra, the last Queen of Egypt, whose wicked wiles ruined herself and her kingdom.

In after years, the Egyptians set afoot a tradition that she had conveyed these monoliths to their new station, and so it chanced the name of Cleopatra's Needle was thought appropriate.

In the lapse of centuries, one of these obelisks fell prostrate, and this latter is the monument which now adorns the Thames embankment.

Cleopatra's needle has stood erect throughout the entire period of the Christian era, though a part of its base has gradually worn away, and the column has required to be kept in position by inserting loose stones.

The inscriptions on the east and south sides have also been defaced in part, either by the action of the sea-breeze, the rays of the sun, or the steady cutting by winds laden with sand from the desert, or probably by all these causes combined. Still, considering its age and removals, the obelisk is in remarkable preservation.

Cleopatra's Needle testifies to-day, as it may for many hundreds of years to come in our own land, that those ancient people did the best of handiwork, and that honest work of all kinds will live to prove its true value.

THE Fanny May Variety Company advertised to give, in Topeka, Kan., "the finest entertainment on earth;" but the audience, which was large and masculine, soon found that it was exasperatingly poor. They pelted the performers with eggs and vegetables, drove them from the stage, chased them into their dressing rooms, and were about to march them through the streets in their fanciful costumes when the police arrived and quelled the riot.

A DREAM.

BY MILTON H. MARBLE.

I.

I had a dream last night, my dear,
A pleasant dream of thee;
I thought we lived in a quiet home
Beyond the crystal sea;
In a land where the air was very mild,
And it e'er was endless spring—
A land, too fair, it seemed, for earth,
The land of which poets sing!

II.

Oh! for those moments of fancied bliss
To be again in that home,
Where all was golden happiness
And sorrow might never come!
I would lay me down on the cold damp ground
To-day, could I dream once more
That dream, and be again in that home
[illegible]

III.

Ah! the idea has a counterpart
Somewhere, in the days which lay
Before me, in the path which I go,
This I have felt alway!
Therefore I wait, with gladness, the time
That I shall dwell with thee,
In the home I saw within a dream,
Across the beautiful sea.

PITH AND POINT.

A MERE matter of form—Cutting dress.

LIES go by telegraph; the truth comes in by mail three hours late.

MOTHERLY wisdom—Stick to your flannels until they stick to you.

A GENTLEMAN named his dog Penny because it was one sent to him.

WE hear of a man who has made a fortune by attending to his own business! This is authentic. But then he had few competitors.

WE are told that "Gen. S—— was always coolest when on the point of attack." Most people are hottest when on the point of attack.

REV. LOUIS [illegible] is a Dakota clergyman. He has one satisfaction, however. Nobody opens his letters by mistake.

WE are told "the evening wore on," but we are never told what the evening wore on that occasion. Was it the close of a summer's day?

A ST. LOUIS rich man drew up a will which was so pathetically worded that it moved all his relatives to tears. It left all his property to an orphan asylum.

A NEW YORK engraver recently made this mistake: "Mr. and Mrs. —— respectfully request your presents at the marriage of their daughter."

WHEN a hen has retired from business, after a long and uneventful life as an egg-manufacturer, the unfeeling huckster throws her upon the market as a spring chicken.

"I WISH I was worth $1,000,000," said a gentleman. "What good would it do you, for you don't spend your present income?" inquired a friend. "Oh, I could be economical on a large scale."

A VERY weak tenor in Dublin singing feebly caused one of the gods to shout to an acquaintance across the gallery: "Corney, what noise is that?" "Bedad," said Corney, "I believe it's the gas whistlin' in the pipe."

JEANNE's mother attempts to dissuade her from marrying a soldier of the line with whom the girl is desperately in love. "A war may come and a cannon-ball may take off his head," she tells her. "Ah, well! a widow at 16!" exclaims the daughter. "What is more poetic?

"OH! papa," exclaims a college youth rushing into the presence of his father, "good news. I have passed my examination." "My noble boy, I am overjoyed." "And so was my tutor. He said the news made him very happy, for, if I could pass, nobody else could possibly fail to."

A YOUNG man and woman stopped at a country tavern. Their awkward appearance excited the attention of one of the family, who commenced a conversation with the female by inquiring how far she had traveled that day. "Traveled!" exclaimed the stranger, somewhat indignantly, "we didn't travel, we rid!"

"YOU know," said Plato Socrates "That melons must be kept cool.' Socrates nodded assent. "Now, continued Plato, "if melons were very scarce and descendants of Ham were numerous in the vicinity, how would you keep your melons cool and secure?" "I'd put 'em," replied Socrates, "in a chilled-iron safe."

WHEN the Greeks were about to sail for Troy, Menelaus bought a bundle of straw and put it carefully away in his cabin. "What is that for?" asked Agamemnon. "To tell us the direction of the breeze," answered Menelaus. "You're crazy," said Nestor. "Why," remarked Menelaus, "don't straws show which way the wind blows?"

"I AM told," said Mr. Gladstone to Mr. Sam Ward one evening at Dalmeny after a day of great oratorical conflict, "that you have in your country a man who can play on a harp of a thousand strings." "Yes, was the reply, "but I have listened to a man to-day in this country who can play upon a harp of ten thousand strings." Mr. Gladstone is understood to have been pleased with the compliment.

THE office door was opened and immediately shut without attracting Smithson's attention; but, when this was done again and again and again, you could see by the rose hue in his face that he had finally noticed it. The next time the door opened, the small boy who opened it was surprised by the warm embrace that Smithson bestowed on him. "What do you mean, you young rascal?" cried Smithson, punctuating his remarks by vigorous shakings of the small boy aforesaid. "What do you mean by meddling with my door?" "I only did what you wanted me to do," whimperingly replied the boy. "What I wanted you to do!" shrieked Smithson, with a shake that threatened to make butter of the lad. "Yes, sir; you stuck up 'Please shut the door,' and, you know, I couldn't shut it without first opening it, could I?" It was well that the last shake of Smithson's was so violent that he lost his hold of the boy. There is no knowing what might have been the consequences.—Boston Transcript.

THE diminutive Commodore Nutt keeps a drinking-place in New York city, and when his bartender was recently arrested for keeping the place open on Sunday, contrary to law, he was promptly bailed by the little Commodore, who said that he had bank stock enough to qualify as bondsman.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

A NIHILIST NEWSPAPER.

The Diminutive Sheet That a Staff of One Student Writes, Prints, and Distributes.

[St. Petersburg Cor. Manchester Guardian.]

I have just seen one of the greatest typographical curiosities in the world—a Russian revolutionary paper. It measures about three inches by ten, and is printed on one side of a single sheet. It bears the imposing title of the Will of the People. This little sheet took such possession of me that I could not rest until I learned more about it. I made inquiries in the proper quarter, and obtained a most interesting revelation of the whole "inwardness" of one of those Russian revolutionary papers which so perplex the police. The office of a Russian revolutionary journal is usually a little back room in a very big house. The room must be so insignificant that it is, as it were, lost in the house, and a policeman would hardly think of looking into it in a general search. It bears on the door an humble business announcement to the effect that artificial-flower making, or some such harmless handicraft, is carried on inside. The room is scantily furnished, and the staff of the journal is just one small unwholesome-looking ex-student, who has been turned out of college for insubordination, and is now living by his wits, on pawning and on a small allowance from a revolutionary center. The staff has long, uncombed, greasy hair, and a face which is rarely washed with anything but its own tears. It wears a long cloak or wraprascal lined with what was once fur but it is now merely a bald surface of hide, and the only glimpse or hint you get of nether garments is in frayed ends of trousers peeping out from below. Within this wraprascal is the all in all of the revolutionary journal—its soul and spirit and its material life. When the cloak moves, the staff and the type, the pen and paper, the ideas, the principles, and the policy—all go with it. It is a triumph of the art of packing. It is still rather inaccurate to say that the staff is a pure individuality. It is a dual one. A woman shares the wretched room, and the labors of the wretched enterprise. She, too, has been a student, and she is still young. She studied medicine, perhaps, at Zurich or at Paris, served as "queen's messenger" between the home centers and the leaders abroad, until the police made Russia too hot to hold her in her own name. To the other half of the staff she is devoted heart and soul, and through him to his hobby—the universal revolution. She is a voluntary outcast from a respectable family, and she would as cheerfully lay down her life as any petroleuse of Paris for her creed.

The journal is not a daily journal, but what may be called an intermittent one. It comes out when it can. The first business is to collect material. For this purpose the reporting staff, after a scanty meal on the cold remains of last night's supper, wraps itself in its cloak and sallies out to watch public events. It is irresistibly attracted by a sort of magnetic instinct to places where there may be somebody to shoot at. It goes to the great square in front of the Winter Palace, or to the environs of the public offices. It has a pistol in its pocket as well as a pen. There is no knowing what may turn up, and the staff has generally a standing order to put a Czar or a Minister out of the way. With this double duty in view it is always sure of some result. If it cannot get near enough to kill it can still manage to obtain information of goings-out and comings-in which may be useful at some future moment of action. It mingles with the crowd of idlers. It works its way gradually to the front, as near as the police and soldiers will allow, and, when the Czar or Minister drives by, with swift trotting horses and Cossacks before and behind, it darts such a look of hate at him as would do the work more effectually than knife or pistol, if looks could kill. When the reporter has brought in his account of how things are looking in the city it becomes the editor's turn. The leader is generally composed under the trees in a snow-covered public garden. It is written on sheets of paper torn from a tiny pocket-book, and as each sheet is finished it is rolled up in a ball, ready to be swallowed at a moment's notice. I believe there is no instance known in which the most vigilant detective has ever caught a leader writer in flagrante delictu. At the first sign of a policeman approaching the scene of literary labor down go the pills. The next stage is the setting up in type. The staff gathers up the pills into his hands, and proceeds to the little back room. The little back room is locked and bolted, and a chest of drawers is pushed against the door. The dual member lays a loaded revolver within easy reach, and the printing department is in full activity. The type is taken from under the mattress, and the leader is slowly and painfully composed, with many a start at the sound of a footstep, which threatens to turn it all into an immediate "pi." How the paper goes to press is not quite definitely known. My informant on this point was wanting in technical knowledge, but I am led to conclude that a sheet of paper is spread on the "form," and that the staff sits on the sheet of paper to obtain each impression. When the whole impression is printed off the type is, as a temporary measure, tilted upside down into the breeches pocket to form "pi." The distribution takes place at nightfall. The first thing to provide for is the supply of the honorary free list, namely, the Emperor and two or three of his chief Ministers, including the head of the Police Department. Copies are forwarded to these through the post, with a manuscript intimation on the margin of the paper that the recipients will be done for at the first convenient opportunity. The letters are posted and the regular distribution begins. A copy is left with every dead wall, where it may remain all night, with a chance of being read by the moujiks as they are going to their labor in the early dawn. This part of the undertaking involves considerable risk and danger. Every dead wall in St. Petersburg is guarded just now, not only by the police, but by watchful house-porters, who are ordered to stand outside their doors and keep awake all night. Still the house-porters cannot look two ways at once, and while they are looking one way the nimble staff may contrive to post up a copy the other. The ornamental part of the work, the one little bit of it which is a subject of just professional pride, is to leave a copy or two on the walls of the police department itself.

This accounts for about three-fourths of the impression. The remainder is left (still on the generous free-list principle which marks the whole conduct of the enterprise) with the proprietors of tea shops and other popular establishments, much against their will. The staff, needing refreshment after its labors, will enter some wretched refreshment-house in a low quarter, and, after drinking his glass of tea seasoned with lemon, and toying meanwhile with any regular journal that may be lying on the table, will slip a few copies into a corner, where they are likely to be found by the next customer, and immediately steal out with all dispatch into the shelter of the night. Midnight witnesses its return to the office, where it puts the broken "pi" into its place of concealment, and has dreams of revolutionary murders, arson and general misrule on its hard bed of type.

The "Roil Bengol Tagger."

These are Little Johnny's observations on the "Roil Bengol Tagger," as communicated to the San Francisco Argonaut:

"One time there was a man who had a tagger, and the tagger it was a sho, and the man he tuke the money for to get in. The man he had a big paper naild onto the tagger's den, and the paper it said, the paper did: 'The Roil Bengol Tagger, sometimes called the Monnerk of the Jungle. Hands of. No Techin the Tagger!' The monnerk of the jungle it was always a layin down with its nose tween its poz, and the fokes wich had paid for to get in they was mad cos it wudent wock, and rore like dissent thunder. But the sho man he said: 'That's ol rite when I git the new cage done, but this is the same cage which the offle feller broke out of in Oregon, time he et up the seventeen men and their families.' Then the fokes they would ol stand back and tock in wispers while the tagger slep. But one day a feller wich was drunk he take to punchin the tagger with the masthead of his umbreller, wich stampeded the oddience wild, and the wimmin fokes they stud onto chairs and hollered like it was a mouse, but the drunk chap he kep a jobbin the monnerk of the jungle crewel. Pretty sune the monnerk it bellered offle and riggled, but the feller kep a pokin like he was fireman to a steam engin. Bimeby the monnerk it jumped onto its hine feets and shucked itself out of its skin and roled up its sleefs and spit onto its hands and spoke up and sed: 'I bedam if I cant jest whollip the peagreen stuffin out o' the gum-dasted galoot wich has ben a proddin this ere tagger!' And the oddience thay was a stonish!"

Domestication of the Buffalo.

"The early explorers of the Mississippi valley believed that the buffalo might be made to take the place of the domestic ox in agricultural pursuits, and at the same time yield a fleece of wool equal in quality to that of the sheep; but no persistent attempts have yet been made to utilize it by domestication. That the buffalo calf may be easily reared and thoroughly tamed has been conclusively proved, but little attention has been paid to their reproduction in confinement, or to training them to labor. During the last century they were domesticated in various parts of the colonies, and interbred with domestic cows, producing a half-bred race which is fertile, and which readily amalgamates with the domestic cattle. The half-breeds are large, fine animals, possessing most of the characteristics of their wild parentage. They can be broken to the yoke, but are not so sober and manageable in their work as the tame breed—sometimes, for instance, making a dash for the nearest water, with disastrous results to the load they are drawing. It is somewhat difficult, also, to make a fence which shall resist the destructive strength of their head and horns. But the efforts at taming buffaloes have not been many or seriously carried on, and no attempt appears to have been made to perpetuate an unmixed domestic race. Probably after a few generations they would lose their natural intractableness, and would doubtless form superior working cattle, from their greater size, strength and natural agility.—Ernest Ingersoll, in the Popular Science Monthly.

The First English Song Set to Music.

The following old English poem is said to have been the first English song ever set to music. It was written about the year 1300, and was first discovered in one of the Harleian manuscripts, now in the British Museum:

APPROACH OF SUMMER.

Summer is i-comen in,
Lhude sing cuccu;
Groweth fed, and bloweth med,
And springeth the wde nu.
Cing cuccu.

Awe bleteth after lomb,
Lhouth after calve cu;
Bulluc sterteth, buck verteth;
Mur'e sing cuccu;
Cuccu, cuccu;
Wel singes the cuccu;
Ne swik thow nawer nu.
Sing cuccu nu,
Sing cuccu.

The following is a literal modern prose version: "Summer is coming. Loudly sing, cuckoo. Groweth feed and bloweth meed, and springeth the wood now. Ewe bleateth after lamb, loweth cow after calf; bullock starteth; buck verteth," i. e., harboreth among the ferns; "merrily sing cuckoo! Well singest thou, cuckoo. Nor cease to sing now. Sing, cuckoo, now; sing, cuckoo!"

The Dutiful Son.

A French boy saw his father hanging, and, instead of cutting him down, went and hunted up a policeman, who, on entering the room, found the man almost gone. On reproaching the youth for not interfering, he said he had "no right to meddle with his father's proceedings; it was not the part of a dutiful son to meddle." His father, being restored, went to thrashing his son for letting him hang; but the boy declared that his father would have thrashed him just the same if he had cut him down, and that he had no right to meddle.

THERE is a man at Luray, Vt., who became convinced, when young, that kissing was wicked, because Christ was betrayed with a kiss. He resolved never to kiss anybody. He has been married twenty years, and is the father of eleven children, but has never kissed his wife or one of his offspring.

THE CROP OF CANT.

Radical Hypocrisy Eloquently Ventilated in the United States Senate.

[Extract from the Speech of Senator Vest in the Spofford-Kellogg Case.]

MR. PRESIDENT: In the absence of any argument on the other side of the chamber, and from those who oppose the resolutions reported by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, we are left simply to surmise the grounds of those who advocate the claim of the sitting member from Louisiana to remain in this body. I say that no argument has been made on the opposite side of this chamber against the resolutions of the committee. A report is before us coming from the minority of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, destitute of argument, destitute of facts, and consisting alone of partisan abuse. I use the words deliberately and advisedly. Sir, there can be no graver question presented to the American Senate than that involved in the issues now before this body. A sovereign State, and the fairest and most unfortunate of all the States of this Union, mangled and torn by the sharp teeth of the wolves that gathered about her, is a suppliant before us, and her sister States can alone give her justice. Leaders of the Republican party, eminent statesmen who stand before the country as the dictators of its policy, join the minority report, in which this extraordinary language, the only salient point in it, is presented to the Senate of the United States:

"The men whose professions of returning loyalty to the constitution have been trusted by the generous confidence of the American people are now to give evidence of the sincerity of their vows. The people will thoroughly understand this matter, and will not be likely to be deceived again."

It requires no sensitive scrutiny to know the meaning of this insulting and offensive statement. Because the Senators upon this side of the Chamber, or, as the Senator from Maine (Mr. Blaine) elaborated it, "the Senators from sixteen States, lately in rebellion or sympathising with rebellion," do not construe the law as announced by the minority of the committee, and do not believe that the sitting Senator from Louisiana is entitled to his seat in this Chamber, they are denounced as false to their oaths of allegiance to the constitution, and unworthy of the confidence of an honest people. Sir, I have no language suitable to this presence in which to express my contempt for a charge like this.

I desire in this discussion to say nothing more partisan than the nature of the issues involved necessarily must cause. It is useless to disguise the fact that the American people look with peculiar solicitude upon the decision of this case, because it reminds them of the fact that the administration now in power in these United States obtained that power from the very abuse which to-day is sought to be reiterated in the Senate of the United States. Sir, when instead of argument we receive abuse, it is adding insult to injury. What is this declaration of the minority of the Committee on Privileges and Elections upon a question involving the existence of the constitution itself but an appeal to the partisan passions of the hour? What is it but a declaration to the people of the United States that the Republican party propose to merge and whelm all the other issues in the single fact that sovereign States of this Union have dared to trust in the Senate of the United States men who risked life and fortune and all in common with their fellow-citizens in those States, and what is this but an insufferable taunt of the most despicable order?

The crop of cant springs perennial and eternal with the Republican party. The cotton crop may fail from the ravages of the caterpillar. Wheat may perish with rust or weevil. Corn may be destroyed by drought or floods; but the crop of cant is more certain with the Republican party than "seed-time and harvest." Who does not know that all this virtuous indignation about the constitution simply means indignation because the Democrats in this Senate do not intend to allow the outrage committed upon a sovereign State by a partisan majority to remain unredressed, or that the Republican party shall profit by their unconstitutional and illegal action?

"The men whose professions of returning loyalty to the constitution have been trusted by the generous confidence of the American people." We heard this refrain at the extra session, and it promises to be the catch-word of the coming canvass. "The men who struck at the life of the nation must not be trusted to make its laws. The Confederate Brigadiers are traitors to the constitution they have sworn to defend." And yet the world knows and the past proves that the test of patriotism and loyalty to the constitution is simply voting the Republican ticket and giving the offices of the country to the Republican party. When did Longstreet, or Mosby, or Key express penitence for the part taken by them in the Rebellion? Show me one word from either of them indicating regret for having led the charging columns that dashed their tattered gray against the Union lines. No, they have not repented, but they have done what covers every transgression, they have given their adherence to the Republican party and supported its ticket.

To-day, in the leading Republican paper in this city, in the Republican, which I have now in my hand, is a declaration from Gen. Mosby, now the accredited Minister of the United States to a foreign country, now in full fellowship with the Republican party, now a great apostle of the party of God, morality, progress, and reform, in regard to his part in the Rebellion:

"I said this four years ago, and my words are now prophecy fulfilled: 'I feel a just pride in their glory, and am as jealous of the military honor of the Southern people as any man on their side. A generous foe would not ask to deprive us of it. I know that Gen. Grant would not.'"

And to-day this gentleman stands the accredited Minister of the United States Government abroad, and says that he feels as much pride in his record as a Confederate soldier as he did when his flag waved in terror for four long years before the national capital. By what and when and how did Mosby, Longstreet and Key, the Postmaster General, obtain the confidence of the Republican party? When they voted the Republican ticket, and to give the offices of the country to the Republican party; when they said, we give the spoils of the National Government, we vote this ticket, this mystic piece of paper that wipes away all sin and hides all transgressions. Why, sir, there is not in all the pharmacopœia, from the days of Hippocrates, any drug with such miraculous effect as that tiny piece of paper on which is written the names of the Republican candidates at an election.

Not all the water of the Jordan; not the pool of Siloam itself; not the famed talisman of Saladin presented to the royal Richard ever had the medicinal and healing virtues of a Republican ballot! It casts oblivion over the blood and carnage of Shiloh and Chancellorsville, hides the serried ranks of Longstreet and the black flag of Mosby which for four long years waved in terror before the national capital; and it even stills the groans of Libby and Andersonville!

There's a drop, said the Peri, that down from the moon,
Falls through the withering airs of June,
Upon Egypt's land; of so healing a power,
So balmy a virtue, that even in the hour
That drop descends contagion dies,
And health reanimates earth and skies.

But even this mystic drop compares not in efficacy with the drop of a radical ballot into the box of a returning board, although from the bloodiest hand that grasped musket or saber in the army of the Confederacy.

Who has not seen the repentant sinner coming forward to the mourner's seat, while the ecstatic melody burst from gladdened hearts:

Nothing in my hands I bring,
Simply to Thy cross I cling.

In every orthodox creed repentance is current coin; but not so with our Republican brethren. There is no welcome from them to an empty-handed sinner, no matter how full he may be of repentance. He must come with the radical ticket in his hand, prepared to vote it early and often.

Mr. President, I assert that there is not a Confederate Brigadier in this Chamber who would not be appointed to any office within the gift of the administration, and receive the votes of Republican Senators in confirmation, if without one syllable of repentance for the past he should promise allegiance to the Republican party for the future. Ay, sir, even my friend from South Carolina, "the Hamburg butcher," who has been cartooned in the illustrated Republican papers as a leader of the Ku-Klux, with a sword ten feet long and spurs weighing ten pounds each, riding until midnight "fetlock deep" in negro gore—even he, by sacrificing honest conviction and real manhood, could be accredited abroad, and grace with his many accomplishments a foreign court.

Plain Truths Well Spoken.

Ex-Gov. Hubbard, of Connecticut, in a recent address to the Democratic Club, of Hartford, took occasion to give some advice to that locality. We extract as follows:

Great emergencies sometimes occur in the history of government, where the nation's life and the liberties of the whole people are at stake. At such times parties are too small for the nation's needs, and they give way for the time being to a great, heroic and overmastering unanimity of the people. But such supreme occasions are rare. The ordinary and normal administration of government, in this and in other free countries, has been and always will be conducted by one or the other of two great contending parties, and, while bribery, intrigue, fraud, ballot-box stuffing, and the rascalities of returning boards may give occasional success to either, that will prevail in the long run which stands for the soundest principles of justice, liberty, law and order, and for the most honest and wholesome methods of political administration.

This great party of ours is no transient growth of yesterday and to-day. It dates back to the formation of the constitution, is memorable in its history and rich in its faith, lineage and achievements. It has witnessed the overthrow of I know not how many adversary parties. It will, in my opinion, notwithstanding occasional mistakes, witness the overthrow of all others, and last in its essential principles as long as the republic lasts. But this must be on condition that it forget not the faith of the fathers, and stand, in the future as in the past, on a higher plane of patriotism, principle and action than any other. To this end there are a few cardinal truths it must never forget.

1. The essentials of our traditional faith. The largest liberty of the citizen consistent with good order. The greatest good of the greatest number, as the object of all laws and constitutions; a jealous holding in all matters of local self-government to the rights of the States, those primitive democracies intended by the fathers as barriers against the aggressions of the central power; and at the same time a faithful maintenance of the Federal Government in all its delegated sovereignties, as essential to the union of the States.

Retrenchment and reform in the Federal revenues, honesty in Federal administration. Honesty in the nation's credit to the last farthing, no matter at what cost. Honesty in the nation's money to the last grain and pennyweight. A paper currency redeemable in gold and silver only, and good faith in everything.

2. The purity of popular elections as the indispensable condition of free Government. I lack words to give due force and emphasis to this thought. The buying and selling of votes, repeating at the polls, the intimidation of voters by their employers, the deviltries of returning boards, no matter whether in Maine, South Carolina, Louisiana or Florida, are all poisonous to free institutions, and will, unless restrained, prove fatal to them. I know not how it comes about that so many men, honest and honorable in other relations, are willing in politics to leave honor and conscience behind them, and give themselves over to every form of political debauchery with greediness. A man who really believes in democracy, and that, as a voter, he is one of the rulers of the State, and equal to the foremost man in the republic, and yet sells his vote for a piece of silver, is a Judas in politics and a traitor to himself and to every other member of his party. I add, that that the buyer is as bad as the seller, and worse, for he is a dealer in corruption at wholesale. It ought to be the business of this association to do something for the repression of these growing evils, and to see to it that every Democratic voter casts a free and independent ballot, and that his ballot is fairly counted.

3. Honesty in official administration. I know no way of accomplishing this but by proposing honest men for office. To select candidates because they are political ringsters and can command the support of the bummers of both parties, or are willing to do dirty work in the aid of their own candidacy, is the highest possible folly as a mere matter of policy. A party which has dirty office-holders will itself pass for dirty. There is no avoiding it. The place for the Babcocks, Belknaps and Tweeds of a party is the prison, if possible; if not, then in the rear, out of sight and out of smell.

So, then, I urge, not only as a matter of political morals, but on the grounds of party expediency, that everywhere, and particularly here in our own city, town and county, we put forward our best men for places of public trust, and that we resolutely apply to this question of official candidature, from the lowest local office up to the highest, the old Jeffersonian test: "Is he honest, is he capable, is he faithful?"

A party incapable of applying this test, and nominees incapable of enduring it, will not be supported by the people, and they ought not to be.

4. Unity of party action as essential to party efficiency. We have suffered quite too much in recent elections from the lack of this, and it is high time we had found a remedy. Adherence to one's party, when it no longer represents the essentials of one's political convictions, is, I freely admit, no longer a duty. It is servitude rather. But to desert one's flag, to fall into fractions, to withhold one's vote, to hire out to an opposing candidate, or even to retire into a new party attitude, either from personal pique and disappointment or from bargaining and venality, is a base apostacy to one's political faith and treachery to associates. Have we not had of late something too much of this in our own ranks? Let us have done with it. This city, town, county and State upon a free, fair, and unbought election is, I make no matter of doubt, clearly Democratic. What we need, and all we need, is, I repeat, union and concert of action among ourselves—candidates that will honor the constituencies that honor them, honest platforms that say what we really believe and mean just what they say, elections fairly conducted, and a free suffrage exercised from conviction and without fear or favor of any man, and honestly canvassed. This is what we want; this is what we must try to secure. And, this secured, the grand old Democratic party of Jefferson, Madison, and Jackson will come to the front once more in solid column, and victory will rest on its banners.

Country Social Life.

Country folks are in general so fully occupied with affairs that they have no time to discover how lonesome they really are. So far as this is concerned we think it is a misfortune. We are too busy. We work too hard. We take few or no holidays. We read and think too little, and do not spend sufficient time in social culture. There is no reason why those who plow the soil or "whose talk is of bullock" should not experience the refinements which are the result of formal social life. In business, at bargains, in pursuit of dollars, no man is seen at his best. He is thorney, spiney, with his back up as a porcupine might be at his business. Let one doff his working clothes and enter a room full of neighbors—men, women, young men and maidens—and he is a man of another kind. He naturally falls into the ways of an intuitive kindness, which is really the truest politeness, the doing to his companion what he should do to him. He "lets himself out" to please, and, after an evening spent in social converse, he retires with many rough corners and asperities toned down. For a few days the influence remains. It would be permanent if it could be reinforced now and then, and the good results would be most agreeable and useful. There is no difficulty in bringing these good influences to bear. Two or three persons with energy and some magnetism about them can put them in motion with ease. Now is the time to begin the effort.—Rural New Yorker.

INDIANA NEWS.

INDIANA is being overrun with circuses.

ELIZABETH LANDSON died lately near Evansville. She was 102 years and 11 months old.

ELEVEN in all of the Harrison county mob that murdered Henry Long have been arrested.

THE school enumeration of Logansport shows that there are 3,600 children of school age in that city, 500 less than last year.

ABSALOM KNIGHT, a student at Earlham College, Richmond, had his skull fractured by a base-ball knocked foul by the batter.

THE enumeration of school children at Indianapolis, just completed, shows 26,522 within the corporate limits, a gain of less than 500 over last year.

CHARLES HINCHMAN, a 12-year-old son of ex-Sheriff Hinchman, of Jennings county, has been appointed a page in the national House of Representatives.

MEASLES at Indianapolis are said to be taking a fatal turn, attacking the brains of the victims and producing convulsions, from which death is the only relief.

A VALUABLE horse belonging to David Hewitt, living near Liberty, got loose in the stable and butted its brains out against a beam. It is pronounced a deliberate case of suicide.

THE Council of Madison, by a vote of 8 to 4, has repealed the former ordinance appropriating $50,000 to the B., B. & M. road, and ordered the destruction of the bonds issued therefor.

IT is now announced that the cornerstone of the new State House cannot be laid before August, as there must previously be laid four courses of stone upon the outside walls and 600,000 brick in the inner ones.

AN industrious and respectable young German at New Albany married, the other day, a young woman nominally colored, but who would never be taken by any who did not know her pedigree for anything else than a pure-blooded white.

SUIT has begun at New Albany against the Pennsylvania railroad to recover $100,000 for the injury done Anna Hoffman by being run over on the 12th of April by a train running at a high rate of speed. Both arms of the girl were cut off.

AN old white horse, the sole survivor of the four horses that drew the hearse in President Lincoln's funeral cortege in Indianapolis, in 1865, is spending his last days on the Foudray farm, six miles northwest of the city, one of the oldest horses in the county.

G. W. HOSS, LL. D., has resigned his chair at the State University, to take effect at the close of the present collegiate year. He has bought the Kansas Educational Journal, and will leave Indiana about the 12th of June to take charge of it, making his home at Topeka.

THE pump-factory and residence of Isaac Rarden, at Greenfield, were destroyed by fire the other night. Loss, $8,000; insurance, $1,000. Supposed to be the work of an incendiary. It looked, for a while, as if the entire town would be destroyed, as a terrible gale was blowing at the time.

EDWARD WEAKLEY, aged 18, and Jerome Roles, aged 14, were squirrel-hunting two miles south of Shelbyville the other day. While walking along in search of game, Weakley's gun was prematurely discharged, and a portion of the contents lodged in young Roles' face. The wound inflicted was very serious.

AT Richmond, the other day, a 5-year-old boy named Nelson fell from a second-story window and disjointed his neck. A physician was called, who twisted the vertebræ into position, and the child is rapidly recovering from the accident. This is one of a very few such cases which have ever come under the notice of the medical profession, and is well authenticated.

A CASE has just been decided by Judge Chase, of Cass county, that will put about $20,000 into the pockets of the soldiers of that county. The case is like this: During the rebellion the county offered a bounty for volunteers. At that time there was a large number of enlisted men from that county already in the field. Their time had expired, and they re-enlisted as veterans, causing themselves to be assigned to Cass county. The county will have to pay the bill.

EX-MAYOR HUMPHREYS, of South Bend, died the other night, aged 64 years. He was one of the most eminent physicians in the State, an officer of several medical associations, and one of the Commissioners of the Indiana Hospital for the Insane. At the beginning of the Rebellion he went out as Surgeon of the Twenty-ninth Indiana volunteer infantry. Later he was made Brigade Surgeon, and, in 1862, was appointed one of the eight Medical Inspectors of the army by President Lincoln, and served as such until a year after the close of the war.

MARY BEANE deemed herself neglected by her lover at Denver, and shot the man with whom she found him playing cards when he ought to have been visiting her.

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY
Established 1847 at 12 N. 8th Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.
INDISCRETION or EXPOSURE
YOUNG MEN
PATIENTS TREATED
DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

DON'T RENT
BUY A HOME IN MICHIGAN.
$5 TO $10 PER ACRE!
Strong Soils! Sure Crops! Railroad through Center of Lands. Healthy Climate. Schools and Churches. Intelligent Population.
HIGHEST REWARD TO FARMERS.
These lands are a long distance East of the Mississippi River. Large amount saved in travel and transportation of crops. Descriptive pamphlet in English and German. Address W. O. HUGHART, Commissioner, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

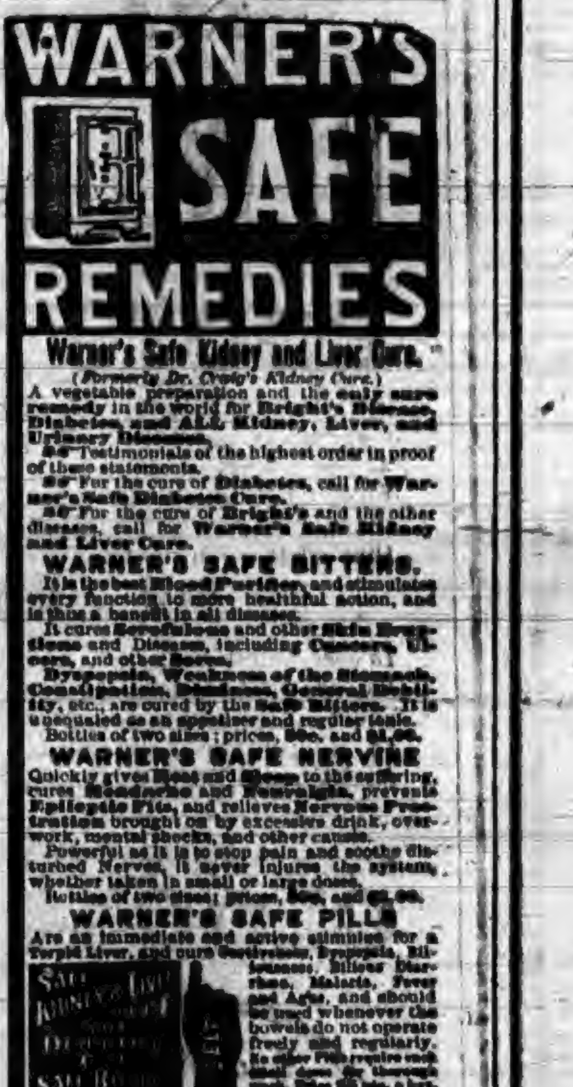
THERMALINE
A Safe and Reliable Substitute for Quinine
The only 25 cent
AGUE REMEDY
IN THE WORLD
CURES
CHILLS & FEVER
and all MALARIAL DISEASES.
Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE, on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & Co., 35 Wooster Street, New York, for thirty-two page book, mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT.
An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box
Gives Immediate Relief.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.
Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or Chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions, Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.
The above four preparations for sale by F. E. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers, druggists, Auburn, Indiana.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 Cents per box. All Drug Stores.

SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant to take as a glass of Lemonade. 7 cents each. All Drug Stores.



WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES
Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)
A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.
Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.
For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.
For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.
It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.
It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.
Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, overwork, mental shocks, and other causes.
Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhea, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. No other Pills require such small doses for thorough work. Price 25 cts. a box.
Warner's Safe Remedies are sold by Druggists & Dealers in Medicine everywhere.
H. H. Warner & Co.,
Proprietors,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.

NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO. Battle Creek, Mich.
Established in 1848.
ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE
"VIBRATOR"
Threshing Machinery and Portable and Traction Engines.
CAUTION!
BE NOT DECEIVED
NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

—ON—

Coffee, Sugar, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18 cents now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents per pound; and the Extra A Sugar we sold at 9 cents, now down to 8 cents; and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound. We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

TEAS! TEAS! TEAS!

The boom in teas last fall has not been maintained. Prices, in place of advancing, have declined so much that we are now selling the best Young Hyson tea lower than it has sold in ten years.

Good Young Hyson, 25c; Choice Young Hyson, 50c; Extra Young Hyson, 40c; Best young Hyson, 65c; Good Imperial tea, 40c; Best Imperial tea, 50 and 65c; Good Gunpowder tea, 40c; Best Gunpowder tea, 50 and 65c; Good Oolong tea, 30c; Best Oolong tea, 40 and 60c; Good uncolored Japan tea, 25, best 40 and 60c.

WHITE AND YELLOW SUGARS.

Cut Loaf, 10c; Coffee A, 9 1-2; Granulated, 10c; Extra C, 8c; Powdered Sugar, 10c Yellow Sugar, 7c.

COFFEES--RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Bengal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 90c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c;

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickeled pork, 6c.

Fish--Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel, half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1l Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound, 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c. Oranges per dozen 35c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

WM. ELLERY
WALTHAM, MASS.

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,
SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS,
Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains, Ladies Gold Chains,
Castors Everything in the Jewelry line.
Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions
Violin Strings.
special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at
JOE. ABRICHT'S,
Second door north of Postoffice Auburn, Indinaa,

Excursion via the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to Chicago.

To the republican national convention to be held at the exposition building in Chicago, June 2, 1880.

Excursion tickets via the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, at low rates, will be sold from all stations. Tickets good going May 31 and June 1 and 2, good returning until June 6 inclusive. Excursionists via the Baltimore and Ohio road, will be landed at exposition building, and within five minutes walk of the principal hotels and business portion of the city of Chicago.

Three through trains daily from the Ohio river to Chicago, equipped with elegant day coaches and Pullman Palace Sleeping cars, without change. No other route can offer such inducements to excursionists to this convention, either in time, comfort or accommodations. The fast mail train runs through in daylight, leaving Bellaire at 5,05 m., and arriving at Chicago at 8 o'clock p. m., (15 hours). From Cambridge in 13 hours; Zanesville in 12 hours; Newark in 11 hours; Mt. Vernon in 10 hours; Mansfield in 9 hours; Auburn in 5 hours.

Returning from Chicago, a corresponding fast train leaves Chicago at 5:15 p. m., arriving at Auburn, 10:57 p. m., Mansfield, 3:10 a. m., Mt. Vernon, 4:15 a. m., Newark, 5 a. m., Zanesville, 5:54 a. m., Cambridge, 6:57 a. m., Bellaire, 8:40 a. m., hours in advance of all other lines. Excursionists would do well to note these facts.

Special cars will be furnished to parties of 30 or more, upon application to agents of the B. & O. R. R., or to W. E. Reppert and T. W. Lee, passenger agents, Columbus, Ohio.

C. K. LORD, General passenger agent.

But She Lost the Teeth.

Cases in which the ridiculous is broadly portrayed are of frequent occurrence in the annals of a 'squires' court, and one applicable to the rule was brought out in 'Squire Vincent's yesterday afternoon.

The one in question was a suit brought by a servant-girl against her mistress for wages.

The lady acknowledged that she owed the girl the sum at suit, but in defense she claimed that the latter had thrown away her teeth.

"Why, how did that happen?" asked the magistrate.

"The lady replied that she had left the "grinders" on the table, and that the girl in shaking the cloth had tumbled them down a rat-hole.

The matter was broken to her gently that the girl was not to blame, and that she ought to be more careful in future in leaving odds and ends around loose, especially false teeth; and then a decision was rendered for the plaintiff.

Every Man to His Trade.

A wealthy English parvenu, who began life with a lapstone on his knee, invited Kulak, the pianist to dinner, and immediately after the meal insisted on his playing for the company. Kulak complied, and invited the snob to a dinner at his residence on the following Sunday. After the meal Kulak astonished his guests by placing a pair of old shoes before his rich parvenu friend. "What are these for?" queried the latter. Kulak replied. "Last Sunday you did me the honor to invite me to dinner, and insisted upon my playing with music. I have returned the compliment, and require my shoes to be mended. Every man to his trade."

Administrators Sale.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE undersigned administrator of the estate of Rudolph Sechler, deceased, late of DeKalb county, Indiana, will offer for sale at public outcry, at the late residence of said decedent, in Concord township, of said county, on a large portion of the personal property of said estate, consisting of horses, cattle, hogs, farming implements, sheep, grain, hay and various other articles.

THE THIRD DAY OF JUNE, 1880,

TERMS:

Sums of three dollars and under, cash; over three dollars, a credit until June 3rd, 1881, the purchaser giving note with interest, waiving valuation laws, and with approved security Sale commences at 10 o'clock a. m.

May 11, 1880.
70 3w

S. S. SHUTT
Administrator.

Application for License.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN TO THE CITIZENS of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, that the undersigned will make application to the board of commissioners of said county at their next regular session, to be held at the court-house in said county, commencing on Monday the 7th day of June, 1880, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in less quantities than a quart at a time, with the privilege of having the same drunk on the premises where sold. The premises on which I desire to sell are located as follows: Commencing at the south-east corner of lot number twenty-seven (27), in the original plat of the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, running thence west twenty-three and one third (23⅓) feet thence north to Sixth street, thence east twenty-three and one-third (23⅓) feet, thence south along the east line of said lot number twenty-seven (27) to the place of beginning.

20 3w THOMAS SOMMERS.

Notice to Contractors

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THE board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will, at the time and places named below, let to the lowest and best responsible bidder, the construction of certain grading and filling on the following roads, and the digging of certain ditches, to-wit:

On road near A. Hartel's, in Jackson township, at 10 o'clock a. m. Tuesday, May 25, 1880; on road near Philip Grube's in Jackson township, at 3 o'clock p. m. on same day; on road near Wm. Fountain's, in Keyser township, at 10 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, May 26th; on road near —— Rogers', in Fairfield township, at 3 o'clock, p. m., on same day; on Anthony ditch, in Smithfield township, at 10 o'clock a. m., Thursday, May 27; at the county allotment, on the Thompson ditch, in Smithfield township, at 1 o'clock p. m. same day; on Tinteman road, Stafford township, at 10 o'clock a. m., Friday, May 28th; at Rhoub bridge, in Stafford township, at 1 o'clock p. m. same day.

Specifications of said work can be seen at the auditor's office and on the ground at the time of letting. Persons taking said work will be required to give a good and sufficient bond for the faithful performance of the same. The board reserves the right to reject any or all bids. By order of the board.

Attest: A. ROBBINS, Auditor.
May 16 1880.

RAILROADS.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 10, 1879.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Night ex.	No. 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 12	2 55	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 50	2 26	7 13	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 20 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 50	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 00	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 30 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 46	8 55
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 25 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 20	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 27	2 33
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 05
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 15	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 45	4 55	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 00	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 6	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15 pm	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS.
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

WABASH St. LOUIS AND PACIFIC RY.

The Great Through Car Route to

Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.		WEST.
Mail	12:34 p. m.	Mail	3:20 p. m.
Accom'n	12:57 a. m.	Accom'n	6:57 a. m.
Local F't	4:15 p. m.	Local F't	6:50 a. m.
M'l tr'n arrives at Butler	1:00 p. m.	M'l tr'n arr. at Logansport	6:45 p. m.

No Change of Cars From

TOLEDO OR FT WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison.

No Change of Cars From

St. Louis To Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the

Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific

Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

☞ Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West Southwest, North or Northw'st

Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager, H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent,
St. Louis, or
LOUIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn Ind.

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE

Time-Card takes effect April 11, 1880.
(CHICAGO TIME.)

GOING NORTH.

Leave Auburn:

4:10 A. M.—From Fort Wayne 2:35 a. m.; arrive at Waterloo 4:40; Pleasant Lake, 5:30; Angola, 6:20; Fremont, 6:45; Reading, 6:35; Bankers, 7:50; (connecting closely with D. H. & S. W. R.;) Jonesville, 8:13; Jackson, 9:20 a. m. there connecting for Ann Arbor 10:35, Detroit, 11:30 a. m.; Grand Rapids, 4:30 p. m

12:31 P. M.—From Fort Wayne 11:30 a. m., Academie, 11:46; Huntertown, 11:56; New Era, 12:10 p. m.; Auburn Junction, 12:28; arrive at Waterloo 12:42, connecting with L. S. & M. S. train east and west; Summit, 12:52; Pleasant Lake, 1:01; Angola, 1:11; Fremont, 1:30; Reading, 2:10; Bankers, 2:20, making close connection with D. H. & S. W. R. R.; Jonesville, 2:35, (making connection with L. S. & M. S. for points east: Hillsdale, 2:48; Adrian 4:05; Toledo, 5:25, p. m.), Jackson, 3 40 p. m., making close connection for Ann Arbor, Detroit, Lansing, Iona, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Battle Creek, etc.

5:50 P. M.—From Fort Wayne, 5:00 p. m; New Era, 5:40 arrive at Waterloo 6:11; Summit, 6:25; Pleasant Lake, 6:36; Angola, 7:05; Fremont, 7:35; Reading, 8:35; Jonesville, 9:20; Jackson, 11:05 p. m.; connecting closely for Chicago, Detroit and Grand Rapids.

GOING SOUTH.

Leave Auburn:

9:21 A. M.—From Jackson, 5:05 a. m; closely connecting from Chicago; Jonesville, 6:50; connecting from Chicago, etc.; Reading, 7:45; Montgomery, 7:58; Fremont, 8:17; Angola, 8:31; Pleasant Lake, 8:44; Summit, 8:55; Waterloo, 9:10; arrive at St. Johns, 9:36; New Era, 9:45; Huntertown, 9:55; Academie, 10:05; Ft. Wayne, 10:20 a. m. connecting closely with Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, etc.

3 17 P. M.—From Jackson 12:25 p. m.; (connecting from Detroit 9:35 a. m., Ann Arbor, Saginaw, Lansing, Grand Rapids, etc.;) Jonesville, 1:31, close connection from Toledo; Bankers, 1:36; Reading, 1:46; Montgomery, 1:58; Fremont, 2:15; Angola, 2:30; Pleasant Lake, 2:42; Summit, 2:58; Waterloo, 3:08; arrive at Auburn Junction, 3:20; St. Johns, 3:31; New Era, 3:36; Stoner's, 3:46; Huntertown, 3:51; Academie, 4:00 Fort Wayne, 4:15 p. m.; connecting for Indianapolis, Louisville, Lima, Cincinnati, etc.

11:30 P. M.—From Detroit, 4:05 p.m.; Grand Rapids 11:30 a. m.; Kalamazoo, 1 40 p.m.; Jackson, 6 45 p. m.; Jonesville, 8 05; Reading, 8 55; Fremont, 9 45; Angola, 10 10; Pleasant Lake, 10 35; Waterloo, 11 10; arrive at New Era 12 00 a. m.; Fort Wayne, 12 25 a. m., connecting with early trains west, south and east.

4 10 a. m. train run daily. All other trains daily except Sundays.

M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Supt.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Fr't. & Pass'r Agent.

Fort Wayne, Muncie and Cin.

—AND—

White Water Railroads.

Time Card in effect November 16, 1879.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1 Mail.	3 Express.
FORT WAYNE	10 40 am	5 40 pm
Bluffton	11 52 am	6 55 pm
Montpelier	12 31 pm	7 27 pm
Hartford	12 57 pm	8 04 pm
MUNCIE	1 40 pm	9 00 pm
Newcastle	2 30 pm
Cambridge City	3 14 pm
Connersville	3 45 pm
Cincinnati	6 55 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 25 pm	10 55 pm
Louisville
Terre Haute
St. Louis

STATIONS	GOING NORTH 2 Mail.	4 Express	6 Accom.
St. Louis
Terre Haute
Louisville
Indianapolis	11 50 am	4 40 pm	4 05 am
Cincinnati	8 40 am
Connersville	11 51 am
Cambridge City	12 26 pm
New Castle	1 10 pm
Muncie	2 20 pm	9 20 pm	6 44 am
Hartford	3 09 pm	10 08 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	3 34 pm	10 32 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	4 10 pm	11 00 pm	9 10 am
Fort Wayne	5 15 pm	12 15 am	11 00 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.

Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.

All trains daily except Sunday.

Trains run on Columbus time.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't. W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R

CHICAGO DIVISION.

IN EFFECT FROM JAN. 1, 1880.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.
Chicago	8 05am	9 40pm
Walkerton Junction	12 10pm	1 40am	10 42am
Milford Junction	1 20	2 15	2 20pm
Cromwell	1 48	2 45	3 20
Albion	2 08	3 08	4 25
Avilla	2 34	3 30	5 20
Garrett ar.	2 50	3 45	5 55
Garrett lv.	3 10	3 55	4 15
Auburn Junction	3 24	4 03	4 38
St. Joe	3 44	4 25	5 40
Hicksville	4 00	4 42	6 22
Defiance	4 45	5 27	8 50
Fostoria	6 40	7 26	2 30pm
Tiffin	7 09	7 54	3 37
CHICAGO JUNCTION	8 10	9 00	6 00

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.
CHICAGO JUNCTION	6 40pm	8 15am	4 20am
Tiffin	7 56	9 12	8 20
Fostoria	8 34	9 35	9 35
Defiance	10 52	11 50	4 45pm
Hicksville	11 16	12 14pm	6 15
St. Joe	11 33	12 30	6 50
Auburn Junction	11 54	12 50	7 35
Garrett ar.	12 15am	12 58	8 00
Garrett lv.	12 35	1 25	6 30am
Avilla	12 20	1 40	7 10
Albion	12 45	2 08	7 58
Cromwell	1 10	2 32	8 48
Milford Junction	1 33	3 00	9 50
Walkerton Junction	2 38	4 12	12 51pm
CHICAGO	6 50	7 05

C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent.

SAM'L POWELL, Act. Gen. Ticket & Pass. Agent, Chicago.

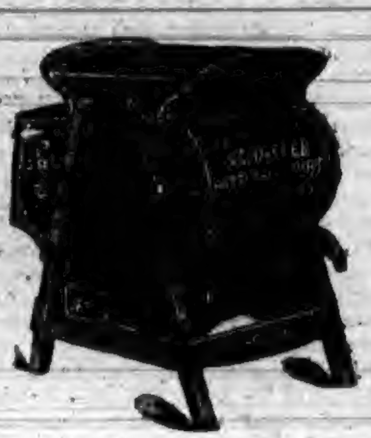
L. M. COLE, Gen. Ticket Agent, Baltimore, Md

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MCINTOSH,
Co. Sup't. of schools.

ROBERT OGDEN,
Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,
IRON AND LEAD PIPE,
BRASS GOODS
OF ALL KINDS.
125 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana



SPECIALNOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN;

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1, the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which aves much handling.

☞ For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

Agricultural Implements!

THE

Latest Improved Farm Machinery

OF ALL KINDS!

☞☞☞☞ The Three Rivers "Invincible" VIBRATOR.

☞☞☞☞ The Renowned Atlas Engine! For farm use.

THE PEERLESS Reaper and Mower!

Over 20 000 now in use.

DEERING'S WIRE AND TWINE BINDER,

The only successful TWINE Binder in this or any other market. Greatly improved for 188.

LEADER ONE-WHEEL HARVESTER,

Which created so much excitement among the farmers last year.

ELLWOOD CULTIVATORS,

Riding or Walking, with four, six or nine blades. They have more good points and are less complicated than any other cultivator made.

The Steel-beam Red-Jacket Plow

And many other kinds. Also dealers in the

Archer Self-Dumping Hay-Rake.
Adjustable Bar Spring Tooth Harrow.
And The Harris' Double Harpoon Horse Hay-Fork.

Examine our samples carefully, and get our prices before you contract. We guarantee you a bargain.

J. N. MYERS & CO.,
Odd Fellows' Building, AUBURN, IND.

NORMAN STALLION

JOCK, Jr

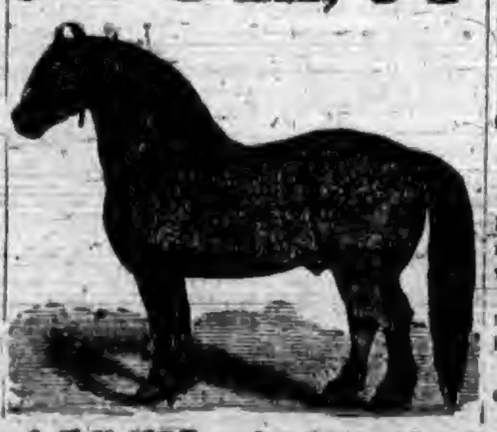
SIRED BY

Imported Jock!

Out of a thorough-bred

Norman Mare

Jock, Jr. will stand for mares during the season of 1880 commencing April 1st, at my barn in Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind.



This powerful horse is a bay-roan, 16 hands high, and weighs full

1,700 Pounds.

TERMS:

$10.00

Payable when the mare is known to be with foal.

Owners parting with mares are liable for insurance.

All accidents are at owners risk.

A. W. ALLEN. Auburn, Indiana.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, JUNE 8, 1880. Number 23.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

EDITORS,

THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY

BUSINESS CARDS.

*Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5,00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller,

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET, EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross, Prop'r Auburn, Ind,

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MONEY TO LOAN

By the Union Central Life Insurance company, from 1 to 5 years at 8 per cent secured by first lien on real estate worth at least double the amount of the loan (exclusive of improvements). We charge no commission, and your mortgage is held here within a few hours ride of your home. If you live, you are here to look after it yourself; if you die, you have made provisions to pay the debt just where you contracted it. For farther particulars, apply to Thos. H. Sprott, Auburn, Indiana.

ECKHART

Carriage Works

One-half mile east of Court House.
I have constantly on hand a large stock of the latest styles of

CARRIAGES, PHAETONS, & PLATFORM SPRING WAGONS.

Three years ago my business only required a shop 18x24, and I could do all the work myself excepting the smith work, but since then there has been such a demand for my work that I have

Greatly Increased

my facilities, and at present my shops, stock-rooms and ware-rooms occupy nearly

10,000 Square Feet,

and I employ eight hands, not including myself. Having had twenty-three years experience, and being a practical mechanic in painting, wood-work and trimming, I flatter myself that I can turn out as goodwork for the money as any one in the state. Please remember that my work is fully warranted, and no misrepresentation is used to sell work

We are now turning out a finished Buggy from the rough every four days. Be sure and call at ECKHART CARRIAGE WORKS when in need of a buggy.

C. ECKHART,
Auburn, Ind., 4-6m.

G. R. & I. R. R. Co.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS, GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., April 1, '80.

To the Stockholders of the Grand Rapids & Ind. R. R. Co.:

Take notice that there will be a meeting of the stockholders of said company, at the general office, in the city of Grand Rapids, state of Michigan, on

THE NINTH (9th) DAY OF JUNE, 1880,

at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of said company to the sum of five million dollars; and it is proposed at such meeting to increase said capital stock to that amount.

DIRECTORS:

W. O. Hughart, C. A. Zollinger,
W. R. Shelby, Thos. A. Scott
H. J. Hollister, Geo. B. Roberts,
S. S. Cobb, Wm. Thaw,
J. O. Welt, Thos. D. Messler,
Pliny Hoagland, J. N. McCullough,
Rob't. B. Potter.
15-tf. J. H. P. HUGHART, Secretary.

The Sergeant's Story.

TOLD IN THE GRAVEYARD OF A FRONTIER MILITARY POST.

"I tell you, pard, in this western wild
As a general thing the dirt's jist piled
In a rather promiscuous sort of way
On top of a soldier's mortal clay;
An' a person'd think by that marble shaft,
An' the flowers a wavin' above the 'graft,'
That a Major-General holds that tomb—
But the corpse down there wore a private's plume.

"I remember the day they swore Mead in;
He was pale-complected, an' rather thin;
He'd bin what they call a trampin' beat,
An' enlisted for want o' somethin' to eat!
It's always the case that a new recruit
Is the butt o' the tricks from the older fruit;
An' the way the boys tormented the cuss
Was real down wicked, an' scandalous!

"He took it all with a sickly smile,
An' said if they'd wait till afterwhile,
Till he got fed up in some sort o' trim,
It mightn't be healthy to fool with him!
An' I knowed by the look o' the feller's eye—
Fur all he was backward an' rather shy—
That behind his skeleton sort o' breast
A heart like a lion's found a nest!

"One night as the guard, at twelve o'clock,
Relieved the sentinel over the stock,
The Corp'ral seen a kind of a glare
From toward the officers' quarters, there.
The alarm was raised, an' the big gun fired,
An' the soldiers, not more'n half attired,
Come a rushin' out on the barrack ground
With a wild an' excited sort of a bound.

"The Colonel's headquarters was all afire,
An' the flames a-mountin' higher an' higher!
An' what with the yells o' men, an' shrieks
O' the officers' wives, with their whitish cheeks,
An' the roar o' the flames, an' devilish light,
Illuminatin' the pitch-dark night,
'Twas such a sight as I've often thought
You could see in hell, when it's b'ilin' hot.

"An' then, with a wild despairin' yell,
The Colonel shouted, 'My God! Where's Nell?'
His wife responded, 'She's in her bed!'
Then fell to the ground like a person dead!
Up through the roof the mad flames roared,
An' the blindin' smoke in a dense mass poured
Through every crevice an' crack, till the cloud
Hung above like a death-black shroud!

("It mightn't be out o' place to state—
As kinder accountin' for this Mead's fate—
That Nell war an angel, ten years old,
With a heart as pure as the virgin gold;
An' she had a kind of an angel trick
Of readin', an' sich like, to the sick;
An' many's the dainty her hands 'd bear
To Mead, one time, in the hospital there!)

"My God! It was 'nough to raise the hair
On the head of a marble stature! There
Stood a crowd of at least two hundred men,
None darin' to enter that fiery pen—
Men that war brave on an Injin trail,
Whose courage was never knowed to fail—
But to enter that buildin' was certain death!
So they stood there starin', an' held their breath.

"Then all to once, with an eager cry,
An' a bulldog look in his flashin' eye,
This Mead rushed up to the wailin' band,
An' a paper thrust in the Colonel's hand.
'My mother's address,' he said; an' then
He sort o' smiled on the crowd o' men,
An' jist like a flash o' lightnin' shot
Through the door right into the seethin' pot!

"With a yell of horror the crowd looked on,
Fur they felt with him it was 'good-by, John;'
But half a minute after the dash
An upstairs window burst with a crash!
An' there stood Mead, like a smilin' saint,
The gal in his arms in a death-like faint.
He yelled fur a rope, an' let her down
To terra firmy—which means the groun'.

"Then he tied the rope to the winder-sash
Fur to follow down—but there came a crash,
An' the blazin' roof, with a fearful din,
Throwed the boy to the ground as it tumbled in!
We carried him 'way from the fearful heat,
A hopin' the noble heart still beat;
But the old post surgeon shook his head,
And said, with a sigh, that Mead was dead!

* * * * * * *

"It wasn't long afore little Nell
Got over the shock, an' as soon as well,
She circulated among the men,
With a sheet o' paper, an' ink and pen
An' axed each one fur to give his mite,
In remembrance o' Mead's brave work that night!
An' as the result this monument stands,
Among flowers planted by Nellie's hands!

"An' every evenin' she walks up here,
The boys all say fur to drop a tear!
An' I've seen her, too, on her knees right there,
With her face turned upward as if in prayer!
You'll see that line above's to tell
As how the stone was 'Erected by Nell.'
And down at the bottom, there, you'll see
Some Bible quotin':
'HE DIED FOR ME.'"

Seeing His Descendants to the Fourth Generation.

In a suburban cemetery of Warsaw were interred, a few days ago, the remains of a venerable Sarmatian, whose claim to be the "oldest inhabitant" of that city had been undisputed for several years previous to his lamented demise. This patriarch had completed his 118th year when he was summoned to his fathers, and, as during his protracted existence he had suffered no family bereavements, except that which robbed him of his wife eighty-five years ago, his body was followed to the grave by such a procession of mourning decendants as has probably before attended the obsequies of a defunct christain. No fewer than 225 of his children and children's children streamed into the church-yard to bid a last adieu to their progenitor. The death of a person who had many grandchildren when the battle of Waterloo was fought, and whose early personal memories include such historical figures as Marie Theresa and Frederick the Great, is unquestionably a curious and noteworthy circumstance.

Skillful Bribery.

A subtle kind of electioneering stratagem was practiced successfully by Cochrane, the gallant Dundonald, when he first resolved on getting into parliament. He had come home from one of his cruises with a good deal of prize money. He stood for Honiton, and he announced that he would not bribe. It is almost needless to say that he was not elected. Cochrane stood again, and announced as before, that he would not give any bribes. This announcement did not deter even the most venal from rushing to the poll for Cochrane. Of course, when the election was over, and he was placed triumphantly at the head of the poll, those who had come over to his side expected their due reward of double pay. Some of them hinted as much. The hero coldly explained that he had rewarded the faithful few who had stood by him while he was unpopular, but that the chosen favorite of a constituency had only to congratulate them all on their common sense.

RE-UNITED.

Through the Dark Shadow—A Romance in High Life.

[Vallejo (Cal) News, April 20.]

On Tuesday there came up from San Francisco and passed through to Napa a respectable-looking man, who seemed cast down to the lowest depths of despair. Crossing the ferry, a gentleman on board, attracted by his fellow-passenger's woe-begone look and tear-dimmed eyes, entered into conversation with him, and elicited the following facts: Several months ago he had received an advantageous offer from some mining companies in Arizona to go down and put up some machinery. He had accepted the offer and went down to the mines, leaving his wife and family in San Francisco. Every month he had sent liberal remittances to them, but his wife felt lonesome without him, and was continually begging him to return home. As he was receiving a large salary, he disliked to relinquish the situation; but, at length his wife's appeals for his return became so strong that he threw up the job and started for home.

Arriving in San Francisco Monday night, he hurried home with a light heart, thinking only of the joys his return would bring to the hearts of his wife and little ones. Stopping on his way up Market street only long enough to purchase some delicacies for the dear ones, he soon arrived at his residence, when what was his surprise to find the house closed and darkened, and not the slightest sign of life around. Inquiry among the neighbors being made, he learned the dread news that through continual worrying at her loved husband's non-return his wife had become insane just five days before, and been sent to the Napa asylum, while his children had been taken charge of by some friends in another portion of the city. This was a terrible blow, which well-nigh prostrated him, and he waited impatiently for the coming of day, when he could hunt up his now doubly-bereaved children and then fly to the wife who had become a wreck through excessive love for him. This was Tuesday, when our friend met him, and he was then on his way to the asylum, with misery and unutterable woe depicted in every feature.

Yesterday morning there came down from Napa and crossed over on the Vallejo ferry a happy, loving and reunited couple. The husband, his face wreathed in smiles, was scarce recognizable as the forlorn, broken-hearted man of the night before. The woman leaning so lovingly on his arm and looking up to him so trustfully was his wife, now perfectly sane. Grief at his absence darkened her mind. Recognition and joy at his return brushed away the clouds from her brain, and restored her to reason. Arizona and the asylum had yielded up their treasures; the grave could do no more. Another interview with the husband by the News' informant elicited the statement that Arizona had lost all charms for him, and that when next he traveled his wife and children would travel with him.

The sequel to this affair is a happy one. Would that all clouds had such a silvery lining!

Salt From the Sea.

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

Among the prominent local industries in Alameda county is that of salt manufacture. For a long time the consumption of salt by the packers and butchers of San Francisco was entirely supplied by the Liverpool and other foreign manufacturers, and it is not until very recently that local enterprise has interposed in favor of home production. The works are located on the bay shore, near Newark, and the salt is made by solar evaporation. The salt ponds are eighty acres in extent, which are divided into water-tight compartments, each compartment being provided with a gate for the purpose of admitting the water supply. The process of salt-making is comparatively simple. The pond is connected with the waters of the bay by a ditch. This water is then passed from the pond into the upper end of the vats by wind-mill pumps, and from this point the water is gradually distributed into the various receptacles, or lower vats, as evaporation goes on, the water becoming more impregnated with salt as it passes toward the lower rows. From these vats it is again pumped into others, where it remains until crystallized, and layers of salt half an inch are formed. The residue of the water is then let off, and the salt taken up and put into small cars, which run on a wooden tramway, and carried to the receiving house, and there manufactured into the various kinds in use, which is done by thoroughly drying it in heated pans and crushing the salt in mills. Several thousand tons are made in this locality annually, which is carried on schooners direct to San Francisco and sold to the jobbers. The works give employment to a large number of persons.

White-Washed Babies.

A missionary stationed at one of the South Sea Islands determined to give his residence a coat of whitewash. To obtain this in the absence of lime, coral was reduced to powder by burning. The natives watched the process of burning with interest, believing that the coral was being cooked for them to eat. Next morning they beheld the missionary's cottage glittering in the morning sun white as snow. They danced, they sang, they screamed with joy. The whole island was in commotion. Whitewash became the range. Happy was the coquette who could enhance her charms by a daub of the white brush. Contentions arose. One party urged their superior rank; another obtained possession of the brush, and valiantly held it against all comers; a third tried to upset the tub to obtain some of the precious cosmetic. To quiet the hubbub more whitewash was made, and in a week not a hut, a domestic utensil, a war-club or a garment but was as white as snow; not an inhabitant but had a skin painted with grotesque figures; not a pig that was not whitened, and even mothers might be seen in every direction capering joyously, and yelling with delight at the superior beauty of their whitewashed babies.

The Effects of Opium.

Opium, in those who are capable of stimulation by it, gives rise to a pleasurable state of feeling sometimes like that which is produced by wine in not excessive doses; but the excitement derived from it, instead of tending to some highest point, remains stationary for hours, and in place of the slight incoherence of thought always present in those who are exhilarated with wine, the most perfect harmony is established among all the conceptions. There is an extraordinary stimulation of the pure intellect, and not merely of the powers of expression. The opium-eater seems to have had the eyes of his spirit opened, to have acquired a gift of insight into things that to mere mortals are inexplicable. The most remote parts of consciousness come into clear light; the finer shades of personality, those that had been unknown even to the opium-eater himself, are brought into view and become distinct; the smallest details of the things around take new significance, and are seen to be profoundly important; analogies with all other phenomena of nature are revealed. It is the same with the moral as with the intellectual being; that also becomes indefinitely exalted. An absolute balance of the faculties seems to have been attained. The whole man is what in his ordinary state he only tends to be; he has realized the highest perfection of what he is capable; only his "better half" now remains; his lower self has been left behind without need of the purgatorial fire of contention with the environment to destroy it.

A Pitiful Story.

Hungarian papers report a peculiarly painful case of double suicide committed by two shepherd boys, respectively aged ten and twelve, near Karlsburg. These lads were in charge of a flock of sheep turned out to graze on some land abutting upon the Karlsburgh Arad railroad, and had been several times reproved by the watchman stationed near their pasturage ground for allowing the sheep to stray on the line. On the 9th inst., just as the Arad express came in sight, several sheep had wandered down the embankment, and were in imminent danger of being crushed by the train, from which, however, they were rescued by the timely intervention of the watchman in question, who, as soon as the train had passed, called up the boys and told them he would have them severely punished for neglecting their duty and his repeated warnings. The terrified lads held a consultation as to how they might escape the threatened penalty, and speedily came to the conclusion that the best way of getting out of their scrape would be to drown themselves. One of them had just had a new hat, adorned with a gay peacock's feather, given to him, which he sold for thirteen kreutzers to a little peasant girl, who had been at play with the boys when the dreadful menace of punishment was imparted to them, with the price of this hat he purchased some small loaves, and the three children sat down by the Maros to hold their "Pamona," or death-feast, and this being terminated, the boys climed the parapet of the Maros bridge, their tiny playmate counted aloud "one, two, three," and at the word "three" they sprang, hand-in-hand, into the river, sinking immediately under the broken ice with which the surface of the rapid stream was partially covered.

A Genuine Western Breeze.

(Virginia City (Nev.) Enterprise.)

Yesterday, during the gale, while bowlders as big as pumpkins were flying through the air and water pipes were being ripped out of the ground, an old Chinaman, with spectacles on his nose, was observed in the eastern part of town, seated on a knoll, calmly flying his kite—an iron shutter, with a log chain for a tail.

Miss Alcott as An Actress.

Miss Louisa Alcott is said to be a capital natural actress. The Herald of Boston says that she once came very near going on the stage, having secretly made arrangements for doing so, and intending to surprise her friends. Through a delay in her expected debut her family found out her project, and it was nipped in the bud. A good while ago she wrote a farce for Mr. William Warren, but as the other characters had greater opportunities for amusing "business" than his, he did not play it, though it was performed several times. She afterward wrote a romantic drama, which was so quarreled over by the two leading ladies of the Boston theater, that Miss Alcott took it back for revision, and finally threw it impetuously into the fire, having no manuscript ready for Mr. Barry when he sent for it to put it in rehearsal.

Cedar Creek Items.

—The singing class under the instruction of John L. Houser is prospering finely.

—We are informed that the Rev. B. Ober will preach at the church next Saturday evening, Sabbath morning and Sabbath evening.

—There would be a good opening at this place at the present for some live man with a wheel of fortune.

—J. W. Ammon is carrying on an extensive business as head-sawyer, lumberman, postmaster, mail-carrier, freight-agent horse-tamer and general news-carrier.

—Quite a controversy in Sabbath-school last Sabbath, owing to a disposition on the part of several who claim to hold to the Universalist faith to create an argument. Our motto is, "Let that punishment be where it is, or what it is, learn how to live at the present and all will be well in the future."

—Some of the so-called sanctified who were asked to take a boat-ride last Sabbath, were "not around boating today;" yet they found considerable pleasure in standing on the bank and trying to persuade the oarsman that there was no danger in rowing into the main channel. We presume, however, there wasno harm meant, as they were probably just passing away the time until prayer-meeting. OBSERVER.

Southern mockingbirds well deserve the name. They imitate not only the songs of other birds, but human whistlers as well. A lady of Macon, Ga., relates that her pet mockingbird of ten deceives all the inmates of her house by its clever imitation of the postman's whistle. They go out to get the letters, and find Jack on a spray, near the fence, blowing his whistle, and looking entirely innocent of any intention to hoax the family.

A thirty-hours' swim was undertaken by a young lady in England a fortnight ago. Before entering the water, Miss Beckwith invited several ladies into her dressing-room to see that she had no assistance in the way of concealed floating supports. She swam in the whale tank, which was surrounded by spectators, who frequently applauded occasional displays of oriental swimming. She continued gliding easily along the forty feet of water in the tank, varying the breast swimming by occasional changes to the side and back and by easy floating. She took coffee and beef tea from a floating table. During the night she amused herself by singing and reading, the latter process being accomplished by floating on her back and holding the book in both hands.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
-tf Auburn, Ind.

Read This.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, agent for the GENUINE SINGER, at Spencerville, Ind. Horses and cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office at Cahill's tin-shop. 14-tf

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, JUNE 3, 1880.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

A DECIDED sensation has been caused in speculative circles at the East by the announcement of the failure of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company and the railroad company of the same name. The concerns were known to be heavily in debt, but their collapse was not looked for at this time.

THE Philadelphia stock market has been in a state of wild agitation over the suspension of the Reading Railroad Company and the Philadelphia and Reading Iron and Coal Company, and several banking houses have suspended....Maj. Harrold was injured in a collision on the New York Elevated railroad. He brought suit against the company, claiming $50,000 damages. The jury in the case awarded him $30,000....Seventy buildings, comprising the greater portion of the little town of Edenburg, Clarion county, Pa., have been burned. The fire originated in a vacant hotel building, and is thought to have been the work of an incendiary. The loss is about $150,000, with little or no insurance.

A YOUNG man, recently released from State prison, shot and killed a Supervisor at Troy, N. Y. The ex-convict was pursuing an enemy, and the officer had ordered him to desist. After shooting a policeman the murderer was arrested. While on the road to the station-house a desperate attempt was made to lynch the prisoner, and in the melee several persons received bullet-wounds. The desperado was finally lodged in jail.... John O'Rourke, of the Boston Base Ball Club, while attempting to make a difficult play in a game at Troy, N. Y., ran against a fence and had a gash five inches long cut in his throat. He was also internally injured.

THE oil-works of Bush & Denslow, in Brooklyn, N. Y., have been destroyed by fire. The flames spread to shipping and to a lumber-yard, causing heavy loss. It is reported that several men were killed by the explosion of an oil-tank.

EXTENSIVE oil-works at South Brooklyn took fire from an explosion of gas. The flames soon communicated with some large oil-tanks, and laid hold of a steamboat lying close by. A lumber-yard in the vicinity also took fire and a large portion thereof was destroyed. The entire damage is estimated at $75,000.

THE WEST.

THERE is a prospect that all the Navajo Indians in New Mexico will begin hostilities.... The seventeen-year locusts have made their appearance in the vicinity of Wooster, Ohio....A telegram has been received at the War Department in Washington from Gen. Pope stating that he succeeded in arresting Capt. Payne and his followers for violating the President's proclamation against invasion of Indian Territory for mining purposes, etc. The prisoners will be held until instructions are forwarded from Washington.

A SHOCKING railway accident is reported from California. An excursion train on the narrow-gauge railway running from San Francisco to Santa Cruz broke through the trestle-work at the latter place and thirteen persons were killed and a large number wounded, some of them fatally....Three blind girls, eluding the vigilance of the authorities at the Blind Asylum, St. Louis, walked through the streets of that city, and, coming to an excavation, which was being made to prepare for the erection of a new building, fell a distance of twenty feet, and were badly but not fatally injured....The steamer Maine, owned by the Northern Transit Company of Detroit, was burned at Port Huron, Mich. The crew and passengers were all rescued. The loss is estimated at $30,000....Matt Fee has been convicted in the Criminal Court of Chicago of attempting to convict an innocent man of larceny, and the jury fixed his punishment at nine years in the penitentiary.

THE last opportunity to see the famous Haverly's Mastodon Minstrels previous to their departure for Europe is offered the present week at Chicago. Their enterprising manager has gathered in no end of shekels the past season with this aggregation, and now seeks fresh fields to conquer on the other side of the water. The United States is decidedly too small a country for the complete exercise of Haverly's business enterprise.

AT a public meeting of leading citizens of Topeka, Kan., called for the purpose of taking steps to relieve the inhabitants of Western Kansas who are suffering on account of the continued drought, it was resolved that no appeal be made outside the State, as it was believed that the people of the more-favored districts of Kansas would contribute sufficient to aid their suffering fellow-citizens.... A local freight agent, a freight accountant and a cashier of the Fort Wayne and Jackson railroad, stationed at Jackson, Mich., have absconded, owing the company a large sum of money, most of which has been expended by the trio in riotous living....Two boys were cremated at Piqua, Ohio, by the burning of a house.

T. C. THURSTON, who some time ago killed his business partner at Leavenworth, Kan., met Col. Anthony on the street, in that city, the other day, and fired two shots at him. Both bullets missed Anthony, but one hit and fatally wounded an attorney, and the other lodged in an advertising solicitor's head. Thurston gave himself up at once, and was removed to Fort Leavenworth for safe-keeping. ...A recent telegram from Las Pinos, New Mexico, says: "The latest Indian news is that six herders were killed on the ranch of Patricino Lunas, eight miles from Tularosa. In Socorro county and in the Magalians about fifty men were killed, two women and three Americans, names unknown. In the vicinity of Tularosa, Socorro county, every ranch has been cleaned out by Apaches, and the number of those murdered since May 1 is seventy-eight. Gen. Hatch's command has marched more than 1,000 miles in pursuit of the Indians."

A FIERCE tornado swept over portions of Carroll, Ida, Sac, Calhoun, and Hamilton counties, Iowa, doing great damage to farm property, demolishing many houses, and severely injuring several persons—two fatally.

THE SOUTH.

PRESIDENT HAYES and Secretary Schurz made addresses at the graduating exercises of Hampton Normal School, Va., last week.

BILL and Bud Bussley, brothers, fought a duel near Denison, Texas. The former was killed....Columbus, Ga., and the surrounding country has been visited by a flood, nearly ten inches of rain falling in twenty hours. Bridges were carried away and the crops damaged. Much cotton will have to be replanted. The rivers rose fifteen feet in two hours.

A FATAL duel was recently fought at Abington, Va., between two well-known citizens, William Rife and S. A. Jackson. The parties had indulged in a fist fight a few days before, Jackson coming out the victor. They parted with the understanding that the next time they met each should have a revolver. They came together at the depot, and Rife told Jackson he intended to whip him now and was ready for him, at the same time putting his hand in his pocket as if to draw a weapon. Jackson then drew his pistol and shot Rife four times, each ball striking in the body. Rife died soon after. The slayer has been arrested.

GENERAL.

THE General Assembly of the Northern Presbyterian Church was opened in Madison, Ind., on May 20, with a sermon by Dr. Eels of Cincinnati, and Dr. Paxton, of New York, was elected Moderator. The General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church met at the same time in Charleston, S. C., listened to a sermon by Dr. D. P. Wills, and elected Dr. T. A. Hoyt, of Nashville, Moderator....By a vote of 229 to 139 the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in session at Cincinnati, decided not to elect a Bishop of African descent.

THE contest at Creedmoor for the honor of representing the United States in the coming international rifle match in Ireland resulted in the selection of Messrs. W. H. Jackson, W. F. Farrow, S. I. Scott, H. F. Clark, J. S. Brown, H. Fisher, and B. Rathbone....Several vessels are said to have been sunk in attempting to force their way through the icebergs and field ice on the New Foundland coast.

A CONTRACT is said to have been made between an American company and the Government of Nicaragua for the construction of a canal across the territory of that republic.... Mr. Hillhouse, Assistant Treasurer at New York, writes to Secretary Sherman that, unless the coinage of silver is stopped, the question of storing the silver that can't be got into circulation will speedily become a very pressing one. ...Samuel Pye, living at Brooklyn, Newfoundland, was pulling his three children, two boys and a girl, on a sled across the Arm, to school, when the sled broke through the ice and all the children were drowned.

NEARLY every State in the Union was represented at the annual session of the National Woman Suffrage Association, held at Indianapolis last week. Susan B. Anthony presided, and many of the noted women's-rights advocates were in attendance.

ICEBERGS in the Atlantic off the coast of Newfoundland continue to strike terror to the hearts of the Transatlantic mariners. The steamer Marengo reports sighting several on the 19th of May.

POLITICAL.

THE Minnesota Democrats held their State Convention at St. Paul May 20. The delegates to the National Convention received no instructions. The resolutions declare that the State delegation should act as a unit; that the Democrats of Minnesota would "never again submit to a reversal of the popular will by fraud or violence," and that no President should have a third term.... The California Greenbackers have elected four delegates-at-large, headed by Denis Kearney, to the National Convention to be held at Chicago. ....The Mississippi Greenback Convention was held at Jackson on the 20th of May. Delegates to the Chicago Convention were appointed without instructions.... The Democratic State Convention of New Jersey, in session at Trenton, May 20, adopted resolutions denouncing centralization and the presence of troops at polls, favoring hard money and opposing monopolies of all kinds, favoring the two-thirds rule in convention and declaring that Mr. Hayes occupies the Presidency by fraud.... The Pennsylvania Prohibitionists, at their State Convention, held at Altoona, nominated a State ticket, elected delegates to the National Temperance Convention, and nominated Presidential Electors. A resolution was adopted condemning the pardon of the Legislative bribers.... The California Democrats elected an unpledged delegation to Cincinnati, and adopted resolutions declaring that Mr. Hayes was seated by fraud, and that the issues of the present campaign are the right of self-government, maintenance of the reserved rights of States, and resistance to imperialism and Chinese immigration. Thurman was the favorite Presidential candidate by a large majority....

THERE is a good deal of dissatisfaction among Georgia Democrats at the appointment of ex-Gov. Joseph E. Brown to succeed Gen. Gordon in the Senate. At a large Democratic meeting in Columbus, Gov. Colquitt was denounced for appointing Brown, and declaring that he (Brown) is not a representative of Georgia, nor of the Democratic party, but a man who betrayed the State in her hours of trial. Brown is almost a Republican, and was one for several years after the war. He was delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1868, and voted for Gen. Grant's nomination, sustaining him in the convention, and acting with the Republicans for several years. He is one of the wealthiest men in Georgia.... The Nebraska Republican State Convention met at Lincoln, May 20, and, after an all-day and night session, elected six Blaine delegates to the Chicago Convention....The Greenback Convention of Iowa was held at Des Moines May 20. G. W. Walker, of Polk, was nominated for Secretary of State; Matthew Farrington, of Bremer, for Treasurer; G. W. Swearingen, of Fremont, for Auditor; W. A. Spurrier, of Adams, for Attorney General, and Thomas Hooker, of Dallas, for Register of the Land Office. The delegates to the National Greenback Convention at Chicago were instructed to vote for Gen. J. B. Weaver for President.

IT is believed that the Spofford-Kellogg resolutions in the Senate have been laid away with the Fitz-John Porter bill, and that they will not be again considered at this session.

THE Illinois Republican State Convention, after a stormy three-days' session at Springfield, selected forty-two uncompromising Grant men as delegates to the National Convention at Chicago, and adopted the following resolution, offered by Senator Logan, who led the Grant cohorts in the convention: "Resolved, That Gen. U. S. Grant is the choice of the Republican party of Illinois for the Presidency, and the delegates from this State are instructed to use all honorable means to secure his nomination by the Chicago Convention, and to vote as a unit for him, and the said delegates shall have power to fill all vacancies." The following resolution was also adopted: "Resolved, The Republicans of Illinois, in convention assembled, declare that they will support the nominees of this convention for State offices, and the nominees of the Chicago Convention for President and Vice President." Senator Logan heads the delegation at large to the Chicago Convention. The delegations from the nine Congressional districts that were favorable to Washburne and Blaine protested against the action of the convention in choosing the district delegates, but as the Grant men were in the majority they were overruled. The following State ticket was placed in nomination: Governor, Shelby M. Cullom; Lieutenant Governor, John M. Hamilton; Secretary of State, H. D. Dement; Auditor, C. P. Swigart; Treasurer, Edward Rutz; Attorney General, James McCartney....Alabama Republicans have instructed their twenty delegates to the Chicago Convention to support Grant.

THE Louisiana Republican Convention split in two in less than an hour after coming together, and two sets of delegates were sent to Chicago. One of the conventions, presided over by ex-Gov. Warmoth, chose seven Grant, seven Sherman and one Blaine delegate. The other faction was presided over by Taylor Beattie, and selected all Grant delegates.

THE Delaware Democrats, in convention at Dover, appointed delegates to Cincinnati, instructed them to vote for Senator Bayard for President, and adopted a resolution in favor of adhering to the two-thirds rule....The Rhode Island Legislature has elected A. H. Littlefield Governor, and H. H. Fay Lieutenant Governor, there having been no choice at the polls.... The Colorado Republican Convention, held at Denver, May 25, sent a solid and instructed Grant delegation to Chicago....An Associated Press telegram from Washington says: "The Democratic politicians continue to talk about Senator David Davis' letter, and the opinion is almost universal that it is a direct bid for the Democratic nomination. The friends of Davis say the leading Nationals have asked him whether he will take their nomination, but he declined to commit himself, saying he would wait and see what the two regular conventions do. It is believed here among his friends that Davis will run as an independent candidate if there is a possibility that he can carry two or three States, and throw the election in the House, and thus defeat the Republican nominee."

THE Kansas and Missouri Democrats held their State Conventions May 26. In Missouri, of the delegates elected to the Missouri Convention, eighteen are reported as being anti-Tilden, nine for Tilden, and three doubtful. The sentiment of the Kansas Convention was in favor of Seymour and Hendricks, but no instructions were given.... The State Convention of the Greenback-Labor party of West Virginia was held at Charleston May 27, all the counties in the State but eight being represented. The following State ticket was nominated: Governor, Col. N. B. French; Auditor, G. W. Hayes; Treasurer, S. W. Sturm; Superintendent of Free Schools, W. J. Kenny; Attorney General, Cyrus Hall; Judge of the Supreme Court, J. A. Thompson. Delegates to the National Greenback Convention and State electors were appointed. The Congressional district delegates nominated candidates for Congress as follows: First district, James Bassett; Second, D. D. T. Farnsworth; Third, Henry S. Walker.

FOLLOWING is the text of the Supervisors' Tenure bill, as it passed the United States Senate: Be it enacted, etc., That the term of office of the Chief Supervisors of Election provided for in Sec. 2,025 of the Revised Statutes shall be two years. Such term shall begin on the 1st day of May in each even-numbered year. The terms of those now in office shall expire on the 1st day of May, 1880, and their successors shall be appointed from among the qualified electors of the proper judicial district by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The President may appoint such officers during the recess of the Senate, who may hold and exercise their office until the next session of the Senate; and it shall be the duty of the President to send in such nominations within thirty days after the next ensuing session of the Senate; provided that no person now holding, or who has held, the office of Chief Supervisor of Elections shall be reappointed.

WASHINGTON.

WM. MACLENNAN, an expert, chief of the warrant division of the treasury, testified before the Carlisle investigating committee that in his opinion Finley wrote that anonymous letter to Springer.

THE Secretary of the Treasury has authorized local Inspectors of steam vessels to examine with colored signal lights all pilots applying for renewal of license, reported by examining surgeon as only incompletely color-blind, and, if the Inspectors are satisfied the pilots can sufficiently distinguish the colored lights used on steam vessels, it will be within their discretion to renew their license.

FOREIGN.

THE British Parliament met on the 20th of May. The Queen's speech promises early steps to compel Turkey to fulfill the Berlin treaty, and assiduous efforts to establish an independent government in Afghanistan; invites especial attention to the Indian finances, and announces that the South African colonies have been advised to form a confederation. In regard to legislation, the speech states that Parliament will not be asked to renew the Peace Preservation act for Ireland; it will be invited to pass an act for the settlement of the burial question, to renew the Secret Voting act, and to enact laws giving more effectual protection to occupiers against injury from ground-game, for the determination of the liability of employers for accidents sustained by their workmen, and for the extension of the borough franchise in Ireland.

WHEN Mr. Bradlaugh presented himself at the bar of the British House of Commons, May 21, to take the prescribed oath, a Conservative member objected on the ground that Bradlaugh was an atheist and a revolutionist. The question was then discussed, on motion of Gladstone to refer the case to a select committee, but no action was taken.

A MOB of cotton-spinners wrecked and set fire to a cotton-mill in Barcelona, Spain. An order was in consequence issued dissolving all the trades unions in Catalonia....The European powers have issued a joint note calling on the Porte to settle the Montenegrin, Greek and Armenian difficulties immediately. In case the request is not obeyed, another conference will be held at Berlin in July, at which measures will be taken without consulting Turkey to insure the settlement of the question....The news of the Philadelphia and Reading failure created a panic in American railroad stocks in London.

MR. HEAP, Charge d'Affaires at Constantinople, in a dispatch to the State Department at Washington, reports that the following letter has been received by telegraph at the Legation of the United States. It is dated at Mosoul, in Armenia, and signed by the Archbishop of the Syrians: "The terrible famine in which we exist kills all inhabitants of town and those of neighboring villages, who are assembling here en masse. Their sufferings are indescribable. Finding no cereals at all, some are eating corpses, and become ill in consequence. Their lamentations are heartrending. Most of them are dying, as they have nothing to eat. Those of the inhabitants who have lived until now between life and death pray you to give them such assistance as will enable them to live. They take the liberty to present their prayer with the tears of expectation which are flowing from their eyes covered with blood."

LEON SAY, now French Minister to England, has been elected President of the French Senate, vice Martel, resigned....It is said that Gen. Todleben will be appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Russian army in case of a war between Russia and China.

A REBELLION has broken out in British Burmah which threatens to be formidable. One town has been destroyed and an English Governor killed....A requisition, numerously signed by the Radical and Liberal members of the British Parliament has been presented to Mr. Gladstone, requesting him to recall Sir Bartle Frere from the Governorship of South Africa....The trial of Nihilists at St. Petersburg resulted in the conviction of eleven. Two were sentenced to death, and the others to various terms of imprisonment or exile. There were five women among the number....A party of 2,000 Bulgarians recently destroyed twelve Turkish villages in the Balkan range.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

In the Senate, on the 20th inst., after reports from the majority and minority of the select committee on counting the electoral votes, the bill to establish a retired list for non-commissioned army officers was taken up, and amended so that when an enlisted man has served as such fifteen consecutive years in the army honorably and faithfully, and the last five years thereof as a non-commissioned officer, he shall be eligible for appointment as Second Lieutenant in the army corps of the line in which he has served, and passed. Mr. Cockrell introduced a bill donating twelve condemned cannon to aid in the erection of a monument to Gen. James Shields. Mr. Garland spoke in favor of unseating Mr. Kellogg....In the House, the bill regulating the Municipal Code of the District was passed, as was the bill to carry into effect the second and sixteenth articles of the treaty between the United States and the Great and Little Osage Indians. The House went into committee of the whole and considered several reports from the Committee on Public Lands, and continued the same order of business at the evening session.

The Marshals bill was taken up in the Senate on the 21st inst., at the request of Mr. Bayard, and, after amendments, was passed. The Committee on Commerce was given leave to sit during the session of the Senate. The bill loaning tents, etc., to soldiers' reunion at Muscatine, Iowa, was passed. The Legislative Appropriation bill was passed, after a short discussion.... In the House, a bill making appropriations for the payment of certain claims reported allowed by the accounting officers of the treasury was taken up and passed; also, a bill for the relief of John D. Defrees, Public Printer. Mr. Cox, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported back a resolution calling on the President for information in regard to the expulsion of Israelite citizens of the United States from St. Petersburg by the Russian Government. Adopted. The House then considered bills reported yesterday from the committee on the whole relation to public lands, and the various bills agreed to in committee of the whole were passed. Colorado [illegible] the Committee on Elections reported a resolution relative to the contested-election case of Duffy vs. Mason, Twenty-ninth district of New York, declaring Mason, the sitting member, entitled to the seat. The resolution, which was the unanimous report of the committee, was adopted. The Pension bill was passed. The Sundry Civil Appropriation bill was reported to the House, appropriating $20,729,987. The aggregate submitted to the committee aggregated [illegible]. The present bill exceeds the amount appropriated for 1880 by $1,[illegible].

Senator Morgan's resolution determining the method of counting the electoral vote was discussed at some length in the Senate, Saturday, May [illegible] [illegible] the northern boundary of Nebraska so as to include the present Territory of Dakota south of the forty-third parallel, east of Keyapaha river and west of the main channel of the Missouri River, when the Indian titles shall have been extinguished. On motion of Mr. Hampton, the bill was taken up and passed to complete the survey of Gettysburg battlefield, and provide for the compilation and preservation of data showing the various positions and movements of troops in that battle, illustrated by diagrams. It appropriates $50,000....The House discussed the bills reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. None were passed. The bill passed to provide that dealers in leaf tobacco who do not sell or consign for sale leaf tobacco to an amount exceeding 25,000 pounds in any one special-tax year shall pay license of but $5.

The Senate worked for ten hours on Monday, May 24, and in the forty-five minutes of the morning passed pension bills at the rate of one every two minutes. There then followed a long, dreary debate on the Morgan resolution relative to the electoral count, which was participated in by Messrs. Teller, Morgan, Edmunds, Thurman, and Ingalls. The heat in the Chamber was very oppressive, and the galleries were emptied long before the debate closed. At 8 o'clock the joint resolution was passed by 27 yeas to 12 nays. A communication from the President of the Smithsonian Institution was received, recommending the appropriation of $40,000 for completing the preparation of the scientific results of Hall's Arctic expedition. A resolution providing for a special committee to examine into the management of the Soldiers' Home in the District was passed, as was a bill appropriating $15,000 for a statue of Joseph Henry, late Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution. The Carlisle Revenue bill was amended and passed. The President nominated James O. Putnam, of New York, Minister to Belgium, vice William Cassius Goodloe, resigned....Mr. Blackburn presided in the House in the absence of Speaker Randall. Bills were introduced: By Mr. Sherwin, fixing the duty of 40 per cent. ad valorem on the importation of condensed milk; by Mr. Ellis, calling for information as to what steps have been taken for the acquisition of naval and coaling stations in Central America; by Mr. Cox, appropriating $14,000 for printing and distributing more frequently Consular and other commercial reports; by Mr. Finley, for the appointment of a special joint committee of three Senators and four Representatives to investigate the condition and status of public property in the Hot Springs Reservation; by Mr. Whittaker, to reduce the price of lands to actual settlers within the railroad limits to $1.25 per acre; by Mr. Hunton, repealing section 3,480 of the Revised Statutes so far as bounty lands are concerned; by Mr. Buckner, relative to the use of distinctive paper for printing United States bonds and notes; by Mr. Prescott, to pay to soldiers and sailors of the late war who are totally disabled all the moneys expended by them for medical and surgical treatment. Nearly the whole day was passed in committee of the whole on the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, small progress being made.

The President pro tem. laid before the Senate on the morning of Tuesday, May 25, a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury stating that the amount due Kansas as 5 per cent. of the sales of public lands in that State is $190,268. Also, a communication from the Secretary of the Interior transmitting information concerning the entry of town sites in mineral lands, and inclosing a report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office on the subject, in which the Secretary concurs. A concurrent resolution that the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to seek co-operation between the General Government and the several State Governments in the establishment of a uniform and efficient system for the registration of deaths, births and marriages, and appropriating a sum therefor, was referred. The Senate passed some thirty pension bills as fast as they could be got ready, and, after the morning hour, took up the bill regulating the appointment of Supervisors, on which a protracted and at times acrimonious debate arose. A bill passed providing that Sec. 3 of the act increasing the pensions of widows and orphans, approved July 25, 1866, and Sec. 13 of the Pension act of July 27, 1868, and Sec. 4,712, Revised Statutes, shall not operate to reduce the rate of pensions which had been allowed to naval officers and their widows, etc., prior to July 20, 1866, and that such pensions shall be restored to the rate from which they were reduced, to date from the original date of such pensions. A pension bill in favor of Commodore William B. Whiting, now on the retired list, disabled, was taken up, and passed....In the House, the whole day was consumed in committee of the whole on the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill.

Ex-Gov. Brown took the modified oath, and then took his seat as Senator from Georgia on the morning of May 26, in place of Gordon, resigned. The President recommended the immediate attention of Congress to the danger that would result from a failure to act upon the agreement with the Ute Indians. The Pensions Deficiency Appropriation bill was taken up. The amount appropriated for pensions is $2,240,000. Several amendments were agreed to and the bill passed. On motion of Mr. Paddock, the House bill passed for the relief of homestead and pre-emption settlers in Kansas and Nebraska who lost their crops by drought, extending for one year the time in which to complete their payments. Mr. Cockrell introduced a bill regarding pensions of soldiers of the war of 1812, so as to place on the pension rolls the names of the surviving officers and enlisted and drafted men without regard to color, including the militia and volunteers who were in the service for fourteen days or were in any engagement......In the House, on motion of Mr. Carlisle, the Senate amendments to the House bill, amending the Internal Revenue law in regard to distilled spirits, were concurred in. On motion of Mr. Thompson, the Senate bill for the loan of tents, flags, camp equipage, etc., for the soldiers' reunion in Muscatine, Iowa, was passed. The Speaker pro tem. laid before the House a message from the President urging on Congress the necessity of action on the Ute agreement. The House went into committee of the whole on the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill. Mr. Forney made a conference report on the Military Academy Appropriation bill. Agreed to. Leave of absence was asked for many members, Mr. Frye putting his application on the ground of his desire to attend the Chicago Convention, but Mr. Hutchins objected, except coupled with the condition that those members with whom absentees are paired may vote to make a quorum. So leave was not granted.

A Famous Clown.

Few men in his profession had less of the circus man and the clown about him outside of the ring than James Cooke, the leaper, tumbler, rope-walker, clown, and ring-master, and who died not long ago. He was slender, medium-sized, and erect, with close-cut, gray hair brushed back from a well-shaped forehead, well-cut features, steel-gray eyes, and a short gray mustache. He dressed with care, in clerical black, and a white necktie added to his clerical appearance. His words were carefully chosen, and he spoke deliberately and thoughtfully. He looked and acted like a gentleman always. He was a religious man. His son, 17 years old, is studying for the priesthood, in the Santa Clara College, in San Francisco, and a daughter is at school in a convent near that city.

"He was a perfect gentleman," said Mr. Nathan, one of the proprietors of Barnum's circus, where for the last three years of his life Mr. Cooke was equestrian manager. "He never used an oath, and he never permitted himself to talk ungrammatically. He seemed always trying to improve, and to improve all about him. If any of the men in the ring used bad language, ungrammatical language, I mean, he would reprove them, but in such a way that they would not take offense, and could only love him the more for the interest he took in them. He urged the boys to read the papers, and to study when they could. As a clown he was very good; Shakespearean, of course. He was dignified, graceful and witty, and studied hard to invent new things."

THE SHOOTING OF LINCOLN.

Some Interesting Facts Hitherto Unrecorded.

(From the New York Herald.)

A man whose name demands a place in the history of the Rebellion arrived from San Francisco a few days ago. His name is William Withers, Jr. He is a musician by profession, and has just finished an engagement as leader of the orchestra at the California Theater. Mr. Withers is 42 years old and a native of West Point, where he studied music under his father, who for many years was a musician in the Government band, and subsequently was a member of Dodworth's band, in this city, until his health failed. The old gentleman is now living at Rye Beach, where he attends the hotel boats and amuses himself occasionally by fishing. Mr. Withers, Jr., is at present paying a visit to his father, and it was there that a reporter of the Herald found him and listened to a very interesting story in connection with the assassination of President Lincoln, at Ford's Theater, Washington. It is a fact familiar perhaps to a very few that Mr. Withers, Jr., was the leader of the orchestra at that theater on the night of the assassination April 14, 1865, and prevented a frightful panic, although he was at that time unconscious of the important service he had rendered the audience. The story of Mr. Withers' experience of that night, and the part he took in the proceedings, have never been told. In the most reliable histories of the war covering the assassination, such as Raymond's, Drake's, and Greeley's, Mr. Withers' name is not mentioned, and it has been through his modesty and diffidence that the story is unrecorded. Every reader of the Herald, old or young, is familiar with the fact that the President was shot at about a quarter past 10 o'clock, by John Wilkes Booth, the actor, while sitting in a private box witnessing a performance of "Our American Cousin." It is also well remembered that the day had been celebrated all over the country on account of the news flashed far and near that Lee had surrendered, and thus virtually ended the war of the Rebellion. The Cabinet had held a meeting that day, and at the close of the session, which had been remarkably harmonious, the President invited any member of his Cabinet who felt so inclined to accompany him to the theater in honor of the events of the previous twenty-four hours, but it seems that none accepted the invitation. The President, Mrs. Lincoln, their son, a pupil of Mr. Withers, Maj. H. R. Rathbone, Senator Harris and his daughter, Miss Harris, made up the party. They occupied an upper box. When the orchestra heard that the President was to be there one of the musicians, an Italian named Taltavullo, suggested to Mr. Withers that the orchestra flag, which was the property of the Italian, be used to decorate the front of the box, and it was accordingly raised. Mr. H. P. Phillips also composed a song for the occasion and handed it to Mr. Withers to set music to it. Mr. Withers composed a martial air, rehearsed the music with Miss Laura Keene, the leading lady, the understanding being that the song was to be sung at the close of the second act by Miss Keene, the company joining in the chorus. The words of the song have never been printed. They are as follows, a copy from an old scrap-book, written by Mr. Phillips, and now in Mr. Withers' possession, having been made for this purpose. The song is entitled

HONOR TO OUR SOLDIERS.

Honor to our soldiers,
　Who for their country toil
And fight the Union to preserve,
　With blood defend its soil.
Cheered on by leaders whom they love,
　They've fought with heart and hand
To make rebellion lose its sway
　In this our native land.

CHORUS—Repeat first four lines.

Honor to our soldiers,
　The nation's greatest pride,
Who 'neath the starry banner's folds
　Have fought, have bled and died.
They're nature's noblest handiwork,
　No King so proud as they—
God help the heroes of our land
　And cheer them on their way!

Honor to our soldiers,
　Their victories ne'er shall cease
Until our foes surrender
　And bless our land with peace.
Our navy, too, shall have its fame,
　Our flag shall ne'er be furled
Until our foes at home—abroad—
　Shall feel we dare the world

Mr. Withers had understood that this song should be sung at the close of the second act, but when the curtain was rung down he saw that the programme had been changed without consulting him. His story of what followed is this: As soon as the play had proceeded he went upon the stage, and, not seeing the stage manager, went to the prompter's desk at the wing, where Mr. J. B. Wright, the prompter, was on duty. The "governor," or gas apparatus, was in close proximity to Mr. Wright's desk. The cover of this governor was open, and Edward Spangler, assistant stage carpenter, and one of the conspirators, was standing beside it. Mr. Withers said, "Spangler, step away a moment; I want to speak to Mr. Wright." Spangler did not move. An angry frown overspread his face, and Mr. Withers peremptorily ordered him to go to his position as scene-shifter. He started away, muttering something which Mr. Withers did not hear, and to which he paid no attention at the time. He inquired of Mr. Wright why the song had not been sung, and Wright said that the programme had been changed so as to have the piece brought in at the close of the performance. "Go into the orchestra just before the finish," said Mr. Wright, "and get your instruments into tune, and we will make the song the finale." Mr. Withers said the effect would be lost by this proceeding, and, turning down the cover of the governor, he partly sat down upon it, and suggested that the audience at the finish would begin to move and spoil the piece. If produced at all, the song must be sung during the play. The whistle then blew for a change of scene, and Spangler had to attend to the shifting. Mr. Withers then started down past the wings to a stairway leading under the stage. Just as he was in the act of stepping down the first step he heard a pistol-shot. Surprised at the report, knowing there was no shooting in the play, he stopped and looked toward the proscenium.

At that instant Booth dashed into the passage-way with a dagger in his hand. Withers was standing directly in line with the stage door or private entrance. His first thought was that Booth was looking for the man who fired the shot; but the next instant the madman was up on him thrusting at him with the dagger. The point of the weapon cut two holes in the coat worn by the musician, one on the back of the neck and the other on the right shoulder, going through all the clothing and through the skin. In the struggle Mr. Withers was knocked down and badly bruised, and Booth escaped through the private door. Before Mr. Withers could get upon his feet, Harry Hawk, the actor, came rushing through the passage way after Booth, and fell over the prostrate form of Mr. Withers. It was then, for the first time, that the musician learned what had happened. He still has the coat he wore on that memorable occasion. It is an evening-dress coat of blue-black broadcloth. He exhibited it to the reporter, put it on and described how Booth attacked him, and the exact position he was in when the thrusts were made. The only words uttered by Booth were, "Get out of my way! get out of my way, or I'll kill you!"

The flag, which has a place in history, was in the possession of Mr. Withers for a long time, but it was subsequently given to its owner, who resided in Memphis, and is now, Mr. Withers believes, in Washington. The flag, it will be remembered, was torn by Booth's spur, which caught in it as he jumped from the box to the stage, and it was this accident to the assassin that caused his leg to be broken.

Edward Spangler died on the 19th of February, 1874, at the residence of Dr. Mudd, of Baltimore, a co-conspirator, with whom he had suffered imprisonment. Before his death he made a confession, which has been communicated to Mr. Withers, in effect that the presence of the musician at the "governor" prevented a fearful panic. He (Spangler) was hovering around the instrument with the intention of turning off the gas in the auditorium the moment Booth landed on the stage. The cover was up to facilitate that operation, and, had he not been ordered away by Mr. Withers, who turned the cover down to sit upon it, the gas would have been turned off, and nobody would have known to a certainty who assassinated the President. Booth was not recognized at the time of his leap by the audience; but Miss Keene, who stood at the wings, recognized him, and shouted to the audience: "It's John Wilkes Booth!" At that time he was struggling with Mr. Withers at the rear of the stage. The turning off of the gas at the proper time, Mr. Withers believes, would have allowed the assassin to escape unrecognized, and have led to further tragic results.

Buck Beer.

Buck beer is demoralizing in its tendency when it moveth itself aright. It layeth hold of the intellect, and twisteth it out of shape.

My son, go not with them who go to seek buck beer, for at last it stingeth like the brocaded hornet with the red-hot narrative, and kicketh like the choleric mule.

Who hath woe? Who hath babbling? Who hath redness of eyes? He that goes to seek the schooner of buck beer.

Who hath sorrow? Who striveth when the middle watch of the night hath come to wind up the clock with the fifteen puzzle? He that kicketh against the buck beer and getteth left.

Verily, the buckness of buck beer bucketh with a mighty buck, insomuch that the buckee riseth at the noon hour with a head that compasseth the town round about, and the swellness thereof waxeth more and more, even from Dan to Beer-Sheba. [Current joke in the Holy Land.]

Who clamoreth with a loud voice and saith: "Verily, am not I not a bad man?" Who is he that walketh unsteadily, and singeth unto himself: "The Bright Angels Are Waiting for Me?"

Who wotteth not even a fractional wot, but setteth his chronometer with the wooden watch of the watchmaker and by means of a toothbrush?"

Go to. Is it not he that bangeth his intellect ferninst the buck beer unto the eleventh hour?—Bill Nye, in Denver Tribune.

A MAN in New Orleans has for pets a host of big and little spiders. He first became enamored of them on account of their thrift, courage, industry and skill. He has at length become so engrossed with them as pets that he spends his whole time with them, and does not care to see visitors.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
BEEVES	$8 75 @10 00
HOGS	4 65 @ 4 85
COTTON	11⅛@ 12
FLOUR—Superfine	3 60 @ 4 30
WHEAT—No. 2	1 25 @ 1 38
CORN—Western Mixed	52 @ 55
OATS—Mixed	42 @ 46
RYE—Western	90 @ 95
PORK—Mess	11 00 @11 10
LARD	7 @ 7¾
CHICAGO.
BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	4 45 @ 4 85
Cows and Heifers	2 00 @ 4 00
Medium to Fair	4 00 @ 4 15
HOGS	3 50 @ 4 30
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter Ex	5 50 @ 6 25
Good to Choice Spring Ex	5 00 @ 5 50
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 13 @ 1 15
No. 3 Spring	86 @ 87
CORN—No. 2	37 @ 38
OATS—No. 2	31 @ 32
RYE—No. 2	83 @ 86
BARLEY—No. 2	77 @ 78
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	20 @ 21
EGGS—Fresh	9½@ 10
PORK—Mess	9 75 @10 00
LARD	6½@ 6¾
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—No. 1	1 05 @ 1 06
No. 2	1 03 @ 1 03
CORN—No. 2	36 @ 37
OATS—No. 2	30 @ 31
RYE—No. 1	83 @ 83
BARLEY—No. 2	68 @ 70
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red Fall	1 11 @ 1 12
CORN—Mixed	35 @ 36
OATS—No. 2	31 @ 32
RYE	84 @ 85
PORK—Mess	10 30 @10 40
LARD	6½@ 6¾
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT	1 10 @ 1 14
CORN	40 @ 41
OATS	34 @ 35
RYE	91 @ 92
PORK—Mess	10 40 @10 50
LARD	6⅛@ 6¾
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—Amber Michigan	1 16 @ 1 17
No. 2 Red	1 16 @ 1 18
CORN—No. 2	42 @ 43
OATS—No. 2	35 @ 36
DETROIT.
FLOUR—Choice	5 50 @ 5 75
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 14 @ 1 15
No. 1 Amber	1 12 @ 1 14
CORN—No. 2	43 @ 44
OATS—Mixed	37 @ 38
BARLEY (per cental)	1 25 @ 1 65
PORK—Mess	11 50 @12 00
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	1 09 @ 1 10
CORN	37 @ 38
OATS	33 @ 35
PORK—Clear	12 00 @12 50
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
CATTLE—Best	5 00 @ 5 25
Fair	4 00 @ 4 90
Common	3 50 @ 3 75
HOGS	4 30 @ 4 80
SHEEP	4 20 @ 4 50

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED,
ROB. J. LOWRY } Editors.

The oldest lawyer in the United States in active practice is Azgill Gibbs, of Rochester, who in a few weeks will be 93 years of age. He is hale and hearty. He has had six sons, all of whom have been admitted to the bar, and three of whom are now in practice.

The cotton crop of 1879 was 5,073,531 bales. It was the largest ever gathered, being more than 260,000 bales greater than that of 1878, and more than 200,000 bales larger than the then-unparalleled crop of 1859-'60. So it seems that free labor performs more service than slave labor.

Barnum always was an ingenious advertiser. His latest exploit was getting Bergh to threaten his arrest if he didn't stop sending a trick horse through a hoop of fire. Then the crowd flocked to the circus to see him brave arrest, and Phineas T. raked in the assets. The arrest didn't take place, however, because Bergh's agent put his hand in the flames the horse leaped through and found they were not hot enough to burn.

While a young man living near Mansfield, Ohio, was carelessly revolving the loaded cylinders of a revolver, one barrel was accidentally discharged, and the load entered his abdomen, inflicting, as was supposed, a fatal wound. A physician was sent for, and, on examination, it was found that the ball struck a large brass button, and its force was so much decreased that, although both ball and button were driven in among the viscera, yet no rupture was caused, and the ball and button were readily extracted, and the man will probably recover. His life was saved by a brass button.

Thirty years ago the British consumption of American and foreign cheese was not quite one pound per capita; to-day it is nearly six pounds, or 137,000,000 pounds in the last fiscal year, as against 121,000,000 pounds the previous year, imported from America. John Bull drinks more tea, uses more sugar and more wheat flour than ever before. Our choice grain-fed steers are acknowledged by him to be equal to the best domestic beef, far better than the frozen, grass-fed flesh of Australian cattle. The great Atlantic ferries and our trunk lines to the West have practically, as far as food supply is concerned, annexed the English shires to our republic.

The best and largest part of Southern Jersey has been laid waste by forest fires. Cranberry bogs to the value of $100,000 are destroyed, and the huckleberry crop likewise, which gave employment to over 20,000 women and children in the summer season. Another item of the loss is thus noted: The fishing villages and sporting stations along the coast are almost wholly dependent on the game in the marshes, which attracts visitors from the cities in summer; now the marshes as well as the woods are a blackened waste, and the "dead birds and animals strew the ground by the thousand." It will require twenty years for the growth of trees and vegetation, necessarily slow in that chilled atmosphere, to repair the damage of the last month.

Mention has often been made of the hardy life of a journalist. Unceasing labor is his lot, and his vacations are few. It is seldom, however, that even in this exhausting profession such an instance of hardship occurs as is exhibited in the case of T. S. Dennison, editor and proprietor of Hours of Recreation. This is a monthly of about fifteen pages, mostly contributions and selections. The editor has had such a tough time of it that the paper will not appear in June, July and August, as the arduous nature of his occupation renders it necessary to take a breathing spell in Colorado until September. He hopes then "to produce a spicier, better paper than ever." How he must enjoy his greatly-needed rest! He really ought to quit journalism or he will die of overwork.

The London Lancet calls attention to the danger incurred in the case of young girls by prolonged stooping over work and crossing of the legs. Dr. Malherbe, with the view of obviating these evils, has invented a plan which consists of fixing to the edge of an ordinary table a sort of cushion, on which the work can be easily fastened or spread out, as on the knee. A framework of the simplest description admits of the raising or lowering of the cushion, so that the work may be done sitting or standing, but in either case the vertebral column is maintained perfectly straight, while the facility of change of position greatly lessens fatigue. To test the invention, Dr. Malherbe introduced it at the Communal School of Nantes, and with good effect on two pupils who had a tendency to malformation.

The great influx of Europeans to this country, while gratifying in the main, is not without disagreeable features. The discovery has been made in New York that not only are many of the immigrants destitute, but some of them paupers within the legal meaning of the term, and that these paupers are being sent here at the expense of the authorities of their native country. The Government of Bavaria, it appears from investigations made by the New York Emigration Commissioners, has been guilty of this disgraceful practice. A party of eighty adults and a large number of children recently arrived at New York, their passage having been provided for by the Bavarian Government by contract with a shipping agent at Aschaffenberg. These people were a burden on the state and were sent to America that the state might be relieved of the expense of providing for them. From the statements of the paupers it appears that the Bavarian Government contemplates ridding itself of others of its helpless citizens in the same manner.

Charley Lewis, otherwise "M. Quad," of the Detroit Free Press, has been subjected, recently, to the pumping process by the peripatetic interviewer, and, in the course of the conversation, said: "I have offers every few days to write plays. I have written several, some of which were a real success in a light way, but I have never realized anything from them. The fellows who have got them start off, and I can't follow them up; and, if I should, I don't suppose I could collect my share of the proceeds. They will come here and sign contracts fair enough, and that is the last of them. I am about tired of doing this kind of business. It takes a good deal of time to write a play. It's a matter of a dozen or more evenings, and as many more Sundays. That is too much to give away. I am now writing a play for Gus Williams, which I expect to realize something from; but my experience has been that I had better take a few hundred dollars down than to run the risk of getting as many thousands when the piece is brought out."

Whether is it preferable, to break bad news suddenly or gradually? A case in White Mills, Pa., shows how a dreadful result may be brought about by the very means taken to avoid it. It appears that a young man in one of the Southern States for the past two years has been paying his attentions to Miss Schenck, a beautiful, wealthy and accomplished young lady of that place, and was engaged to be married at an early day. About three months ago he started from his Southern home for the North with the intention of fulfilling the engagement, when an accident occurred which resulted in his death. The news of his death reached the young lady's mother, who, knowing the strong attachment her daughter entertained for him, resolved to withhold the sad news from her daughter, if possible. To this end the mother intercepted the letter which conveyed the news of his death, and the daughter was left in total ignorance of the truth. Time passed by, and the girl received no tidings from her absent lover. Her only solution to the mysterious silence was that she had been deserted. It so worked upon her mind that soon her reason was dethroned, and she is now a raving maniac.

Mount Vernon.

Whence Mount Vernon derived its name is told by the New York Times. It says:

The unfortunate Duke of Monmouth had a private secretary named Vernon, a prudent, sensible man of business, who, after the Duke's death, found favor in influential quarters, and under William II. became Secretary of State.

He left a son, Edward, born 1684, who, greatly against his father's wishes, entered the navy, and, serving with early distinction, rose to the rank of Admiral.

In 1722 he was returned to the House of Commons, and having in July, 1739, declared there that Porto Bello might be reduced with six sail of the line, and he would stake his life and reputation on the success of the expedition, he was sent with a squadron to do it, succeeded, and gave his men $10,000, which had just arrived to pay his troops.

On returning home he received the thanks of both houses and the freedom of the city of London. From that time, however, his star declined.

An expedition to Carthagena, made two years later, signally failed.

It was in the land force at Carthagena that Lawrence Washington, George's eldest brother by fourteen years, had served, and, apparently, he esteemed Vernon, as he gave his name to his home on the Potomac, and procured a Midshipman's appointment for George, but his mother's interposition ultimately prevented the boy's availing himself of it, albeit she at first consented.

Vernon's popularity was so great that his unlucky expedition does not seem to have affected it, as he was actually elected to Parliament for three places at once on his return.

Probably his known hostility to the Government had much to do with this.

In 1745 he was detailed to watch the North sea, in view of a movement of the Pretender's adherents.

The next year a serious squabble arose between him and the Government, resulting in his producing two pamphlets, which so exasperated the authorities that, by the King's express command, he was struck off the list of Admirals.

He died in 1757, at his seat in Suffolk, and, notwithstanding his disgrace, a handsome monument was erected in Westminster Abbey.

It was Vernon who brought into use the custom of mixing water with the ration of rum, which got the name of grog from his habit of wearing a grogram waistcoat, and hence his nickname of "Old Grog."

Altogether, the man who invented grog is buried at Westminster Abbey, commemorated by Smollet, and gave a name to Washington's home, must be regarded as no ordinary person.

FARM NOTES.

Dip your shingles in petroleum before placing them on the roof, and they will last much longer.

Kentucky blue-grass, clover and timothy are good for uplands. On low lands timothy and red top will do the best.

If a farmer commences with one cow, and every other calf she has is a heifer, in ten years the cow and her offspring will drop forty-one calves. This shows the rapidity with which a farm can be stocked.

Seth Green advocates frog culture. He says that many farmers have fortunes in frog ponds, and that a little care and cultivation will produce a crop of frogs large enough for family use, after supplying the market.

The Brazilian artichoke has much to recommend it as a prominent plant for the interest of the swine, and in no case should the hog raiser violate the necessity of growing a few acres for their particular special benefit.

At the next fat-stock show in Chicago, animals 4 years old and over will be excluded. Steers should be finished at most at 3 years old, and the time is near at hand when a 3-year-old will rarely be seen, except in the hands of men who do not progress, or on the plains of the far West.

The National Live Stock Journal publishes a statement by Prof. Weber, of the Illinois University, that Dr. Hass' hog-cholera specific is compounded as follows: Cayenne pepper, common salt, calcium carbonate, magnesium, carbonate and water. That probably any amount could be made at 15 cents per pound.

A writer in the Fanciers' Journal, in speaking of ducks, pronounces the Aylesbury and Pekin the best varieties, the former being noted for its large white eggs and delicately-flavored flesh, and the latter for the richness of its eggs, good constitution and rapid fattening. The Rouen is pronounced only slightly inferior in flavor and in quality of eggs to the above, matures earlier, and is hardier.

Large quantities of sugar beets will be grown this year in Canada, Maine, Massachusetts, Delaware and California. Between the beet, sorghum and corn the problem of manufacturing sugar in this country seems likely to be solved. Perhaps the planters of sugar cane in Louisiana will cultivate the beet, as they could doubtless raise two crops yearly, like the Creole planters of tobacco on the banks of the Mississippi.

In some parts of Germany, instead of smoking meat to preserve it, it is hung up in a dry, well-ventilated room, and painted over with wood vinegar (pyroligneous acid), an acid distilled over when wood is burned in air-tight stoves, or any other place where there is not free access of atmospheric air. The painting three or four times with this vinegar answers every purpose of smoking. It protects the meat from insects, fungi, and putrefaction.

A special committee, appointed for the purpose of testing an Ayrshire cow belonging to the herd of Wolcott & Campbell, New York mills, Utica, state, under oath, that she gave eighty-five pounds of milk per day, several days in succession. This, in all probability, is the largest product recorded of the Ayrshire cow, amounting to about thirty-nine quarts. On account of this large record let no one lightly esteem their cow which gives twenty quarts per day.

The best soil for sweet potatoes is a sandy loam. If sand largely predominates they will flourish if well manured. New ground or virgin soil is especially favorable for this crop. It is the common practice to sow buckwheat on new land for the first crop and then to plant sweet potatoes for the second. An abundant crop is the general result. In a heavy loam the vines grow luxuriantly, but the tubers are generally small, rooty and of inferior quality. In clayey soil sweet potatoes will not thrive.

The New York Tribune says: "It is folly to keep old sheep. They should be turned off to the butcher while they are in their prime. It does not take half so much to fatten them then. When they get old and thin, in order to put them in condition to slaughter, the whole superstructure must be rebuilt. Four sets of lambs are all a ewe can bear; this will bring her to five years, and this is an age when, with a little extra care, she will round up to a fine carcass. Exceptions may be made when the breed is scarce, and the blood is more valuable than anything else."

If taken internally with their food, sulphur will almost invariably keep all kinds of animals free from lice. We have made a practice for years past of giving a heaping table-spoonful once a week in the feed of each of our cows, and the same quantity to about every ten hens in our flock, and they have never been troubled with lice in them. It may be given in the same proportion as to size when required in the food of poultry, pigs and sheep. Sulphur is a mild cathartic when desired for this purpose, and in small doses seems to have a general beneficial effect on the animal system, something like salt, though, of course, not of that nature.

At Zwall, Holland, the municipal government have solved the oleomargarine difficulty by setting apart a place in the public market for the sale of this commodity, with a positive prohibition against exposing it for sale anywhere else. Much amusement seems to have been derived from seeing sellers who, only a short time before, had been loudly protesting against the imputation that the article they sold was anything but the Simon-pure milk-butter, compelled to shift their quarters and place themselves and their wares under the artificial-butter sign. They appear, however, to have borne the change with remarkable equanimity.

Those Dreadful Sparrows.

Dreadful little sparrows! exclaims Mary Clemmer. What mischief you make! what work and disappointment you entail! You are not a feeble folk, but the most persistent, the most prosperous of mischievous little people. You have picked all the grass seed out of my lawn. You have soiled the walls of my house from top to bottom. You have tricked its face with straws, till it looks like a gaunt Ophelia. You scold like parrots and fight like tigers, doing all this to my constant discomfort. You yet dare, in the open window, to stare in my face, with blinking defiance and beaks full of straws. Thus I arraign you as a mightily multiplied nuisance, with the wish that every one of you were back in England, where you belong. Not thus out of the South comes the bluebird, with its high, sweet carol; not that lonely messenger from heaven, the hermit thrush.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

Stings and Bites.—Carbonate of soda, wet and applied externally to the bite of a spider, or any venomous creature, will neutralize the poisonous effect almost instantly. It acts like a charm in the case of snake-bite.

Cure for Colds.—To make a candied lemon or peppermint for colds, boil one and a half pounds of sugar in a half pint of water till it begins to candy around the sides; put in eight drops of essence; put it upon buttered paper and cut with a knife.

Sirup of Gum Arabic.—Melt two ounces of gum arabic in two ounces of water, then add a pint of water, half a pound of sugar, and boil for a short time; withdraw the mixture and strain, then add a table-spoonful of orange-flower water.

Croup Preventive.—First get a piece of chamois skin, make it like a little bib, cut the neck and sew on tapes to tie it on; then melt together some tallow and pine tar; rub some of this in the chamois, and let the child wear it all the time. Renew with the tar occasionally.

Rice Croquettes.—Soak some rice, then boil it in milk. When done add sugar, the grated rind of a lemon, three yelks of eggs; form into croquettes and fry in lard. The lard must be boiling, and sufficient to cover the croquettes. When done sprinkle over with some powdered sugar.

To Roast a Calf's Liver.—Wash thoroughly and wipe dry; cut a long, deep hole in the side; stuff with crumbs, bacon and onions chopped; salt and pepper to taste; bit of butter and one egg; sew or tie together the liver; lard it over, bake in the oven, basting frequently; serve with gravy and currant jelly.

Potato Salad.—This is Berlin fashion: Take your potatoes, not too large ones, and boil them; potatoes that are mealy are not good; when cold, cut in slices and pour the oil on them, and let them stand a little while; slice a third of an onion as fine as possible, and one apple, and mix with the potatoes; add vinegar to taste; salt and pepper. The addition of a Dutch herring makes a herring salad.

A Delicious and Easily-Made Stew—Which may be left in a slow oven several hours, or even all day. Take two pounds of gravy beef, cut off the skin and fat, divide it into pieces about an inch square, wash it, then place it in a large bowl or small crock, cover it with water, or rather add as much as desired for gravy or beef-tea; let it stand an hour, then cover it with a plate, and place it in a slow oven, adding previously a little salt, and, if liked, an onion, cut up fine. It should cook four or five hours, and then there will be enough gravy for delicious and most nutritious beef-tea, as well as an excellent dish of wholesome meat.

Food for the Sick.

The following advice as to administering food to the sick deserves the attention of nurses and of all who are called upon to look after nervous patients:

It is a great mistake to have large quantities of fruit, biscuits, etc., lying about a sick-room.

A very few grapes, an orange peeled and divided, and two or three milk or water biscuits are quite enough to have displayed at one time.

The same may be said of food.

I have often been pained, when visiting some of my sick pensioners, to see their friends, with well-meant but mistaken kindness, bring large basinfuls of horrible compounds, which they dignify with the name of gruel, or sago, or tapioca, as the case may be.

The mere sight of the food seemed to set them against it. Whereas, if a little care had been bestowed upon its preparation, and a small cupful provided instead of the large quantity I name, they probably would have partaken of it with pleasure.

Another error, committed with the best of intentions, is to keep asking the patients what they would like, if they could take this thing or the other. The sickened, wearied expression I have often seen flit over the faces of people who are recovering from a lingering illness, when their officious relatives come teasing them as to their requirements!

During the lingering illness of a dear relative, I verily believe we made her often eat, just by providing dainty morsels of food, displaying them temptingly arranged, and taking them to her bedside quite unexpectedly.

If she had been asked could she eat anything, I feel confident the answer would have inevitably been: "No; thanks. I don't feel at all inclined to eat."

A very simple and expeditious way of cooking a little bit of chicken or fish is to butter a paper thickly, place the food to be cooked within the paper, and place it on the gridiron over a clear fire. A very short time suffices to cook it thoroughly, and I have often found that to be eaten when all other modes of invalid cookery have been tried in vain.

A Race for a Bride.

A correspondent at Pollockville, N. C., says: A novel wedding occurred here to-day. It seems that Messrs. John Miller and Alexander Bibb, two well-to-do young farmers, were in love with the same lady, Leonora Loyd, a beautiful girl of this place. She was not able to decide as to which she liked best. On Sunday morning Bibb walked home from church with her, and left under the impression that she said she would marry him. Last night, lover No. 2, Miller, went to see her, and understood her to say she would marry him. Each one armed himself with the necessary documents, and each left with a license to marry Miss Loyd. After some talk they agreed that the first man who reached the lady's house should marry her. The residence of Col. Loyd, the lady's father, is one mile distant, and both men started on the race for the bride. Bibb soon left the main road and darted into the woods, expecting to make a short cut and reach the house before his rival, but Miller kept the road and got in on the homestretch eight minutes before his rival. Both men were in sight of each other going up the lane to the house, and Bibb's efforts to overtake his rival were almost superhuman. When they reached the house, Bibb, from sheer exhaustion, fainted on the porch, almost at the feet of his lady love. When the matter was stated to her she said she had come to the conclusion that she liked Mr. Bibb the best, and therefore she would mary him. Her sympathies were won over by seeing him faint. She stated that she believed that both loved her, but that he who faints at the danger of losing a bride must love her more than he who is cool and unconcerned in the midst of it all. The affair causes intense excitement in this small place. To-night Rev. Aaron Jasper, the well-known Baptist minister, married Bibb and Miss Loyd. So ended one of the most startling romances in real life ever known in the history of North Carolina.

Why Bass Never Take an Upper Fly, the Lower One Being Taken.

In a recent letter, Seth Green, who is authority in all matters piscatorial, discourses briefly on the best modes of angling for bass. Among other statements he makes the following, which will be interesting to many "simple wise men," who have the good sense and leisure to go a-fishing:

If the fish is on the lower fly, you will not take any more, but if he is on one of the upper flies, you will be sure to take more if there are any in sight.

We learned this fact and published it years ago as a curious habit of the bass family. But we knew the fact long before we discovered the reason of it. Nothing in our angling experience ever caused us more perplexity or so greatly excited our curiosity. It took us a week of patient observation on what used to be the best trolling ground on the St. Lawrence—in the neighborhood of Gananoqua—to clear up the mystery. But we finally succeeded to our entire satisfaction, and here is the simple solution:

The bass is a social fish. He likes company. Where there is one there is more. They move in schools. When one strikes the troll there are always others in the neighborhood. When the lookers-on see the struck fish "cutting up" they "go for him" under the impression that he has found a "good thing," of which they are unwilling he should have the monopoly. As the angler, on feeling the strike, at once "reels up," the ravenous rascals follow in pursuit, but never pass their leaping and floundering companion, because they fancy he is trying to seize and gorge the "tid-bit" they wish to share with him. This purpose keeps them either even or behind him, but they never pass him. Hence none ever take the fly above the one upon which the captive is hooked, but are pretty sure to be beguiled by any fly below him.—George Dawson, in Albany Journal.

The Invasion of the United States.

The greatest question of the day for the United States continues to be that of European emigration, as may be imagined when it is considered that nearly 1,500 emigrants daily arrive in the harbor of New York alone, and that statisticians estimate the net profit to the country of each emigrant at $1,000, represented by the money, be it more or less, they bring with them; and by the "sinews" and physical force applied to industry and agriculture. For the last six years emigration has comparatively diminished, as was previously the case from 1863 to 1870. More than 500,000 emigrants are expected this year. The annual arrivals from 1870 to 1879 were as follows: 1870, 356,303; 1871, 346,938; 1872, 437,750; 1873, 422,545; 1874, 260,817; 1875, 191,231; 1879, 237,991; 1877, 141,857; 1878, 138,469; 1879, 177,826, giving a total amount for the last ten years of 2,711,724. European statesmen will do well to notice whether or not the years during which emigration to the United States was the largest do not correspond either to the periods succeeding wars in the Old World, or to those in which, as now, the commencement of hostilities upon a large scale is seriously apprehended.—American Correspondence.

A Home Thrust.

William Cullen Bryant, when challenged once to fight a duel, contrived to fasten the charge of cowardice on "the other fellow" very neatly, and with little trouble. His reply having been incorrectly reported in the notices of his death, his son-in-law, Parke Godwin, publishes the facts as follows:

Mr. Bryant was challenged by a Dr. Holland, now deceased, on account of some offensive words that had appeared in the Evening Post, but, remembering that Dr. Holland had been previously challenged by William Leggett, without taking any notice of the challenge, he replied to this effect:

"My Dear Sir: I am not familiar with the code of the duelist, but I believe that, according to its provisions, no one has a right to send a challenge to fight a duel so long as an unanswered challenge hangs over his head."

Then the matter was dropped.

Liverpool.

Liverpool, England, has been created a city and erected into a Bishopric. During the early part of the last century, Liverpool, which was a poor, decayed town, leaped suddenly into activity and trebled her population, from 4,000 to 12,000, and has since yearly grown in prosperity. It derives its name from a bird, named a liver, the only one of his species which dwelt in a pool on the banks of the Mersey, and is represented on the corporate seal, after a portrait taken 600 years ago, as having two legs and only one wing. Whether the took flight over the ancient city said to have stood in the days of the Ptolemies where Liverpool now stands, is not certain, but he must have existed at a very remote date or he could not have found his way into the arms of the oldest families of Lancashire. Naturalists say that this liver is the blue duck, which is also found in the Ribble.

The trustees of the Rev. J. H. Hartley's church, in Cincinnati, have asked him to resign, on account of his habit of borrowing money and never paying.

Living in Quiet.

A rule for living happily with others is to avoid having stock subjects for disputation. It mostly happens, when people live much together, they have come to have certain set topics, around which, from frequent dispute, there is such a growth of angry words, mortified vanity, and the like, that the original subject of difference becomes a standing subject for quarrel, and there is a tendency in all minor disputes to drift down to it. Again, if people wish to live well together, they must not hold too much to logic, and suppose that everything is to be settled by sufficient reason. Dr. Johnson saw this clearly with regard to married people when he said: "Wretched would be the pair, above all names of wretchedness, who should be doomed to adjust by reason, every morning, all the minute detail of the domestic day." But the application should be much more general than he made it. There is no time for such reasonings, and nothing that is worth them. And when we recollect how two lawyers or two politicians can go on contending, and that there is no end of one-sided reasoning on any subject, we shall not be sure that such contention is the best mode of arriving at truth. But certainly it is not the way to arrive at good temper.

CENTAUR
CENTAUR
LINIMENT
always Cures and never Disappoints
The world's great Pain-Reliever for Man and Beast. Cheap, quick and reliable.

PITCHER'S CASTORIA is not Narcotic. Children grow fat upon, Mothers like, and Physicians recommend CASTORIA. It regulates the Bowels, cures Wind Colic, allays Feverishness, and destroys Worms.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR
ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Bilious Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite — they will tell you by taking
SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR
For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, Sick Headache, Colic, Depression of Spirits, Sour Stomach, Heartburn, &c.,
IT HAS NO EQUAL.
This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of Mercury, or any injurious mineral substance, but is
PURELY VEGETABLE.
If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take
SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.
It is given with safety and the happiest results to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.
J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest-Selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per ct. National Publish'g Co., St. Louis, Mo.

PILES fully described with scientific mode of cure. Prof. Harris' illustrated pamphlet sent free on application. HARRIS REMEDY CO., Manf'g Chemists, 8th & Market Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

Book' Million
A large, new and complete Guide to Wedlock, containing, with many others, the following chapters: A Competent Womanhood, [illegible]
"THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER" On Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Varicocele, &c., also on Spermatorrhoea, Sexual Debility, and Impotency, [illegible]
"Medical Advice," Lecture on Manhood & Womanhood, 10c.
FOR ONE DOLLAR we send all three of the above described books, [illegible] The combined volume is positively the most popular Medical Book published. [illegible] Postage stamps taken in payment for books.
DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY Established in 1847, cures [illegible] Patients treated by mail and express. Where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is free and invited. Question list to be answered by patients desiring treatment mailed free to any address on application. For books or treatment address
DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Seminal Pastille
An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency [illegible]
HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.
Unsolicited testimony to the Efficacy of Prof. Harris' Seminal Pastilles, taken from Letters received from Patrons
[illegible]
From a Physician and Surgeon.
[illegible]
From a Druggist.
[illegible]

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., JUNE 3, 1880

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,

THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,

Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

"NO SOLID SOUTH, NO SOLID NORTH, BUT A SOLID UNION."

Democratic County Central Committee

OFFICERS.

Wm. L. Blair, Chairman.
Theo. Reed, Secretary.
J. J. Van Auken, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Wm. L. Blair, Jas. A. Barns, S. S. Shutt, J. Wm. Wagner, T. F. Jordan, Guy Plumb.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEEMEN.

C. M. Merica, Butler township.
J. J. Walter, Jackson township.
T. S. Murray, Concord township.
Geo. A. Munn, Newville township.
Jacob Christoffle, Stafford township.
Geo. W. Maxwell, Wilmington township.
M. Houston, Auburn precinct.
D. Y. Husselman, Waterloo precinct.
W. J. Frederick, Keyser township.
L. D. Britton, Richland township.
J. M. Brumback, Fairfield township.
Fred. Waterman, Smithfield township.
T. H. Tomlinson, Franklin township.
B. F. Cornelius, Troy township.

Joint Representative Convention.

Delegates from the counties of DeKalb, Noble, and Elkhart, the same constituting a joint representative district, will meet in convention at Kendallville, Ind.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 6th, 1880,

for the purpose of nominating a democratic candidate for joint representative for the counties named. The ratio of representation will be one delegate for each 100 votes cast for Gov. Jas. D. Williams in 1876, and one for each fraction of 50 or over, as follows:

DeKalb county	26
Noble "	31
Elkhart "	31
Total	86

By order of the district committee.

Judicial Convention.

The democracy of Noble, DeKalb and Steuben counties, constituting the 35th judicial district, will meet in delegate convention at Kendallville, Ind., on

FRIDAY AUGUST 6th, 1880,

for the purpose of nominating a judge of the circuit court and prosecuting attorney. The ratio of representation will be the same as that in the joint representative convention, which will be held at the same time and place.

By order of the district committee.

Democratic County Convention.

Delegates from the several townships in DeKalb county will meet at the court-house, in Auburn,

Saturday, June 5, 1880,

at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the following offices, to-wit:

Representative in the legislature.
County clerk.
County auditor.
County treasurer.
County sheriff.
County recorder.
County surveyor.
County coroner.
County commissioner, north district.
County commissioner, southwest district.

The convention will transact such other business as may come before it.

SELECTION OF DELEGATES.

In accordance with a resolution passed at the last meeting of the county central committee, all democrats and others who intend to support the ticket nominated by the convention above named, are requested to meet at the usual voting place in their respective township or precinct,

Saturday, May 29, 1880,

at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the county convention, in accordance with the following apportionment, based upon the number of democratic votes cast for secretary of state at the last state election:

Butler	township	10	delegates.
Jackson	"	19	"
Concord	"	21	"
Newville	"	8	"
Stafford	"	7	"
Wilmington	"	19	"
Auburn precinct		31	"
Waterloo	"	10	"
Richland township		17	"
Fairfield	"	21	"
Smithfield	"	12	"
Franklin	"	9	"
Troy	"	5	"
Keyser	"	27	"
Total,		216.	"

The democrats of each township and precinct will at the same time, (May 29), appoint one delegate to the judicial convention to be held at Kendallville on the 6th day of August, 1880.

By order of the committee.

W. L. BLAIR, Chairman.
THEO. REED, Secretary.

The Cincinnati convention ought to nominate a western man.

The DeKalb county delegation to the democratic state convention will go via Fort Wayne and Muncie. Railroad fare for the round trip from Fort Wayne will not exceed $3—possibly $2.50. Tickets will be good on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. Persons who desire to go to Indianapolis can leave Auburn on the Saginaw road at 9:21 a. m., and arrive at Indianapolis at 4:25 p. m.; or leave at 3:17 p. m. and arrive at Indianapolis at 10:55 p. m.; the latter train making direct connection at both Fort Wayne and Muncie. Trains from the east on the Eel River road, and from the west on the B. & O. road connect with the afternoon Saginaw train at Auburn Junction. Do not purchase your ticket to Indianapolis until you get to Fort Wayne.

The Indians of New Mexico are raising h—air again.

The republican national convention is now in session at Chicago with a fair prospect of a grand row, and the nomination of Grant.

Last week the democrats in congress were talking Morrison, of Illinois, for president; this week Randolph, of New Jersey, is receiving some attention at the hands of the congressional president-makers. Mr. Randolph is n. g.; New Jersey is a small potato when compared with Indiana or New York.

A number of democrats in this community who are conscientiously and everlastingly opposed to S. J. Tilden, say they are about through paying for a newspaper which contains nothing but advertising—for patent medicines and Tilden. A daily paper without general news is about as interesting as a circus hand-bill.

The anti-Grant meeting advertised to take place at Indianapolis, last Monday evening, for the purpose of keeping the Indiana delegation to the Chicago convention within the traces, resulted in a very tame affair. The leading speakers, Messrs. Kirk Hawes, of Chicago, (imported for the occasion) and Gen. Hascall, both declared in favor of Grant in case he recieved the nomination.

We had the pleasure of a call Monday from Hon. Freeman Kelley, of Indiana, who was called to Findlay to attend the funeral of his father-in-law, Wm. Marvin, Sr., Mr. Kelley was borned and raised in Washington township, this county, but for a number of years past has resided in Indiana, where he has been elected to many important offices. He is one of the foremost democratic leaders of the state, and is a prominent candidate for lieutenant-governor. Mr. Kelley is a brilliant and forcible speaker, a man of good ability, and of upright character, and the democracy of Indiana would honor them selves by electing him to the office of lieutenant governor.—Hancock Courier.

How to Succeed.

Hon. H. G. Eastman, of Poughkeepsie, gave this terse advise to the students of Eastman's Business College:

"My students: You are the architects of your own fortunes. Rely upon your own strength of body and soul. Select some specialty for your life's work, and adhere to Paul's precept: 'This one thing I do.' Let your star be industry, self-reliance, faith and honesty, and inscribe on your banner: Luck is a fool; Pluck is a hero. Earnest effort in one direction is the surest road to wealth and high position. Don't take too much advice. Keep at the helm and steer your own ship, and remember that the great art of commanding is to take upon yourself the largest share of the work. Don't practice too much humility. Think well of yourself. Strike out. Assume your position. It is the jostlings and jostlings of life that bring great men to the surface. Put potatoes in a cart, over a rough road, and the small potatoes go to the bottom. Turn a raft of logs down a mill race and the large logs come on top. Rise above the envious and jealous. Fire above the mark you intend to hit. Energy, invincible determination with a right motive are the levers that move the world. Don't drink. Don't chew. Don't smoke. Don't swear. Don't deceive. Don't read novels. Be in earnest. Be self-reliant. Be generous. There are two sides to every balance, and favors thrown in one side of the scales are sure to be reciprocated in the other. Be a gentleman. It is a foolish man who does not understand that molasses catch more flies than vinegar. Read the papers. Advertise your business. Love God and your fellow-men; love your country and obey its laws."

A Question for the Democrats of DeKalb County to Answer.

The Elkhart Democrat of last week contains the following editorial on the subject of joint representative:

The joint representative this year will be elected from Elkhart, Noble and DeKalb counties. Now the question is who will be the candidate and which county can produce the best man? There are a great many interests represented in the three counties and it will require a man peculiarly qualified to represent them in the legislature, therefore it behooves us to look well to our selection and get a man who possesses the proper qualifications and who is able to make the canvass as it should be made. We do not apprehend that it is going to be a very hard race to make, if the proper man is nominated; one who will concern himself sufficiently to give the counties a pretty thorough canvass and in the right manner. Of course the race will depend largely upon who is nominated on the other side. From what we can learn in regard to the matter, this candidate is pretty generally conceded to DeKalb county, the reason of which we are unable to give, unless it is on the account of DeKalb losing her senator. In that case it seems no more than just and proper that she should furnish the candidate for joint representative. We would like to ask our DeKalb friends whether they have a man to present who possesses all the necessary qualifications? If so, trot him out, that we may look him over and consider his merits, demerits, etc.

There are certainly democrats in DeKalb county who possess "all the necessary qualifications" and who would honestly and faithfully discharge the duties of the position if honored with a nomination and election. We might suggest the names of several prominent democrats of this county who we think would be available, but we prefer to let the party speak for itself, and trust that the county convention which convenes next Saturday will take such action as seems best for the interest of the party in this joint representative district.

Delegates to the County Convention.

The following are the names of the delegates to the county convention, as near as we have been able to ascertain them:

BUTLER TOWNSHIP.

John Wildasin, David Timberlin,
Wm. Merica, Fred. Smith,
Joseph Weller, Sr., J. N. Wyant,
Ira West, Wm. Whetsel,
James D. Rowley, Chas. Rugman.

JACKSON TOWNSHIP.

Peter Z. Wirick, Samuel J. Tarney,
Wm. Nelson, Isaac Farver,
Wm. Carr, Chas. Wilson,
Christ. Baker, Wm. Beatty,
Henry Hines, Benj. Moffit,
J. J. Walter, L. D. Nelson,
John Shugars, J. M. Henderson,
Byron Grube, Wm. Means,
W. S. Dancer, Chas Comesky,
James L. Ferguson.

CONCORD TOWNSHIP.

W. H. Simington, O. H. Widney,
Samuel Widney, Calvin Brown,
C. A. Jenkins, E. J. Boyle,
Christ. Curie, Frank Sholes,
David Andrews, Lewis Shutt,
Isaac Newton, John Horn,
J. R. Nichols, Jacob Baltz,
Wm. Shutt, J. H. Gill,
Henry Hull, Dennis Burley,
G. W. Draggoo, Frank Barney,
C. C. Walter.

NEWVILLE TOWNSHIP.

B. F. Blair, J. M. Lawrence,
Geo. Lewis, Wash Testison,
Lewis Cole, M. Ashelman,
James Headley, Q. Fusselman.

STAFFORD TOWNSHIP.

T. H. Shoub, Wm. Wilson,
Daniel Bordner, J. W. Canon,
John Hook, James Shull,
Henry Webster.

WILMINGTON TOWNSHIP.

John Brown, Milton Bowman,
Chas. Kilmire, Lewis Monroe,
O. P. Noal, Wm. Campbell,
James Metcalf, John Bretzius,
Wm. Wallace, I. N. Veeley,
J. S. Barnett, Wm. H. Madden,
Gabe Strauss, David Maxwell,
R. Chambers, I. Hirschler,
Thomas Shroyer, A. Hablawitz,
Wm. Edwards.

AUBURN PRECINCT.

J. J. Martin, Samuel Davis,
Peter Shaffer, A. Blodgett,
Samuel Gibson, T. G. Matheny,
John Treesh, D. D. Metcalf,
Curtis Shultz, Oscar Shreeve,
Wm. Ashelman, J. J. Ralston,
D. D. Moody, Henry Bashelier,
O. P. Meyers, John Leasure,
E. F. Metcalf, T. P. Scott,
Wm. Sthair, E. J. Coder,
M. Houston, Jas. McClellan,
S. Swihart, Geo. W. Popple,
I. N. Cool, G. C. Ralston,
S. Kutzner, Guy Plumb,
Wm. Sherwood, Jas. A. Potter,
Wm. Snyder.

WATERLOO PRECINCT.

Jacob B. Hoover, Ryan Clutter,
John Koons, J. McEntarfer,
D. Link, B. L. Duncan,
Jacob Amstutz, J. C. St. Clair,
H. C. Rohm, J. Imhoff.

KEYSER TOWNSHIP.

Daniel Swihart, Harvey Moody,
A. Bolinger, J. R. Skilling,
John Cattell, Frank Sembower,
Holmes Link, John Bell,
H. Long, H. Harvey,
L. Hathaway, A. J. McClure,
James Leason, John Houston,
John Klink, J. Wm. Wagner,
John Stoops, John Conner,
Jas. Downend, Henry Levi,
D. Cochran, F. M. Bacon,
C. Linkenhelt, W. J. Frederick,
Geo. Behler, Jas. Fisher,
Frederick Rowe.

RICHLAND TOWNSHIP.

N. McIntyre, C. B. Kagey,
L. D. Britton, J. M. Goetschius,
H. Ruth, G. I. Patterson,
Jacob Scott, Goff Mathews,
Peter Treesh, Jacob Becher,
L. Treesh, John Merica,
R. Shippey, Geo. Beard,
M. Franks, Jas. Smith,
Zachariah Dawson.

FAIRFIELD TOWNSHIP.

C. C. Neidig, W. N. Shatto,
A. W. Bair, Jacob Deetz,
G. W. Downs, Andrew Lmith,
Henry Gardner, Eli Zonker,
Wm. Webster, Rob. Sherlock,
Benj. Martz, Geo. Henny,
Daniel Camp, W. A. Goodrich,
Henry Reed, J. M. Brumback,
Henry Becher, David McNabb,
W. E. Sherlock, John Gushwa,
Geo. Emerick.

SMITHFIELD TOWNSHIP.

John J. Baxter, John McOscar,
D. Heckathorn, Jacob Myers,
Sam. Smith, F. C. Waterman,
L. Brandaberry, J. Woolsey,
C. H. Tripplet, Fred. Gfeller,
A. J. Beard, John Fisk.

FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP.

Eli N. Clark, Peter Helwig,
N. Sewell, D. Stambaugh,
J. Houghton, Wm. Casey,
John Slentz, J. H. Smith,
Wm. Enzor.

There were no delegates appointed for Troy township.

Eminently Fitted.

[Wabash Courier.]

During the last fortnight Colonel Gray has made considerable headway in his canvass for the democratic gubernatorial nomination, and unless Mr. Landers is on a "still hunt," and is securing more delegates than reports from different sections of the state credit him with, Gray is almost certain of success. Should he be nominated, his election is assured, provided the Cincinnati convention does not make a greater blunder than now seems possible. Without wishing to detract one iota from the character or ability of any gentleman who aspires to a democratic nomination for governor, we must say that Colonel Gray is eminently fitted to head the state ticket, both as regards his availability as a candidate and his qualifications for the office. When the campaign gets fairly under headway republican stumpers and editors will wave the bloody shirt with a vigor not excelled in any campaign since that garment became their standard. The republican candidate for governor will doubtless be an ex-soldier. To meet the enemy on an equal footing it seems to us that the democratic state convention would act wisely to nominate a soldier, to whom the cry of "rebel" would not only prove harmless, but it would react as a boomerang upon its authors. Again, Colonel Gray's long experience in the legislative department of the state, both as a member of the senate, and as its presiding officer, renders him far more capable of performing the duties of governor than any man likely to receive the republican nomination.

Old Settlers' Meeting.

The second annual meeting of the Pioneer Association of DeKalb county met in the grove on Easley's avenue, between Auburn and Auburn Junction, on Thursday, May 27, 1880, pursuant to the call of the executive committee. The officers of the association and a goodly number of the pioneers of this and adjoining counties, as well as others who are not deemed pioneers, were present. The busy time of the farming community, the gatherings for different purposes soon to be held, together with the previous inclemency of and threaten weather, the number in attendance was not as large as the annual meeting of last year, yet the harmony and good cheer manifested made up largely for want of members, and many and warm were the kindly greetings of those dear old people who have born the heat, and cold, and stormy blasts of northeastern Indiana for the last thirty-five or more years.

The programme arranged by the committee, and heretofore published, was fully carried out. A most entertaining, interesting and elegant address was delivered by Judge Prentiss, of Noble county. After recess and refreshments the officers of the association made their several reports which were adopted, and on motion George Egnew, Nelson Griffith and Henry Feagler were appointed a committee to nominate officers for the ensuing year, who made report and thereupon the following were chosen such officers:

P. B. Nimmons, president; T. D. Gross, vice-president; W. H. Dills, secretary; Cyrus Bowman, terasurer; J. E. Rose, biographer.

Executive Committee:—Butler tp., Jacob Miller; Jackson tp., A. D. Goetschius; Concord tp., Samuel Wasson; Newville tp., S. H. Bartlett; Stafford tp., J. J. Gunsenhouser; Wilmington tp., Chas. Hanes; Auburn, Daniel Altenburg; Waterloo, John Butt; Keyser tp., O. C. Clark; Richland tp., T. D. Dailey; Fairfield tp., Philip Gushwa; Smithfield tp., Jeremiah Hemstreet; Frankland tp., Geo. Firestone; Troy tp., Wm. Emerson.

After short addresses by several old settlers, and a vote of thanks to the Waterloo and Butler choirs and the Auburn band, the society adjourned with the benediction by the chaplain, Rev. Jno. McCurdy.

The following is a list of deaths reported to the biographer during the previous year:

Michael Zimmerman, born Feb. 3, 1829, came here in 1845, died July 1, 1879.

Adam Hartel, born Dec. 24, 1814, came here in Sept., 1836, died Jan. 21, 1880.

Stephen W. Hackley, born Feb. 6, 1796, came here in 1838, died July 26, 1879.

Marilla A. Rose, born Aug. 31, 1829, came here in 1838, died Feb. 1, 1880.

Samuel Wannemaker, born Feb. 19, 1804, came here in 1844, died March 29, 1880.

Charles Probst, born Feb. 20, 1815, came here in 1842, died March 7, 1880.

John Grogg, born 1813, came here in 1838, died May 1, 1880.

Mary Grogg, born 1826, came here in 1838, died April 23, 1880.

Henry Clark, born Oct. 26, 1800, came here in 1842, died May 4, 1880.

Henry Cherry, born April 4, 1799, came here in 1843, died April, 1880.

Hannah Leonard, born in DeKalb county in Nov. 19, 1841, died April 14, 1880.

Samuel Learned, born Feb. 29, 1812, came here in 1838, died Feb. 15, 1880.

David Rachel, came here in 1843, died April 14, 1880.

W. H. DILLS, Secretary.
S. B. WARD, President.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

CLERK.

The democratic friends of Mr. D. Y. Husselman, of Union township, will present his name in the county convention and ask that he be nominated for county clerk.

The democratic friends of Mr. John W. Baxter, of Wilmington township, will present his name in county convention and ask that he be nominated for county clerk

AUDITOR.

EDITORS COURIER: The democrats of Franklin township desire you to announce the name of Thomas H. Tomlinson, of the township named, as a candidate for county auditor

The many friends of John W. Dills, of Concord township, will present his name to the democratic county convention as a candidate for county auditor.

TREASURER.

The democratic friends of L. J. Miller, of Richland township, will announce his name in convention as a candidate for county treasurer.

SHERIFF.

The many friends of John W. Boyle, of Wilmington township, will present his name as a candidate for sheriff in the democratic convention, and ask his nomination.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Please announce that Mr. Philip Plumb, of Waterloo precinct, will be presented by his friends as a candidate for sheriff of DeKalb county.

J. J. VanAuken's friends will present his name, and ask that he be nominated for Sheriff by the democrats of DeKalb county, in convention assembled.

RECORDER.

The democrats of Jackson township present the name of Samuel B. High, and ask that he be nominated for county recorder.

We are authorized to announce that James Quince, of Butler township, will be a candidate in the county convention for the office of recorder.

Mr. George H. Munn, of Newville township, is named by his many democratic friends in that township as a candidate for county recorder.

SURVEYOR.

William Easley, of Auburn precinct, will be a candidate in the democratic county convention for the nomination for county surveyor.

Mr. George L. Lanning, of Auburn precinct, has been named by his democratic friends as a candidate for county surveyor.

The many democratic friends of Aaron P. Folts, of Auburn precinct, announce his name for county surveyor, believing him to be well qualified for that position.

CORONER.

COMMISSIONER, SOUTHWEST DISTRICT.

Mr. Edward Kelham, the present incumbent, is named as a candidate for re-nomination for county commissioner in the southwest district.

Summer

Underwear for Ladies, Gentlemen and Children, in light-weight Merino, Gauze, Lisle Thread and Balbriggan, all sizes and qualities now in stock. Our stock of Summer Hosiery and Gloves is large and well assorted with all the staple and Fancy Novelties of the season. Black and Colored Lace Mitts, Lace top Lisle Gloves, Kid Gloves of our various popular brands, in 2 to 8 buttons in street, Opera shades and black, at reduced prices.

ROOT & COMPANY.

Parasols.

Just opened—An elegant new lot of Black Satin Parasols, Rich Black Brocade Parasols, Fancy Colored Parasols, Children's Parasols, both lined and unlined, $2,50 to $15.00 each. Also an immense new line of Sun Umbrellas, 20, 22 and 24 inches, Blues and Browns in a great variety of Ebony, Horn, Ivory, Bamboo, Natural Stick, Tortoise Shell and Agate Handles, $1,50 $1,75, $2,00, $2,50, $3,00 each and upwards. Please examine them.

ROOT & COMPANY.

Light-Weight Suitings.

For gentlemens Wear.—Our stock is probably the largest and best-assorted in the city. Our Goods are of the best Scotch, English, French and German manufacture. Our prices are VERY LOW, as the goods were ordered before the great advance in prices of Woolen took place. Gentlemen wanting Business Suits, Dress Suits, or anything in the way of Cloths, Cassimeres, Doeskins, Diagonals, Meltons or Cheviots, should not fail to examine before they purchase.

ROOT & COMPANY.

Lawns.

350 pieces New lawns this week in Tinted and White Ground, with and without Side Bands, 10, 12 1-2, and 15 cents per yard. Also New Linnen Lawns, Organdies, Jaconets, new Foulard Cambrics, French Chintz, Zephyr Ginghams, Canton Ginghams, Seer suckers, etc., etc., 10, 12 1-2, 15, 20 and 25 cents per yard. Our stock of Wash Fabrics is very large and worth looking at. Black and Colored Bunting in great variety.

ROOT & COMPANY, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The Auburn Fruit-House.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

Sugars Down.

Ligh Brown, 8 cents; Light yellow, 8 1-2 cents; Extra Yellow C, 9 cents; Coffee A 10 cents; Granulated, 11 cents.

Coffees Down.

Good Rio, 15 cents; Best Marraicabo, 20 cents; Fancy Rio, 22 cents.

South Carolina Rice, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; New Prunes, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; A No. 1 Fine Cut Tobacco, 40, cents; Extra Fine Cut Tobacco, 50 cents; Plug Tobacco of all brands very cheap; Parlor Matches, 7c., or 4 for 25 cents; the very best Syrups, 70 cents; Splendid Teas at from 30 to 75 cents.

Fish of all Kinds.

No. 1 White Fish, Family White Fish, Pickerel, Lake Fish, Catfish, Mackerel, Herring, Smoked Halibut, Boneless Codfish, etc., etc., all sold cheap and warranted as represented.

Crocks and Jars of any size at 7 cents a gallon.

Entrance on Seventh or Eighth Streets

Frank A. Hoff

KIBLINGER & CO.

We are always busy behind the counters, in the ware-house, and on 1st, 2d and 3rd floors, selling Hardware, Nails, Doors, Sash, Glass, Paints and Oils by the wagon-load. Call on us when in want of anything in the Hardware line. We will sell you cheaper than the lowest. Thanks for past patronage.

KIBLINGER & CO.

The summer running meetings of the Chicago Jockey and Trotting club will be held on the 19th, 21st, 22d, 23d, 24th, 25th, 26th and 30th days of June, and the 1st 2d 3d and 5th days of July. The Jocky Club circular, just issued, says:

The grounds, club house, grand and select stands, track, stabling, and all other appointments are unsurpassed by any in America, and the managers will spare no pains to make the coming meeting the most memorable in the annals of the turf. The advantages of Chicago as a summer resort are well known, while its facilities as a railroad center are superior to any city in the west, and with the great attractions offered at these meetings the managers of the Jocky Club feel justified in predicting such an attendance from all portions of the country as shall place Chicago in the front ranks as a racing community.

S. B. HARTMAN, D. D. S.

DENTIST.

88 Calhoun st. Fort Wayne Ind

Artificial TEETH on Gold, Silver, Porcelain or Rubber Plate.

WOODHULL & CROXTON, Plaintiff's attorneys.

Notice to Non-Residents.

State of Indiana, DeKalb county, ss.
No. [illegible] In the DeKalb circuit court, May term, 1880.

Oliver S. Miller, Theodore F. Miller, Elias Straus, Lewis W. Moore, Isaac J. Hair, Sigmond Bair, and Frank Eiberson are hereby notified that an action has been commenced against them in said court, by Leopold Warner, John Warner, Louis E. Warner, John R. Warner, Edward Warner, Kaufman Greenberry and Simeon Kempner, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 5th juridical day of the next term of said court, which commences May 24, 1880, to-wit: July 30, 1880.

Witness, the clerk of said court, this 20th day of May, 1880.

JOHN W. BAXTER, Clerk.
W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

Auburn Courier,

Local and Miscellaneous

BAD BURGLAR BOYS.

Who Make Four Calls in One Night.

Several days ago, the mayor of Fort Wayne issued a proclamation, which document was an invitation to the tramps, gamblers, toughs and blacklegs generally, with which that city is infested, to take a skip—hie away—light out—as it were, offering, as an inducement, a season or so of free board and hard labor at the county jail, in case the invitation was ignored; but the scheme had the desired effect—at least, we think it did—as will be inferred from the following record.

Saturday night, at about half past eleven, as Rev. H. J. Norris was engaged in his study, he heard a rumpus at the back door of his house which sounded decidedly suspicious, so he armed himself with a kerosene lamp (which, by-the-way, is a first-class weapon of defense in case of an explosion), and started on a tour of inspection; he reached a window just in time to see the cause of the disturbance saying good-bye with his legs, as he had fallen—i. e. the burglar had—over a water-trough and scared himself away. Mr. Norris thinks there were two of them, and says they tore the screen at the front door in trying to get in; also raised a window on the south side but secured nothing.

The next visit was paid at the residence of P. W. Silvers, where they also failed to make a raise of anything valuable. Just at this point, however, they remembered that they were indebted to several other parties for calls, and as it was getting quite late, they excused themselves and bade adieu.

Having walked a considerable distance, and being very hungry, as well as fatigued, the nocturnal visitors dropped in at Dr. Casebeer's, where they were refreshed with a light lunch consisting of several cans of fruit and a bucket of sugar, which latter they doubtless used to mix cock-tails with the whisky they had inside their carcasses. Further than this, nothing unpleasant occurred at the doctor's.

Each having one calling card left, they repaired to Jay VanAuken's peaceful home, there to have a talk with Jay about the county election; the door being accidently locked, they went in at a window and yelled for Jay; but they couldn't awaken him—or, if they did, he probably didn't want to be bored with them—so they looked at his watch to see what time it was and then dropped it out of the window, where Jay discovered it next morning. This, Jay thought, was a very ungentlemanly trick, and upon ascertaining that a small amount of change had been borrowed from his vest pocket, without asking him, he was convinced that his callers must have been drunk. Jay hasn't seen any of them since to ask them, neither did he look at his watch to see, but he thinks it must have been two or three o'clock Sunday morning.

In conclusion, we have only to say that unless the mayor of Fort Wayne gets off another speech and calls these parties in, there will be a rebellion—a skirmish compared with which that little difficulty of 1812 won't be a marker. In the meantime let all our people load their cannons with tramp shot and have the latch-string out for visitors.

On His Muscle.

Sunday night, at Garrett, there was some fun—some genuine, unadulterated amusement—a rampant tramp having assumed the principal character in the performance and made himself the observed of all observers. The aforesaid gentleman of idleness, deluded with the notion that he was a whole regiment by himself, undertook the self-imposed authority to run the town; he opened up the entertainment by entering George Bahler's saloon, forgetting the little formality of opening the door,—to say nothing of knocking—where he proceeded on the hypothesis that the shebang belonged to himself; to this, however, the proprietor and several citizens objected, when the unruly cuss informed them that he wasn't afraid of the marshal and the "whole d—d corporation." Note the result: He was brought to Auburn the same night (Sunday), cast in the cooler over Monday, tried and convicted of burglary Tuesday, and sentenced to one year in the penitentiary, with a fine of $5 and all costs. This all took place before Judge McClellan, and yesterday the hilarious sample of pugilistic excellence accompanied Frank Leas on an excursion to Lake Michigan. Parties wishing to communicate with him, at any time within a year from date, can address: "Mr. James Devere, Northern Bird Cage, Michigan City, Ind."

Have You Tried It?

Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative, the great blood purifier and renovator, a specific for liver complaint, biliousness, chills and fever, dyspepsia, kidney diseases, rheumatism, and constipation of the bowels. Removes pimples and sallowness from the skin, producing a clear complexion. It is prepared from roots, barks, and herbs; is entirely harmless, and pleasant to take, and has a larger sale and gives better satisfaction than any other medicine in the market. Pint bottles only one dollar, and every bottle warranted. For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug store. 23 2w.

—Frank Leas is "doing" Chicago.

—Wall paper cheap at Davenport's drug store. 14-tf.

—Prepare for the burglars and give them a hot reception.

—The peculiar species of date, now most conspicuous in these parts, is the candy-date.

—If "April showers bring May flowers," what in creation do May rainstorms bring?—June bugs?

—If Grant is nominated, Mr. E. D. Hartman wants to know how it is done; he is in Chicago to find out.

—Mrs. Eliza McClellan, mother of Judge McClellan has returned from a protracted visit in Michigan.

—It will pay you to see Davenport's patterns before you purchase wall paper and window shades. 14-tf.

—Spring's ethereal mildness is a burlesque. The whole month of May has been made up of storms and disasters.

—Tom Sommers has a new horse that is a good one, but it ought to be painted; it is about the color of a yellow dog.

—Beware of the water when it is iced within the cup, for at last it cooleth like an icicle and crampeth like a cucumber.

—Lute Wright made another trip to Greenville, Michigan, last Friday, where he went to buy lumber for F. N. Wright & Co.

—Mr. C. K. Baxter of the Waterloo Press, has the honor of serving as secretary of the Indiana delegation to the Chicago convention.

—Lew Garfield left the city last week and is now in Michigan City, where he anticipates an extended visit. Ten years is about the size of it.

—Articles sent to this office for publication must be accompanied by the name of the writer, though not for publication with the article unless desired.

—Strawberry short-cake must derive its name from the fact that the average cake is usually short of berries. That's as close as we can figure it out, anyway.

—Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Sears and Mrs. M. D. Campbell, father, mother and sister of our young physician, Dr. C. S. Sears, from Quincy, Michigan, spent the Sabbath in this place.

—The head of the boot-up-side-down, W. J. Austin, went to Wabash yesterday Wonder if he went to see the electric light? If he did, he'll need a lantern to find it with.

—"Club" Jones, of the notion store next door to Austin's, shouldered his little valise and started for Chicago last Thursday. He appointed himself a delegate to the convention of yesterday.

—Further interesting developments in the Spencerville robbery racket, for which three men already languish in the penitentiary, may be expected soon; but in the meantime, "mum's the word."

—George Bealer, of Garrett, called at the COURIER office a few moments Tuesday. He was one of the body-guards who attended the bad, bad tramp, an account of whose proceedings appears elsewhere.

—The following letters remain unclaimed in the postoffice at Auburn, Indiana, for the week ending May 29: Jacob Garrison, John Kruse, Pierre Oetto, Eugene Sovine and Mrs. Ella S. Williams. Go get 'em, quick.

—The Ladies' Presbyterian society will be entertained by Mrs. Swineford and Mrs. Forkner to-morrow (Friday) afternoon, at the Swineford house. A cordial invitation is extended to all.
MRS. J. E. ROSE, Sec'y.

—This office is under obligations to Mrs. E. Snyder, Mrs. S. Swihart, B. Koontz and L. E. Gregg for the trouble taken in furnishing us with missing numbers of the COURIER for our files, and we hereby return thanks for the same.

—Much has been said of Italy's lovely sunshine and entrancing blue skies, but if this is all true, why do so many Italians migrate to this country?—Ex.

That's easy. It is because the average organ-grinder can't live on blue skies and sunshine.

—Eli Coder, the pleasant young gentleman who does the heavy work in McQuiston & Ralston's—bounces all the tramps, etc.—is a candidate for a mysterious office. Just step in, and he will set up a candidate's cigar—nine for a nickel.

—Clint. B. Stephenson, the popular, large and jovial traveling salesman for the notion and hosiery house of Wm. H. Lyon & Co., New York, was in town Tuesday, on his semi-occasional business trip. Clint. is a genial gentleman, has a host of good friends, and does a rattling business.

—The notorious George Hazzard, who was sent to the penitentiary some months ago for violation of the bankrupt laws, has been pardoned by Hayes. A deputy U. S. marshal met him as he came out of the penitentiary and placed him under arrest on another charge; he was released on $2,500 bail, his sister signing his bond.

—Will some person whose education has not been neglected, but has been better cultivated than ours, please tell us why a steamboat or railroad-train is always called "she?" We can ascribe no reason for it, unless it is because of their respective propensities for whistling when there is no occasion for it, and kicking up a dust.

—It is reported on the streets to-day that a convention of some sort was held in Chicago yesterday.

—J. E. Rose swelled yesterday's Chicago crowd by one. He is still there, but is expected home to-morrow.

—Mrs. Doctor Allen has the thanks of the senior editor and family for several quarts of delicious strawberries.

—Mrs. G. H. K. Moss, of Auburn, Ind., was visiting friends here last Wednesday and Thursday.—Edgerton Herald.

—The man who lets his wife or child suffer from coughs or colds without getting "Sellers' Cough Syrup," is lost to common reason.

—The Auburn Historical Society will meet at Gordon's art gallery to-morrow (Friday) evening at 8 o'clock. A general attendance is desired.

—Messrs. Griffin & Lewis publishers of the Fayette (Ohio) Record, the office of which was recently destroyed by fire, gave us a pleasant call a few days since.

—Half the ills of human life proceed from a torpid and disordered liver. Submit to them no longer while "Sellers' Liver Pills" will cure you quickly. 25c. per box.

—As will be seen in another column of the COURIER, lightning did some sad work at Garrett during the severe storm of Monday evening, killing one man outright and badly injuring two others.

—A pleasant time is assured to those who attend the Presbyterian social, which will be entertained at the Swineford house, to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, by Mrs. S. C. Swineford and sister, Mrs. G. H. Forkner.

—What was the matter with the marshal of Garrett, when called on Saturday night to arrest that uproarious tramp? We understand that he didn't relish the job and refused for a time to tackle it. Was he afraid, or only scared?

—Farmers in this vicinity are beginning to complain about the frequent heavy rains. We are informed that the wheat is beginning to rust in some localities, and the prospects for a big crop are not so promising as they were a week ago.

—The State Normal News, in speaking of some of the graduates of the Indiana State Normal school, at Terre Haute, says: "Lida A. Powers, '73, has closed her school at Auburn, and is finishing the last month of the term at Garrett, the superintendent there having recently resigned."

—All persons in need of wall paper and window-shades are respectfully invited to call and examine the fine stock on exhibition at the Physicians' drug-store. The styles are the latest, the quality of the best, and the prices cheap as the cheapest. It will pay you to go and see for yourself. 19-4t.

—Just at the present writing, John Robbins is trying to content himself in the village of Chicago. He will remain until to-morrow, during all of which time he promised to conduct himself in a manner consistent with his position in society;—in other words, so as not to get picked up for a "sucker."

—A copy of last Thursday's Leadville Daily Herald, a handsome 9-column paper published at Leadville, Col., was received yesterday from Jas. D. McGill, who, a short time ago, held a position in the Jackson freight office at Jackson, but who struck for Colorado not long since in search of filthy lucre. We scanned every line in the Herald to find some mention of Jim's "big find," of which the papers at his old home—Fort Wayne—lately made notice, but found not a "find." Possibly the whole thing was a li-kely story, eh, Jim?

Cupid's Captives

Since the 10th of April last, including the month of May, have been numerous. That Cupid has had a great deal to do with it, however, is merely surmise, as Mammon sometimes plays a leading role in these little partnership transactions. But here they are; comment on them as you please:

Alexander S. Freeman and Sylvia Bailey, Warren N. Shatto and Jennie Ling, Calvin H. Husselman and Edith Platter, David Floyd and Nancy Friend, Fred. Schulthess and Rosa McKinley, Grove Swinehart and Margaret Bryant, Albert Englebrecht and Anna Gehring, Wm. H. Mader and Lillie A. Thomas, Adam H. Tinteman and Mavilla C. Arford, Jacob Marks and Adaline Morehead, Artemus Stratton and Elizabeth Odel, John B. Hawkins and Sarah I. Cather, Edmund C. Reyher and Mary Zimmer, James M. Furnish and Ida A. Steward, Adam Lung and Jessie A. Hank, George H. Scattergood and Charlotte C. Sutherland, Wm. Henry Grube and Mary Hass.

What Advertising Did.

During the Garfield trial last week Mr. B. R. Willett, of Bryan, Ohio, lost a pocketbook containing notes amounting to about $3,000. The property was found by Mr. Thos. Baldock of this place, near the court house door, after dark, and as soon as the notices posted by Mr. Willett were seen by Mr. Baldock, the pocketbook was returned to Sheriff Leas, who rewarded the finder with a $5 william, according to instructions from the owner of the pocketbook.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Sad Death of Tony Palmer at Garrett.

An unusual commotion was noticed on our streets Monday evening, when it was reported that a man had been struck by lightning and instantly killed at Garrett, our neighboring county town, and that several others had been seriously injured by the shock. Investigation substantiated the rumor, and the particulars of the frightful disaster, as we have gleaned them from various sources, are here given.

During a lull after the heavy rain and thunder storm of Monday afternoon, while several groups of people were standing around the streets of Garrett, thinking that the storm had about subsided and wholly unmindful of any danger, there came a deafening clap of thunder instantly accompanied by a vivid flash of lightning which dealt a fatal blow to Anthony Palmer and prostrated seven persons in the little party with whom he was conversing, namely: William Woodside, John O'Reilly, B. D. Thomas and little son, Mr. Moss, a miller, George Redecker and Frank Baker. These parties were standing on the sidewalk in front of Mr. Bicknell's drug-store, and each one of them was more or less injured,—Woodside and O'Reilly more seriously than the others. Tony Palmer, the victim, doubtless had no knowledge of the cause of his death, as it is said to have been instantaneous; and this fact only tends to render his death more appalling, because, while we all would die a painless death when our time comes, still, we all desire to be apprised of its approach and have an inborn horror of being thus ushered into futurity without a moment's warning.

Several persons who were unaffected by the shock, though standing on the opposite side of the street, say that they could distinctly see a ball of fire making the descent several seconds before it struck; that it was as large as an ordinary cocoa-nut, and that it tore away the corner of the building, passed through the awning and struck the deceased on the shoulder, turning him partly around before he fell, though he uttered not a sound.

Anthony Palmer, the deceased, was a man much respected by the community in which he lived, being an honorable and industrious man who was on an even footing with the world and had just succeeded, by economy and perseverance, in establishing a nice little paying business in the shoemaking line. He was 33 years of age and married, his wife surviving him with no children and for her the sincerest sympathy is expressed. The funeral services were held at the Presbyterian church here in Auburn, Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. H. Johnson conducting the ceremony.

Tony Palmer, as he was familiarly called, was well known in this place, having friends here who knew him intimately and who speak of him only in terms of praise and regret.

A Complete Surprise.

One of the most agreeable surprise parties the writer has had the honor of attending was that of last Friday evening upon the occasion of the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Gilbert Ashley. It was whispered around a day or so prior to the event that a number of the personal friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ashley would undertake to surprise them at the time above-mentioned; accordingly a large party assembled at the residence of Mrs. Enos Weaver, and about nine o'clock proceeded to the residence of Mr. Ashley, laden with silver-ware and good things to eat. The daughter had been advised of the coming and was waiting patiently, but the "old folks" were preparing to retire, and were not a little surprised when their visitors came in upon them so suddenly and unexpectedly. When the visitors were seated, Major Sprott, in behalf of those present, addressed the happy couple who, twenty-five years before, had solemnly vowed to love and protect each other. His remarks were well chosen, and the sentiments expressed were those of every one present, in proof of which he presented a silver water-pitcher, silver cake-stand and silver mug. Mr Ashley undertook to return thanks but seemed to be "too full for utterance."

An excellent supper was served, to which the following persons did justice: Major S. W. Sprott and wife, David Weaver and wife, Philip Fiske and wife, George Ensley and wife, A. L. Hollopeter and wife, Henry Giggerli and wife, H. H. Weamer and wife, Enos L. Casebeer and wife, W. H. Kiblinger and wife, John Lohmiller and wife, Samuel Gibson and wife, M. Houston and wife, J. Beuret and wife, Ben. Goodman and wife, F. Huelsenbeck and wife, Theo. Reed and wife, Mrs. Ellen Leasure, Mrs. Enos Weaver, Mr. Perry Fitch, Miss Nancy Wildeson, Miss Ella Griswold and Miss Mate Griswold.

After wishing Mr. and Mrs. Ashley many happy returns of their wedding anniversary, their friends took their departure.

Boarding and Lodging.

The Misses Baldock will take boarders by the day or week, at reasonable rates. Their place is conveniently located, being on the first block east of Odd Fellows' building. Patronize the young ladies and they will do their best to furnish good meals and good rooms. 22-4w

St. Joe.

—Mrs. J. D. Leighty visited in Churubusco last week.

—Chas. Emanuel, of Auburn, was in town one day last week.

—John Swisher and wife, and H. Applegate, of Antwerp, Ohio, were visitors in Kingtown last Thursday.

—Mrs. Henry Saylor came home from Iowa last Saturday.

—Mrs. E. Bell will return to Zanesville, Ohio, during this month.

—J. S. Coulter, of Hicksville, was in town Friday. He is one of St. Joe's grain buyers.

—Mrs. H. Hathaway returned last Saturday from Ohio.

—A number of the old settlers of Concord township attended the old settlers' meeting, at Auburn, Thursday of last week.

—Last Friday, Saturday and Sunday Charlie Meek visited with his parents at Lima, Ind.

—James H. Ables will take the enumeration of Concord township.

—Frank Gunsenhouser, of Newville, put down a brick floor, last week, in L. S. Saylor's meat-market.

—S. S. Barr, who has been agent at this place for the B. & O. railroad for eighteen months past, has taken a more lucrative position at Deshler, Ohio. Sam made many friends here who will part with him reluctantly. JIM.

Carr's Corners.

—No services at the school-house last Sunday evening on account of rainy weather.

—Quite a number of old-settlers of this place attened the old-settlers' meeting at Auburn last Thursday.

—The heavy rains of last week did considerable damage here. Several corn and oat-fields were under water.

—The growing wheat in this vicinity looks well, and there are prospects of a large crop. The harvest hands are nearly all engaged.

—The democrats of Jackson township met in caucus last Saturday and selected good men for delegates to the county convention, to be held at Auburn.

—We understand that the Dunkards will hold meetings in the school-house at Auburn Junction, Saturday evening and Sunday June 5 and 6.

—John Shugars hauled about four hundred bushels of grain from his granary to Mr. Carr's granary last week on account of the rains. C. O. D.

The northern supreme court district (fifth) of this state, is composed of the following counties, to wit: "DeKalb, Steuben, Noble, Lagrange, Wabash, Miami, Kosciusko, Elkhart, St. Joseph, Marshall, Fulton, Cass, Carroll, Pulaski, Starke, Laporte, Lake, Porter, Newton, Jasper and Benton. Judge E. V. Long, of Warsaw, is a prominent candidate for supreme judge in this district.

Over 1,500 Cases of Fits Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind. Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-tf.

$100 Reward

For any case of

CATARRH

That cannot be cured with

HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an INTERNAL REMEDY ACTING UPON THE BLOOD, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of HALL'S CATARRH CURE is NOT CURED OR BENEFITED more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

PRICE 75 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists.

This Spring!

We are making some extraordinary efforts to do about two-thirds of the

CLOTHING BUSINESS

of this city. Heretofore we have, probably, done one-half of it. With our increased facilities, and having bought largely before the advance, etc., our belief remains unchanged, and we shall act upon it, that the best time to sell cheap is when others sell dear; and that more fortunes have been made by selling at low than high prices. Call and see the most complete stock of

Men's Clothing,
Boy's Clothing,
Children's Clothing,
Hats and Caps,
Gents' Furnishing Goods

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.

C. O. D.

One-price clothiers and displayers of the best goods for the least money.

Opposite North Door Court House.

A MEDLEY OF MERIT.

A FINE

DRESS SUIT.

Black Cloth Frock Coat	$10.00
Black Doeskin Pants	5.00
Black Cloth Vest	2.50

PANTS.

Men's Fine Rock or Harris	$5.00
Men's All-Wool	3.00
Boys' Very Durable	2.00

BOYS' SUITS.

Excellent Quality	$10.00
Strong and Durable	5.00

SAM, PETE & MAX

Fort Wayne, Indiana.

EXAMINE OUR NOVELTIES FOR SPRING.

New Hat Man!

Hats.

and Caps.

New Hat Man!

C. H. YESBERA,
Auburn, Indiana.

WHY DO I SING?

BY MRS. LOU A. BEDFORD.

Why do I sing? 'Tis hard to tell
Why joyous notes my bosom swell;
Why strains of music, wild and free,
Gush forth in tuneful harmony,
When, underneath a thin disguise,
A sorrowing heart so often lies.

I sing—the siren voice of song
Bears my enchanted soul along
The stream of time to that blest shore
Where mortal cares are felt no more;
And heaven itself were not complete
Without the sound of music sweet.

Why do I smile? Why, mirrored here,
On brows so used to pain and care,
Are gentle smiles that softly chase
Each other o'er a care-worn face?
The heart pierced with grief the while—
And yet—with unshed tears I smile.

I smile, because to nature true;
Like gleams of sunshine breaking through
The rifted clouds, when storms are past;
Though soft white clouds still overcast
The azure sky, to cheer the scene
Bright rays of sunlight burst between.

Why do I weep? Alas! these tears
Cannot efface the stains of years;
'Tis grace alone can save, I know,
And yet, 'tis well to let them flow;
They soothe the griefs of life's dark hours,
As sunlight smiles through April showers.

And then 'tis written, "Jesus wept,"
Above the grave of one that slept,
While friends and loved ones gathered 'round
With softened tread the new-made mound;
That when thus pressed with grief and cares,
He found a sweet relief in tears.

JESSAMINE COTTAGE, Fla.

WHY I JOINED THE DETECTIVES.

"Can I sit with you?"
"Certainly, sir."
"Nice weather?"
"Splendid, indeed."
"Crops growing finely?"
"Yes—couldn't do better."

I was sitting in a car on a Wisconsin railroad, one day, years ago, when a good-looking, pleasant-spoken man came along, stopped at my seat, and the above conversation took place; the latter part of it after I had given him part of my seat.

Now, I am regarded as a social man. I like a joke; more so then than now. On entering a railroad car I always looked about for a talkative man, and then I got as close to him as possible and drained him dry, if the journey was long enough.

And I want to state one thing more. Left an orphan before I could realize the sad event which made me one, I got kicked here and cuffed there, and grew up between folks, as they say. I ought to have had, at the time of which I write, a pretty thorough knowledge of human nature, and have been able to read evil in a man's face if he intended me evil. I did not pride myself on being over sharp, but the knocking around among strangers ought to have given anyone a good experience.

Well, the stranger and I fell into an easy train of conversation as we rode together, and in ten minutes I began to enjoy his company. He was a well-made fellow, finely dressed, and wore a fine watch, and a simon-pure diamond ring. I never saw a man who could talk so easy and so pleasantly. It seemed that he had but to open his mouth and the words fell right out.

I had traveled in the South; so had he. I had heard the roar of the Pacific; he knew all about it. I had been up in a balloon, down in a mine, been blown up, smashed up and repaired again and again; my new friend had experienced all these things, and was wishing for something of a more startling nature. We agreed on politics, neither had any religion, and I had never met such a railroad companion.

Did you ever meet a man who, though a stranger to you ten minutes before, could wrest from you your secrets which you had sworn to yourself not to reveal? Well, he was such a man. It was not long before he commenced asking me questions. He did not seem to try to quiz or draw me out, but he asked me questions in such a sly, roundabout way that, before I knew it, I was giving him my history.

I was at that time just on the point of being admitted to the bar of Wisconsin as a student of Law & Law, of Briefville. The firm were old lawyers with a lucrative practice, and it had been talked over that in about a month I should be the "Co." of the firm. A year before, a farmer named Preston, down about four miles from Grafton, died, and his matters had been put into the hands of Law & Law for settlement. Preston had died rich. He had money in bank, railroad stock and mortgages, etc., and everything was settled up to the satisfaction of the relict and fatherless.

About a year before his death, being pinched for money, and not wishing to sell anything at a sacrifice, Preston had given a mortgage on his farm for $8,000. While the papers read "for one year from date," there was a verbal agreement that it should be lifted any day that Preston desired. A month after, when, having the funds to clear off the paper, the "old money bags" holding it refused to discharge, wishing to secure his interest for a year.

I was on my way to learn the date of expiration. A fire among my office papers had destroyed the memoranda, and I must go down and get the date from old Grip, who lived south of Grafton about five miles. The stranger pumped all this out of me in about ten minutes, and yet I never once suspected he was receiving any information.

"I am not positive," he added, "but I am pretty sure the time is the 13th, which would be Tuesday next."

"And then your folks will send down the money and discharge the mortgage, of course?" he queried.

"Oh, yes, I shall most likely bring it down," I replied, and it never occurred to me how imprudent I was.

He turned the conversation into other channels, and did not once attempt to pump me further. We got to Grafton at 10:30, and, to my great surprise, he announced that he was to stop in town on business for a few days. I had not asked his name or avocation, while he knew everything about me.

We went to the hotel, had dinner, and then I secured a lively team and drove out, getting through with business so that I was back to take the 3:20 express east. My friend was on the porch of the hotel as I drove up, carrying the same honest, dignified face.

"Well, did you find out?" he inquired, in his pleasant way.

"Yes, it was on the 13th, as I expected," I replied.

We had lunch together, and when we shook hands and parted I had no more idea of ever meeting him again than I had of knowing you. In fact, he told me that he should sail for England within a week or ten days, and should not return to America. At parting he gave me his card. It was a modest piece of pasteboard, and bore the name of "George Raleigh," in old English script.

Everything at the office went on as usual, and the 13th came at length. Law & Law had arranged with me to go down with the money, and I looked upon it as a business of no special importance.

"We know you are all right," remarked the senior partner, as I was about to go; "but I want to give you a word of warning, nevertheless. Don't take any strangers into your confidence until you have passed out the money, and look out who sits next to you."

It was something new for him to caution me, and I could not but wonder at it; but in the bustle of getting aboard the train I forgot what he had said. Ordinary prudence had induced me to place the money, which was all in bank bills and divided into three packages, under my shirt and next to my skin, where the deft hand of a pickpocket could not reach it.

Interested in a newspaper, time flew by as the train flew past, and at length the hoarse voice of the brakeman warned me that I had reached Grafton. I had leaped down and was making for the livery stable when I heard a familiar voice, and looked up to see Raleigh. He was seated in a buggy, and had seemingly waited for me to come in.

"Don't express your surprise," he began, as I stopped at the wheel. "I did intend to go away; I changed my mind, and like this section so well that I am going out to-day to look at a farm with a view of purchasing—come, ride up to the hotel."

We rode up, ordered lunch, and, while we were discussing it, Mr. Raleigh discovered that the farm he was going to see was just beyond that of old Grip's.

How fortunate! I could ride out with him, see the farm, return in his company, and he was greatly pleased.

I was also pleased. If any one had told me as we got into the buggy that George Raleigh meant to return with my money in his pocket and my blood upon his hands I should have believed him a lunatic; and yet George Raleigh had planned to do that very thing.

It was a lovely day in June, and the cool breeze and the sight of meadows and green groves made my heart grow larger. My companion was very talkative, but he didn't even hint at my errand. He talked as far away as he could.

"Oh! excuse me!" he exclaimed, after we had passed a mile beyond the village, and were among the farmhouses. "I should have offered you this before."

He drew from his pocket a small flask of wine and handed it to me. Now, I was temperate in regard to drinks. In fact, I detested the sight and smell of anything intoxicating. But I had not the moral courage to tell him so, and hand back the flask undisturbed. I feared to offend him, and so I drank, perhaps, three good swallows. He called my attention to the woods on the left as he received back the flask, and, when I looked around again, he was just removing it from his mouth, as if he had drunk heartily.

In about five minutes I began to feel queer. The fence along the road seemed to grow higher and the trees grow larger; something came to my ears that the rattle of a buggy sounded a long way off.

"How strange! Why, I believe I am going to be sick!" I exclaimed, holding on to the seat with all my might.

"You do look strange," he replied, with a snaky smile stealing over his face; "I shouldn't wonder if it was apoplexy."

I did not suspect the game he had played. His words were like an echo, and his face seemed twice as large as it was. My head began to spin and my brain began to snap and crack, and I was greatly frightened.

"You are badly off," he continued, looking into my face. "I will drive as fast as possible and get a doctor."

My tongue was so heavy that I could not reply. I clutched the seat, shut my eyes, and he put his horse at his best pace. We met a farmer's team, and I can remember that one of the occupants of the wagon called out to know what ailed that man. Raleigh did not reply, but urged his horse forward.

About three miles from Grafton was a long stretch of forest, and this was soon reached. The pain in my head was not so violent, and I was not so badly affected when opening my eyes. I had settled into a sort of dumb stupor, with a brain so benumbed that I had to say to myself: "This is a tree, that is a stump," etc., before I could make sure I was not wrong. Half a mile down the road after we struck the forest, and then Raleigh turned the horse into a blind road leading back into the woods. I could not understand what he intended. I tried to grapple with the question, but could not solve it.

"Well, here we are!" exclaimed Raleigh, when we had reached a point forty rods from the main road.

He stopped the horse, got out and hitched him, and then came round to the wheel.

"You don't feel just right, but I guess you will be better soon," he remarked. "Come, let me help you down."

He reached up his arms, and I let go the seat and fell into them. It seemed to me as if I weighed a ton, but he carried me along without an effort, and laid me down within about a rod of a fence which ran along on one side of an old pasture. Just now I began to get a little better. The effects of the drug were wearing off, and I got a fair suspicion that something unusual had happened. But I was powerless to move a limb; the sensation was like that when your foot goes to sleep.

"Can you speak?" inquired Raleigh, bending over me; "because if you can it will save me some trouble. I want to know just where you have stored away that money."

Now I began to realize my situation. His face looked natural again, and the load was off my tongue. I also felt that I could move my fingers a little.

"George Raleigh! are you going to rob me?" I asked, finding my voice at last.

"Well, some folks might call it 'robbing,' but we dress up the term a little by calling it the only correct financial way of equalizing the floating currency, so that each one is provided for and no one left out."

"You shan't have the money. I will die first!" I yelled, rising a little.

"Ah, I see—didn't take quite enough," he coolly remarked. "Well, I have provided for this."

He went to the buggy, procured ropes and a gag, and kneeled down beside me. I had but little strength yet, and he conquered me in a moment. Lying on my right side, looking toward the fence, he tied my hands behind me, and then forced the gag into my mouth.

"There, now. You see you are nicely fixed up, and all because you acted like a fool, instead of a sensible young lawyer, soon to be admitted to the bar."

While he was speaking, indeed while he was tying me, I had caught sight of the white face of a little girl looking at us from between the rails of the fence. I could see her great blue eyes, and knew that she was frightened. There were red stains around her mouth and on the little hand resting on the rail, and I knew that she was some farmer's child searching for strawberries. I could not warn her of her danger, and I feared that she would be seen or heard. While Raleigh was tying the last knot I winked at the little girl as hard as I could, hoping that she would move away. But she did not go.

"Well, now for the money," said Raleigh, and he began searching my pockets. He went from one to the other, removing all the articles; felt down my boot-leg, and then finally passed his hand over my bosom, and found the money.

"Ha! here it is!" he exclaimed, drawing out the package. I don't hardly believe that old Grip will see any of this to-day."

He sat down near my head, undid the package, and was cool enough to go at it to count the money. As he commenced the little girl waved her hand at me. My heart went thumping, for I expected that she would utter a word or shout; but she sank down from sight, and I caught a gleam of her frock as she passed through the grass.

"You see, my young friend," remarked Raleigh, as he drew off one of his boots and deposited some of the bills in it, "there's nothing like transacting business as it should be transacted. Some men would have shot or stabbed you, but it's only the apprentices who do such work. All the real gentlemen of our calling do business as gentlemen should."

He drew off the other boot, and placed some "fifties" and "twenties" in it, and then continued:

"I have it all planned out how to deal with you as soon as I get the money disposed of around my person. I shall lay you on your back and pour the balance of the wine down your throat. There's enough of it to make you sleep until to-morrow night, and by that time I shall be hundreds of miles away. As soon as I see the drug take effect, I shall untie your hands and remove the gag. When you come out of your sleep—if you ever do—you had better crawl out to the road, where you will most likely meet some traveler soon. I want to use the horse and buggy, otherwise I would leave them for you."

How coolly he talked. He treated the matter as if it were a regular transaction in which I fully acquiesced. He had me a fast prisoner, and I felt that he could do just as he pleased. While I was thinking, I saw the little white face appear between the rails again, but in a moment it faded away and its place was taken by the sun-burned phiz of a farmer. He looked from me to Raleigh and back again, and I winked at him in a way which he readily understood. His face disappeared, and I felt that I should be saved.

"No, old Grip won't get his tin today," mused Raleigh, storing away the bills in his pockets. "You will go back to Law & Law feeling put out and cut up, but they couldn't blame you; it is not your fault at all. True, had you minded your business on the car and not been so free with a stranger, this would not have happened. I was on my way to Milwaukee, and had no thought of such rich pickings here.

I saw nothing of the farmer, Raleigh finished his counting, and I made up my mind that the farmer was afraid to interfere, and had run away. My heart went down as Raleigh got up, for I saw that he was about to carry out his plan of further drugging me. He turned me on my back, sat down astride of me, and then pulled out the flask.

"Now, in just about a minute we'll be through with the business," he remarked, trying to put the mouth of the flask between my jaws.

I rolled my head to one side, and he did not succeed. He was jamming the flask against my teeth, when I caught the sound of a soft step, the crash of a club, and Raleigh rolled off my body. He tried to leap up, but three or four farmers struck him down, and one of the blows rendered him senseless. Before he came to I was free of ropes and gag, and we had him securely bound.

Over beyond the pasture a farmer and his hands were raking hay. "Little Blue Eyes," only 8 years old, had, fortunately, witnessed a part of Raleigh's proceedings. She had hurried back to her father and told him that "a man was all tied up out there." Understanding the situation, he and his men had moved around so as to secure an advantage, and Raleigh's capture was the result.

When the rascal found his senses he was terribly taken back, and cursed enough for a whole Flanders army. We took him back to Grafton, and when I saw him again he was on his way to the penitentiary to serve a sentence of fifteen years.

The mortgage was duly lifted, and the gift which Law & Law sent to Katy Grey kept her in dresses for many a year.

For myself, I felt so humiliated at having fallen into the rascal's trap, and so wrathy at the treatment, that I determined to devote myself to a thorough warfare on rogues. I therefore joined the detective force, and, after due study, took my place as a full-fledged detective.

WASHINGTON, Vt., has twelve men whose united ages are 1,056 years, viz.: S. P. Bailey, 100 years; Charles French, 95; Charles Wright, 93; Leonard Bradford, 89; Jabez Fisher, 88; Amasa Fairbanks, 88; Caleb Carr, 88; Harvey Spaulding, 84; Ziba Crane, 84; William Harden, 82; Joel Severence, 82, and Amos Russell, 83.

THE BEAUTIES OF EARTH.

Sermon Delivered by Prof. David Swing, in Central Church, Chicago.

Once a year, at least, should pulpit and press pay its most sincere respects to the external world. Statesmen, editors, men of science, politicians, clergymen, and, indeed, educated men of all arts, should, in some sentence or paragraph, tell all and each other what a marvelous earth is this one where we all dwell for a period only too brief. In our latitude this great pageant of nature comes later than to those living nearer the sun, but it comes after such a marked and long winter that the spectacle of spring and summer is made more impressive by the contrast. Spring and summer in our North are made by our rough winters as distinct as Bacon's embroidery, "which is more pleasing when there is lively color upon dark and solemn ground." Southern lands surpass our zone in the duration and quantity of leaves and blossoms, and warm sunshine, but we, perhaps, surpass these lands in the grand artistic effect, for our winter is a powerful background upon which these decorative months paint their tremendous landscape. What our hearts may want of time they make up by intensity of appreciation. Be these matters as they may, it must be admitted that all the way from the St. Lawrence to the Amazon nature is simply too large to be measured by any of us, and we shall all live and die without having done justice to the hills and valleys, the lakes and rivers, and fields and skies around our tents. We shall all resemble the disciples who fell asleep while Jesus was in their company. What folly in us to wish to be elsewhere when we have not yet studied one square mile of prairie, or paid to a solemn pine forest the worship of a day! It is not the wisdom of man, but his misfortune, that he always wishes to go elsewhere, when he has not listened well to his own bird song, nor made any attempt to gather his own wild flowers. Dwellers in cities are to be pitied from May to November, but they need not sigh for far-away lands, for just outside of all our noisy, dusty streets, ten miles away, this sweet kingdom of nature begins, and colors beautiful as those in Florida, winds as soft as those in Italy, are to be had by the seeker. God has so made our world that they who seek shall find, whether what they seek is forgiveness or salvation, or only a glimpse of grass or blossoms, or morning dew. Near to all there are doors to all who will knock. The Psalmist found the glory of God all around him, found it in such amazing quantity that he wondered, among such skies, and clouds, and lights, and shadows, and stars, that the Creator could remember man, and have mercy upon him. Measuring Deity by human standards, it seems to this old thinker that, in the demands of the universe upon the attention of God, man might easily be forgotten.

This natural world, now putting on its summer beauty, stands related to man in so many ways that, instead of its leading us to fear that God may forget man, it reminds us that it is an arena where the Creator especially remembers His children. Indeed, all the material creation seems only a part of the house of the soul—not of the soul of man only—but of that living, conscious something called soul. We are not empowered to state whether there be any mind besides the human mind that enjoys to-day our blossoming earth. We naturally consider as myths all these old stories about spirits that lived in the oaks, that rustled in the breeze, that dragged their invisible garments over the grass, myths which gave the ancients their Dianas and Pans, myths which fade away from literature in the "Midsummer Night's Dream," where Puck and Titania and Oberon figure so strangely. But that man is the only form of intelligence that is enjoying the immense world, with its rising and setting suns, with its infinite loveliness, we have no right to say. The fact that no being is visible, or tangible, or audible, except ourselves would not be a conclusive argument that we have the world in our keeping, for as God is invisible, so there may be somewhere between man and Deity intelligences not within the domain of human sense. Dismissing this inquiry because we are not competent to discuss it, we can safely mark the fact that our external world is made largely for man. It used to be objected to this theory that the earth and sea and sky are beautiful where man has never been, but this would only teach us that the universe was not made for man only. God Himself loves the beautiful. The conclusion will remain that the relations of the world to man are a part of its final cause. Man does not breathe all the air there is, nor drink all the water there is; he can only take his cupful from the rivers, and yet the air and the water are for man. So we cannot see all the hills and vales and oceans; there are great forests where no human footstep is to be seen or heard, and yet, in a great sense, the human family stands as a reason for this vast earthly house.

This dumb creation may well come to help us believe in the existence of a Supreme mind, and of a human mind as being distinct from material. To Coleridge, in the vale of Chamouni, all the details of the uplifted Mont Blanc spoke of a God. The crags, the cascades, the torrents, the sea of pines, the play of sunlight and moonlight, the eagles soaring around their nests in inaccessible rocks, the wild flowers in the edge of the snow, the wild goats "sporting 'round the eagles' nests," the vapory clouds of incense, all are woven together into an argument for the actuality of a God. Not only do such thoughts suggest a mind that invented and made such a scene, but also a divinely-made mind that can stand in the valley and look up "with dim eyes suffused with tears." Nature bears witness to the divineness of man—to the isolation and uniqueness of man. The countless blossoms of our homes and the fields and prairies cannot admire themselves nor each other. The glorious forests are not happy in their own shade and silence. The fields and woods, with all their rich decoration, wait for man. He comes, and sees, and admires, and loves, and thus the reason of the earth's existence is complete.

In a neighboring city, a few weeks ago, one could have seen among trees in a large area, almost great enough for a park, a half-hundred workmen building a structure of stone. It was Gothic, with many a point and turret. Its main hall ran from a wide front entrance back 150 feet. What rooms! what parlors! what library! what chambers! what porches! Suppose, now, the workmen had informed the curious visitor that upon being completed nobody was ever to live in the house; that it was simply to be built; that no family was ever to move through the halls, never to sing in the parlor; we think the visitor would have come away with a heart full of absolute pain at the recital. The grander the house the more painful this thought that it was for no mortal: that it was to stand, and, at last, decay without an occupant. But suppose, now, he should revisit that place next autumn, and find that he had been deceived, and that a large, happy family were enjoying and fully appreciating that large home, all pain would pass away in the feeling that the elegant house had found a full explanation. Such is our world with man in it. The flowers cannot admire themselves, they wait for man; the sea cannot hear its own waves, it waits for man; the rainbow cannot see itself, it waits for all us older ones to admire it, and for our children to say that who finds the end of it finds a pot of gold. Man in this house completes the meaning of the house, and gives it such significance, such high and deep reason, that from this amazing adaptation we pass to the belief in an intelligent Maker. It seems impossible to detach our earth from a creative mind—as impossible as to detach it from an appreciative mind called man. Man gives us a reason of earth, and God a reason of man and earth combined.

In addition to the proof the material world brings us of a creator, it has a wonderful part to play in the daily life of man. Nature helps man in his language, in his literature, in his pleasure, in his morals, in his religion.

From what impresses the senses in the external world comes much of language. Nature was the school-house where man learned words. From the sensual came the spiritual. We speak of the flow of eloquence and a torrent of passion because our ancestors were impressed with the flow of the river and the power of torrents. Man walked in the night or the fog, and thus learned to think of the night of ignorance or the fog of argument; man had seen the leaf fade, and this led him to say that we all do fade as a leaf. So that language was in the outset only a transfer of the material world over into the soul, and a finding of similar phenomena within. Thus nature is the school-mistress to which primitive man went for his instruction, and, after those far-off children had gone in and out a long time, they had a strange currency of sound, which we call Ayran, or Hebrew, or Greek—the circulating gold of mighty nations now dead. It took mankind thousands of years to gather up as simple a language as the Hebrew; more thousands still to make such a collection of symbols as we now have under the modern name of French, or German, or English. So intimate is the relation between words and the external world that it is, perhaps, true that no one but a lover of nature can ever reach a rich and powerful language. He is out in the field of relative suggestion when he is out with nature. The tongue becomes paralyzed soon unless the heart and brain enjoy this great out-door air. Fully in sympathy with field, and sea, and sky, they seem to reward the friendship by helping their admirers to speak. It is true the words are all in the lexicon, but they are not all in our mind and heart. Reading will give us many, but a love of nature will pour into the mind thousands of terms which came from the world of sense, and which are full of the aroma of the fields or hills.

The transition is easy from the relation of the external world to public morals to its relation to religion. All are aware that the argument in favor of a God may be denied, but the argument in favor of no God may meet as it seems a bolder rejection. The atheists may toil at their part of their debate. Let us prefer to toil at those oars which row our boat toward immortality. We may see in the spring and summer the revelation of a Deity. There is the King in his beauty. From the little daisy up to the oak the distance is great. Only a great mind can pass over it creatively. Upon a hill-summit in Wisconsin, where a beautiful Gothic church overlooks many lakes, and where the branches of trees touched the stained glass of the windows, the worshipers on a Sunday morning in June read only a short service that they might move from the aisles and altar outside, to be more perfectly in the presence of God. When you see the wood of the oak or the pine you can say that the Creator wished that tree to stand by its own strength, but when you see the vine reach out tendrils you must admit that it must take hold of something stronger than itself. This tendril is straight and pliant until it touches something. It then curls and hardens into iron. This would answer for vines that climb trees or attach to fences, but how are ugly walls to be covered with foliage? A tendril cannot grasp the surface of brick or stone. Behold! along comes the ivy, which spreads out little hands upon a perpendicular wall, and thus will clamber all over castle, or cathedral, or cottage. Thus pause where you may and meditate by any tree however gigantic, or by any flower however humble, and they combine to say that they were made by a Wisdom quite separate from themselves. Thus the external world, after helping us fashion a language, after coming to inspire a literature and awaken genius, after ministering to human pleasure or happiness, after inviting us to pursuits that aid morals and repeat the benediction "Blessed the pure in heart," comes with one more excellence in that it utters one more impressive argument in favor of the being of a God who is mindful of man, and who, notwithstanding the immensity of the universe, visits the sons of man in their sojourn on this smallest of stars.

A WRITER in the Boston Transcript thus relates a tale of woe: "The young lady came and tried to sell me a manuscript story. 'My teacher likes it,' she said, when I repeated our usual formula of no space, no money, no time and no anything to her. 'Teacher an editor?' I inquired finally. 'No, indeed,' was the answer; 'she's a person of refinement and education.'"

STEPHEN AND RACHAEL.

From Dickens' "Hard Times."

BY LYDIA F. [illegible]

O hearts that live so near, and yet
So far apart. That thrill in vain,
And throb, and bend, and sigh, and feel
With love's delicious, hopeless pain
O lips that simple words express,
And yet with tenderness o'erflow
That never meet in love's caress,
But, smiling, sigh that it is so.

Fond eyes that meet each [illegible]
But dare not glance where love-light hides
Beyond the mask, lest each should [illegible]
In pain the path where duty bides;
And hands that toil, and only clasp
In sympathy and tenderness;
Whose toil seems sweeter for the grasp
Of that dear calm and silent press.

O weary ones, who, 'mid life's throngs,
Must walk alone, and restless [illegible]
The lonely path, while each one longs
For echoes of the other's feet;
Afar, anear, beyond regret;
With hopeless, painless hearts of woe;
In smiles and grieving tears, and yet
Content that God knows why 'tis so.

DANVILLE, Wis.

PITH AND POINT.

A DANGEROUS MAN—One who takes life cheerfully.

AMONG the recognized small vices are Vice Presidents.

NOTHING is wholly bad. Even a dark lantern has its bright side.

"SMILES may end in tears," says a solemn-looking person. Of course, and tears may end in smiles.

NEVER jump at a conclusion. It's as bad as jumping out of bed and landing on the little end of a tack.

THE hired girl who was called up at 4 o'clock in the morning, thinks arose two hours later would sound quite as sweet.

ANOTHER composer has produced a "waltz (for one finger)," which, to say the least, must be a very sick sort of waltzing.

A MICHIGAN Congressman told a friend that he was filled with amazement; and his friend went down to the bar and called for amazement.

THE exasperated owner of a corner store in Augusta, Me., has put up a sign reading: "Wanted, the ten laziest men in town—to loaf on this corner."

WHEN his cousin, Charlotte Dunne, was married, Jones said, "It was Dunne before it was begun, Dunne while it was being done, and not Dunne when it was done."

A NEW JERSEY colored man, whose wife had left him, said: "She would come back, if I frowed her some sugar; but I ain't frowin' no sugar, do you heah?"

A LADY tells something that ought to have remained a secret with her sex. It is that a woman, in choosing her lover, considers a good deal more how the man will be regarded by other women than whether she loves him herself.

WHEN old Mr. Higginsworth was asked if he took a newspaper he replied that "since our member of Congress stopped sending me the Congressional Record I don't take any; but I guess I kin git along without it. It never gives much news, anyhow."

THE members of a young ladies' debating society in Troy have decided in favor of long courtship. Level-headed girls. Observation has taught them that there is wonderful falling-off of confections, balls, carriage-rides and opera when courtship ends and the stern realities of married life begin.

TENDER wife—"Say, look here! I've got to have a new velvet skirt right off. Got to have it. This old thing is all worn out—actually threadbare down the front." Brute of husband—"Just the thing, my dear. All the rage. Fashion item says velvet skirts will be very much worn this season. Sandpaper the back of your dress, and you're setting the style."

"OH, I can't shoot, can't I?" he said, when twitted about his archery. "Give me that bow," he added, snatching it out of Julia's hand. "Now," he added, striking an attitude, "show me something you want popped, what is it?" "Yes," said Julia's friend, "that's the question." "You hateful thing," said Julia, with an Italian-sunset face, "it ain't neither. I'll never speak to you again." But doubtless the innocent blunder of Julia's friend will have its effect.

"WELL, Father Brown, how did you like my sermon yesterday?" asked a young preacher. "Ye see, parson," was the reply, "I haven't a fair chance at them sermons of yours. I'm an old man now, and have to set pretty well back by the stove; and there's old Miss Smithe, Widder Taff, 'n Mrs. Rylan's darters, 'n Nabby Birt, 'n all the rest, setting in front of me with their mouths wide open, a swallerin' down all the best of the sermon; 'n what gets down to me is putty poor stuff, parson, putty poor stuff."

EMMIE was sent to the grocer's for a pound of mild cheese. In a few minutes she returned, crying as if her heart would break. "What is the matter, my dear?" asked her mother, somewhat alarmed. "I don't care—they are real mean," she answered. "Who?" "Why, all of them; they all laughed at me—the clerks and everybody." "Laughed at you, my child; why, what did you ask for?" "I asked for a pound of calm cheese," she said, between her sobs. The fact was that Emmie had learned that day at school that "mild" meant "calm," and the first chance she got she used the new word.

A Miserly Senator.

To illustrate the penuriousness of McCreery, once one of Kentucky's Senators, a Washington correspondent relates that one bitter cold day in midwinter a messenger was sent to his apartments on business, and found the Senator with his great coat on, and his hands thrust down into his pockets, trying to worry along without incurring the extra expense of fire. Thoroughly chilled by the long, tedious ride (some three miles from the Capitol), the boy sat shivering while waiting for an answer, observing which the dear soul compassionately said: "You look cold, my lad; here, let me give you something to warm you," and, crossing the room, he reached to the top of the wardrobe, took down a glass jar, from which he handed the messenger—a glass of Kentucky "moonshine?" Bless you, no, but a cucumber pickle, well seasoned with cayenne pepper.

DAVID DAVIS.

Letter from the Senator from Illinois on the Political Questions of the Day.

QUINCY, Ill., May 6, 1880.

MY DEAR JUDGE: The approaching close of the present session of Congress will, it is to be feared, leave questions unsettled which are of large public interest, and which materially affect the peace and the prosperity of the Union.

Many of your friends in this State and throughout the West had hoped, and indeed had expected, that an opportunity would have been afforded in the Senate by which your views on these matters could have been made known to the country.

It unfortunately happens, amidst the distractions of party and the strifes of rival ambitions, that the voice of statesmanship is hushed too often, when wise counsel is most needed. This was never more true than at the present time. The country is just emerging from a long period of trial and suffering. The people seek rest from angry discords, and desire to avoid a repetition of the perils through which they have passed. They crave good government, stability, and perfect reconciliation between the sections. The statesman who can achieve these objects will be blessed as a public benefactor.

I have ventured to embody in the form of inquiries appended to this letter some of the subjects upon which your opinions are desired, if it be agreeable to you to comply with the request of a large body of voters and friends, without distinction of party. Truly, your friend, O. H. BROWNING.

HON. DAVID DAVIS, United States Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 14, 1880.

MY DEAR SIR: I have had the pleasure to receive your letter of the 6th inst. As a constituent, a friend, and an honored citizen of Illinois, you have a perfect right to ask for my views on public questions, and I have no hesitation in expressing them, taking the inquiries in the order presented.

PEACE IN THE UNION.

Permanent prosperity and fraternal fellowship are only to be attained by silencing sectional strife. A faithful adherence to the constitution and all the amendments; strict observance of the laws in conformity therewith, and equal rights and equal protection for every citizen in every part of the republic, will soon end the discords that have too long vexed the country and injured its material welfare. The people are weary of agitation and want peace.

CENTRALIZATION.

The constitution wisely defines the respective limits of the Federal and State Governments, under a happy and harmonious system, wherein each is independent in its appropriate sphere and both operate concurrently to protect the integrity and the stability of the Union. Any encroachment of one on the distinctive domain of the other necessarily dislocates the machinery of the constitution, and involves danger to the whole body politic. In fact, every departure from the great charter of liberty and law is attended with peril.

The demand made by adherents of one of the great parties for a strong Government means, substantially, a centralized Government, destructive of home rule in the States, and the very reverse of what Mr. Lincoln well described as a government of the people, by the people, and for the people. Carried to its logical conclusion, such a change would finally overthrow the republic.

THE THIRD TERM.

An innovation upon the sanctified traditions of the Presidency, first established by the example of Washington, is urgently demanded by a powerful interest in the Republican party. If the limitation of two terms, heretofore universally accepted, be destroyed, the way to a self-perpetuating Presidency will be opened, by the use and the abuse of the enormous public patronage. Break down this barrier, and an end of the experiment of republican government looms up darkly as the cost of a fatal concession.

GREAT CORPORATIONS.

The rapid growth of corporate power and the malign influence which it exerts by combinations on the national and State Legislatures is a well-grounded cause of alarm. A struggle is impending in the near future between this overgrown power, with its vast ramifications all over the Union, and a hard grip on much of the political machinery on the one hand, and the people in an unorganized condition on the other, for control of the Government. It will be watched by every patriot with intense anxiety.

CIVIL SERVICE.

Neither laws nor commissions created under them will effectually reform the many and glaring abuses of the civil service. The former have been constantly evaded, and the latter are powerless for good. An honest Executive, bent on real and not simulated reform, has abundant authority to make it effective everywhere, if he has the capacity to see his duty and the courage to perform it.

SUBSIDIES.

Experience has demonstrated that subsidies in any form are sources of corruption and ought to be forbidden. Private enterprises that depend for success upon legislation procured by venal agencies do not deserve public favor.

PUBLIC LANDS.

More than 150,000,000 of acres of valuable land, more than $100,000,000, principal and interest, have been voted by Congress to railroad corporations. The remaining lands should be sacredly reserved for cultivators of the soil, so that the laboring man should have a chance to improve his condition, and to open up a future for his children away from the seductions of the great cities.

REVISION OF THE TARIFF.

Tariff practically means taxation, and all taxation not equitably adjusted is odious. While the interest on an oppressive public debt; the pensions earned with the blood of soldiers and sailors who fought for the Union, and the regular expenses of carrying on the Government, are to be met, duties on imports must continue to furnish one of the sources of revenue. So long as those duties are levied manufacturers will be benefited, according to the degree or the mode in which the duties may be distributed.

The existing tariff is regarded as a confused mass of incongruities and monopolies, created by special legislation, and open to constant frauds on the revenue. It taxes the consumer heavily, on those articles especially that are most needed by the toiling masses. It taxes every newspaper, every school-book, every Bible, and the salt of the workingman, with gross injustice, because the poor pretense of revenue does not exist to cover the wrong. A revision, therefore, which shall be at once searching and fair, is demanded, and should be promptly and efficiently made.

THE PUBLIC DEBT.

The debt of the United States, in round numbers, is two thousand millions, deducting the hoarded coin in the treasury. The interest upon it last year was over one hundred millions. These are appalling figures.

The rapid extinction of this debt is to be desired. First, because it would diminish present burdens, and for the additional reason that one of the effects of a permanent national debt is to create a preferred class, to live on incomes, and free from taxes, under our laws. Having the protection of the Government at home and abroad, they would contribute nothing to its support.

ECONOMY.

It is practicable by co-operation between the Executive and Congress to reduce the public expenditures many millions annually, without impairing the efficiency of the public service. Retrenchment is needed for the reduction of taxes, but it is also needed because, properly administered, it would become a potent factor in reforming the civil service.

ELECTIONS.

The ballot-box should be the safeguard of the republic, for it is intended to express the free will of a free people. Therefore, elections ought to be exempt from the presence of any menacing force, and to be free from the contamination of corrupt Returning Boards. No party deserves confidence that seeks ascendency by striking down honest suffrage, either by the use of troops, by fraud, or by intimidation.

It would not be proper for me to express any opinion upon the measures pending, or proposed, in Congress. My votes will speak for themselves at the fitting time.

Having thus freely answered your inquiries, I may add, in conclusion, that my support will be cheerfully given to any candidate for President who, in good faith, will strive to carry out this general line of policy, which, in my judgment, is of far more importance than the ambition of any man, or even than the success of any party. As ever, your friend, DAVID DAVIS.

HON. O. H. BROWNING, Quincy, Ill.

NO PLACE ON THE TICKET FOR THEM.

Senator Bruce, Frederick Douglass, Milton Turner and other prominent colored men of the Republican party, says the New York Sun, have been holding counsel at the capital with a view to obtaining recognition at Chicago on the Republican ticket. This ambition is not unworthy, but the managers of the machine are not likely to give it much countenance. They cultivate the colored vote very earnestly, and profess abundant sympathy for the race, but when the practical test is made this sympathy exhausts itself in sentimental phrases.

There are distinguished colored men in different parts of the North, yet none of them have been sent to Congress, and very few have gained seats in the State Legislatures. Senator Bruce will soon close his career in Congress, without any prospect of re-entering public life from Kansas, which is destined to be his future home. The prejudice against color will follow him on to the free soil, where the great battle for his race was fought more than twenty years ago.

When the commission which was sent to San Domingo to whitewash that nefarious job returned to Washington, Grant invited all the members of it to dine at the White House, with the conspicuous exception of Frederick Douglass. He had messed with his white colleagues on terms of perfect equality during the trip, and had joined with them in signing a report that stands to-day as a stigma and a reproach to every name that it bears. But Grant would not admit him to a seat at his table.

It is well known that the Republican majority of the Senate was theoretically disposed to admit Pinchback to a seat in that body. But they kept him dancing attendance for three years, and then dismissed him, with a consoling allowance of full pay for a place to which they denied his title in the end. Pinchback is a colored patriot who does not prefer a back seat when he can get a front one. Modesty is not his most shining virtue. He was virtually rejected by a vote of the ladies of the White House, the Cabinet and the Senate. They knew if "Pinch" was once admitted he would assert every political right and social privilege of a Senator, and claim as much for his family. Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Fish, and the other grand dames of that shoddy epoch, determined that it would never do to have Mrs. Pinchback figuring at their feasts. They passed an order in council of the boudoir that the husband of Mrs. Pinchback should be sent back to Louisiana.

For political effect Frederick Douglass was made United States Marshal at Washington, but he exercised none of the social functions which belong to that office. Colored men have been sent to Liberia and Hayti, and some of them are messengers and clerks in the departments. But there the recognition stops. Senator Bruce and his associates, who are now organizing for a demonstration at Chicago, will only have their labor for their pains. Conkling, Cameron and Company have no other use for them than as hewers of wood and drawers of water in the party.

A Strong Indictment.

John M. Shirley was the President of the Democratic Convention of New Hampshire, and made a short speech, in which he arraigned the Republican party for its misdeeds, so they will not want to hear more from him if this be his indictment. He said, speaking of that party:

It has overruled the precepts of the great Nazarene and taught the religion of hate. It has created armies of office-holders larger than those with which Napoleon silenced the continent, and has gorged these Hessians with the plunder wrung from an overtaxed people. It has trampled the covenant of the fathers under foot whenever it would serve a party end, and packed that great tribunal, the Supreme Court of the United States, to set aside a decision promulgated by the ablest and purest of its own leaders, Chief Justice Chase. It has driven beyond its pale or sent into exile Seward, Chase, Greeley, Bates, Browning, Blair, and a host more who stood by its cradle. Even Sumner died under its ban, and death spared others a worse fate. Whoever hesitated in the work of demolition was lost. The evil genius of the party slew him; the creature devoured the creator. Four years ago it doomed the edifice of its hate, corruption, and fraud, installing in the White House, over the ashes of the father of his country, the "fraud" who had been beaten by more than a quarter of a million of votes, and now it proposes to consummate its work with the third term, which is but another name for the empire, with the "man on horseback" at its head.

Just the Difference.

As long as the Republicans had control of both houses of Congress they practiced this joint rule in the counting of the electoral vote:

Resolved, That no vote in any electors' certificate of a State shall be counted, if either the Senate or the House shall object thereto.

The Democrats, now in control of both houses, have agreed on this rule:

Resolved, That no vote in any electoral certificate shall be rejected, unless both the Senate and the House shall object thereto.

The Republican papers which are burning once-used powder against this rule never turn the lights on the rule of their own party. The greater fairness of the Democratic rule is obvious; but it pledges the Republican papers to call it "a conspiracy to steal the Presidency." Gentlemen, there never was but one Presidency stolen in this country. The Democratic party did not steal that. —Albany Argus.

Peers, Not Vassals.

It is not at all certain that the Republicans can elect anybody to the Presidency this year.

It is mathematically certain that they cannot elect Grant.

The Republicans, therefore, have their choice between a chance of success and the certainty of defeat.

In the old feudal days it was thought a fine and praiseworthy thing for the vassal to throw away his life in his lord's quarrel.

But our Republican readers are not vassals. They are peers; the peers of Grant, the peers of Conkling, the peers of Cameron, the peers of John Logan.

If they throw away their votes upon an impossible candidate, they will do it of their own free choice and with their open eyes.—New York Sun.

A SOUTHERN DELEGATE TO CHICAGO.

Said Phoebe Hensperrow, of North Carolina,
To her spouse, when the sun was quite high:
"Git up, you big loafer, and stretch me a line,
And hang out these clothes for to dry."

"Oh, 'taint worth the while," her Tobias replied;
"My sperrit despises such work.
I'll soon be as happy as a clam at high tide;
I'll soon be content as a Turk.

"No more of this washing, you Phoebe, for you;
No drudgery after a while;
For you shall have nothink whatever to do,
But dressin' and puttin' on style.

"I'll build you a house in the heart of the town,
And paint it in colors brick bright,
And you from the window shall brashly look down
Alike on the black and the white.

"I reckon I'll buy Col. Jimmerson's place—
'Twill suit me, I know, to a charm—
And git me blood horses to ride and to race,
While the niggers look out for the farm.

"It's goin' to take cash, and a heap on it, too,
To hold the Republican fort.
I wish that I knew—say, Phoebe, do you?—
How diamonds sells by the quart?"

"Law sake!" exclaimed Phoebe; "the man is a loon;
His head's in a terrible state."
Tobias replied: "The convention's in June,
And you bet I'm a full delegate!"

The Negro at West Point and Other Points.

We would suggest to the Republican organs now complaining because negro cadets are not taken into the bosoms of the young white children of Mars, that it will be an exceedingly difficult thing for them to find any locality in the North where negroes are received into white society on terms of equality. The colleges of New England are rarely honored by the presence of negro student. How many negro students are found at Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Bowdoin and other institutions whose authorities never cease professing to believe in negro equality, social and political? How many negroes are seen in Northern hotels, Northern temperance and secret organizations, in Northern churches on Sunday? Our Republican contemporaries know perfectly well that what they insist shall be the rule at West Point is the rule nowhere else. In no region on the globe is the negro so fully made to understand and think he is not a social equal as in the Northern States.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

INDIANA NEWS.

NEW ALBANY has two sets of city officials, and a lawsuit on hand.

JUDGE BIDDELL, of the Supreme Court, succeeds to the duties of Chief Justice by rotation.

THE Tenth regiment Indiana volunteers will hold their next annual reunion Sept. 16 and 17 next, at Frankfort.

THE Indianapolis telephone exchange now has 600 subscribers, with more than 1,200 telephones in use in the city.

THERE will be a rendezvous and review of Indiana and Illinois artillery companies at Terre Haute next week.

THE old Victas house, an ancient landmark of New Harmony, one of the old Community buildings was burned last week.

THE first annual meeting of the Music Teachers' State Association of Indiana will be held at Franklin, June 22, 23, and 24.

A LOGANSPORT merchant escaped payment of a note for $318 by proof that it was given in satisfaction of losses at the poker table.

THE crooked lightning-rod man has been getting in his work in Daviess county, fleecing several farmers out of various sums.

SIMON ALLEN has brought suit against Dr. C. M. Linley, in Morgan county, for alleged malpractice in resetting a fractured radius, and asks for $5,000 damages.

THE Grand Lodge of the Catholic Total Abstinence Societies meets at Lafayette June 8. Delegates from all the lodges in the State will be in atttendance.

A CASE of shocking inhumanity on the part of a daughter, named Marietta Fay, toward her mother, has just come to light at Fort Wayne. The girl is only 19 years old.

FEDERAL officers are beginning to remark that the Government building at Indianapolis is too small, and that large additions must soon be made or a new structure erected.

THE family of Capt. John Box, residing ten miles north of New Albany, are strangely affected with some disorder, and there is a question whether the cause is poison or milk sickness.

JAMES V. KELSO, an attorney of New Albany, will contest the legality of the constitutional amendments recently adopted and declared law. The case will probably go to the Supreme Court immediately.

THE Vincennes University having established in court the validity of a lottery franchise granted by the Territorial Legislature of Indiana, parties who know how to use such a thing have bought it for a consideration not stated.

TWO CHILDREN who were separated from their mother six years ago at Evansville have been found in a Catholic school at Terre Haute. The father died before the separation, while the mother was sick and afterward declared insane, but subsequently recovered.

LAST week Elisha Reed came out of the county asylum, at Indianapolis, to receive $3,838.14 of back-pension money. He now owns a saloon, which he purchased, presumably, to afford him an easy means of obtaining a livelihood.

GEN. BEN HARRISON, of Indianapolis, has joined the Mississippi River Commission on a trip on the river to examine into the proposed reservoir system of maintaining navigation. He will continue in that service until the Chicago Convention, to which he is the top delegate from Indiana.

THE estimate for the wool clip in Clark, Floyd, Crawford, Orange, Martin, Harrison, Lawrence, Dubois, Perry, Spencer, Warwick, Washington, and Scott counties for 1880 is 750,000 pounds. Prices rule at 30 to 33 cents for unwashed, and 50 to 75 cents for washed.

A WOMAN at Indianapolis fell down stairs while in a delicate condition, causing the premature birth of a child, which, strange to say, was marked on the side similar to the mark received by the mother from the fall. The child is still living.

THE corner stone of the Capitol at Indianapolis will be laid, it is thought, late in August, at the time the Knights Templar Masons are returning from the conclave at Chicago. This will enable a large number of Knights, not only from Indiana, but from Illinois, Ohio, Kentucky, and States farther South to take part in the ceremonies.

MRS. NATHAN COGGESHELL, of Marion, is likely to die from a rat-bite inflicted about four months ago. She attacked the rat with a broom, and it bit her through the fleshy part of the right hand. The wound healed over in a few days, after which it festered and became very painful. She has been growing worse ever since.

A HORSE died in Indianapolis, the other day, from the effects of a bite by a copper-head snake, inflicted within the city limits. The animal was grazing on the commons near the house, when it suddenly gave a neigh of distress and threw its nose violently in the air. The wife of the owner ran out to see what was the matter, and discovered the snake lying in the grass and killed it. A slight puncture was visible on the nose of the horse. In a short time its body began to swell, and continued to do so until death came to its relief.

A MRS. SMITH, living at Angola, went to a ball the other night, leaving her three children—a daughter of 14, a boy of 8, and a daughter of 5—at her house. At a late hour David Fry, a cigarmaker, who spent much of his time at Mrs. Smith's, went to her house in a drunken condition. Shortly afterward the house caught fire, and before help arrived it was laid in ashes. Fry and Mrs. Smith's three children were burned to death. Their charred bodies were found in the ashes, and presented a shocking spectacle. A broken lamp was found close to Fry's body, and it is supposed he accidentally upset the lamp, thus causing the fire. Mrs. Smith is reduced to the verge of lunacy by the event.

The Power of Beauty.

A most distressing affair, says a Washington letter, recently occurred in the suicide of Capt. Edward Wright, son of Judge "Jack" Wright, who was recently convicted and fined for his assault on Secretary Delano, and then graciously pardoned by the President. Capt. Wright was one of the finest officers in the ordnance corps, and his improvements and experiments in his line have gained him great credit. Two years ago he met at the Arkansas Hot Springs the beautiful Bessie Paschal, daughter of a noted Texas lawyer, and divorced wife of Frank Gassaway. A more fascinating and lovely woman is seldom seen than she, and, after a two-weeks' acquaintance, they were married. Three months ago they separated, and since then Capt. Wright had been depressed and gloomy. After a painful interview with her last week they parted finally, she winging her way to Philadelphia and fresh fortunes, and he ending his unhappy life by a pistol shot from his own hand. The career of his wife has been something remarkable. Seldom outside of novels and old memoirs do we know of a woman exerting such power over men by the mere spell of beauty. Graybeards and callow youths have worshiped her, and grave professional men gone wild. As a young lady she was a belle, and as a lovely widow she exerted a more potent power. Don Cameron at one time was announced as about to marry her, and the list of his comrades is a long one. A graceful and perfect figure, great, sad, pathetic eyes, fine features, and a most lovely smile, first impress one on seeing her, but the indescribable charm, the strange fascination of her ways, the witchery and magic of her, are too evanescent and intangible for prose. Her beauty, her life and her fortunes would need the worldly, gushing pen of Ouida to portray some sides of it; for others the profound analysis of George Eliot could hardly suffice. As a figure in the social world she is destined to reappear, and those who have watched the amazing incidents of her life since she first entered Washington, a precocious young witch of 16, will not be surprised at any sequel.

Sponge Underclothing.

A Berlin inventor has patented a new kind of cloth, which consists principally or entirely of sponge. The sponges are first thoroughly beaten with a heavy hammer, in order to crush all the mineral and vegetable impurities so that they can be easily washed out. They are then dried and pared like a potato, with a sharp knife, the parings being sewed together. The fabric thus obtained is free from all the danger which sometimes arises from the absorption of poisonous dyes into the system; it absorbs without checking the perspiration, so as to diminish the danger of taking cold; it is a bad conductor, and, therefore, helps to maintain a uniform surface temperature; it can be more readily cleaned than the ordinary woolen garments, and its flexibility diminishes the liability of chafing.

Ancient Petroleum.

Prof. Skeat has called attention to a passage in North's translation of "Plutarch's Lives" (1631, p. 792), from which it appears that petroleum was known in the time of Alexander the Great. The passage runs as follows: "For a Macedonian called Proxenus, that had charge of the King's carriage (baggage), as he digged in a certaine place by the riuer of Oxus, to set vp the King's tent and his lodging, he found a certain fat and oily veine, which, after they had drawn out the first, there came out also another clearer, which differed nothing, neither in smell, tast, or savour, from natural oile, having the glosse and fatness so like as there could be discerned no difference between them; the which was so much the more to be wondered at, because in all that country there were no oliues."

OLEOMARGARINE.

What It Is and What It Is Not.

[From the American Agriculturist.]

When oleomargarine was first manufactured we described the process, but that was some years ago. Recent inquiries make it necessary to say something more about it. Prepared beef suet, the membranes, etc., is churned with milk to give it the flavor of butter. It has not the mechanical texture of or the chemical composition of, and is in no respect, butter. So far as it is sold as butter it is a miserable fraud. The makers claim that it is as good as any butter and much better than a large share of the butter sold. That is a point with which we have nothing to do. It is not butter, as that is the product of the cow, obtained through the medium of the milk, and contains several constituents that the fat of the cow does not, and which cannot be added. Several of the States have passed laws directing that all the packages of oleomargarine shall be distinctly marked with the word in letters of a given size. This is well, so far as it goes, but does not prevent the retailer from serving it as butter. As oleomargarine can be made at much less cost than butter can be produced, the sale of it as butter is injurious to the dairy interest, and every dairyman an every farmer is interested in preventing its sale as butter, and to this end a petition is being circulated for signatures asking Congress by a general law to place restrictions upon its manufacture and sale. But the capitalists who have money invested in the manufacture of oleomargarine are not idle. They have invited the Committee of Agriculture of Congress to visit their factory; they have also invited a number of prominent chemists to do the same; their guests have been steamboated and dined and we suppose wined, after the approved fashion. We do not know what the effect will be upon the Congressmen, but we are very sure that the chemists will say, as they might have said before: "Gentlemen, your stuff is not injurious, it is as healthy as beef-fat need be, we see no objections, if people wish beef-fat with their bread, why they should not buy yours, but it is not butter and no amount of steamboat or banquet can make us say that it is." We see no reason why colored and salted beef-fat, or colored and salted hog's lard, or purified and salted palm oil should not be eaten if one's taste runs that way, but they should not be sold as butter, or given out to one who asks for butter, and the penalty to one who does it should be most severe. We notice of late a disposition to change the name of the stuff to butterine—no, gentlemen! you chose your own name at the beginning. Oleomargarine is quite a pretty name, and as distinct from butter as the stuff itself, and we do not wish a name that may lead to the confounding the two very distinct articles. Butter can stand on its own merits, with its own name; let your stuff do the same, and may there be laws enough to make you do it.

Paid Him His Own Measure.

Righteous punishment comes sooner or later to pesterers and practical jokers. They should expect it any time. Says a contemporary:

Years ago, in Penobscot, Me., there lived a man by the name of H——, whose greatest pleasure was in tormenting others. His own family were generally the butts of his sport. One cold and blustering night, he retired to bed at an early hour, his wife being absent at a neighbor's. Some time after, she, on returning, finding the door closed, demanded admittance.

"Who are you?" cried Mr. H——.

"You know who I am! Let me in—it's very cold."

"Begone, you strolling vagabond! I want nothing of you here!"

"But I must come in!"

"What is your name?"

"You know my name—it is Mrs. H——!"

"Begone! Mrs. H—— is a very likely woman. She never keeps such late hours as this!"

"If you don't let me in," replied Mrs. H——, "I will drown myself in the well!"

"Do, if you please," he replied.

She then took a log and plunged it into the well, and returned to the side of the door. Mr. H——, hearing the noise rushed from the house to save, as he supposed, his drowning wife. She, at the same time, slipped in and closed the door after her. Mr. H——, almost nude, in turn demanded admittance.

"Who are you?" she demanded.

"You know who I am. Let me in, or I shall freeze!"

"Begone, you great rogue! I want nothing of you here!"

"But I must come in!"

"What is your name?"

"You know my name. It is Mr. H——."

"Mr. H—— is a very likely man—he don't keep such late hours."

Suffice it to say, she, after keeping him in the cold until she was satisfied, opened the door and let him in.

A FAITHFUL man is Dennis Colgan, a bridge-tender at Bridgeport, Ct., for the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company. He has held the place for thirty years, has never lost a day, and has watched the bridge at all times, never sleeping more than an hour and a half at a time.

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY
Established 1847 at 12 N. 8th Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.
THE Physicians in charge of this old and well known Institution are regular graduates in medicine and surgery. Years of Experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases have made their skill and ability so much superior to that of the ordinary practitioner, that they have acquired a national reputation through their treatment of complicated cases.
INDISCRETION—EXPOSURE [illegible]
YOUNG MEN [illegible]
PATIENTS TREATED by Mail and Express, [illegible]
DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

DON'T RENT
BUY A HOME IN MICHIGAN.
$5 TO $10 PER ACRE!
Strong Soils! Sure Crops! Railroad through Center of Lands. Healthy Climate. Schools and Churches. Intelligent Population.
HIGHEST REWARD TO FARMERS.
These lands are a long distance East of the Mississippi River. Large amount saved in travel and transportation of crops. Descriptive pamphlet in English and German.
Address W. O. HUGHART,
Commissioner, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

THERMALINE
A Safe and Reliable Substitute for Quinine
The only 25 cent
AGUE REMEDY
IN THE WORLD
CURES
CHILLS & FEVER
and all MALARIAL DISEASES.
Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York, [illegible] FREE on application.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT
An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box
Gives Immediate Relief.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.
Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or Chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions, Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.

The above four preparations for sale by F. E. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers, druggists, Auburn, Indiana.

SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant as a glass of Lemonade. 5 cents each. All Drug Stores.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 cents per box. All Drug Stores.

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES
Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)
A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.
Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.
For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.
For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.
It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.
It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.
Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, overwork, mental shocks, and other causes.
Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.
WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhea, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. No other Pills require such small doses for thorough work. Price 25 cts. a box. Warner's Safe Remedies are sold by Druggists & Dealers in Medicine everywhere.
H. H. Warner & Co.,
Proprietors,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.
READ!

NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO. Battle Creek, Mich.
Established in 1848. ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE
"VIBRATOR"
Threshing Machinery and Portable and Traction Engines.
THE STANDARD of excellence throughout the Grain-Raising World.
MATCHLESS for Grain-Saving, Time-Saving, [illegible]
INCOMPARABLE in Quality of Material, [illegible]
MARVELOUS for [illegible]
ASTONISHINGLY DURABLE and [illegible]
PORTABLE, TRACTION, and STRAW-BURNING STEAM-ENGINES, [illegible]
32 Years of Prosperous and Continuous Business by this house, [illegible]
CAUTION! [illegible]
BE NOT DECEIVED
by such experimental and worthless machinery. If you buy at all, get the "ORIGINAL" and the "GENUINE" from us.
For full particulars call on our dealers, or write to us for Illustrated Circulars, which we mail free. Address
NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

—ON—

Coffee, Sugar, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18 cents now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents per pound; and the Extra A Sugar we sold at 9 cents, now down to 8 cents; and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound. We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

TEAS! TEAS! TEAS!

The boom in teas last fall has not been maintained. Prices, in place of advancing, have declined so much that we are now selling the best Young Hyson tea lower than it has sold in ten years.

Good Young Hyson, 25c; Choice Young Hyson, 30c; Extra Young Hyson, 40c; Best young Hyson, 65c; Good Imperial tea, 40c; Best Imperial tea, 50 and 65c; Good Gunpowder tea, 40c; Best Gunpowder tea, 50 and 65c; Good Oolong tea, 30c; Best Oolong tea, 40 and 60c; Good uncolored Japan tea, 25, best 40 and 60c.

WHITE AND YELLOW SUGARS.

Cut-Loaf, 10c; Coffee A, 9 1-2; Granulated, 10c; Extra C, 8c; Powdered Sugar, 10c Yellow Sugar, 7c.

COFFEES--RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Bengal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 20c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c;

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickeled pork, 6c.

Fish—Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1; Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound, 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c. Oranges per dozen 35c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

WHEELER
WALTHAM, MASS.

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,
SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS.

Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains, Ladies Gold Chains. Casters Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions
Violin Strings,

Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at

JOE. ABRIGHT'S,

Second door north of Postoffice Auburn, Indinaa

Soldiers' Re-union at Waterloo,

The following partial programme has been decided upon for the old soldiers' re-union at Waterloo, Indiana, June 10 and 11, 1880:

JUNE 10.

9:30 a. m.—Reception of Loomis' battery, Michigan artillery, Coldwater, Michigan, Capt. Pratt commanding.

1:15 p. m.—Reception of visitors from the south.

2. p. m.—Reception of company E, 16th regiment of Ohio National Guards, Capt. Foote, of Bryan, Ohio, commanding, and Fourth Battery of Ohio light artillery, Capt. O. J. Hopkins, of Toledo, Ohio, commanding, with visitors from the east.

3 p. m.—Reception of visitors from the north and west.

3:30 p. m.—Regimental and company re-unions.

Sunset salute.

JUNE 11—FORENOON.

Sunrise—Reveille and National salute.

8 to 9:30—Regimental and company re-unions.

9:30 a. m.—Form procession and march to grounds.

10 a. m.—Exercises at the stand in the following order:

1st, Music by the band; 2nd, prayer; 3rd; song by the club; 4th, oration; 5th, song by the club—"Marching through Georgia;" 6th, toasts and responses; 7th, songs—"Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," and "Old John Brown," by everybody, led by the club; 8th, break ranks for dinner.

AFTERNOON.

1:30—Artillery drill by Loomis' Michigan battery, commanded by Captain Pratt, of Coldwater, Michigan, and 4th battery, Ohio light artillery, commanded by Capt Hopkins, of Toledo, Ohio.

2. p. m.—Infantry drill by company E, 16th regiment of Ohio National Guards, Lieut. Wm. Harding, of Bryan, Ohio, commanding, and the Waterloo Rifles, Capt. R. Wes. McBride, of Waterloo, Indiana, commanding.

3 p. m.—Sham battle, participated in by the above-named military organizations, and independent companies of Butler, Auburn, Angola, Waterloo and elsewhere, and also by a detachment of the signal corps, under command of Capt. Sam. Edge, and a squad of sharpshooters, commanded by Sargeant J. B. Bixler.

4:30—Prisoners marched to headquarters and paroled

Every soldier of sailor who was honorably discharged is invited. All are requested to report at headquarters immediately on their arrival, when they will be enrolled and furnished appropriate badges. Survivors of regiments and companies present will march together, and each organization will be commanded by the senior officer of such organization in attendance. The committee intend that the utmost punctuality and promptness shall be observed in carrying out the programme. Each person participating is earnestly requested to come resolved to be on hand promptly to the minute to perform any duty assigned him. We will advertise nothing we do not expect to give precisely as advertised.

R. Wes. McBride,
L. J. Blair,
S. B. Johnson,
S. J. Locke.
Committee.

Waterloo, Ind., May 25, 1880.

* * *

A horse biscuit is being manufactured in Russia to take the place of oats. It is made of crushed oats and flour of gray peas, mixed with hemp-seed oil and salt, and is four inches in diameter. A day's ration weighs about four pounds and is equal to ten pounds of oats. The horses like the biscuit when soaked in water, and if fed exclusively on them, though they lose in flesh, are still fit for fatiguing work.

* * *

Four locomotives were stopped by a drift in a snow-shed on the Union Pacific railroad. Snow covered the roof completely, so that no air could get in and no smoke could get out. The engineers and firemen soon become insensible. Fifteen Chinamen went to the rescue, and were also overcome. All were nearly dead from suffocation when finally taken out.

* * *

A couple in the backwoods of Michigan desire to marry, but they were not within reach of a clergyman or justice. There was not, in fact, a human being within twenty miles. So they wrote out as much of a marriage ceremony as they could remember, including affirmative responses, signed their names to the document and pronounced themselves husband and wife.

* * *

A woman was rowing on the Susquehanna, at Lancaster, Pa., with two little children. The boat upset when they were in the middle of the river. Barely able to swim by using both arms, she told the little ones to cling to her back. They did so, and she kept all afloat by desperate exertion; but just before reaching the shore one child let go and was drowned.

* * *

A drunkard fled into the woods, near Nashville, Tenn., while with delirium tremens, dug a grave, and was found lying in it dead. His wife was made frantic by the sight, and she loudly called upon heaven to let her die, too. It happened that, on her way home, lightning struck and killed her.

* * *

A man who had not seen his wife for eighteen years, and believed her dead, found her alive and well in Minneapolis. So far was he from being overjoyed by the meeting, that he swallowed laudanum, intending to cause a final separation by death.

RAILROADS.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 10, 1879.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Night ex	No. 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 30	2 58	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 30	11 00
Orrville	4 50	2 26	7 12	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 20 pm	11 45	2 42
Plymouth	3 50	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 00	7 58

GOING EAST.

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 30 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 48	8 55
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 25 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 20	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 27	2 33
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 05
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 15	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 44	4 55	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 00	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 6	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15 pm	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket A'ent.

WABASH ST. LOUIS AND PACIFIC R'Y.

The Great Through Car Route to

Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.		WEST.
Mail	12:34 p. m.	Mail	3:20 p. m.
Accom'n	12:37 a. m.	Accom'n	6:37 a. m.
Local F't	4:45 p. m.	Local F't	6:58 a. m.
M'lt'n arrives at Butler	1:00 p. m.	M'lt'n arr. at Logansport	6:45 p. m.

No Change of Cars From

TOLEDO OR FT WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison.

No Change of Cars From

St. Louis To Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the

Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific

Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

☞ Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West Southwest, North or Northw'st

Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager, H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent, St. Louis, or

LOUIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn Ind.

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE

Time-Card takes effect April 11, 1880.

(Chicago Time.)

GOING NORTH.

Leave Auburn:

6:10 A. M.—From Fort Wayne 2:56 a. m.; arrive at Waterloo 4:40; Pleasant Lake, 5:50; Angola, 6:20; Fremont, 6:45; Reading, 6:35; Bankers, 7:30; (connecting closely with D. H. & S. W. R.;) Jonesville, 8:13; Jackson, 9:20 a. m. there connecting for Ann Arbor 10:35, Detroit, 11:50 a. m.; Grand Rapids, 4:30 p.m

12:21 P. M.—From Fort Wayne 11:30 a. m., Academie, 11:46; Huntertown, 11:56; New Era, 12:10 p. m.; Auburn Junction, 12:28; arrive at Waterloo 12:42, connecting with L. S. & M. S. train east and west; Summit, 12:52; Pleasant Lake, 1:07; Angola, 1:11; Fremont, 1:30; Reading, 2:10; Bankers, 2:20, making close connection with D. H. & S. W. R. R.; Jonesville, 2:38, (making connection with L. S. & M. S. for points east; Hillsdale, 2:45; Adrian 4:05; Toledo, 6:25, p. m.), Jackson, 3 40 p. m., making close connection for Ann Arbor, Detroit, Lansing, Ionia, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Battle Creek, etc.

5:59 P. M.—From Fort Wayne, 5:30 p. m; New Era, 5:40 arrive at Waterloo 6:11; Summit, 6:23; Pleasant Lake, 6:36; Angola, 7:00; Fremont, 7:25; Reading, 8:35; Jonesville, 9:20; Jackson, 11:30 p. m.; connecting closely for Chicago, Detroit and Grand Rapids.

GOING SOUTH.

Leave Auburn:

9:24 A. M.—From Jackson, 5:05 a. m; closely connecting from Chicago; Jonesville, 6:50; connecting from Chicago, etc.; Reading, 7:15; Montgomery, 7:38; Fremont, 8:17; Angola, 8:34; Pleasant Lake, 8:44; Summit, 8:55; Waterloo, 9:10; arrive at St. Johns, 9:36; New Era, 9:45; Huntertown, 9:55; Academie, 10:06; Ft. Wayne, 10:20 a. m. connecting closely with Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, etc.

3 17 P. M.—From Jackson 12:25 p. m; (connecting from Detroit 9:15 a. m., Ann Arbor, Saginaw, Lansing, Grand Rapids, etc;) Jonesville, 1:21, close connection from Toledo; Bankers, 1:35; Reading, 1:46; Montgomery, 1:59; Fremont, 2:15; Angola, 2:30; Pleasant Lake, 2:40; Summit, 2:58; Waterloo, 3:06; arrive at Auburn Junction, 3:20; St. Johns, 3:31; New Era, 3:36; Stoner's, 3:46; Huntertown, 3:51; Academie, 4:00 Fort Wayne, 4:15 p. m.; connecting for Indianapolis, Louisville, Lima, Cincinnati, etc.

11:30 P. M.—From Detroit, 4:05 p.m.; Grand Rapids 11:50 a. m.; Kalamazoo, 1 40 p.m.; Jackson, 6 45 p. m.; Jonesville, 8 05; Reading, 8 35; Fremont, 9 15; Angola, 10 15; Pleasant Lake, 10:35; Waterloo, 11 10; arrive at New Era 12 20 a. m.; Fort Wayne, 1 20 a m., connecting with early trains west, south and east.

4 10 a. m. train run daily. All other trains daily except Sundays.

M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Supt.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Frt. & Pass'r Agent.

Fort Wayne, Muncie and Cin.

—AND—

White Water Railroads.

Time Card in effect November 16, 1879.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1 Mail.	3 Express.
FORT WAYNE	10 40 am	5 30 pm
Bluffton	11 42 am	6 35 pm
Montpelier	12 21 pm	7 27 pm
Hartford	12 57 pm	8 06 pm
MUNCIE	1 55 pm	9 00 pm
Newcastle	2 30 pm
Cambridge City	3 14 pm
Connersville	3 46 pm
Cincinnati	6 55 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 20 pm	10 55 pm
Louisville
Terre Haute
St. Louis

STATIONS	GOING NORTH 2 Mail.	4 Express	6 Accom.
St. Louis
Terre Haute
Louisville
Indianapolis	11 50 am	6 40 pm	4 05 am
Cincinnati	8 40 am
Connersville	11 31 am
Cambridge City	12 36 pm
New Castle	1 10 pm
Muncie	2 20 pm	9 20 pm	6 42 am
Hartford	3 09pm	10 09 pm	7 57 am
Montpelier	3 34 pm	10 32 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	4 10pm	11 09 pm	9 10 am
Fort Wayne	5 15 pm	12 15 am	11 00 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.

Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.

All trains daily except Sunday.

Trains run on Columbus time.

Geo. W. Mullen, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't. W. W. Worthington, Gen. Supt.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R

CHICAGO DIVISION.

IN EFFECT FROM JAN. 1, 1880.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.
Chicago	8 50am	9 40pm
Walkerton Junction	12 10pm	1 40am	10 42am
Milford Junction	1 20	2 15	2 20pm
Cromwell	1 42	2 45	2 30
Albion	2 05	3 06	4 25
Avilla	2 34	3 30	4 30
Garrett ar.	2 50	3 45	5 55
Garrett lv.	3 10	3 55	4 15
Auburn Junction	3 24	4 05	4 38
St. Joe	3 44	4 25	5 40
Hicksville	4 00	4 42	6 22
Defiance	4 45	5 27	8 50
Fostoria	6 40	7 25	2 30pm
Tiffin	7 00	7 54	3 37
Chicago Junction	8 10	9 00	6 00

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.
Chicago Junction	6 40pm	8 15am	6 20am
Tiffin	7 56	9 12	8 20
Fostoria	8 24	9 35	9 35
Defiance	10 32	11 30	4 45pm
Hicksville	11 16	12 14pm	6 18
St. Joe	11 32	12 30	6 50
Auburn Junction	11 54	12 50	7 38
Garrett ar.	12 10am	12 58	8 00
Garrett lv.	12 15	1 25	6 30am
Avilla	12 20	1 40	7 10
Albion	12 45	2 08	7 58
Cromwell	1 10	2 32	8 48
Milford Junction	1 38	3 00	9 50
Walkerton Junction	2 50	4 12	12 01pm
Chicago	5 50	7 05

C. H. Hudson, Superintendent.

Sam'l. Powell, Act. Gen. Ticket & Pass. Agent, Chicago.

L. M. Cole, Gen. Ticket Agent, Baltimore, Md

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MacIntosh,
Co. Sup't, of schools.

ROBERT OGDEN,
Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,
IRON AND LEAD PIPE,
BRASS GOODS
OF ALL KINDS.
126 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana

SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff, each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1, the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

☞ For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

Agricultural Implements!

THE

Latest Improved Farm Machinery

OF ALL KINDS.

The Three Rivers
"Invincible"
VIBRATOR.

The Renowned
Atlas Engine!
For farm use.

THE PEERLESS Reaper and Mower!

Over 20 000 now in use.

DEERING'S WIRE AND TWINE BINDER,

The only successful TWINE Binder in this or any other market. Greatly improved for 188.

LEADER ONE-WHEEL HARVESTER,

Which created so much excitement among the farmers last year,

ELLWOOD CULTIVATORS,

Riding or Walking, with four, six or nine blades. They have more good points and re less complicated than any other cultivator made.

The Steel-beam Red-Jacket Plow

And many other kinds. Also dealers in the

Archer Self-Dumping Hay-Rake,
Adjustable Bar Spring Tooth Harrow,
And The Harris' Double
Harpoon Horse Hay-Fork.

Examine our samples carefully, and get our prices before you contract. We guarantee you a bargain.

J. N. MYERS & CO.,
Odd Fellows' Building, AUBURN, IND.

NORMAN STALLION

JOCK, Jr

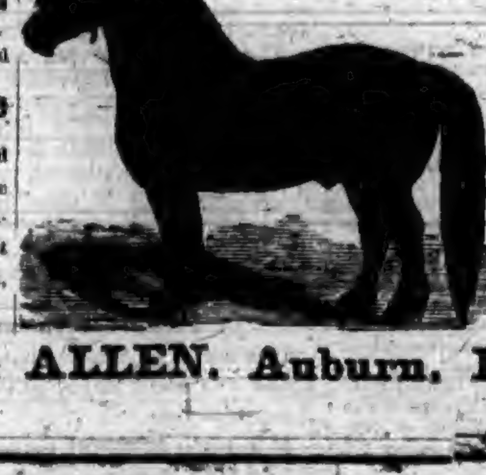
SIRED BY

Imported Jock!

Out of a thorough-bred

Norman Mare

Jock, Jr. will stand for mares during the season of 1880 commencing April 1st, at my barn in Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind.



This powerful horse is a bay-roan, 16 hands high, and weighs full

1,700 Pounds.

TERMS:

$10.00

Payable when the mare is known to be with foal.

Owners parting with mares are liable for insurance.

All accidents are at owners risk.

A. W. ALLEN, Auburn, Indiana.

M. Boland

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, JUNE 10, 1880. Number 24.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

EDITORS,

THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5,00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public, Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller,

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET, EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross, Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MONEY TO LOAN

By the Union Central Life Insurance company, from 1 to 5 years at 8 per cent secured by first lien on real estate worth at least double the amount of the loan (exclusive of improvements). We charge no commission, and your mortgage is held here within a few hours ride of your home. If you live, you are here to look after it yourself; if you die, you have made provisions to pay the debt just where you contracted it. For further particulars, apply to Thos. H. Sprott, Auburn Indiana.

ECKHART

Carriage Works

One-half mile east of Court House.
I have constantly on hand a large stock of the latest styles of

CARRIAGES, PHAETONS, & PLATFORM SPRING WAGONS.

Three years ago my business only required a shop 18x24, and I could do all the work myself excepting the smith work, but since then there has been such a demand for my work that I have

Greatly Increased

my facilities, and at present my shops, stock rooms and ware-rooms occupy nearly

10,000 Square Feet,

and I employ eight hands, not including myself. Having had twenty-three years experience, and being a practical mechanic in painting, wood-work and trimming, I flatter myself that I can turn out as goodwork for the money as any one in the state. Please remember that my work is fully warranted, and no misrepresentation is used to sell work

We are now turning out a finished Buggy from the rough every four days. Be sure and call at ECKHART CARRIAGE WORKS when in need of a buggy.

C. ECKHART,

Auburn, Ind., 4-6m.

Woodhull & Creston, Plaintiff's attorneys.

Notice to Non-Residents.

State of Indiana, DeKalb County, ss.
No. 790. In the DeKalb circuit court, May term, 1880.

Oliver S. Miller, Theodore F. Miller, Eliza Girens, Lewis W. Moore, Isaac J. Hair, Sigmund Heir, and Frank Elborson are hereby notified that an action has been commenced against them in said court, by Leopold Warner, John Warner, Louis B. Warner, John H. Warner, Edward Warner, Kaufman Greenberry and Simeon Kempner, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 58th juridical day of the next term of said court, which commences May 24, 1880, to-wit: July 20, 1880.

Witness, the clerk of said court, this 20th day of May, 1880.

JOHN W. BARNES, Clerk.

W. H. DILLS, Deputy.

A Few of the Reasons Given by Hon. Joseph E. McDonald, Why Hon. Thos. A. Hendricks Should be Nominated at Cincinnati.

In a recent address delivered before the Hendricks club at Washington City, Mr. McDonald said:

Indiana for many years has been a politcal battlefield; neither party has ever so far triumphed as to crush out resistance from the other, and there is no state in the Union where party lines between the democratic and republican parties are more clearly defined or strictly drawn.

The republican party, although defeated in the late elections, is well organized and under able and efficient leaders, and if the democratic party retains its ascendancy in that state, it will be due to the wisdom of a choice at our national convention; for while the democratic party in Indiana is united, and as patriotic and self-sacrificing as the democracy of any state, it has not been able to command a majority of all the votes of the state, but holds its present ascendancy by plurality over the republican party. The election in that state this year involves not only the fifteen electoral votes of the state, but the election of a legislature which will be charged with the duty of choosing a United States senator for the term beginning on the 4th of March next. And it is now painfully evident that upon that choice may depend a democratic ascendancy in the United States senate after the close of this congress. It is quite certain that if we should lose control of the legislatures of the states of New Jersey and Indiana there would be little or no hope of the party retaining its ascendancy in the senate, and if by chance not to be counted on we should still succeed in electing our president, his administration would be crippled, if not rendered powerless, by the opposition of a hostile senate. It is certain that the electoral vote of Indiana is necessary to the choice of a democratic president, and it is not to be doubted but that the course and policy which would secure that result would also secure a democratic legislature, and thus so far as that senate is concerned accomplish two vital objects. Therefore the presidential candidate most certain to secure these ends is the one most desirable for that state, and our people, taking all these questions into full consideration, with great unanimity have presented the name of Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks as that man. His personal and political strength in that state has been too often tested to leave it an open question, and therefore it may be said that if he should be our nominee at the Cincinnati convention, Indiana would be taken out of the list of doubtful states. If he is thus esteemed at home, is there any reason why he should not be acceptable to the democracy of every section of the union? If there is any such good reason it has wholly escaped my observation. It is only necessary to recur to his career in the senate of the United States for the six years beginning on the 4th of March, 1863, and embracing the dark days of the republic and the party, when, as a leader of that little band of democrats, he stood up in defense of civil liberty and constitutional rights. While Mr. Hendricks yielded a cordial support to the goverment so far as furnishing means and men for the suppression of the rebellion, he stood opposed to that doctrine which formed the basis of the reconstruction policy of the republican party, which was that the states in rebellion were to be treated as conquered provinces, and maintained in opposition to that policy the doctrine that the restoration of the authority of the federal goverment over the southern states, by restoring the relations which the war had interrupted between those states and the federal goverment, restored the union.

It has sometimes been suggested that while Mr. Hendricks might prove a strong candidate in some sections of the Union, there were others in which he might secure but a luke-warm support on account of his supposed financial views. These apprehensions can only arise in the minds of those who have not sufficiently informed themselves on the subject. Mr. Hendricks has never been an advocate of any financial theory not strictly in accordance with the cardinal doctrines of the democratic party as expressed in its national conventions. His letter accepting the nomination for vice-president, tendered him by the last national democratic convention, ought to be satisfactory to every democrat, as the following brief extract from it places him firmly upon the great democratic idea. Speaking of our financial system, he said: "Our financial system of expedience must be reformed. Gold and silver are real standards of value, and our national currency will not be a perfect medium of exchange until it shall be convertible at the pleasure of the holders." Again, it is sometimes insisted that it would not be good policy to nominate him for the presidency because of his connection with the late presidential ticket. Nothing could be more unjust than this suggestion.

It for causes deemed sufficient the democratic convention should think it not best to place at the head of the ticket the distinguished democratic leader who filled that position before, it would be very cruel, as well as unjust, to debar the friends of Mr. Hendricks from preferring his claims, because he had yielded to the command of his party and accepted a nomination not sought by him or his friends.

Cincinnati Convention.

[Commercial.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—There has been a good deal said lately about hotel accommodations in Cincinnati at the coming democratic convention. An immense crowd is expected, by the side of which the crowd drawn to the musical festival will seem very small. In speaking of this matter a leading democratic senator told your correspondent that he thought the largest crowd ever assembled in Cincinnati would be there the week of the convention. He based his belief upon the fact that Cincinnati is surrounded by democratic states, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana, and that southern Ohio itself is largely democratic in sentiment. Then the interest will be very great, for no man has a walk-over, and the contest among candidates will likely be close and prolonged, especially if the two-thirds rule is enforced, as it will be. The city being a hub in a wheel, with railroad spokes running out in every direction, would be filled by a larger crowd than probably ever before assembled within her gates. The senator referred to thought they could all be accommodated, but it would tax the hotel and boarding-house capacity of the city to an extent never before experienced.

SKIN GRAFTING.

A Successful Result of an Extraordinary Operation.

[Boston Globe.]

The medical fraternity of Danielsonville, Conn., and, in fact, throughout the whole of Windham county, are greatly interested in the experiment of skin grafting, which has been going on there for the past twelve months, and which has finally proved a gratifying success. On the 31st of December, 1878, Jesse, an 11-year-old son of Mr. Edwin Morgan, an influential citizen of Canterbury, an adjacent village, fell into a shallow vat containing a solution of potash in boiling water. He struck on both feet, the liquid coming nearly up to his hips, and instantly the skin of the legs commenced to peel off. With remarkable presence of mind the lad leaped to the floor, where he lay unconscious for some time. It was found that the flesh on both legs had been so horribly and thoroughly boiled that no cells remained for a new skin to form a growth upon. The boy's life was one of excruciating agony for months. The seared members began to turn under the body, and actually "flexed" or knit to the back of the thigh. Last April a young physician, George J. Ross, of that town, finding that his older brethren had given the case up as incurable, and one which must speedily result in death, determined to attempt the salvation of the lad's life by skin grafting. He was "pished and poohed at," to use his own words, by the old heads of the profession without mercy, but the boy's parents imploring him to undertake the operation, he was finally induced to try it. Over two thousand grafts were used, the mother of the child, a noble-hearted Irish coachman in the family, the lad himself, and many of the neighbors submitting portions of their cuticle for the operation. A prevailing desire was manifested to have the child live without becoming a cripple. Hundreds of visitors flocked to see the patient, and implored Dr. Ross to try a piece of their skin in the operation. The pieces of flesh were pulled off with forceps, and were about three times as large as the head of a pin. The process of grafting is similar to that employed in horticulture. One of the limbs looked as though pitted with small-pox. The grafts grow fastest in the spring months. One of them is put on a muscle, where it sinks in and deposits a cell, after which the top sloughs off. Although the work is not yet complete the legs are nearly restored to their normal and natural functions, and the child can walk a short distance without a crutch, but is still very weak from exhaustion and emaciation.

Popular Estimation.

[Washington Chronicle.]

The witty and eloquent Tom Corwin, of Ohio, was fond of saying that, "Next to setting up a damned fool in public estimation, the most difficult thing was to pull him down again."

Rules for Ladies Traveling Alone.

1. Be sure you know where you want to go before you get on the train.

2. When you purchase your ticket you will have to pay for it; no use to tell the ticket agent to "charge it and send the bill to your husband." And if he says the price of the ticket is $3.96, don't tell him you can get one just like it of the conductor or at the other store for $2.50; he won't believe you and he may laugh at you.

3. Never travel without money. It requires broad views, liberal education, keen discernment and profound judgment to travel without money. No one can do this successfully but tramps and editors.

4. Beware of the commercial traveler.

5. Don't give a stranger your ticket and ask him to go out and check your trunk. He will usually be only too glad to do it. And what is more he will do it, and your trunk will be so effectually checked that it will never catch up with you again. And then when the conductor asks you for your ticket and you relate to him the pleasing little allegory about the stranger and the baggage, he will look incredulous and smile down upon you from his half-closed eye and say it is a beautiful romance, but he has heard it before. And then you will put up your jewelry or disembark at the next station.

6. If you are going three hundred miles, don't try to get off the train every fifteen minutes under the impression that you are there. If you get there in twelve hours you will be doing excellently.

7. Call the brakeman "conductor;" he has grown proud since he got his new uniform, and it will flatter him.

8. Put your shawl-strap, bundle and two paper parcels in the hat-rack, hang your bird-cage to the corner of it, so that when it falls off it will drop on the old gentleman sitting behind you, stand your four house-plants on the window-sill, set your lunch-basket on the seat beside you, fold your shawls on top of it, carry your pocket book in one hand and hold your silver mug in the other, put your two valises under the seat and hold your band-box and the rest of your things in your lap. Then you will have all your baggage handy, and won't be worried or flustered about it when you have only twenty-nine seconds in which to change cars.

9. Address the conductor every ten minutes. It pleases him to have you notice him. If you can't think of any new question to ask him, ask him the same old one every time. Always call him "Say," or "Mister."

10. Pick up all the information you can while traveling. Open the window and look forward to see how fast the engine is going. Then when you get home you can tell the children about the big cinder you picked up with your eye, and how nice and warm it was and what it tasted like.

11. Don't hang your parasol on the cord that passes down the middle of the car. It isn't a clothes-line. It looks like one, but it isn't.

12. Keep an eye on the passenger who calls the day after Monday "Chewsday." He can't be trusted a car's length.

13. Do not attempt to change a twenty-dollar bill for any one if you have only $9.25 with you; it can't be done.

14. If you want a nap, always lie with your head projecting over the end of the seat into the aisle. Then everybody who goes up or down the aisle will mash your hat, straighten out you frizzes, and knock off your back hair. This will keep you from sleeping so soundly that you will be carried by your station.—Hawkeye.

One of Wickoff's Discoveries.

In the year 1831, Chevalier Wickoff, then in Schenectady, N. Y., dropped into the leading hotel to dine, and found only one person seated at the table. "He was an old man quite bent with age, and his hand trembled as he raised his cup to his lips. His thin gray hair sparsely covered a well shaped head, but the uncommon brilliancy of his eye, undimmed by years, and its furtive, restless glances attracted my attention. There was something, too, in his manner that impressed me—a quiet dignity, a certain air of authority that indicated he was no common man. I felt induced to engage him in conversation, but there was a frigid reserve about him that discouraged me. I observed him stealthily until he rose and went away. I called the waiter and asked if he knew the gentleman who had just left the room. "I know his name," he replied; "he arrived an hour since, and goes off immediately."—"What is his name?" I demanded. "Aaron Burr."

Never Dispair.

The difficulty with most young men is that they quail at the sight of the first obstacle presenting itself across their pathways, and are unable to see any means of relief. They can not surmount, remove, or flank difficulties; nor can they imagine that beyond and behind the clouds there are sunshine and serenity.

Give us the man who, having an object in view, never loses sight of it on account of intervening obstacles; whose vision once fixed upon a high goal, is never distracted by trifles at his feet. Sit not down to hopelessness like Elijah, "under the juniper tree;" dream not that success will crown every effort, but expect occasional disappointments, for these are the common lot of humanity.

Few have the moral fortitude to wrench from reverses the true lesson of wisdom which is to prevent their recurrence. Seeming misfortunes frequently turn out blessings. To the truly courageous man, the world is just what he chooses to make it—clay in the potter's hands to be moulded at pleasure. Nothing daunted by temporary failures, he makes circumstances bend to his iron will; he complains not of fate nor Providence, but, rising superior to the mishaps of to-day, he repairs them by doubled success to-morrow. The energies of such a man are irrepressible.

It requires a manhood that has been developed in the crucible of adversity to grapple successfully with a beclouded future; the very darkness of the background brings out in bolder relief the bright points of his character. Though clouds may lower and breakers interpose, still, let us never dispair.

Ungainly English Women.

[Lucy Hooper's London Letter.]

One of the prettiest sights of the season is the Lady's Mile on a fine sunny morning, especially on a Saturday, that being the fashionable day of horseback exercise in the park. There is no position in which a youthful Britoness looks so well as on horseback. The English girls ride to perfection, and their habits fit them as perfectly. Then, too, their lovely bloom and shining fair hair show to advantage under their hats, and their pretty hoods are not disfigured by the wild eccentricities of headgear which they affect for promenade or carriage wear. It is always an annoyance to me to see how these fair and blooming English maidens continue to disfigure their sweet selves. Give a French woman their advantages, the golden hair and azure eyes, the complexion of pearls and roses, and the general freshness and healthfulness of physique, and she would bloom forth a very world's wonder of beauty. But, with all these charms, the English girl generally contrives to look like a guy, or at least like a dowdy. Not that the English women dress as badly as they used to do some years ago. The "have gleams," as the French say. They are still very wild in the matter of hats and bonnets, and very unæsthetic in that of boots and shoes. But they do import French dresses sometimes, and are beginning to have a certain respect for Parisian taste. When once they learn how to match colors, and discover that black gloves are not worn with white satin ball-dresses, and that a purple mantle over a pea-green gown is an inharmonious combination, there will be hope for them in the matter of clothes. But before the British female can look perfectly well-dressed, she must be taught to walk. In the matter of gate even the most high-bred of English girls is singularly deficient. An American or a Parisian lady glides along without any of the mechanism of her movements being visible except the pacing of her daintily-shod feet. But if a king of Spain ever married an English princess, he can no longer keep current the old fiction of Castilian etiquette that queens of Spain have no legs. For those useful oh-no-we-never-mention-them members are distinctly visible under the tightly tied-back skirts of the English girl. She does not walk, or pace, or glide—she strides. Her Parisian costume, when she has got one on, waggles helplessly at her heels. Its folds, its drapery, its style lose all their effect as the strong, healthy young limbs beneath measure off steps that would not disgrace a mountaineer. The chasseur, too, has much to do with making the young lady's gait graceful. Broad-soled, thick boots, with scarce half an inch of heel are generally worn, and the result, though hygienically good, perhaps, is far from being either graceful or elegant.

A new way of collecting doctors' bills. Dr. Post, of Terre Haute, cured a man of a very severe attack of typhoid fever. After his recovery the man refused to pay the doctors' bill. The doctor could not put the man back into the fever again, so he did the next best thing—shot him in the belly.

Flashes of Fashions Caught at the Summer Openings.

The following notes on the fashions of the comming summer are from advance sheets of Ehrichs' Fashion Quarterly, placed at our disposal by the publishers, Messrs. Ehrich Brothers, of Eighth avenue, New York:

Surah is only a soft twilled silk.

The Gypsy is the coming bonnet.

White is the festival dress of 1880.

Puffs in the arm-holes will be revived.

Sliding rings on parasols are revived.

Angel sleeves are seen on dressy camisoles.

Jet is more fashionable than ever this season.

Tulle continues to be the preferred bridal veil.

Old gold remains the most popular shade of yellow.

Elegant sun-shades match the toilets this season.

All fashionable coiffures are worn low or half low.

All spotted and polka-dotted goods will be much worn.

Spanish lace has been revived for millinery purposes.

Shoulder kerchiefs of large size will be very fashionable.

Pongee silks and cashmeres are never out of fashion.

Spotted materials are affected by leaders of fashion.

Handkerchief dresses will be worn again this season.

Cloth of gold in all colors is used for millinery purposes.

Merveilleuse satin is one of the French names for Surah silk.

All kinds of wash goods are made up with a great deal of shirring.

Tuscan straw folding-fans, in circular shapes, are very fashionable.

A glint of red appears on almost every toilet that is not mourning.

Long-handled Japanese fans are more in vogue than folding-fans.

All sorts of muslin, silk and foulard shoulder kerchiefs are worn.

Grenadines appear this season with velvet or satin brocade ball spots.

Archery and lawn-tennis have almost superseded croquet this summer.

Boudior sacques with angel sleeves have been brought into vogue

Archery parties are the fashionable afternoon amusement this year.

Mignonette in sprays and bunches again appear on many dressy bonnets.

Surah silk will almost supersede grenadine for dressy summer toilets.

Summer Fashions.

With laudable enterprise, Ehrichs' Fashion Quarterly for the present summer presents its readers with a beautiful chromo-lithograph, illustrative of the fashions of the season. Unlike most fashion plates, which are merely creations of artist's brain, the present is a faithful reproduction of actual, extent costumes, of which not only the is full descriptions, but the prices as well accompany the plate. For the benefit of our lady readers we append a brief summary of these costumes, extracted from an advance sheet furnished by the publishers:

No. 1 represents a walking costume in brown, of summer camel's hair cloth and polka pot satin. The front is of satin arranged in soft folds, with side draperies of camel's hair, edged with silk and tape fringe. The back of the skirt is of camel's hair, divided from the side draperies by broad bias bands of satin, and ornamented with satin bows. The basque is made in French coat style, with broad hip pieces of the polka dot material, and tastefully trimmed cuffs and collar. Price, $47,-00.

No. 2 is a second walking dress, appropriately named the "Sunrise," and made of gend'arme blue French hunting and silk brocade. By an ingenious arrangement of the two materials, the front is ornamented with the representation of a sun with rays; the side draperies being of bunting meeting at a point below the basque, and drawn to either side of the central design of the front. The basque is of bunting, cut long and round, and appropriately trimmed with the brocade. Price $35.

The third figure in the illustration represents a combination dress of silk in two contrasting shades of drab. The underskirt in front is made of alternate stripe of the two materials laid in kilt plaitings, the back being of a single shade, plain and full. The overskirt is trimmed across the bottom with revers of contrasting silk, with a full bow of silk in two shades; the back being of a darker shade of silk, neatly draped. The basque is made en panier, trimmed to correspond with the lower part of the costume. Price, $38.50.

The last figure is that of a dinner or reception dress of garnet-colored satin duchess, elaborately trimmed with cashmere bead fringe and passementerie. The skirt is arranged in a double scarf, on which the trimming is imposed to great advantage; while the back drapery is formed of a double box plaiting extending from the waist downward. The basque is cut with a coat back and elaborately trimmed. The sleeves are open on the upper side, and laced with cords of satin, with bands of passementerie on either side; the lower part of the sleeves, as well as the trimming of the neck, being finished with ruchings and plaitings of lace and satin. Price, $45.00.

Read This.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, agent for the GENUINE SINGER, at Spencerville, Ind. Horses and cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office at Cahill's tin-shop. 14-6

THE AUBURN COURIER.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, JUNE 10, 1880.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

The public proceedings in the Whittaker case ended on May 28, and the matter was taken under advisement by the Court of Inquiry. Recorder Sears summed up the case against Whittaker, charging that he was morbidly sensitive on account of disappointment in a love affair, and that knowing he could not pass the examination he made up his mind to play the role of martyr. The Recorder was rather severe on the colored cadet, accusing him of cowardice, stupidity, deceit, perjury, and fraud, and ended by demanding that Whittaker be tried by court-martial for conduct unbecoming a cadet and a gentleman, and for perjury. Lieut. Knight defended Whittaker, and in a masterly address ridiculed the evidence of the experts, pointing out various contradictions in their testimony, and went on to show that the manner in which scraps of the young man's writing were obtained surreptitiously from his trunk, the general anxiety evinced by the authorities at West Point to obtain his conviction, and the rather dishonorable way in which they sought to intrap him into falsehood, was by no means creditable to them. He also argued on the unreasonableness of a young man in the prime of life being so despondent as to blast his every hope and his chances for an honorable career.

A shocking accident is reported from Philadelphia. While the second mate, two seamen and two apprentices of the British ship Sophia were amusing themselves in the oil-room of the vessel, one of the party thrust a red-hot poker into a barrel of kerosene, causing an immediate explosion. The oil-room and galley of the ship were demolished, and the cook, one of the seamen and the two apprentices were covered with burning oil. They attempted to swim ashore, but all were drowned except the seaman. The second mate was also injured, and neither himself nor the seaman are expected to recover....A fire-engine boiler exploded in Reading, Pa., seriously injuring seven persons, some of whom cannot recover.

A shocking tragedy is reported from Connecticut. Two aged widow ladies named Avent and Chidsey, living in the town of Avon, were murdered by some persons unknown. A neighbor entering the kitchen found Mrs. Chidsey lying on the floor weltering in blood, she having been killed by a blow on the head with an ax. Mrs. Avent was found in the attic on a bed, a Bible and spectacles by her side, and a ghastly wound in her forehead, inflicted by a tailor's goose which was lying on a chest close by. The motive of the murder is not known....A bruising match came off at McKeesport, Pa., between an old English prize-fighter named Jack Fleet, and a young 18-year-old pugilist named Turnbull. Fleet, who is nearly 60 years of age, was terribly punished by the young rough. They fought for $500 a side.

A brutal prize-fight came off the other day at Collier Station, W. Va., Goss and Ryan, two noted bruisers, being the principals in the affair. Eighty-seven rounds were fought, and both of the brutes were frightfully punished. Ryan was declared the victor....A great lockout began at the Pittsburgh iron-furnaces on the 1st inst., throwing not less than 25,000 men and boys out of employment.

THE WEST.

Col. Hatch telegraphs to Gen. Sheridan that the redskins were attacked by him at the Polomas river, N. M. He reports that fifty-five of the hostiles were killed. Col. Hatch also reports that Capt. Kerwin had a skirmish with the Indians, killing many of them. The hostiles are in retreat, but are closely pushed by the troops....A dispatch from Laramie City says the Ute Indians in North Park are on the war-path. A band of sixty, it is reported, attacked a settlement fifty miles south of Laramie, and killed two men.

Capt. Britton, of the United States army, has returned to Fort Buford from Poplar Creek Agency, whither he was sent by Gen. Hazen to present the terms on which the Government would receive the surrender of the hostile Sioux now stationed at that place. As the Captain had no food or tobacco to distribute among the savages, he could not prevail on them to talk. They are hungry, poorly clad, and tired of war, and will, in due time, accept the demand of Gen. Hazen for an unconditional surrender.

Gen. Pope has ordered a large detachment of troops to New Mexico, to co-operate with Gen. Hatch's command in the campaign against the Apaches....The boiler of a saw-mill at Winnipeg exploded, completely wrecking the structure, killing three men outright, mortally wounding two, and seriously injuring five other persons....Denis Kearney has been released from the San Francisco House of Correction in obedience to a decision of the California Supreme Court.

Burglars entered the Atlantic mine at Houghton, Mich., carried the safe about a mile from the office, blew it open, and relieved the drawers of $4,000 in currency and valuable papers. Five miners have been arrested for the crime....The Kansas Pacific railroad depot at Beloit, Kan., was broken into and a safe therein robbed of $3,500.

News comes from Southern New Mexico that the Indians attacked a party of Mexicans at old Fort Cummings, and one man was wounded. Maj. Bird, Paymaster, who was passing, pursued the Indians with his escort and fought them several hours. They retreated into Cook's canon. Since then five dead bodies have been found in the canon. All the bodies were terribly burned. A stage-coach and three wagons were also burned. It is supposed that three or four, and perhaps more, persons besides those found were massacred. The Indians left in the direction of the Florida mountains.... The steamer Golden Rule was burned on the Mississippi river about thirty miles above Alton. The fire was caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp. There were about sixty passengers on board, but all but three were saved.

Five workmen were seriously injured at Minneapolis, Minn., by the falling of the walls of an unfinished building upon which they were at work.

THE SOUTH.

Five or six men, arrested at New Orleans for firing vessels loaded with cotton, have confessed their guilt. The temptation was the salvage which tugmen and others who assisted in putting out the flames received....In the Court of General Sessions at Kingstree, S. C., a man named Ward was found guilty of forgery, and as soon as the verdict was announced he rose from his seat within the bar, drew a pistol and fired twice, deliberately, at two men named Harper and Lane, the principal witnesses against him. Harper is unhurt, but the second shot wounded Lane in both hands.

A rain storm of unparalleled violence and destructiveness recently visited Brackett, Texas, and vicinity. The rain came down in torrents, flooding the streets so that toward evening the ground-floor of every building in the town was from five to eight feet under water. Houses were swept away by the torrents, and in many of them were human beings. At least twenty persons are known to have perished in the floods. The storm also visited Calvert, and did serious damage.... The Vulcan Iron and Nail works at Chattanooga, Tenn., have suspended, with liabilities exceeding $250,000 and assets amounting to about $200,000.

A terrible cyclone recently visited Savoy, on the Texas Pacific railroad in Northern Texas, totally destroying the town and killing nine persons and wounding sixty, some of whom will die. Its appearance is described by persons who saw it as a funnel-shaped cloud, blazing with light, from which were emitted constantly sparkling balls of fire. The cloud struck the business portion of the town and passed to the southwest, leaving death and destruction in its wake. Not a single business house remained standing. Less than half a dozen edifices altogether were left with four walls. The storm lasted hardly over a minute, and was succeeded by a tremendous rain.

In Baltimore, on Decoration day, a party of negroes entered a beer saloon, ordered some beer, but refused to pay for it. The proprietor of the saloon tried to eject them, on which they raided the house. The police interfered at this juncture, and a scuffle ensued, during which one man was killed and several others wounded.... A colored Baptist preacher at Starkville, Miss., who had manifested an undue fondness for another man's wife, was shot dead by the wronged husband....St. Louis papers chronicle the death in that city of Sherrard Clemens, for thirteen years a member of Congress from Virginia. He died a pauper.

A farmer named Bradley, living near Clear Lake, Collin county, Texas, sold some cattle and gave his wife the proceeds of the sale, $200, for safe-keeping. During the absence of Bradley and about midnight, two robbers entered the house, cut Mrs. Bradley's throat and obtained possession of the money. Just as they were about departing with the booty, a stranger who was provided with a bed on the porch heard the groans of the dying woman, and, observing the departing robbers, snatched a six-shooter and fired instantly. Both the robbers, who turned out to be women of the neighborhood, were killed, one being shot through the heart, the other through the head.

A mob attempted to lynch a negro charged with rape and in jail at Texarkana, Ark., but the friends of the prisoner fired on them, and eight persons were wounded, some fatally.

Accounts of the recent flood at Brackett, Texas, state that the extraordinary amount of fourteen inches of water fell in nine hours. It is hardly known how many were drowned, though the number is placed at twenty-five. The damage to business and residences at Brackett, a town of 800 people, will reach $75,000. Vast fields of grain and hundreds of live stock were swept away by the rushing waters.

GENERAL.

Four murderers and one ravisher were executed on Friday, May 28—Thomas B. Edmunds, at Ozark, Ark.; Peter King, at Woodsfield, Ohio; L. L. Ford, in Crittenden county, Ark., and Charles Bollinger, colored, at Hanover Court House, Va.

In the contest for the base-ball championship of the United States, the close of the first month's play found the Chicago Club leading all competitors, as the following record will show:

Clubs.	Games won.	Lost.
Chicago	14	2
Cleveland	9	6
Worcester	9	7
Providence	8	7
Troy	7	8
Boston	7	9
Cincinnati	4	11
Buffalo	4	13

Some 53,000 persons were added to the population of this country by immigration from Europe during the month of May. This is the largest addition from the same source for any one month in the nation's history....Western Union telegraph rates have been equalized so that dispatches from small places will not cost more than dispatches from large ones.... The famous Lewis will case at New York has been decided against the contestants, and, if the decision is not reversed, the United States treasury gets $1,700,000.

Two servant-girls and several guests of a cheap hotel at Montreal, which was on fire, jumped from the fourth floor of the building, and received injuries from which they may not recover....News of the death of ex-Comptroller Richard B. Connolly, the Tweed ring fugitive at Marseilles, France, has been received in New York.

The National Woman Suffrage Convention, in session at Chicago last week, adopted a resolution declaring that they will not support any party which will not insert in its platform a plank recognizing the right of women to vote....The Brewers' National Convention met at Buffalo, N.Y., last week, about 400 delegates being in attendance. The reports show that the revenue collected from brewers and dealers in malt liquors for the last fiscal year amounts to $10,729,320, which is $792,268 more than received from the same source the year preceding; that the total income from the internal-revenue tax on malt liquors since the year 1863 amounts to $120,446,863; and that the brewing establishments of the country now number over 3,000, which annually consume 35,000,000 bushels of barley and 35,000,000 pounds of hops.

WASHINGTON.

A messenger from the Congressional Library presented a draft at the Treasury Department for $2,700. The money was paid over, the messenger laid it down on the teller's desk and turned to pick up a package, when the money mysteriously disappeared.

Following is the monthly public-debt statement issued on the 1st inst.:

Six per cent. bonds		$ 242,001,900
Five per cents		498,843,700
Four and one-half per cents		250,000,000
Four per cents		739,424,700
Refunding certificates		1,413,100
Navy pension fund		14,000,000
Total coin bonds		$1,735,698,400
Matured debt	$ 8,134,965
Legal tenders	346,742,046
Certificates of deposit	12,815,000
Fractional currency	15,592,924
Gold and silver certificates	20,274,370
Total without interest		395,424,350
Total interest		19,742,521
Total debt		$2,150,257,715
Cash in treasury		206,613,516
Debt less cash in treasury		$1,952,386,719
Decrease during May		15,926,533
Decrease since June 30, 1879		74,820,536
Current liabilities—
Interest due and unpaid		$ 2,800,795
Debt on which interest has ceased		8,134,965
Interest thereon		830,536
Gold and silver certificates		20,274,370
United States notes held for redemption of certificates of deposit		12,815,000
Cash balance available, May 1, 1880		161,567,839
Total		$ 206,613,516
Available assets—
Cash in treasury		$ 206,613,516
Bonds issued to Pacific railway companies, interest payable in lawful money, principal outstanding		64,623,512
Interest accrued and not yet paid		1,615,567
Interest paid by United States		45,651,155
Interest repaid by transportation of mails		12,084,815
By cash payments of 5 per cent. of net earnings		655,198
Balance of interest paid by the United States		31,911,141

In the case of the Hon. Isaac P. Christiancy, United States Minister to Peru, against Lillie M. Christiancy, nee Lugenbeel, for divorce, a Washington court has made an order fixing the alimony of the defendant at $150 per month, and ordering plaintiff to pay defendant's counsel $500.

POLITICAL.

The Greenbackers of Wisconsin met in State Convention at Watertown May 27, appointed Presidential electors, and selected delegates to the National Convention, with instructions to support E. P. Allis, of Milwaukee, for President. The Minnesota Greenbackers met on the same day at Minneapolis and performed a similar work. The delegates chosen are said to be favorable to Solon Chase, of Maine.... The Mississippi Democratic Convention elected a non-instructed delegation to Cincinnati. Nine members favor Bayard, four Hancock, and the preferences of the three others are unknown. ....Kansas Democrats, who profess to know, say that Tilden has not a single supporter among the delegates selected at Topeka. Seymour, they say, will probably get the solid vote of the delegation.

The Nevada Democratic Convention, by a vote of 58 to 36, declared Tilden the preference of the party for President.

The Maine Greenbackers nominated Henry M. Plaisted for Governor, and the Democratic State Convention, in session at the same time, indorsed the nomination without adopting any platform. The Greenbackers indorsed Solon Chase for President, but did not choose Presidential electors.

The Democrats of Alabama have renominated all of the present State officers.

FOREIGN.

A rebellion has broken out in British Burmah which threatens to be formidable. One town has been destroyed and an English Governor killed....A requisition numerously signed by the Radical and Liberal members of the British Parliament has been presented to Mr. Gladstone, requesting him to recall Sir Bartle Frere from the Governorship of South Africa....The trial of Nihilists at St. Petersburg resulted in the conviction of eleven. Two were sentenced to death, and the others to various terms of imprisonment or exile. There were five women among the number....A party of 2,000 Bulgarians recently destroyed twelve Turkish villages in the Balkan range.

The international rifle match between Ireland and America, at Dublin, is fixed for the 29th of June.

The supplemental European conference on Eastern affairs will be held in Berlin on June 15....In a recent encounter between a regiment of Chilian horse and Peruvian infantry the latter were badly worsted, their force cut to pieces, and many of them made prisoners....The Russian Government has decided to impose a protective tariff on agricultural implements now admitted free of duty, and to increase the tariff on those on which a duty is already paid.

A cable dispatch says that a six-foot granite wall, built to maintain in place a porous white stone through which, at one point, the St. Gothard tunnel runs, is giving way. It is thought the tunnel will have to be reconstructed around the white stone—a two-years' job....A powder-mill explosion in Belgium has caused a large loss of life....Harvest prospects in Ireland are reported to be excellent. A much larger area than usual has been planted with potatoes....James Robinson Planche, the famous English playwright, is dead.

The ex-Empress Eugenie arrived on the 28th of May at Ityozi, Zululand, near the spot where the Prince Imperial was killed.

A number of thieves have been arrested at St. Petersburg on a charge of being connected with the Nihilists....A cable dispatch says that 40,000 persons in Kurdistan, Armenia and Western Persia must be fed for two months, if they are to be kept alive. One hundred and thirty-eight persons have died of starvation at Bashalh, and 107 at Alashgerd.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

The Senate spent the most of the day, on May 27, in the routine consideration of the Agricultural Appropriation bill, and passed it. The salary of Commissioner LeDuc was increased to $4,000. A bill passed providing for the reapportionment of members of the Legislature in Montana, Idaho and Wyoming, by boards composed of the Speakers of the House of Representatives and President of Councils, upon the basis of the census of 1880. On motion of Mr. Thurman, a bill passed authorizing the purchase of ground contiguous to the postoffice at Toledo, and to erect in enlarged grounds a building for United States Courts, Custom House, bonded warehouse, etc., and appropriating $75,000 therefor. Thirty condemned bronze cannon were voted to the Fairmount Park Art Association for the statue of Maj. Gen. Meade. It was stated that 264 such cannon were on hand, and the rule of the department is, "First come, first served," though they are probably all donated by various bills. On motion of Mr. Kirkwood, the bill passed authorizing the Postmaster General to treat the mail service between East St. Louis and St. Louis as other than railroad service, and let it to the lowest bidder. Mr. Voorhees introduced a bill for the erection of a building for United States offices at Terre Haute. The President nominated Albert D. Bibb, of Idaho, Agent for the Indians of Malheur Agency in Oregon; Benjamin F. Thacker, of Audubon, Supervisor of the Census in the Third District of Colorado, and Assistant Paymaster Frank Plunkett to Past Assistant Paymaster United States Navy. The nomination of J. Newton Pettis to be Associate Justice of New Mexico was rejected....In the House, a conference report on the joint resolution to print 100,000 extra copies of the report of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries was agreed to. The morning hour was dispensed with, and the House went into committee of the whole on the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill. The following gentlemen were appointed members of the Board of Managers of National Soldiers' Homes: Gen. John M. Palmer, of Illinois; Gen. William B. Franklin, of Connecticut; Gen. Charles W. Roberts, of Maine; Gen. Martin McMahon, of New York; Gen. Love, of Indiana; and Maj. Fulton, of Wisconsin. Mr. Cobb, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported the General Deficiency Appropriation bill. Ordered printed and recommitted. It appropriates about $4,000,000.

On the meeting of the Senate on Friday, May 28, Mr. Kirkwood presented the memorial of 330 Iowa ex-soldiers, disapproving the Weaver bill to pay soldiers the difference between gold and greenbacks. Mr. Eaton offered a joint resolution that the President be requested to open negotiations with France, Spain, Austria, and Italy with a view to removing restrictions on importations of tobacco and securing to our citizens an open market. The joint resolution was taken up, amended and adopted, providing for the payment of claims of Florida for expenses of the State volunteers in the Seminole war of 1855, 1856 and 1857. The report of the conference committee on the bill for a supplement to the Revised Statutes was adopted. Mr. Butler submitted a resolution that the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to report all records in his department relating to the claim of the United States against the New York Central Railroad Company for the 5-per-cent. tax on the scrip dividend of 8 per cent. declared in 1869 on its stock capital. The House joint resolution to pay Government employes for Decoration day passed. A bill passed authorizing bonds of the manufacturers of tobacco, snuff and cigars, exporting the same, to be canceled at the port of clearance. The River and Harbor Appropriation bill was then taken up, and debated the remainder of the day, without action. Adjourned over Decoration day until Monday.....In the House, on motion of Mr. Ewing, the Senate bill authorizing the settlement of the accounts of Col. Thomas Worthington, of Ohio, passed. The House, after a stormy session of seven hours, concluded the consideration of the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill in committee of the whole, and moved the previous question upon it, so that the vote will be taken the first thing Monday morning, and then adjourned over Decoration day.

Mr. Davis (W. Va.) stated to the Senate, on the morning of Monday, May 31, that the Appropriation Committee would not yet report back the House resolution providing for adjournment, but hoped it might be practicable for Congress to adjourn about the 10th or 15th of June. Mr. McMillan introduced a bill for the relief of certain settlers on swamp lands in Minnesota. Mr. Baldwin introduced a bill for the appraisement and sale of the Detroit arsenal building and grounds. The joint resolution passed authorizing the sale to the Port Huron and Northwestern Railway Company of a portion of the Fort Gratiot Military Reserve, and authorizing Port Huron to grant the right of way through Pine Grove Park. The House joint resolution requesting the President to open negotiations with France, Spain, Austria and Italy, with a view to removal of the restrictions upon the importation of tobacco in said countries was passed. The House bill passed providing times and places of holding Circuit Court of the United States in the District of Iowa, and for other purposes. Mr. Williams made a speech in favor of pensioning the soldiers of the Mexican war. The Yorktown monument joint resolution passed. The resolution submitted recently by Mr. Pendleton requesting the President to inform the Senate whether any Census Supervisors appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate have been removed by him or with his consent, was adopted. The report of the Committee of Conference on the District Appropriation bill was adopted. The bill to compromise the claim of the United States under the Lewis will case was passed, as was the bill to permit Elias C. Boudinot, of the Cherokee nation, to sue in the Court of Claims for damages by the seizure of his tobacco manufactory for the alleged violation of the Revenue laws....In the House, the Senate Deficiency Appropriation bill was referred to the committee of the whole. Consideration was resumed of the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, and it was passed, 112 to 53. Amendments to the Executive bill were concurred in. The Senate amendments to the amendments to the House bill for the relief of certain Homestead and pre-emption settlers in Kansas and Nebraska were concurred in. The joint resolution passed granting the use of artillery, etc., to the Soldiers' Reunion in Northeast Missouri. The conference report on the District of Columbia Appropriation bill was agreed to. The conference report on the joint resolution for printing 300,000 copies of the report of the Commissioner of Agriculture was agreed to. The General Agricultural Appropriation bill were non-concurred in. The House then went into committee of the whole on the General Deficiency bill. The first vote showed no quorum, and the House adjourned.

On the meeting of the Senate on the morning of Tuesday, the 1st inst., Mr. Vance, from the Committee on Exodus of Negroes from Southern to Northern States, submitted a report of the majority, and Mr. Windom announced that he would hereafter submit the views of the minority. The Sundry Civil Appropriation bill was received from the House and referred to the Committee on Appropriations. The Senate insisted on its amendment to the Legislative, Executive, Judicial, and Agricultural Appropriation bills, and committees of conference with the House were appointed. The River and Harbor Appropriation bill was considered all day, the House amendments being investigated. A number of changes were made. The President nominated Robert S. Gardner, of West Virginia, to be Indian Inspector....In the House, there were, at the outset, two set speeches on the Inter-State Commerce bill, one by Reagan and one by Henderson, which came in under the license given to the rule for general debate upon an appropriation bill. The Deficiency bill was up in committee at the time. Mr. King introduced a resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate the expenditure of appropriations on the Red and Washita rivers for the last ten years. Also, authorizing the Secretary of War to enter into contracts for keeping open the mouth of the Red river.

Mr. Pendleton presented, and the Senate adopted, on Wednesday, June 2, a resolution asking whether the sections of the Revised Statutes authorizing judicial powers by Consuls was in accordance with the constitution. The River and Harbor bill was completed and passed. A bill was reported favorably for the purchase of additional grounds and the erection of a public building at Detroit....The House went into committee of the whole on the General Deficiency bill, and completed that measure. It was then reported to the House and the main question was ordered upon it.

CURIOUS AND INTERESTING.

Suckers and Pukes.—A writer in the Chicago Inter Ocean gives this version of the origin of "Suckers" and "Pukes:" "I came to Illinois in the year A. D. 1833, and had a curiosity to know why the people of Illinois were called Suckers and those of Missouri Pukes. The first to tell me was a lady, who had lived in St. Louis several years previous, during a summer of great distress on account of sickness. All the help (succor) they got came from Illinois. About 10 o'clock a. m., they would see one or two wagons winding their way to town, when their dead would be buried and the sick attended to; thus they received daily succor. The old doctors then (as they do now) gave an emetic for the first thin, followed with calomel, and the Pukes had to be attended to, thus the sobriquet Succors and Pukes as applied respectively."

The Sun Made of Metal.—In a recent article in the Nineteenth Century, by Mr. J. Norman Lockyer, the writer very strongly objects to Dr. Draper's discovery of oxygen in the sun. Mr. Lockyer says he has gone carefully over the whole ground and finds: First, that the photograph on which Dr. Draper bases the discovery is not one competent to settle such an important question; second, that he does not find the coincidence between bright solar lines and oxygen lines in the part of the spectrum with which he is most familiar; and, third, that, comparing Dr. Draper's photograph with the fine photograph of the spectrum obtained by Mr. Rutherford, he "fails to find any true bright line in the sun whatever coincident with any line of oxygen whatever." Mr. Lockyer sums up the evidence as to the sun's composition in these words: "So far as our uncontested knowledge goes, the sun is chiefly made of metal, and on this account is strangely different from the crust of our earth, in which the metals are in large minority."

Cubic Capacity of the Skull.—Of all the measurements by which the difference can be determined between the human skulls of one race and another, the most important is now believed to be that which gives the cubic capacity of the great cavity of the skull wherein is contained the brain. Upon this basis, some interesting investigations have been made. Among other facts ascertained is that relating to a race of long, flat-headed people on the west coast of Africa, who exhibit the largest average capacity of any human head yet examined. The Laplanders and Esquimaux, though a very small people, have very large skulls, the latter giving an average measurement of 1,546. The lower grades of English skulls show a size or capacity of 1,542; the inhabitants of the Canary islands, 1,498; the Japanese, 1,486; the Chinese, 1,424; the Italians, 1,475; the ancient Egyptians, 1,464; the true Polynesians, 1,454; negroes of various kinds, 1,377; the Kaffirs, 1,348; Hindoos, 1,306. The Australian aborigines give one of the smallest averages—namely, 1,283; and the Andamanese, a very diminutive people, show only 1,220. A comparison between the skulls of sixty-three men of various races, and of twenty-four women, showed the ratio of the woman's skull to the man's to be as 854 to 1,000.

Good and Bad News.—Bad news weakens the action of the heart, oppresses the lungs, destroys the appetite, stops the digestion, and partially suspends all the functions of the system. An emotion of shame flushes the face; fear blanches, joy illuminates it; and an instant thrill electrifies a million nerves. Surprise spurs the pulse into a gallop. Delirium infuses great energy. Volition commands, and hundreds of muscles spring to excite. Powerful emotions often kill the body at a stroke. Chile, Liagoras, and Sophocles died of joy at the Grecian games. The news of defeat killed Philip V. One of the Popes died of an emotion of the ludicrous on seeing his pet monkey robed in pontificals, occupying the chair of state. Muley Muloch was carried upon the field of battle in the first stages of an incurable disease; upon seeing his army give way, he rallied his panic-stricken troops, rolled back the tide of battle, shouted victory, and died. The Doorkeeper of Congress expired on hearing of the surrender of Cornwallis. Eminent public speakers have often died in the midst of an impassioned burst of eloquence, or when the deep emotion that produced it has suddenly subsided. Lagrave, the young Parisian, died when he heard that the musical prize for which he had competed was adjudged to another.

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

The National Republican Convention met in the Exposition Building, at Chicago, on Wednesday, June 2, and was called to order by Don Cameron, Chairman of the National Committee, upon whose motion George F. Hoar, of Massachusetts, was made Temporary Chairman. John H. Roberts, of Illinois, and C. L. Magee, of Pennsylvania, were appointed Temporary Secretaries, after which the Committees on Credentials, Resolutions, Permanent Organization, and Rules and Order of Business, consisting of one delegate from each State and Territory, were announced. The roll of the States and Territories was then called for the presentation of credentials and for notice of contest. Contests were announced in Alabama, Illinois, Louisiana, Pennsylvania and Utah. The convention then adjourned until Thursday morning, June 3.

SECOND DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

At 11:45 Chairman Hoar called the convention to order. The gavel which he used was made from a piece of Lincoln's house at Springfield. The noise was increased ten-fold by the rush of the delegates and the audience to take their seats. The invocation was offered by Rev. F. A. Noble, D. D., who asked the divine blessing on the day's work of the convention. The Chairman announced that he awaited the pleasure of the convention. Mr. Conkling, of New York, asked whether the Committee on Credentials was ready to report. The chair announced that he understood the committee was not likely to be ready to report for several hours, probably not before 4 o'clock. Mr. Conkling said it was essential that it should be known who were and who were not members before proceeding to business. He therefore moved that the convention adjourn until 6 o'clock this evening. After some time had been consumed in discussing the motion, it was put and lost. The convention then proceeded to the election of permanent officers, which resulted in the choice, by acclamation, of the temporary officers, including George F. Hoar, of Massachusetts, for Chairman. A motion was then made and carried that the convention adjourn until 5 o'clock p. m.

The convention reassembled at 5:25 o'clock. Gen. Henderson, of Iowa, said that he understood that the Committee on Credentials was not ready to report, and, in order to expedite the business of the convention, he moved that the report of the Committee on Rules be received at this time.

Gen. Logan, of Illinois, said that he did not rise to make any captious objection to the motion. But, in the name of justice he desired to enter a protest against the adoption of the motion. The report of the Committee on Credentials should be made and passed upon before the Committee on Rules and Order of Business reported. There were some things in the report of the Committee on Credentials which he entered a solemn protest against. The report of the Committee on Credentials would hold that a State had no right to name its own delegates to a National Convention. In the name of unity, and the success of the grand old Republican party, he demanded fair play. Fair play he was sure would be shown to the delegation from Illinois.

Gen. Henderson said he was glad to hear the sentiments uttered by Logan. There was no gentleman in the country from whom he would more gladly hear the announcement of a desire for fair play.

Mr. Boutwell proceeded to speak upon the rule limiting the speaking to five minutes.

Hon. Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana, said that he had listened to much acrimonious debate, caused by a report that the Committee on Rules intended to bring in a five-minute rule. He would say that, while he disagreed with the Senator from Illinois on some points made in his remarks, still he was with him on the question of this five-minute rule.

Gen. Sharp, of New York, moved, as a substitute to the motion of Gen. Henderson, that the Committee on Credentials be now directed to report.

Gen. Garfield, of Ohio, said there was no foundation for any charge of bad faith against the Committee on Rules. The Committee on Rules agreed not to bring forward of its own motion its report until after the report of the Committee on Credentials. But it was understood that the convention could do so if it thought best. He thought it very proper for the convention to take up the report of the Committee on Rules first.

Senator Conkling thought that upon an important subject like this every delegate should vote. He urged the importance of the convention discovering who composed it. He was in favor of the adoption of the amendment offered by his colleague.

After some further discussion a vote was taken on the substitute of Gen. Sharp that the Committee on Credentials be instructed to report. Intense interest was manifested in the vote, which resulted as follows: Ayes, 318; noes, 406. So the substitute was rejected. The result was received with loud applause.

When the State of Kentucky was called the Chairman arose and said that, acting under instructions from the State Convention, he would cast twenty-four votes solid "aye." Instantly four men were standing upon their chairs in the center of the delegation and shouting loudly to attract the attention of the chair. Finally, amid confusion, one of the delegates said that there were four stalwarts in Kentucky, and that every one of them desired to vote nay upon the question before the house. He said that no State Convention could muzzle his intelligence, or the intelligence of his colleagues.

A motion to adjourn until Friday, June 4, at 10 o'clock, was then made and carried.

An Unexpected Response.

Preachers in the frontier settlements have had often ludicrous experiences. They must hold the attention of a congregation in spite of crying babies, and keep their own gravity in circumstances both awkward and ridiculous. Occasionally the strain is too great, and they surrender to the situation. An eloquent Episcopal clergyman was ignominiously driven from the pulpit by a donkey.

He was a favorite preacher with the frontier families, for he depended little on a manuscript, and used familiar phrases and illustrations which interested them in his sermons. In enforcing the lesson of a sermon, he was earnest and practical, and made direct appeals to his hearers.

On one occasion, during the summer, he was preaching in a crowded schoolhouse. The windows were open, and cattle were browsing on the shady side. Among them was a donkey, which, having drawn one of the families to the meeting, had been turned loose to browse. The preacher was ending his sermon with, "And now, beloved, what think ye of these things?"

At this juncture the donkey put his head through the open window and gave a most unearthly bray. The preacher's self-possession wavered, and hands and handkerchief went up to the faces of the congregation.

The silence grew oppressive; but the preacher managed to add, "I say, my brethren, what think you of these things?" to which the donkey responded by a second hideous bray. It was too much for preacher and hearer. In a minute the sermon was ended, the congregation dismissed, and the people gathered in groups outside, convulsed with laughter.

Farm Gates.

Hon. George Geddes, gives, in the Country Gentlemen, the following method of making what he considers the best farm gate: Take two boards twelve feet by six inches for top and bottom; three intermediate ones twelve feet by five inches; one for main brace thirteen feet by six inches, to reach from upper hinge (at top of gate) to foot of latch post; one twelve feet by four inches to cover all top of gate; two four feet and four inches by six inches for hinge-post; five same length by four inches for latch-post and three vertical braces. He makes the spaces, counting from the top, eight, seven, six and five inches, discarding any hinge projecting above the gate, and binding all well together by a strong hinge at the top, around the uprights and the end of the hinge being well bolted.

CADET WHITTAKER.

The Report of the West Point Court of Inquiry.

The conclusions of the Court of Inquiry in the case of Cadet Whittaker are as follows:

1. The court is unable to believe that such slight wounds as Cadet Whittaker received could have been inflicted by persons in the manner and under the circumstances described by him.

2. It does not see why a man with his surroundings and in his condition and frame of mind, as shown by his own evidence, should have submitted to an assault such as is alleged without summoning assistance during the assault or immediately thereafter.

3. It believes a person tied as he was and left as he claims to have been could readily have released himself had he exerted himself to do so.

4. From the testimony of the Post Surgeon and others the court is compelled to believe Cadet Whittaker was neither asleep nor insensible when he was examined on the morning of April 6, 1880, but that he was feigning.

5. The court is not able to discover any motive that any person, other than Cadet Whittaker, could have had in making such assault, and there is no evidence whatever that any person did it.

6. It believes that the hair-clipping, flesh-cutting and binding could all have been accomplished by Cadet Whittaker himself.

7. The theory that the note of warning is an imitation of Cadet Whittaker's handwriting is, in the opinion of the court, untenable. The severe tests to which experts in handwriting were subjected, and their positive testimony, place it beyond a doubt that Cadet Whittaker himself wrote the note of warning, and therefore that he is not ignorant of the person or persons engaged in the affair. This latter conclusion is strengthened by the fact that one-half of the sheet of paper on which this note is written was found in Cadet Whittaker's possession.

The opinion of the court is as follows:

From the strong array of circumstantial evidence, from testimony of experts in handwriting, and from the conflicting statements of Cadet Whittaker and lack of veracity evinced by him in certain cases during the investigation, as shown by the evidence, the court is of the opinion that the imputation upon the character of Cadet Whittaker, referred to in the order convening the court and contained in the official reports of the Commandant of Cadets and Post Surgeon, is fully sustained.

When the report was sent to Gen. Schofield and read by him, he caused a letter to be addressed to Col. Lazelle, Commandant of the corps of cadets, directing the arrest of Whittaker and placing him in confinement in his room. The order was promptly carried out, and Whittaker will remain under arrest until the case is disposed of, and a guard will keep him under surveillance.

Whittaker still protests his innocence. The findings of the court have been forwarded to the War Department.

Prof. R. T. Greener, of Washington, who was one of Whittaker's volunteer aids, denounces the methods employed by the Court of Inquiry to convict him. He says the entire force of the so-called investigation was directed, not toward finding out who might have committed the outrage, but toward proving Whittaker guilty, and that he has been prejudiced in suppositions, assumptions, insinuations and expert testimony.

Testimony of a Great Historian.

The great Swiss historian, John Von Muller, gives the result of his life-long labors, extracted, he says, from 1,733 authors, 17,000 folio pages, in this striking confession: "Christ is the key to the history of the world. Not only does all harmonize with the mission of Christ, all is subordinated to it." "When I saw this," he adds, "it was to me as wonderful and surprising as the light which Paul saw on his way to Damascus, the fulfillment of all hopes, the completion of philosophy, the key to all the apparent contradictions in the physical and moral; here is life and immortality. I marvel not at miracles; a far greater miracle has been reserved for our times, the spectacle of the connection of all human events in the establishment and preservation of the doctrine of Christ."
—Prof. Henry B. Smith: "Faith and Philosophy.

James Kingsbury went into a Providence gambling-room with $10,000 in his pocket and an overdose of whisky in his stomach. His drunkenness enabled the sharpers to get his money quickly. After taking $1,200 by a pretense of winning it, they resorted to the more simple mode of grabbing it by the handful. A characteristic feature of the case was that one of the gamblers, who secured $1,500, had, when arrested, lost all but $500 playing against a Boston faro bank.

The village of Sheldahl, Iowa, lies in three counties, and its government is consequently mixed. A change of county boundaries is proposed, but each county wants the village.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	8 60 @ 9 80
Hogs	4 50 @ 4 70
Cotton	11½@ 12
Flour—Superfine	3 50 @ 4 50
Wheat—No. 2	1 20 @ 1 32
Corn—Western Mixed	53 @ 56
Oats—Mixed	40 @ 42
Rye—Western	90 @ 95
Pork—Mess	10 65 @11 10
Lard	6⅞@ 7
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	4 25 @ 4 50
Cows and Heifers	2 60 @ 4 00
Medium to Fair	3 90 @ 4 05
Hogs	3 00 @ 4 40
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex.	5 50 @ 6 25
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 00 @ 5 50
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	98 @ 1 00
No. 3 Spring	85 @ 89
Corn—No. 2	35 @ 36
Oats—No. 2	30 @ 31
Rye—No. 2	74 @ 75
Barley—No. 2	75 @ 76
Butter—Choice Creamery	19 @ 20
Eggs—Fresh	9½@ 10
Pork—Mess	10 00 @10 25
Lard	6⅜@ 6⅝
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	1 02 @ 1 06
No. 2	96 @ 97
Corn—No. 2	35 @ 36
Oats—No. 2	30 @ 31
Rye—No. 1	75 @ 76
Barley—No. 2	67 @ 68
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red Fall	1 08 @ 1 09
Corn—Mixed	35 @ 36
Oats—No. 2	30 @ 31
Rye	79 @ 80
Pork—Mess	10 25 @10 50
Lard	6⅜@ 6⅝
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	1 11 @ 1 13
Corn	40 @ 41
Oats	33 @ 34
Rye	83 @ 84
Pork—Mess	10 25 @10 50
Lard	6⅜@ 6⅝
TOLEDO.
Wheat—Amber Michigan	1 15 @ 1 16
No. 2 Red	1 16 @ 1 17
Corn—No. 2	40 @ 41
Oats—No. 2	34 @ 35
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	5 50 @ 6 75
Wheat—No. 1 White	1 12 @ 1 13
No. 1 Amber	1 11 @ 1 12
Corn—No. 1	44 @ 45
Oats—Mixed	37 @ 38
Barley (per cental)	1 20 @ 1 60
Pork—Mess	11 00 @11 75
INDIANAPOLIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	1 10 @ 1 12
Corn	36 @ 37
Oats	30 @ 35
Pork—Clear	13 00 @13 50
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	5 00 @ 5 25
Fair	4 00 @ 4 50
Common	3 50 @ 3 75
Hogs	4 30 @ 4 50
Sheep	3 00 @ 4 25

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED, ROB. J. LOWRY } Editors.

A Moscow correspondent describes the misery and starvation prevailing in the South and Southeast of Russia as unknown in the memory of man. No food is to be got for the horses and cattle for any money, and the animals are consequently dying everywhere of starvation in the Transural steppes and the Don steppes.

A boy fell into a vat of potash at Danielsonville, Mass., two years ago, and the skin of both legs was destroyed. A resort was had to skin grafting, and over 2,000 bits of cuticle, from the boy's mother, the family coachman, and accommodating neighbors, have been used. The result is completely successful.

Forty per cent. of the Chinese of San Francisco have been back and forth between this country and China four or five times. Most of the Chinese go back once in five years, and rarely any one stays longer than eight years continuously in this country. Many Chinese merchants return regularly to spend the Chinese New Year at home.

The ages of the members of the new British Cabinet are: Mr. Gladstone, 70; Earl Spencer, 44; Lord Selborne, 67; Duke of Argyll, 57; Sir W. Harcourt, 53; Earl Granville, 65; Earl of Kimberly, 54; the Right Hon. H. C. Childers, 53; Marquis of Hartington, 47; Lord Northbrook, 54; John Bright, 68; W. G. Forster, 61; J. G. Dodson, 55; Mr. Chamberlain, 44.

A little company of men and women in Lewiston, Me., engaged in an impromptu discussion of the question: "Why didn't the lions eat Daniel?" One side maintained that the reason was because Daniel was too good, and the other that the lions were not hungry. The upshot of the matter was that they got into a wrangle, and the police were called in to suppress the the row. They carried one man to jail for striking one of the women.

Every notable person in Paris is pestered with a flood of begging letters. Among the rest Aurelian Scholl gets bushels of them, to which he returns the following printed answer: "Sir, I am extremely obliged that you should have thought of me in your present embarrassment. I pray you to believe that I extremely regret that circumstances do not allow me to act as you ask and as I heartily desire to do. Believe me, sir," etc.

Mtesa, monarch of a wide region in Africa, of which Stanley has much to say in his book, has sent six black envoys to London, with the African King's compliments to Queen Victoria, requesting her to express to them her desire as to the status of missionaries in his kingdom. The envoys also have orders to request a supply of rum and rifles, and, as an inducement to their request being granted, to announce their master's wish to embrace the Christian religion, provided he is permitted to retain the worship of his idols—the great snake, the lord lion, and the great elephant. With these slight exceptions he is willing to become a good Christian.

Lem Offutt shot his father-in-law, Richard Evans, at Georgetown, Ky., two years ago. The bullet lodged in Evans' spine, paralyzing him, and thus making him an almost-helpless cripple or life. He said nothing about vengeance, refused to appear in court as a complainant, and it was generally supposed that he forgave the assailant. But Lem kept carefully away from him. This spring Evans was able to ride out in an easy wagon, and it was observed that he always had a cocked pistol lying in his lap and closely scanned every man who came in sight. He was looking for Lem; and, on finally meeting him in the road, sent a bullet directly through his heart.

Nobody in Nevada ever calls Joseph Enrmann a liar, because he is quick to shoot. He is reported by the San Francisco Argus as telling about a cave which he had lately entered. "Suddenly," he said, "my pick, which I was carrying over my shoulder, gave a sudden cant around as if somebody had either pushed or pulled it. In the excitement o' the moment I let go o' the shovel, an' I could hear it goin' whiz through the air, an' about five seconds arter I heerd somethin' strikin' bang agin' a rock. All this time the pick was a draggin' me on. I reaches round for my pistol, and the derned pistol, sir, was a stickin' out straight from my side, an' jest kep' in the sheath by the waist-strap, an' it was a pullin' me on, too." With great particularity and frequent pauses for expressions of disbelief, if anybody cared to risk any, the miner described his investigation, which he gave the following climax: "I came to the edge of a deep ditch, an strainin' my eyes down inter it I sees five skeletons a layin' at the bottom, an' five picks alongside o' them. An' then I looks across this ditch or chasm, an' sees a wall o' rock of a dull gray color but sparklin' all over it with bits o' shinin' things lookin' like iron or steel. An' stickin' dead to this wall I sees my pick an' my shovel, an' then I sees right through the hull bizness. Them skeletons at the bottom o' the chasm were men as hed held on to their picks an' shovels till they were dragged right over the edge o' this chasm, an' either was killed outright by the fall or was starved to death, for there was no way o' gettin' out of it."

Mrs. Hooper writes that the eyes of Jenny Lind are as lovely as ever in their expression and in their soft depths of lustrous blue. Her abundant brown hair, slightly silvered, she still dresses in the same fashion as of old. She lately spoke in warm terms of affection of America, saying, "Your country takes the rabble of all other countries and gives them a chance." To an allusion to the charm of her singing in her youth, particularly in devotional music, she answered, with a rapt expression: "It was because my voice came from God, and I sang to God!"

Oleomargarine seems to be steadily getting a hold in this country in spite of the opposition shown to its introduction by butter men. A New York exchange says: "The market has been steady, with liberal movement of prime stock at the decline. Possessing excellent keeping qualities, the hot weather has not depressed its sale, and we anticipate a moderately-active demand during the summer. The indorsement of this article by many members of the New York Produce Exchange has brought forward orders from distant markets. Prices are ruling a little lower. We quote: Oleomargarine creamery, 15@17c; oleomargarine dairy, 14@15c."

A considerable steel-making industry exists in the present day in China, on the Upper Yangtze, whence the steel is sent to Tien-tsin for shipment and distribution. It fetches much higher prices than the Swedish steel imported into the country. The Chinese metallurgists recognize three kinds of steel, namely, that which is produced by adding unwrought iron while the mass is subject to the action of fire; pure iron, many times subjected to fire, and native steel, which is produced in the southwest. The different names for steel are twan kang, or ball steel, from its rounded form; kwan kang, or sprinkled steel; wei tee, or false steel. The Chinese, apparently, have known how to manufacture steel from the very earliest ages.

AIMING IN ARCHERY.

Instructions by America's Champion Bowman.

The first principle of aiming is to be sure to have the arrow, in drawing, directly under the right eye and lying directly in the line of vision of that eye as it looks at the point of aim. To do this perfectly, observe the following directions:

1. Take position and nock the arrow as heretofore described.

2. Raise the bow with the left hand, drawing back the string with the right hand as the bow is lifted.

3. When the left hand has reached the due elevation for the shot, take aim with the right eye (without closing the left eye) over the point of the arrow.

4. The aim being thus taken, finish the draw by bringing the right hand to a point just below the chin, and there loose.

If the above rules are strictly followed and the arrow, from the fixing of the aim to the point of loosing, has been all the time kept under the right eye, the shot will be in the direct line of vision of that eye.

In following this practice of aiming, the upper limb of the bow must be slanted to the right sufficiently to carry the bow-string entirely out of the vertical plane of vision of the right eye, otherwise two troubles will arise. In the first place the string will be between the eye and the arrow; and, secondly, the string will touch the chin before the draw is finished to the loosing-point. When the bow is slanted to the right the arrow can lie directly under the eye, while the string is drawn to the loosing-point under the chin, and when let go the arrow will fly directly away before the eye in a perfect line.

Before a beginner in archery can successfully practice aiming on correct principles, he must fully understand the laws of vision connected therewith. By fixing the eye steadily upon some distant point, it will be discovered that this particular point is seen by direct vision, and all others by indirect vision. Now, in aiming, the direct vision is fixed upon the point of aim, and the pile of the arrow is made to cover this point; but the gold of the target and the entire length of the arrow are seen by indirect vision, except when the gold, as in point-blank shooting, is also the point of aim.

The first thing then to master, is perfect control of the vision of the right eye. To do this, some archers are compelled to close the left eye, a very ill-appearing thing indeed, which should be by all means avoided. To test your vision take an arrow by the feathered end, and hold it in the right hand pointing it at some distant object, keeping both eyes open. When the point of the arrow seems to cover the object, close the left eye. If then the object is still covered, you are aiming with your right eye. A little practice in this way will perfect your vision so that you can aim with your right eye and at the same time keep the left one open.—Maurice Thompson's book.

A Nashville showman hired a marvelously ugly and misshapen negro, put him into a huge trough of mud, and exhibited him as a "human pig." But the man proved that mud was not his natural element by catching cold and dying of pneumonia.

AGRICULTURAL.

June Work on the Farm.

(From the American Agriculturist.)

Poultry.—Many chickens are carried off by hawks, rats, etc., unless safe coops are provided, which should be closed at night and not opened until the dew is off the grass in the morning.

Ticks.—Immediately after shearing, the ticks leave the sheep for the longer wool of the lambs. The lambs thus infested should be dipped in a decoction of tobacco stems, which will destroy the ticks. Several special dips are in the market.

Cellars should be ventilated at night and kept closely shut up and dark in the day time. The outer air, highly charged with moisture, if allowed to enter the cellar in the day time will deposit much of its moisture upon the cold walls, and the cellar is made more damp instead of dryer by the day ventilation.

Buckwheat may be sown during this month, and may be made a profitable crop, especially upon newly-cleaned ground where the mellowing effects of the crop are of importance. The silver-hull buckwheat is better than the common variety, the yield being greater and the flour from it whiter and of a finer quality than the ordinary sort.

Hay-caps are excellent things to protect the hay from the damage that showers would otherwise do to the curing hay. They should be made of stout cotton a yard or a yard and a half square, provided with loops at the corners for fastening down with wooden pegs. If well cared for, a set of caps will last many years, and save several times their cost.

Hay tedders are important implements in conjunction with the mower. Frequent stirring of the grass, to give the air access to all parts without burning the surface in the sun, is a great aid in making hay of the best quality. Grass cut in the forenoon, and well stirred with the tedder, may be put into cocks in the afternoon, when it will cure better than if spread over the surface of the meadow.

Potatoes.—The Colorado beetle must be kept in check by free and judicious use of Paris green, or the equally-efficient and cheaper London purple. The liquid method of application, using some sort of a sprinkler, is now most generally practiced. It must be remembered that these substances are deadly poisons, to be handled with caution and stored in a secure place, or serious results may follow.

Mowing machines have come to be an indispensable part of the machinery of the farm. It is a serious loss of time and money to get in any large crop of hay without using them. Scythes may be used around fence corners, trees, etc., but in open fields they must give place to the horse mowers, many kinds of which are so near perfection that it is hard to go astray in selecting one.

Haying.—Clover and timothy should be cut when in full blossom; if allowed to get ripe, the quality of hay is not so good. By beginning early the work need not be hurried. Use the mower after the dew is off in the forenoon. Cut only as much as can be well cared for. It is often remarked that the average quality of hay is not so good as before the introduction of the mowing machines, from the temptation to cut the grass faster than it can be cured.

Swedish Turnips may be sown this month in drills thirty inches apart. A plenty of seed should be sown, to insure an even stand of plants—two pounds per acre is not too much. The land should be well manured and thoroughly prepared—a fine tilth is especially essential to success on old ground. Thin the plants, when the second leaf appears, to at least twelve to fifteen inches apart. Partial or total failure is, in many cases, to be attributed to defective thinning.

Sheep Shearing.—Washing sheep, under the present system of buying wool, will, perhaps, be the prevailing practice. If care is taken to keep the sheep so that the wool will not be filled with dirt, it is better not to wash. Fleeces should be done up with care, nicely rolled and securely tied with light twine. When it is known that a farmer puts up his wool in neat shape without any tags, etc., he will obtain the highest price. Everywhere, but especially here, "Honesty is the best policy."

Summer-Fallows.—In rare cases it may be well to summer-fallow. The object is mainly to kill off weeds that have become plentiful and are otherwise difficult to destroy, especially on heavy clay soils. There are so many green crops that may be grown to advantage for cleaning the ground that it seldom pays to keep a field idle for a whole season merely to rid it of weeds. If it is decided to summer-fallow it should be done with thoroughness, that the greatest good may come from the expensive rest that it has given the fallowed land.

Fodder Corn may be sown in drills, two and a half to three feet apart, and at intervals of ten days for several weeks to come. It is not well to sow the seed broadcast, as the plants, to do the best, need to be cultivated while young, and for this purpose drills are necessary. The smaller varieties are preferable on account of superior fineness of the fodder. The notion that sweet corn is better for corn fodder than the ordinary field sorts is without foundation. That the grain is sweeter in the former does not indicate that the stalks are any better.

Corn.—Frequent cultivation is necessary to the destruction of the weeds while they are young. A smoothing harrow may be used while the corn is small, to be followed by the cultivator and hoe, as the plants get larger. The double cultivator with a span of horses is more economical than the single cultivator and a single horse, as it saves the labor of one man. One great advantage of the corn crop is the opportunity furnished for thorough tillage, the beneficial influence of which will be felt throughout the whole rotation of crops. The labor expended upon the growing corn should be charged in part against the crops that are to follow.

Orchards.—With newly-planted trees it will pay to give a little time in examining their condition. If they are loose or leaning to one side, a minute spent in pressing the soil about them with the foot will often save them. A mulching, if not already given to the young trees, should be provided before the long drought. Almost any substance that will cover the soil and protect it from the sun will do. Grafts set this spring should be looked to, and if the bud or buds grow too vigorously, pinch back into shape; in fact, a graft should be treated as if it were a young tree. Cut away all shoots that come upon the stock below the graft, that the nourishment may go to the graft. See that the branches of the graft have plenty of room and the growth is not interfered withby surrounding branches.

HOUSEKEEPER'S HELPS.

Pork Cake.—One cup of molasses, one of sugar, one of boiling water, one pound of raisins, one-half pound of pork cut fine, one pound of currants, one spoonful of soda; spice to taste.

Egg Sauce.—Boil two eggs ten minutes. Chop the whites, put them with the yelks, and chop together, but not very fine. Put in a quarter of a pound of nice butter melted, and pour into a boat.

To keep dried beef: Do up in thick brown paper each piece separate; take a box, put in a layer of dry ashes, then a layer of beef, then alternate; cover the top with dry ashes; set in a cool, dry place.

Sally Lunn.—One pint flour, butter half the size of an egg, one teacup milk, one egg, two table-spoons sugar, one teaspoon cream tartor, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon salt. Bake twenty minutes.

Stair carpets can be made to last a long time by having a yard more than the length needed to cover the stairs, for then you can change it so that the same place in the carpet will not come upon the edge of the stairs every time it is put down.

Cream Pie.—To one pint of milk put two even table-spoonfuls of corn starch, two of sugar, one egg, a small pinch of salt, and flavor to taste with extract of lemon and orange mixed. Bake in a rich paste.

To make baking powders: One pound of bi-carbonate of soda, twelve ounces of tartaric acid, two ounces of cream of tartar, and one pound of flour; mix well through a sieve. In making biscuit use one teaspoonful of the powder to one pint of flour.

When making cake or omelette, take your discarded egg-shells, crush them into small bits, put them into your decanters three parts filled with cold water, and thoroughly shake them. The glass will look like new, and all kinds of glass washed in the same water will look equally well.

Corn-Meal Pudding.—Five table-spoonfuls of corn-meal, one quart of milk, five eggs, two table-spoonfuls of sugar (or to the taste); boil one pint of milk and stir in the meal until thick, then pour in the remainder of the milk, eggs (well beaten) and the sugar, adding raisins or currants, if liked. Bake until a good brown, and eat with cream, or a hard sauce of butter and sugar.

How Alex. H. Stephens Defies the Old Man with the Sickle.

The Washington correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle claims to have solved a problem that has long vexed close observers in Washington city. He says: "Nobody here ever expects that Mr. Stephens will die a natural death. That fond hope has been long since abandoned. He can tackle the old man with the sickle keen, or the gentleman who is more familiarly known as the Reaper, whose name is Death, more frequently and successfully than any well-bred giant on the globe. Do you know the secret of it? Easy and regular habits?

"Well, perhaps these may have something to do with preserving this frail anatomy. He recreates with whist, and goes to bed at 10 o'clock; but, my word for it, he can systematically outeat any disease known in the doctor's calendar. It is the eighth wonder of the world to see this delicate representative of the human race turned loose on a bill of fare. It literally bears out the remark of Bob Toombs that he is hollow all the way down to his ankles. He weighs ninety-two pounds—a Democratic gain of one pound since the last count was taken—and he can absolutely hide away in the course of the twenty-four hours more solid nourishment than any man in Congress, and perhaps out of it. Now, something poetic and refined and romantic, such as diet of rose leaves or nightingale's tongues, might be expected from a man who draws his coat closer on the approach of a gentle breeze, wears his hat in the house and carries about gloved hands. But we are forced to the conclusion that Uncle Alec has creature instincts. He stowed away, to my certain knowledge, on a recent occasion, a sheep's head fish (preceded by soup), two kinds of meat in most liberal proportions, and a vast quantity of side dishes and vegetables. This difficult feat he accomplished with a gusto and relish that would bring a blush to the cheek of the most traveled gourmand; and, when the deed was done, the plates looked as if a stroke of lightning had been at work in the neighborhood. Of course it is useless for death to take liberties with such a life-preserver as Stephens. Nothing but a railroad collision or a balloon trip will have any effect on him."

Habits of the Beaver.

I am well acquainted with the habits of the Northern beaver. Several years ago I bought up several hundred acres of mining lands near the south shore of Lake Superior, in Ontonagon county, Mich. On Carp river, a small stream that crossed a part of my lands, the beavers had built several dams, and formed extensive ponds, in which they built their houses or lodges, as the Indians call them. These lodges are built in water several feet in depth, and the entrance is several feet under water, but the floor of the lodge is built at least two feet above high-water mark. The floor is built solid from the bottom of the pond, except the entrance.

Although the beaver is warmly clad with long, fine fur, he is very sensitive to the cold, and rarely, if ever, leaves the pond or lodge during the cold weather. He lays in his winter supply of food, which mainly consists of the bark of a certain species of poplar. He cuts down small trees and cuts them into short pieces of one foot, or a little over, in length, and takes them into the pond, and fastens one end of these pieces securely in the mud at the bottom of the pond. These pieces of wood are dragged up into the lodge as often as food is needed, and the bark gnawed off; and, after being denuded of the bark, they are by no means thrown away as useless, but are taken under the ice, and carefully placed in the dam, to strengthen it.

They built one dam a little below the foot of Carp lake, which raised the lake thirty inches. The lake is a small one—about one mile long and a fourth of a mile wide. I measured the stump of a maple tree that they had cut down, and it measured fourteen inches in diameter. There were no less than eleven dams on the stream, all in sight of our buildings, where we were mining for copper.

The beaver possesses great engineering skill, always building his dams in the form of an arch, the crown of the arch being invariably up stream, giving it strength to resist the pressure of the water. The Indians used to tell me many singular traits of character that this animal possesses. They build their dams and lodges of mud, sticks and stones, compactly and very strong. I once saw an albino beaver-skin. I thought, and still think, that it was the purest white I ever saw.—T. Garlick, in Forest and Stream.

Czar Nicholas and His Doctor.

On the 2d of March, 1855, when it was known that the Czar Nicholas had died, a wild excitement, increasing from day to day, burst forth against his favorite physician, Dr. Mandt, the more readily suspected because he was a German. Busy calumniators spread the news abroad in all circles that the guilt of the Emperor's death lay at the door of his Prussian doctor. Mandt's family, who were then at Frankfort, were in the greatest terror, when their fear was removed by a dispatch from St. Petersburg stating that the present Czar, Alexander, had taken up the defense of the calumniated man, having called him into his presence, thanked him before the court for the care of his father, and presented him with a magnificent gold snuff-box, richly set with diamonds.

The doctor, it appears, has left behind him a detailed account of the last days and hours of his imperial patient. Almost his only friends at court beside the Czar himself were the heir to the throne and the Grand Duchess Helena. He was an object of violent dislike to her husband, the Grand Duke Michael. When the Czar was taken ill Mandt's meaner foes whispered about that he would poison their master. The Grand Duchess Helena warned him of the plots against his reputation and person. Her husband called him into a private room. "I found him in the highest excitement," says Dr. Mandt. "I thought he would seize me by the collar, but my coolness seemed to make some impression upon him, and he contented himself by shaking his fist in my face, and exclaiming, 'traitor!'" An excited conversation passed between them, and the Prince ended by saying, "On the day upon which the precious health of the Czar is endangered by your treatment, your learned head shall hang upon your neck by the thinness of a single thread."

Nicholas himself was worked up into a temporary suspicion of the fidelity of his doctor. One day, upon feeling himself better, the Czar said: "Mandt, do you know that I believed yesterday that you were bent upon poisoning me?" "I knew it, Sire," replied the doctor. "Then do not forget," observed the Emperor, "that you have enemies here, and many of them." On the night of the 2d of March, Mandt had to tell the Czar the fateful news that his recovery was impossible. Nicholas received the information with great calmness. He ordered the sacrament to be brought, took leave of the Empress, his children and grandchildren, kissed them, and blessed each by name with a firm, clear voice. To the Empress he said: "I shall send for thee when the last moment draws nigh."—London Globe.

What Emigration Means.

Dr. A. S. Heath at a recent meeting of the Farmers' Club at Cooper Union building, said: Forty-six thousand emigrants in thirty days, or over one a minute, have come to us in 1880. At a valuation of $500 apiece this means a national increase of wealth of $500 a minute, $30,000 an hour, $720,000 a day, $21,600,000 a month, or $259,700,000 a year. This means just so much more additional annual production to which a fair profit of earnings is added. This means increased export of wheat over meat; it means development of agricultural and all other domestic industries; it means the rapid settling and improvement of public and unproductive private acres of the West, South, North and East; it means that no peoples of Europe need starve as long as American wheat and meat fields overflow with boundless productions; it means sounder principle of production must be practised, and that land-skinning must cease, or inevitably, in the future, the tide of emigration must flow in tidal waves toward the East, and that millions of American citizens must go from whence their sturdy ancestors came.

The farmer element of emigration, I trust, will be more provident of their generous and newly-acquired acres, and I earnestly hope that they will teach our wasteful farmers many valuable lessons of agricultural economy, and that the farmer who starves his farm will also impoverish his posterity.—New York World.

Air the Bedding.

The desire of an energetic housekeeper to have her work completed at an early hour in the morning often causes her to leave one of the most important items of neatness undone. The most effectual purifying of beds and bedclothes cannot take place if a seasonable time is not allowed for the free circulation of pure air to remove all impurities which have collected during the hours of slumber. At least two or three hours should be allowed for the complete removal of atoms of insensible perspiration which are absorbed by the bed. Every day this airing should be done, and occasionally bedding constantly used should be carried into the open air, and, when practicable, left exposed to the sun and wind for half a day.

A quarter of a million Europeans are engaged in the sea fisheries.

Glass Railroads.

A reviewer in Nature calls attention to one of the greatest novelties in the construction of the permanent way for street-railroads. Glass sleepers, introduced by Mr. Lindsay Buckill and Mr. W. Siemens, of Dresden, have been tried with such satisfaction that it is now proposed to make broad, longitudinal sleepers of glass, having a groove in the upper surface, and, so combining in themselves the functions of both sleepers and rails, do away with the necessity for separate iron rails, with their fastenings, joints, and other complications. In a paper by Dr. Schott, a full abstract of which is printed in the recently-published "Transactions of the Institution of Civil Engineers," England, it is shown that, by properly tempering glass with oil, this very brittle substance "can be made, mass for mass, stronger than steel, and practically unbreakable." Now, if all this is borne out in extensive practical tests, the manufacture of glass for railroad and other purposes will soon reach dimensions which will be startling.

The boys of the Boston public schools are instructed in military drill, and annually have a street parade, with a review by the Mayor.

Children

CRY

FOR

Pitcher's

Castoria.

Mothers like, and Physicians recommend it.

IT IS NOT NARCOTIC.

CENTAUR LINIMENTS; the World's great Pain-Relieving remedies. They heal, soothe and cure Burns, Wounds, Weak Back and Rheumatism upon Man, and Sprains, Galls, and Lameness upon Beasts. Cheap, quick and reliable.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered Dyspeptics, Bilious Sufferers, Victims of Fever and Ague, the Mercurial Diseased Patient, how they recovered Health, Cheerful Spirits and Good Appetite—they will tell you by taking

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, Jaundice, Bilious attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, SOUR STOMACH, Heartburn, &c.,

IT HAS NO EQUAL.

This unrivaled Southern remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

PURELY VEGETABLE.

If you feel drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR.

It is given with safety and the happiest results to the most delicate infant. It takes the place of quinine and bitters of every kind. It is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per ct. National Publish'g Co., St. Louis, Mo.

PILES fully described with scientific mode of cure. Prof. Harris' illustrated pamphlet sent free on application. HARRIS REMEDY CO., Mf'g Chemists, 8th & Market Sts., St. Louis, Mo.

The Book of Million

A large, new and complete Guide to Wedlock, containing, with many others, the following chapters: A Competent Womanhood, Selection of Wife, Temperaments, compatible and incompatible, Sterility in Women, cause and treatment, Advice to Bridegroom, Advice to Husbands, Advice to Wives, [illegible]

"THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER" On Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Varicocele, &c., also on Spermatorrhoea, Sexual Debility, and Impotency, from Self-Abuse and Excesses, causing [illegible]

"Medical Advice," Lecture on Manhood & Womanhood, 10c.

FOR ONE DOLLAR we send all three of the above described books, nicely bound in one volume, containing 600 pages, and over 100 illustrations. The combined volume is positively the most popular Medical Book published. The author is an experienced physician of many years practice, (as is well known), [illegible] or "CHRONIC" diseases.—Postage stamps taken in payment for books.

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY Established in 1847, cures Chronic diseases and complicated cases, and diseases resulting from impure sexual associations, self-abuse or sexual excesses. Patients treated by mail and express. Where possible, personal consultation is preferred, which is free and invited. Questions to be answered by patients desiring treatment mailed free to any address on application. For books or treatment address DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Seminal Pastille

An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz., Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease. [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Unsolicited testimony to the Efficacy of Prof. Harris' Seminal Pastilles, taken from Letters received from Patrons.

Indiana, April 21st, 1879.—The remedy is working perfectly. Had epilepsy from weakness, for eight years past.

Chicago, Aug. 14, 1879.—I am thoroughly cured and feel tip top. The young man in the country is getting better.

Missouri, Sept. 12, 1879.—I received so much benefit from the use of your remedies that I want to try them in another case. This is of long standing, and will need something very strong.

Mich., Jan. 26, 1879.—I have used up your package of medicine; send me another as soon as possible. That package stopped all apparent trouble, but there is a weakness yet, and I wish you would prepare this lot for the cure of that.

Iowa, Oct. 20th, 1879.—I am almost surprised at your Pastilles. They have worked like a charm on me. I am just twice as much of a man as I was before taking. I was on the verge of the grave, I thought, and there was no cure for me, but now I am in good hopes of a cure.

West Virginia, Aug. 26, 1879.—I received your medicine, and I believe it has cured me, for which I am very thankful. Enclosed please find $3, for which please send me another box (No. 2) for a friend. You have done a great thing for me. I will send you all the orders I can.

From a Physician and Surgeon.

Missouri, June 20th, 1879.—Please forward me at once another box of the Pastilles. The patient on whom I have used one box, in addition to a sample box, is fast recovering, and I think another will set him all right.

From a Druggist.

Maryland, Sept. 2, 1879.—Last January we got from you a box of your remedy, for one of our customers, and it has made [illegible]

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, IND., JUNE 10, 1880.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

"No solid south, no solid north, but a solid Union."

Representative in Congress, 12th District,
WALPOLE G. COLERICK.

Democratic County Ticket.

For Representative,
DAVID D. MOODY.

For Clerk,
JOHN W. BAXTER.

For Auditor,
THOMAS H. TOMLINSON.

For Treasurer,
LAFAYETTE J. MILLER.

For Sheriff,
J. J. VAN AUKEN.

For Recorder,
MICHAEL BOLAND.

For Surveyor,
ADAM P. FOLTZ.

For Coroner,
JAMES J. LATSON.

For Commissioner, North District,
EPHRAIM SHIPE.

For Commissioner, Southwest District,
EDWARD KELHAM.

Democratic County Central Committee

OFFICERS.
Wm. L. Blair, Chairman.
Theo. Reed, Secretary.
J. J. Van Auken, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.
Wm. L. Blair. Jas. A. Barns, S. S. Shutt, J. Wm. Wagner, T. F. Jordan, Guy Plumb.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEEMEN.
C. M. Merica, Butler township.
J. J. Walter, Jackson township.
T. S. Murray, Concord township.
Geo. A. Munn, Newville township.
Jacob Christoffle, Stafford township.
Geo. W. Maxwell, Wilmington township.
M. Houston, Auburn precinct.
D. Y. Husselman, Waterloo precinct.
W. J. Frederick, Keyser township.
L. D. Britton, Richland township.
J. M. Brumback, Fairfield township.
Fred. Waterman, Smithfield township.
T. H. Tomlinson, Franklin township.
B. F. Cornelius, Troy township.

Joint Representative Convention.

Delegates from the counties of DeKalb, Noble, and Elkhart, the same constituting a joint representative district, will meet in convention at Kendallville, Ind.,

FRIDAY, AUGUST 6th, 1880,

for the purpose of nominating a democratic candidate for joint representative for the counties named. The ratio of representation will be one delegate for each 100 votes cast for Gov. Jas. D. Williams in 1876, and one for each fraction of 50 or over, as follows:

DeKalb county	26
Noble "	21
Elkhart "	21
Total	68

By order of the district committee

Judicial Convention.

The democracy of Noble, DeKalb and Steuben counties, constituting the 35th judicial district, will meet in delegate convention at Kendallville, Ind., on

FRIDAY AUGUST 6th, 1880,

for the purpose of nominating a judge of the circuit court and prosecuting attorney. The ratio of representation will be the same as that in the joint representative convention, which will be held at the same time and place.

By order of the district committee.

Governor Landers.

"Credit Mobilier" Garfield is his name.

Thomas A. Hendricks should be the man nominated for president by the democrats at Cincinnati.

A full delegation from DeKalb county attended the democratic state convention at Indianapolis yesterday.

The county ticket gives general satisfaction; every man on the ticket will be elected by a handsome majority.

James A. Garfield, of Ohio, was nominated for president by the republican national convention at Chicago Tuesday. His defeat will be a walk-away for the democrats.

Democrats of DeKalb county have concluded to lay aside personal prejudices and all go to work for success, which means that the national, state and county tickets will receive their undivided support.

The republican nominee for vice-president is Chester A. Arthur, of New York, a man who was removed from the collectorship of the port of New York, by Hayes, because he was believed to be corrupt.

Every candidate who allowed his name to go before the democratic convention last Saturday, did so with the full understanding that all could not succeed. All were good men and good democrats, and the defeat of a portion of them does not reflect upon their work as citizens or democrats. That these facts are realized by the unsuccessful ones, is evident from the good feeling manifested after the convention. A good and true democrat always submits to the action of his party.

A telegram received from Indianapolis, just as we go to press, gives the result of the work done yesterday by the democratic state convention. The following excellent ticket was nominated: For governor, Franklin Landers; for lieutenant-governor, Isaac P. Gray; for judges of supreme court, John T. Scott and James Mitchell; for secretary of state, John G. Shanklin; for auditor of state, Mahlon D. Manson; for treasurer of state, Wm. Fleming; for clerk of supreme court, Gabriel Smuck; for reporter of supreme court, A. N. Martin; for attorney-general, T. W. Woolen; for superintendent of public instruction, A. C. Goodwin.

THE ENTRIES ARE MADE,

And Every Candidate Named Will Be a Winner.

The Democrats of DeKalb Are Ready For the Great Race of 1880.

A Harmonious County Convention and a Good Ticket.

Persuant to call, the democrats of DeKalb county met in convention at the court-house in Auburn last Saturday. At 10:30 a. m. the convention was called to order by W. L. Blair, chairman of the county central committee.

Upon motion, the following-named persons were elected officers of the convention:

Hon. Freeman Kelley, president; W. H. Dills, vice-president; Theo. Reed, secretary, and J. C. Loveland assistant secretary.

A call of the townships showed every township and precinct represented by a full delegation.

Messrs. Theo. Reed, James A. Barns, S. S. Shutt, B. D. Thomas and W. L. Blair having been appointed by the county central committee to consider the propriety of adopting the primary election system of nominating candidates for county offices, reported in favor of primary elections and submitted rules and regulations for the government of the same. A motion to adopt the report was declared lost. After some discussion as to a reconsideration of the vote, owing to a misunderstanding of the question, it was decided to postpone action upon the subject until some future time.

Upon motion of Judge McClellan, the names of candidates were called for, and the following announcements were made:

FOR REPRESENTATIVE,
D. D. Moody, of Auburn precinct.

FOR CLERK,
D. Y. Husselman, of Union township, John W. Baxter, of Wilmington township.

FOR AUDITOR,
John W. Dills, of Concord township, Thomas H. Tomlinson, of Franklin township.

FOR TREASURER,
Lafayette J. Miller, of Richland township, Jefferson Beard, of Franklin township, D. H. Murray, of Concord township.

FOR SHERIFF,
J. J. Van Auken, of Union township, Philip Plumb, of Union township, J. W. Boyle, of Wilmington township.

FOR RECORDER,
Michael Boland, of Richland township, James Quince, of Butler township, Geo. H. Munn, of Newville township, Samuel M. High, of Jackson township, Sol. S. Mottinger, of Smithfield township.

FOR SURVEYOR,
Geo. L. Lanning, Wm. Ensley, Adam P. Foltz and Dr. Tritch, all of Auburn precinct.

FOR CORONER,
J. J. Latson, of Auburn precinct.

FOR COMMISSIONER—NORTH DISTRICT,
Joseph Sewell, of Franklin township, John Stearns, of Troy township, E. R. Shoemaker, of Smithfield township, Ephraim Shipe, of Fairfield township.

FOR COMMISSIONER—SOUTHWEST DIST.,
Edward Kelham, of Keyser township.

Upon motion, the following candidates were nominated by acclamation, they having no opposition for the offices named:

Representative—D. D. Moody.
Coroner—J. J. Latson.
Commissioner, southwest district—Edward Kelham.

The convention adjourned until one o'clock p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The convention was called to order promptly at one o'clock, when the following resolution was read and adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that all delegates here assembled are in honor bound to support the nominees, and that each person whose name is here announced as a candidate for office, shall be required to personally pledge his support to the nominees of this convention, whoever they may be, which pledge shall be made publicly.

In compliance with the resolution the several candidates present publicly pledged their support to the entire ticket.

The convention proceeded to the nomination of candidates by ballot, with the following results:

Clerk—	Husselman	67
	Baxter	148

Upon motion of Mr. Husselman, Mr. Baxter was declared the unanimous choice of the convention.

Auditor—	Dills	105
	Tomlinson	111

Upon motion of Mr. Dills, Mr. Tomlinson was declared the unanimous choice of the convention.

Treasurer—	Miller	112
	Murray	104
	Beard withdrawn.

Upon motion of Mr. Murray, Mr. Miller was declared the unanimous choice of the convention.

Sheriff.—Before the result of the ballot was declared, Messrs. Boyle and Plumb withdrew their names, and J. J. Van Auken was declared the unanimous choice of the convention.

Recorder—	Boland	143
	Quince	25
	Munn	15
	High	25
	Mottinger	8

Mr. Boland was declared the nominee.

Surveyor—first ballot,	Lanning	59
	Ensley	46
	Foltz	104
	Tritch	7
Surveyor—2nd ballot,	Lanning	64
	Foltz	145
	Tritch	7
	Ensley withdrawn.

Mr. Foltz was declared the nominee on second ballot.

Commissioner—north district.	Sewell	48
	Stearns	23
	Shoemaker	21
	Shipe	125

Mr. Shipe was declared the nominee.

There being no further business to transact, the convention was adjourned sine die.

The County Ticket.

In another column will be found the proceedings of the county convention, held last Saturday, and the ticket nominated. The convention was large and harmonious, and the candidates placed before the people for their suffrages are honest, upright citizens, well qualified for the several positions of trust which each of them will be required to fill, in response to a triumphant election next fall.

Mr. D. D. Moody, who heads the ticket as a candidate for the legislature, is a gentleman above reproach. As an attorney he enjoys a lucrative practice, and it was with considerable reluctance that he consented to be a candidate. He will be elected by a rousing majority, and the interests of his constituents will be safely guarded by him in the state legislature.

Mr. Jno. W. Baxter, candidate for clerk of the circuit court, is the present incumbent, who was appointed by the board of commissioners to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Moss, deceased. Mr. Baxter is giving excellent satisfaction, as he will continue to do for the next four years. He is a young man of excellent qualities, a democrat in every sense of the word, and as a politician will leave no stone unturned to secure the election of the entire ticket in the coming campaign.

Mr. T. H. Tomlinson, candidate for auditor, is a hard-working, energetic farmer—a gentleman of good business qualifications, and well fitted for the position he will be called upon to fill in the court house.

Mr. Lafe J. Miller, candidate for treasurer, is now and has been for several years, agent for the Lake Shore railroad at Corunna, which position he has filled to the entire satisfaction of the railroad company and its patrons in the northwest part of this county. Mr. Miller is a good accountant and a first-class business man in every particular; he is a wide-awake, active worker in politics, and will be elected beyond question.

For sheriff, the invincible J. J. Van-Auken is the nominee. It is scarcely necessary to allude to Jay in this brief sketch of the candidates, as he is well and favorably known by almost every man, woman and child in the county; he is peculiarly adapted to the duties of sheriff, and the democracy of DeKalb county has decided that he shall succeed Mr. Leas.

Mr. M. Boland, the nominee for recorder, who now holds that office, is also a gentleman who is well known throughout the county—one who can be re-elected with perfect ease. His popularity, as manifested by the ballot, is due to his qualification for the office and the efficiency with which he has filled it in the past.

Mr. A. P. Foltz, of Auburn, is a mechanic, and a man who is in every way fitted for the office of surveyor, for which position he was the choice of the convention. He will go into the office with a good majority, and will discharge its duties to the letter.

Mr. J. J. Latson was nominated for coroner for the fifth time, which, of itself, is evidence enough that he is the right man in the right place.

For commissioner of the north district, Mr. E. Shipe, of Fairfield township, is the coming man. He is an old resident of DeKalb county, a prosperous farmer, and a man of excellent judgment; therefore it would have been difficult to have made a better selection.

Mr. Edward Kelham, of Keyser township, who is the present commissioner for the southwest district, has given sufficient satisfaction to justify his being re-nominated by acclamation, which was done at the convention of Saturday. Mr. Kelham has faithfully attended to his share of the duties of his office in the past, as he will do in the future.

An Error.

In the headlines to its telegraphic news from Chicago, last week, the Fort Wayne News made this surprising statement, in its issue of Thursday evening: "Not Yet is the Republican candidate Nominated!" Whoever sent that dispatch to the News was drunk; no such name was mentioned in the convention.

Less To Boast Of.

[State Sentinel.]

It has been said that if Christianity were stricken from the world's history the record of the human race would be a record of barbarism.—Journal.

Possibly; but certain it is that if republicanism were stricken from the history of the United States, the devil would have far less to boast of than at present.

The democratic convention, last Saturday, was one of the most harmonious ever held in DeKalb county.

HAZZARD AND WILKERSON.

Partisan Injustice.

Under the above heading, the Indianapolis Sentinel of Tuesday has a little piece to speak which, viewed from our seat in the gallery, hits the bull's-eye about in the center. It relates to the recent release of George Hazzard, and is as follows:

It will be remembered by the readers of the Sentinel that some months ago a notable case of crime was tried in the United States district court, sitting in this city. One Hazzard was charged with an extended system of forgeries, found guilty and sentenced to the penitentiary. During the trial of the case there was not brought forward in the testimony a solitary extenuating circumstance. It was a case of unalloyed and unmitigated rascality, from first to last. Hazzard was shown to be a cool, calculating criminal. Still this man serves but a small portion of his sentence, until executive clemency is obtained, and Hayes sets him free. We have another case in view, to be placed beside that of Hazzard's. The readers of the Sentinel will remember the Jennings county case, wherein it was sought to show that a number of democrats had combined to import votes for the purpose of influencing an election. All efforts to prove a conspiracy, as set forth in the indictment, utterly failed. The trial, on the part of the government was conducted with all the ability that General Harrison could command. As a result one poor fellow by the name of Wilkerson, a young man against whose character, prior to the case in question, no charge of evil of any kind was ever made, was convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary. It is not our purpose to allude to the case further than to state the fact of conviction, sentence and imprisonment. Application has been made to Hayes for excutive clemency. Punishment has done its work, all the degredation that imprisonment could inflict has been accomplished. From the lowest, as well as from the highest, point of partisan observation, justice has been meted out to the unfortunate Wilkerson; still, he languishes in prison, and no appeal for executive clemency can move the heart of Hayes. Here we have the parallel: Hazzard, a calculating criminal, who robbed his victims by methods deliberately planned and executed, goes free; while a youth, whose crime, to say the worst of it, was his first, and the result more of the wickedness of others than of any self depravity, is held in prison in defiance of every principle of mercy and justice. It would be difficult to exhibit partisan malignity in a more repulsive light.

Cedar Creek.

—Bennett Hixson and Henry Probst have their new barns about completed.

—We have had a few days of very fine weather, which is gratifying to many of our farmers who yet have corn to plant.

—C. M. Merica is just now prying into everybody's business, Uncle Sam having given him the right to do so as a census enumerator.

—C. B. Jones is getting along very nicely with his broken leg; he is beginning to hobble around the room some, and we hope soon to see him out again.

—Our homœopathic physician, Dr. Kester, is getting a large practice and having excellent success; he is a worthy christian gentleman, and we are glad to have such men among us.

—Elbridge Bruce and lady have commenced house-keeping on the farm of old Mr. Probst, he having rented it for a term of years. May joy and prosperity accompany the newly-married pair.

—Old Father Martin, of Wolcottville, was here Saturday evening and Sunday morning ministering to the spiritual wants of God's children. The old gentleman is in his 78th year, but is still robust and hearty; his mind appears yet to be strong and active.

—The acting christians of this place, it appears, are not quite so much in earnest as they were some six months ago. We trust they may not longer falter in their zeal, but may live whole-hearted christians, for the good book tells us, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

X. Y. Z.

A Popular and Reliable Company.

As to the soundness and standing of the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Company, the Indiana Farmer has the following editorial in the issue of May 22, 1880:

"Some of the foreign insurance companies are waging a war on the Ohio Farmers' Fire Insurance Company in this state, and report all manner of things about it. We had occasion to examine its reports and papers on file in the office of the Auditor of State this week, as well as those of other companies, and we found its affairs were frankly and freely open to the world, and that its condition compares favorably with other companies. We examined them with a view of ascertaining how much truth there was in statements of other and interested companies, and we believe that the company is sound, and does business safely. The fact that for 32 years it has promptly paid all losses, and accumulated nearly a million of capital besides, is a bit of practical experience in its favor that cannot be whistled down at a breath. It seems that the cause of the war and jealously is, that this company has become very popular among the farmers of the west, and taking no city or conflagration risks, can and does issue policies for less than the rates of some other companies."

The principal office of the company above named is located at Le Roy, Medina county, Ohio. Mr. C. G. Shepard is the soliciting agent for DeKalb county, Indiana and Defiance county, Ohio. For full particulars concerning the company, address F. M. Thompson, general agent, Hicksville, O. 24-tf

The Indianapolis Sentinel says: "The republicans ought to have nominated a man for president who had never been connected with a swindle. They had a few men of that type, but an honest man was not what the Chicago convention was looking for.

Summer

Underwear for Ladies, Gentlemen and Children, in light-weight Merino, Gauze, Lisle-Thread and Balbriggan, all sizes and qualities now in stock. Our stock of Summer Hosiery and Gloves is large and well assorted with all the staple and Fancy Novelties of the season. Black and Colored Lace Mitts, Lace top Lisle Gloves, Kid Gloves of our various popular brands, in 2 to 8 buttons in street, Opera shades and black, at reduced prices.

ROOT & COMPANY.

Parasols.

Just opened—An elegant new lot of Black Satin Parasols, Rich Black Brocade Parasols, Fancy Colored Parasols, Children's Parasols, both lined and unlined, $2,50 to $15,00 each. Also an immense new line of Sun Umbrellas, 20, 22 and 24 inches. Blues and Browns in a great variety of Ebony, Horn, Ivory, Bamboo, Natural Stick, Tortoise Shell and Agate Handles, $1,50 $1,75, $2,00, $2,50, $3,00 each and upwards. Please examine them.

ROOT & COMPANY.

Light-Weight
Suitings.

For gentlemens Wear.—Our stock is probably the largest and best-assorted in the city. Our Goods are of the best Scotch, English, French and German manufacture. Our prices are VERY LOW, as the goods were ordered before the great advance in prices of Woolen took place. Gentlemen wanting Business Suits, Dress Suits, or anything in the way of Cloths, Cassimeres, Doeskins, Diagonals, Meltons or Chevoits, should not fail to examine before they purchase.

ROOT & COMPANY.

Lawns.

350 pieces New lawns this week in Tinted and White Ground, with and without Side Bands, 10, 12 1-2, and 15 cents per yard. Also New Linnen Lawns, Organdies, Jaconets, new Foulard Cambrics, French Chintz, Zephyr Ginghams, Canton Ginghams, Seer-suckers, etc., etc., 10, 12 1-2, 15, 20 and 25 cents per yard. Our stock of Wash Fabrics is very large and worth looking at. Black and Colored Bunting in great variety.

ROOT & COMPANY, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The Auburn Fruit-House.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

Sugars Down.

Ligh Brown, 8 cents; Light yellow, 8 1-2 cents; Extra Yellow C, 9 cents; Coffee A 10 cents; Granulated, 11 cents.

Coffees Down.

Good Rio, 15 cents; Best Marracabo, 20 cents; Fancy Rio, 22 cents.

South Carolina Rice, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; New Prunes, 10 cents, or 3 pounds for 25 cents; A No. 1 Fine-Cut Tobacco, 40, cents; Extra Fine-Cut Tobacco, 50 cents; Plug Tobacco of all brands very cheap; Parlor Matches, 7c., or 4 for 25 cents; the very best Syrups, 70. cents; Splendid Teas at from 30 to 75 cents.

Fish of all Kinds.

No. 1 White Fish, Family White Fish, Pickerel, Lake Fish. Catfish. Mackerel, Herring, Smoked Halibut, Boneless Codfish, etc., etc., all sold cheap and warranted as represented.

Crocks and Jars of any size at 7 cents a gallon.
Entrance on Seventh or Eighth Streets

Frank A. Hoff.

KIBLINGER & CO.

We are always busy behind the counters, in the ware-house, and on 1st, 2d and 3rd floors, selling Hardware, Nails, Doors, Sash, Glass, Paints and Oils by the wagon-load. Call on us when in want of anything in the Hardware line. We will sell you cheaper than the lowest. Thanks for past patronage.

KIBLINGER & CO.

A Rare Bargain.

The undersigned offers for sale at Fairfield Center, DeKalb county, Indiana, one-half acre of land, upon which is situated a good dwelling-house, barn, well and cistern; also a fine store-room containing a stock of drugs, dry-goods and groceries—a splendid location for a doctor or merchant. Terms, one-half down, and the balance in one and two years. Cause of sale, poor health.

24-4t. DR. A. B. MATHEWS.

Boarding and Lodging.

The Misses Baldock will take boarders by the day or week, at reasonable rates. Their place is conveniently located, being on the first block east of Odd Fellows' building. Patronize the young ladies and they will do their best to furnish good meals and good rooms. 33-1w

S. B. HARTMAN, D. D. S.

DENTIST

88 Calhoun st. Fort Wayne Ind

Artificial TEETH on Gold, Silver, Porcelain or Rubber Plate.

Notice of Administration.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THE undersigned has been appointed by the judge of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Charles Probst, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

24-3w HENRY PROBST, Administrator.

June 7, 1880.

Read This.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, agent for the GENUINE SINGER, at Spencerville, Ind. Horses and cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office at Cahill's tin-shop. 14-tf.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

WANTED—AN EDITOR

And a Proof-Reader, at the Republican Office.

About a month ago, or more, the De-Kalb County Republican, a so-called newspaper published at this place, took occasion to comment upon and criticise one or two items which appeared in the COURIER, not being able to detect any errors, either typographical, grammatical or orthographical, but determined to find fault in some way, the editor of that poster—if it has an editor—made a gigantic effort to hold the said items up to ridicule—a jackassical attempt of which be must himself have been ashamed. Fully appreciating the advertising courtesies extended to us by our envious neighbor, and being anxious to make a full reciprocation for favors, we herewith call the attention of our readers to a few of the many excellencies of that ably-edited journal. The list is necessarily somewhat disconnected, but it is "official" and verbatim; and besides, it is highly edifying to the cultured mind. Having a few spare moments to waste this morning, we glanced over the last issue of the Republican and noted the following display of journalistic ability:

"Programme," for programme, is good; so is "Peterson," for Peterson, and "wts," for was; and "profesoion," for profession; and "alo," for also; and "faught," for tought; and "candidats," for candidates; and "mohths," for months; and "recieve," for receive; and "Stovor," for Stover; and "admissable," for admissible; and "advise," (verb) for advice, (noun); and "merchcum," for meerschaum, (a clear case of didn't-know-how-to-spell); and "showe," for shows; and "friends," for friends; and "counselman" (!) for councilman; and "sevanth," for seventh; and "surpaise," for surprise; and "presance," for presence; and "sumptous," for sumptuous; and "peaple," for people; and "grandfother," for grandfather; and "authoritively," for authoritatively; and "penetentiary," for penitentiary; and "Tona," for Tony, (abbreviation of Anthony); and "fonnd," for found; and "warrented," for warranted; and "fellowos," for fellows; and "authoritis," for authorities; and "will," for will; and "licenses," for licenses; and "consciencious," for conscientious; and "af," for of; and "depradations," for depredations—and so on without limit. This little list comprises only a portion of the typographical errors and misspelled words—saying nothing of a multitude of letters upside-down, words misdivided and blunders in punctuation. Yet the man who allows such a sheet to issue from his office has the cheek to undertake the criticism of a newspaper!

And then, too, wonderful grammatical construction is exhibited throughout the Republican; its editor (?) has evidently been through college, though it is probable that he was there just about long enough to go through from the front door to the back. The last issue of his paper is remarkably improved, being comparatively devoid of any exhibition of ignorance, yet gaze on one or two gems of literature. In speaking of the soldiers' association, it says: "The labor is accomplished by the Association, and the citizens meet the actual expenses, which is for orator, music, etc." That is a real pretty expression—"expenses is for." And again: "Mr. Palmer's remains were bro't to Auburn for interment, and was followed to his last resting place," etc. But the following excruciatingly grammatical phrase carries off the palm: "There actually seems to be more sympathy for the burglar Garfield, he whom would have murdered Mrs. Barney!" This, then, is a fair sample of the customary appearance of a paper that has the brazenness to push itself forward as a model! For the sake of the reputation of our town—for the sake of the citizens who take a pride in its advancement—and for the sake of the rising generation, we implore the editor of the Republican to employ a proof-reader and hire himself out to a grammar factory, or else shut up his print-shop and run as a candidate for stage-driver out in the backwoods.

LAKE-SHORE ACCIDENT.

Two Engines Badly Smashed.

Early Tuesday morning, express train No. 5 on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad, which passes Corunna at about 3 o'clock, making no stop, ran into freight-train No. 50, which had side-tracked for the former, and the wrecking of both engines was the result. One baggage car was also demolished and a coach full of passengers was turned completely over, though no lives were lost nor was any person seriously injured, strange as it may appear. The freight train, which was going east, ran in on the west end of the switch, closing it after passing; but the switch at the east end was turned on the side-track, thus steering the passenger train directly into the engine of the freight. How it is that the engineers and firemen escaped with their lives is too intricate a problem to solve, as the express train was running at a high rate of speed. Upon whom the blame devolves we have not yet learned, though it is probable that the yard switchman will have to shoulder it.

—Was your favorite candidate nominated?

—Join the excursion to Pleasant Lake next Sunday.

—The boom in improvements around town continues. Selah.

—In spite of the elements, the town was full of people last Saturday.

—Miss McTighe, of Auburn, is visiting with Mrs. John Campbell.—Kendallville Standard, June 3.

—You will miss a day of great enjoyment if you don't go to Pleasant Lake next Sunday morning.

—If you are bilious you will find positive relief by using "Sellers' Liver Pills." Sold by all druggists.

—G. H. Forkner left for Topeka, Kansas, Tuesday afternoon. He will remain away about two weeks.

—Tom Bell is now traveling around the country in the service of George Clark. Tom is a horseman, he is.

—A whole raft of Polanders and Polanderesses was in town the early part of this week. A law-suit was the incentive.

—Mrs. John L. Davis and Mrs. Mattie Birdsall have been visiting near Huntertown this week, at the home of Mrs. Shryock.

—The three hotels and the restaurant were rushed with business Saturday. The candidates and the convention did it.

—The senior editor is absent this week at the state convention in Indianapolis. He intends to "see how the old thing works."

—Henry McIntyre is seriously threatened with a case of paralysis. His right foot is numb, and refuses to be controlled.

—Fred. Clark gets up every morning by Chicago time; it is twenty minutes slower. He goes to his meals, however, by Columbus time.

—Hooping-cough, croup and colds are alone cured by "Dr. Sellers' Cough Syrup," which is daily working miracles. Price 25 cents.

—Miss Zelpha McBride gave up her place at Hollister's restaurant last week. She is now taking a rest and visiting her parents at Butler.

—Read the prospectus for the De-Kalb County Republican, which appears elsewhere. It is a free "ad." and is highly entertaining.

—Miss Maggie Ward, of Fort Wayne, was in town long enough last Friday to attend the Presbyterian social. She is an entertaining young lady.

—The substantial roof of Kiblinger's new building, also the cornice, was put on by B. Goodman. The floors come next, and then the plastering.

—A big lop-sided, raw-boned, baby-elephant horse, belonging to a picture peddler, ran away on Ninth street and stirred up some excitement Tuesday.

—The Presbyterian ladies' social, which was entertained Friday evening by Mrs. Swineford, was decidedly the best one that has been held this season.

—Billy Rainier's pool-table has been re-covered and fixed up so that it is now as good as new. His whole room is to be handsomely kalsomined and refitted.

—Will. Ryan is thinking seriously of having the stuffing taken out of his feet, because every time he goes into the horse's stall, the latter gets wild and has fits.

—John L. Davis was one of the last to go to Chicago, but he was there at the most interesting time, nevertheless. He went Sunday night, returning Tuesday morning.

—Tickets are now on sale at half-fare rates, at the Jackson office, for the races at Jackson. To-morrow closes up the season at that place, and it will be an interesting day.

—Miss Allie Zimmerman and Miss May Rhodenbaugh left Friday for Pleasant Lake. The former returned the first of the week, but the latter will make a more extended visit.

—Ike Jones, one of the party of young men who went to Montana some five months ago, is now at home again, where he will remain. He thinks Auburn is good enough for him.

—Miss Effie Wunderlich dropped in on her friends in Auburn last Monday noon, giving them a pleasant surprise. She stayed but a day or two, however, and returned to Columbia City.

—Mr. Dickenson, of the Waterloo Press, was in town Tuesday taking notes. He said the editor was away, the paper was behind, and altogether the boys were "in a d—l of a fix."

—An ice-cream social will be entertained by the M. E. society, at the residence of Mrs. J. B. Casebeer, Wednesday evening. All are cordially invited.
MRS. J. ANDERSON, Sec'y.

—Uncle Tom Gross thinks he must have given away as many as forty matches since he has been keeping hotel; this probably accounts for his not being a stock-holder in some bank.

—The county commissioners have been in session all this week. They were yesterday engaged in granting licenses to numerous saloonists throughout the county who have duly made application.

—Cool & Muder have this week received five new and handsome side-bar buggies, from the Cortland Wagon company, of New York. They are beauties, both in appearance and price, the latter being remarkable.

ALMOST MANGLED.

Narrow Escape From a Cruel Death.

Last Monday morning at 5 o'clock, being desirous of reaching Auburn early, in order to get a start on business for the week, we boarded No. 7 on the Fort Wayne and Jackson road, which leaves the former city at that hour. Fred. Clark, agent at Auburn Junction for the aforesaid road, accompanied the writer. At the proper time the signal for "off brakes" was given, the conductor of said train No. 7—which is a local freight—yelled "all right," and away we went; but alas for human hopes and expectations! Before the train had passed out of the depot yard, another train belonging to the Muncie company began backing up and undertook to get in on the switch ahead of us. It may be apropos to state right here that we have never yet seen the feat of running two trains on the same track, at the same moment, successfully accomplished. We saw the shadow of the coming event casting itself before;—we instantly anticipated the result, and with a hasty prayer for our father, mother, sisters, another fellow's sister and ourself, (also for our grip-sack and umbrella, which were in the caboose,) we leaped madly from the train. The crash and the crisis came. Fred. carefully took an inventory of his anatomy, as did also the writer, and we ascertained that no important members were missing; but the rear car on the Muncie train was mashed beyond recognition and dumped from the track, while the caboose on our train suffered a painful injury to its step, which the conductor, Jack Dolan, afterward found necessary to amputate.

Thanking our lucky stars for the hair-breadth escape from an appalling death, we shouldered our breathing remains and climbed on the train, resolved to make Auburn that day or die on the road; and subsequent events will show that we were afforded another excellent opportunity. At Auburn Junction, while picking up cars and switching around promiscuously, a similar experiment was attempted, this time our train making an endeavor to back across the Eel-River track while an Eel-River freight was crossing ours. This, too, was an ignominious failure. Our already-abused caboose—or a portion of it—was manufactured into toothpicks and ruthlessly bounced from the track; at this point we observed a singular circumstance, namely: There wasn't a man in the car but what exhibited how much true gentleman he had in him by getting up and relinquishing his seat; they all got up simultaneously, and the majority of them left the train without anyone telling them to. When this last little occurrence occurred, we were standing on the platform at the depot, only about a hundred yards away, thus averting death for the second time that morning; but it was a marvelously close shave. If we had been in that train a half hour sooner, where might we be now? The mere thought of it (i. e. where we might be now) makes our hair stand on end.

Fred., too, is grateful for his escape from so frightful an end—his release from such a perilous situation. He was eating breakfast in the Stamets house at the time of the second catastrophe. From Auburn Junction to Auburn we took our chances in the depot hack, arriving here about four hours behind time and congratulating ourself on being alive. What ever became of the ill-fated train No. 7, we have never been able to learn.

Why So Sly?

It was quite apparent around the Swineford hotel, Thursday evening at about supper time, that something out of the ordinary course of human events was going on; the host first made his appearance with an enormous smile all over his features, and then came his wife, who also looked pleased; in fact, everybody around the premises wore a broad grin and seemed happy; but who wouldn't? In the parlor, just at that moment, two hearts' destinies were being united, the same belonging to Frank Draggoo, of Concord, and Miss Laura Gibford, of Spencerville, who is a sister of Mrs. Sol. Barney. Rev. H. Johnson spoke the magic words and kissed the bride—no, the groom kissed Mrs. Swineford—confound it!—somebody got kissed, anyway, and the two that went in came out as one.

Who Did It?

Two or three days previous to the decoration day exercises, some contemptible individual perpetrated a sneaking trick, which, for downright meanness, excels anything we have heard of this season, it being the notification, in the customary cowardly way—by anonymous letter—to two of our most estimable young ladies, that "the services of no democratic ladies would be required on that day." What a charming display of republican justice and amiability! Of course it was let pass apparently unnoticed, being too insignificant and low to be considered; but "straws show which way the wind blows," and this may be accepted as an indication of the general feeling existing in the "pure and undefiled" republican ranks in Auburn.

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.,
tf Auburn, Ind.

—Seven liquor licenses were granted yesterday by the commissioners.

—Dr. Miller, of Farmer Center, son-in-law of Treasurer Gonser, was in town yesterday.

—Sim. Tarney left for Fort Wayne at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. That "cousin" of his requires considerable attention.

—The walls of Fred. Huelsenbeck's new building, on Seventh street, are completed, though it will be some time before it is ready for occupancy.

—Misses Flora and Laura Norway, and Miss Jennie Foot, all of Farmer Center, arrived in town yesterday, and are the guests of Miss Cassie Gonser.

—Em. Baker and Em. Zink had a little racket last Saturday night.—Fort Wayne News.

A sort of a 2-em (b)racket, wasn't it?

—Mrs. Rickel, aged 98 years and 6 months, mother of W. J. Rickel, who formely practiced law at this place, was buried at Waterloo last Monday. Frail nature yielded to the claims of old age.

—J. C. Henry reports the notion business better now than he has ever known it before at this season. His traveling outfit—horses, wagon and stock—takes the lead of all competitors on the road.

—The superiority of this week's issue of the COURIER is due to the absence of the senior editor. (The foregoing is a joke on our partner, and we will keep at a safe distance from him when he gets home.)

—Geo. Clark and W. L. Penfield left for Fort Wayne on short notice, Tuesday night, the former having been summoned to appear yesterday at the trial of a law-suit in which he is one of the principals.

—The house recently purchased by Dr. Littlefield, on Tenth street, will make a handsome little home when the improvements are completed. He is having a cosy little room finished up for an office.

—The road from the old cemetery down to the Eel-River railroad, under the supervision of Marshal Scott, has been filled in and graded so that it is now navigable, so to speak, and in good condition.

—The handsome little aquarium in the show-window of Casebeer & Matheny's drug-store attracts a great deal of attention. Dr. Humphrey, who superintends it, exhibits considerable taste in its arrangement.

—Auburn's absorbing interest in a dog fight is remarkable. A little mill between two canines on the corner of Main and Seventh, yesterday noon, drew a large and enthusiastic audience in about one minute.

—Both the Butler and Corunna bands enlivened things at the convention last week. They make excellent music and are well organized, which we hope may be said of our own Auburn band before many months.

—Jas. Gilliland is again in his element, having taken his stand as a salesman in the grocery and provision store of John Kruger, on south Main street. Mr. Gilliland has been engaged in similar business many years.

—Mr. C. G. Shepard, the gentlemanly canvassing agent for the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Company, spends one-half of his time in DeKalb county. Our farmers need not be afraid to entertain him when he calls to see them.

—Uncle John McClellan found an empty pocket-book on the sidewalk, a day or two ago, and he also found an owner for it, in the person of James Moore, who says it was stolen from his coat pocket by a tramp and thrown away.

—Dr. Casebeer's horse, while running loose on Jackson street Monday, started in a playful mood towards Miss Nellie Potter, but she, misinterpreting the animal's motive, lost no time in putting a fence between herself and the horse.

—The census-takers are now up to their ears in business, and the work of enumeration goes bravely on. The men who are engaged in these labors are all married, so it'll not avail the girls anything to lie about their ages. Mind that.

—Messrs. Lewis Swineford and Frank Bush, of Ashland, Ohio, visited in Auburn all last week, guests at the Swineford house. The former, who is a brother of S. C. Swineford, is well known to most of our citizens, having been engaged in business here some four years ago.

—No little excitement and comment was occasioned on the streets of Auburn, Tuesday afternoon, when the dispatch announcing the result of the Chicago convention was received. Nearly everybody "thought it would eventually be Garfield."

—The shop of Mr. E. Berry, on south Jackson street, is a perfect little store-room of curiosities, the work of his own hands in leisure moments. He is now whiling time away by building a beautiful little steam engine, of about 8-horse power, which gives sufficient proof that he is a natural born mechanic.

—James Marshal, aged about 65 years, an old resident of Edgerton, O., was found in the St. Joe river about a mile and a half from that place early Sunday morning last, his body having been in the water for several days. A coroner's inquest was held, but we have been unable to learn the result. He leaves a wife and several children.

—George Hazzard attended the Chicago convention in full bloom. He promises to make it interesting for all Auburn visitors. Why, the crazy thing!

—There will be an excursion from Ft. Wayne to Pleasant Lake next Sunday, June 13, over the Jackson road. Round-trip tickets will be issued at half fare, and the train will pass Auburn at 8 a. m., arriving at the lake at 8:40; returning in the evening, it will leave at 8 o'clock. Everybody go.

—The following interesting dialogue took place at Auburn Junction, a day or two ago: A profanely-inclined man, after gazing intently into another man's face, suddenly extended his hand and exclaimed, "Where in h—l have I seen you before?" To which the stranger calmly replied: "Well, sir, I'm sure I don't know. What part of hell are you from?"

—Miss Lida Powers, the efficient superintendent of our schools for the past year, left Monday morning for her home in Greensburg, this state. She will deliver an address before the alumni meeting soon to be held at Terre Haute. Miss Powers leaves many warm personal friends here in Auburn who part with her regretfully, though in the hope that "sometime, somewhere, they shall meet again." She is a young lady of merit as a teacher, being possessed of rare mental attainments, and there will be some difficulty in successfully filling the vacancy made by her departure.

Memorial Fund.

As some inquiries have been made relative to the disposition of finances received by the treasurer of the above, we hereto append his report:

Rec'd from financial committee,..	36 25
" " former treasurer,........	6.30
Total,........	$42.55
EXPENDITURES.
Paid for Auburn Band..........	$15.00
" " orator,................	5.00
" " scarfs, flags, etc.,.....	11.06
" " work on graves,.......	3.00
" " sheet music and arch..	2.27
Total,........	$36.33
Balance in treasury,.......	$6.22

C. BEUGNOT, Treasurer.

Have You Tried It?

Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative, the great blood purifier and renovator, a specific for liver complaint, biliousness, chills and fever, dyspepsia, kidney diseases, rheumatism, and constipation of the bowels. Removes pimples and sallowness from the skin, producing a clear complexion. It is prepared from roots, barks, and herbs; is entirely harmless, and pleasant to take, and has a larger sale and gives better satisfaction than any other medicine in the market. Pint bottles only one dollar, and every bottle warranted. For sale at Casebeer & Matheny's drug store. 23-2w.

Over 1,500 Cases of Fits Cured!

Also consumption, catarrh, dyspepsia, nervous debility, all diseases of the urinary organs, female and chronic diseases are cured quickly and permanently by Dr. S. Clay Todd, 77 Calhoun street, (up-stairs), Fort Wayne, Ind.
Consultation free. Medicine furnished. 16-tf.

$100 Reward

For any case of

CATARRH

That cannot be cured with

HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

This is no humbug. No nasal douche. No snuff. Nothing to irritate the nasal cavity or distroy the sense of smell. It is an INTERNAL REMEDY ACTING FROM THE BLOOD, cleansing it from its impurities, causing the puriform matter to be carried off through the natural channels. It is a scientific preparation used and prescribed for years by one of the ablest practitioners in this country, and has never failed to cure when used according to direction.

WE MAKE THIS PROPOSITION:

If any person, after taking one dozen of HALL'S CATARRH CURE is NOT CURED OR BENEFITED more than four times its cost, we will refund the money paid. If it does you good you are willing to pay for it. If it does no good it costs you nothing.

PRICE 75 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

Manufactured by F. J. CHENEY & Co., Druggists, Toledo, O.

11-1 yr. For Sale by all Druggists.

This Spring!

We are making some extraordinary efforts to do about two-thirds of the

CLOTHING BUSINESS

of this city. Heretofore we have, probably, done one-half of it. With our increased facilities, and having bought largely before the advance, etc., our belief remains unchanged, and we shall act upon it, that the best time to sell cheap is when others sell dear; and that more fortunes have been made by selling at low than high prices. Call and see the most complete stock of

Men's Clothing,
Boy's Clothing,
Children's Clothing,
Hats and Caps,
Gents' Furnishing Goods

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.
C. O. D.

One-price clothiers and displayers of the best goods for the least money.
Opposite North Door Court House.

A MEDLEY OF MERIT.

A FINE
DRESS SUIT.

Black Cloth Frock Coat..........$10.00
Black Doeskin Pants..........5.00
Black Cloth Vest..........2.50

PANTS.

Men's Fine Rock or Harris..........$5.00
Men's All-Wool..........3.00
Boys' Very Durable..........2.00

BOYS' SUITS:

Excellent Quality..........$10.00
Strong and Durable..........5.00

SAM, PETE & MAX
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

EXAMINE OUR NOVELTIES FOR SPRING.

New Hat Man!

Hats.

and Caps

New Hat Man!

C. H. YESBERA,
Auburn, Indiana.

SOLITUDE.

BY JOHN [illegible].

And what is solitude? An echo says,
To roam away and hold communion sweet,
Alone with nature and with nature's God,
Where sounds of revelry and din of strife
Retreat to nothingness; to seek the deep
And silent wood, and stroll the brook beside,
Whose silver waves but ripple forth a song
Of praise to Him whose boundless grandeur crowns
The universe of thought and deed and truth
With love's refulgent light; to go where man
Is not, nor e'er has been, nor stain of sin
Pollutes the fragrant air with incense dense
Of crime and [illegible] where gracefully bow
The giant oak and [illegible] wildwood flower
To Him who reigns supreme—the King of Kings.

Not so! [illegible] within the midst,
And hear the jostling sway that strife doth make
To those who walk upon the thoroughfare
Of busy selfish gain; to stand where life
Is all aflame with love for power and pelf—
An ardent, eager, thronging mass of clay
That grinds humanity to dust for gold;
Where might is right and honesty is sin,
And he who would not be an infidel
To curse and loud blaspheme the God of gods,
Is shunned as though a fool and lunatic—
The dregs of all created thought; to live,
To move, and know no sympathizing breast—
In which a heart doth dwell as virtue pure—
Doth burn responsive to thine own wild hopes;
To feel there is no heart that beats for thee,
Or loves to think or dream of thee as friend,
Or call thee some dear name, as in the past.
Ah! this is solitude! A doleful state;
The wildest, deepest solitude that comes
To human ken—the dregs of earthly woe;
The spell of death and blackness of despair.
[illegible], Ohio.

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

The fire burns cheerily in my room to-night; the light gilds the furnishing, the pictures and ornaments; all openly suggestive of coziness and comfort. I lean back in my arm chair, survey the surroundings, and try to think that I am contented. But it is in vain. I can only realize its emptiness—to me it is only the taunting ghost of what might have been. How vividly the past comes up before me to-night. It is useless for me to attempt to drive away these thoughts, for they are bitter memories of my past life, which, like Banquo's ghost, will not down at my bidding. I try to crush out all thoughts of the past, as at other times, but they come with such weight that they are stronger than my will.

Two years is not a long period of time, if measured as days, weeks and months, but, if measured by the agony the human heart can endure, it is an eternity.

Some say that hearts cannot break, others, that women's do sometimes; but men's are so constituted that they can bear disaster to the affection without material injury to that delicate organ. I don't pretend to say how this may be, but I do know this world will never again look as bright and beautiful to me as it did before I closed my eyes on hope.

I try to cover my sorrow with a mask of harshness toward womankind, and well I succeed; for among my acquaintances I am known as a bitter, cynical man, who sneers at women and love; and not one among them would accuse me of ever having a sentimental thought. But there are times when the old fires burst forth uncontrollably—yes, times in my life when anniversaries come—when temporarily there is an end to peace, and I must live over again the bitter past; and to-night is one of those times, and unwillingly I drift back into the "long ago." It is evening. The brilliant orb of day is slowly and majestically sinking toward the western horizon. The soft breeze is heavily laden with the fragrance of the early spring flowers, and it stirs gently the tender leaves of the few forest trees that have dared to assume their vestments of green. A broad, deep stream, spanned by a rustic bridge; and directly across this, and as far away as the view is unobstructed, winds a sandy, neglected road, bordered on one side by a dense undergrowth of scrub oaks, with here and there a tall pine, which stand like grim sentinels on guard; and, on the other, by a broad field, which shows by the freshly, turned soil that the plowshare of the husbandman has been busy there. Half a mile away, can be seen, standing out in bold relief against the clear evening sky, the tall, white spires of the village churches; and, as the bright rays of the declining sun are reflected from the bronzed balls by which they are surmounted, they glitter in the distance like burnished gold.

Upon the bridge stand two figures. A youth of perhaps 22 years of age, and a girl several years his junior. She, tall, dark and queenly, with deep, fathomless eyes—such eyes as poets write of—eyes, one glance from which can elevate a man to the supreme pinnacle of happiness or doom him to such excruciating torture that the pangs suffered by lost souls in the lowest pits of hell can scarcely compare with it; broad, high forehead, over which, as is the prevailing style, is tastefully arranged the glossy locks of jet-black hair. Her face is one that brings to memory the description given by ancient writers of the goddess of beauty, but a close reader of human character would pronounce her possessed of a heart that would break before it would yield, and a will that is strong as death.

Silence holds supreme away. The only sound that breaks in upon the calm, peaceful stillness is the low, musical murmur of the stream as it flows beneath the bridge and the vesper hymn of some feathered songster as it wings its way to the deeper shades of the forest.

The girl is seated upon the low railing of the bridge. In one hand she holds a small parasol, while the other, from which she has removed the dainty glove, toys idly with a small bunch of wild flowers which lie upon her lap. Her eyes are fixed upon the distant hills, and there is a far-away look upon her face which tells that her thoughts are not of her immediate surroundings.

Her companion is leaning against the railing at her side and gazing westward at the setting sun which now hangs like a fiery ball just above the summit of the distant hills. But ever and anon he turns his face toward the beautiful being at his side, and his eyes light up with what is unmistakably a look of love.

He is the first to break the silence, and his voice is low, as if fearful that its sound would grate harshly upon the quiet surrounding.

"Myrtle, listen to me, please."

She glanced up, but gave no other indication that she had heard his request.

"Myrtle, I must tell you now what has been on my mind for weeks. It distresses me, beyond the power of language to describe, to realize that we are no longer children, and to feel that the impression made upon me by your charms years ago seems now to be increasing to a deeper sense of your loveliness and grace. Pardon me if my confession saddens you, but I love you, Myrtle, with the purest and holiest sentiments of my heart, and I feel that without you my life will be a hopeless future of sadness and gloom. Had I never seen you as I now behold you, time might possibly have erased from my memory the tender associations of the past with which you are connected, but now I feel that the impression of your loveliness can never fade from my mind."

He ceases speaking, and stands awaiting her reply. Her eyes have been fixed upon the rippling water, but, as he finishes, she raises them to his face. Not a shade of color mantles her dark, olive cheek. She looks at him almost haughtily, and not a tremor is discernible upon her face.

"Myrtle, darling, do you understand me? I love you more than life; for, without you, life would be worth nothing to me. Myrtle, will you be my wife?"

And still she is silent. A minute passes, but it seems an age to him, and then she extends one little hand toward him. With a glad cry he clasps it in his own and carries it to his lips. And this is all. He would give worlds for the privilege of taking her in his arms and pressing one passionate kiss upon those bright, ruby lips; but he knows only too well the nature of this girl who has but just pledged her faith to him. They turned and walked silently away in the gathering twilight, down the road that leads to the village. The plaintive notes of the whip-poor-will are heard away off in the forest. Slowly and silently night lowers her curtain of darkness o'er the earth and pins it down with a million of glittering stars.

* * * * * * * *

To dream of joy and wake to sorrow
Is doomed to all who live and love.

Spring has faded into summer, and the last days of summer are slipping away. The scene now is a social gathering in the village. The soft, mellow lamp-light falls upon many a fair face there that needs but the opportunity and it would rival the boasted charms of many an acknowledged belle of the city ball-rooms. Again do I see the maiden I saw upon the bridge in the early springtime. But the youth is not with her now. By her side stands a dark, coarse man, with low forehead, deep-sunken eyes, and full, sensuous lips, which tell that he has more of the brute in his nature than is usually allotted to man. And yet this girl is smiling up at him as she never smiled upon the fair-haired youth who pleaded so passionately for her love but a few months before. Where is he now? Ah, I have just discovered him. He stands beyond this couple, further back in the shadow, and they are not aware of his close proximity, for he is the subject of their conversation. Why is his face so pale? Why, indeed! He has just discovered that the only woman he ever loved, or ever can love, is false to him—that she has toyed with his heart's deepest affection willfully; and, worse than all else, he has learned that she loves the dark, evil man at her side.

Mechanically he tears the glove he has just drawn from his hand into small pieces, and drops them one by one upon the floor. There is a bitter, sarcastic smile upon his face as he watches the couple, who fancy themselves unobserved amid the throng. Unnoticed by them he leaves his place in the shadow and passes out into the night.

All alone, with none to mark the conflict save the All-seeing one, does he struggle with that heart-consuming love. And, as the gray dawn comes slowly creeping in at his window, he has conquered. But at what a cost! In this battle what has he lost? Confidence in mankind, hopes of heaven and faith in God. And he has gained nothing.

* * * * * * * *

The scene has closed. The past joins to the present. The pictured faces smile down upon me from the wall. I arouse myself from the dream, and am again the harsh, cold man of the world. And

I take up the burden of life again,
Saying sadly, "It might have been."

Knew His Business.

A conductor on one of the Chicago street-cars suddenly experienced religion and joined a small flock in the neighborhood of his residence. None more devout than he was to be found in the country round, and every spare moment from his business was put into something energetic toward strengthening up the little church into which he had projected himself. Noticing his interest, his pastor, to encourage him, shoved him along all he could, and in a short time the new convert was a shining light among his fellow-worshipers, and the Christian grace with which he passed the contribution-plate evoked nickels from what before had been barren pockets.

One Sunday morning a hoodlum was noisy, and the conductor quietly ordered him out. He went, but last Sunday evening he appeared with a mob of dissolute companions, bent on a difficulty. The conductor kept an eye on the leader until the disturbance became unbearable.

"Put on breaks a moment, parson," said he, "till I look after this fare."

Approaching the thug, he went for him, and wiped up several yards of aisle with him, and then stood him on his legs.

"Five cents for the kingdom of God!" he demanded.

The hoodlum said he did not have to pay.

"Five cents for this ride on the gospel chariot," and he smashed the thug in the countenance.

"But, brother," remonstrated the pastor, "you cannot compel him to contribute."

"Never you mind that, parson. You preach and I'll collect. This man can't dead-head on this orthodox through line without putting up. Beside, I'm responsible to the company for his fare. I've punched him and he's got to show coin."

A girl was subjected to ostracism in the high school at Fitchburg, Mass., because she would not dress for class-day in the uniform costume worn by the rest. The school committee will provide penalties for such cruelties hereafter.

MUTILATED CURRENCY.

How Uncle Sam Redeems It—Some Interesting and Amusing Cases.

Whenever any one, through the accidents or carelessness of mankind, or his wife, or his cow, or hog, or in any other way, comes into possession of mutilated currency, he sends it to the Treasurer of the United States for redemption. He also usually tells the story of his wrongs or his misfortunes to excite the official's sympathy and to get good bills in return. This engenders a sort of literature, which, if collected, would make an interesting and curious volume. Before giving a few notes from it, it will be told how this sort of tattered and torn currency is redeemed. It goes to the Redemption Bureau of the treasury, and in case it is a legal-tender note and the numbers and denomination are distinguishable, and satisfactory evidence is furnished that the other portion will never be presented, a new note is issued to the owner of the fragments. If a national-bank note, the name of the bank must still cling to it, and the same evidence as to the other portions be furnished. Satisfactory evidence consists of affidavits as to how the money became so dilapidated, and the indorsements by responsible persons as to the honest intents of the claimant for redemption. For, of course, fraudulent attempts are frequently made on this bureau. Quite often a woe-begone piece of note will be sent in, and, upon applying the crucial test, will turn out to be part of a counterfeit; sometimes, too, the fragments are "manufactured" to make up a good case. In these instances the sender gets a reply more pointed than polite. But generally there is little trouble, and the fifty men and women employed in this division can see through the case remarkably quick, and the claimant gets his just deserts at once. The pieces of notes which pass muster are ground to a pulp, dried, and sold to paper-makers. The amount redeemed averages nearly $1,500,000 a month.

One of the most remarkable cases that has ever come before the Redemption Bureau is that of a Nebraska backwoodsman, a camp fire and $100. By accident he dropped his pocketbook containing the money into the fire; it was very hot, and before he could get it out the book had shriveled up to a hard ball, round and compact. He did not open it, but sent it on with a statement of the facts. The ball was cracked just as a walnut would be, and revealed the contents in $10 and $20 bills intact and undamaged, and the backwoodsman got his $100 back again. Another case was that of an Illinois farmer who had a distrust for banks. A short time ago he had several thousand dollars (no unusual thing among Illinois farmers) which he carried in his coat pocket and hung the coat on a chair near the fire. In the night his wife smelt "something burning," and jumped up to find his coat burned and his money a charred mass. Fortunately there was enough distinguishable about the notes to secure him, and he has since concluded to patronize the banks.

The charred money from the great Chicago fire was sent to this bureau for redemption. Banks keep their money in packages unfolded, and most of the Chicago banks lost the notes they had on hand. In some instances, replacing was impossible, but in others the thin layers of notes, the division between which was hardly perceptible, were neatly separated, and the numbers and denominations picked out of the black and feathery framework of what was once a note. In this way $126,000 out of $165,000 was identified, and new notes issued to the banks for that amount.

An Ohio farmer lost $160 by plowing it under in his field. The next season he turned it up, and, though almost decomposed, it was, upon application, found redeemable. Cases like this are numerous. Also instances where dogs, horses, cows and other animals have digested and partly or wholly destroyed Uncle Sam's promises to pay. One man sends forward the portion of a $10 bill, and says he has watched the dog vigilantly for the remainder of it, but not successfully. He got a new note.

A sad case is that of a poor old lady in Philadelphia. She was saving money to secure admission to a charitable institution. She had accumulated $65, and concealed it in a cupboard. It disappeared. She was certain it had been stolen, but some of the neighbors suggested mice, and after a close search under the floor the fragments of her $65 were found in a rat's nest. She gathered up the litter and sent it to the treasury, but the rats had done their work too well, and only $8 out of the whole sum could be identified. So the old lady lost $57 by rats.

An amusing correspondence is carried on with a Georgia lawyer, who refuses to be convinced. A client had $265 burned up, and reliable witnesses to prove its destruction. He was informed that nothing could be redeemed in nothing only, despite the fact that there had once been something. The lawyer replied that the Government was thereby an unlawful gainer. He quotes law, moral and statutory, and spins out long arguments, but has at length found a match for his wit. His arguments are of no avail; nothing still remains nothing in spite of argument.

Mutilated coins are never redeemed. This is little understood and many are sent in. These are always returned. All the owners can do is to melt them up and sell them as so much bullion.

Webster's Financial Weakness.

Persons who knew Webster intimately in his early life were wont to speak of him, to put it delicately, as entirely devoid of business methods and business ideas. Charles Sumner mentioned, more than once, an experience he had with the godlike Daniel, whose successor he was (1850) in the national Senate. It was while Sumner was practicing law in Boston, years before he had acquired any general reputation. He and Webster had defended the Commonwealth in a suit, and had been allowed $1,000 each for services. One day Webster stepped into Sumner's office and said, "I'm going over to the State House, Sumner, to get my $1,000, and I'll get yours, too, if you like." Sumner, it seems, had some knowledge of his associate's peculiarities, and declined the proposal with thanks; and, when it was urged, declared emphatically that he preferred to let his money remain where it was. "All right, then," replied Webster, and departed. But when he went to the State House he drew Sumner's fee as well as his own, the clerk having no doubt that he had been authorized to do so; and the eminent barrister, it is understood, died indebted to his younger colleague for that amount!

Webster's fame was that he never took any notice of his debts, and that he was totally reckless of money. All he wanted was supplied by his Boston admirers, and it slipped through his fingers like quicksilver. He appeared to be so fully aware of his idiosyncrasy as to jest about it.

ALL SORTS.

The wife of D. McBride, in Atlanta, Ga., has given birth to a child weighing twenty pounds and ten ounces.

George Jenkins, of Barbour county, Ala., killed a rattlesnake which weighed forty-two pounds, and had fourteen rattles.

Joel Grubbs, of Russellville, Ky., who is 98 years old, frequently walks to Buena Vista springs, a distance of six miles.

In Montague county, Texas, a gentle work-ox went mad and attacked a man on horseback, goring the horse to death, while the rider escaped by climbing a tree.

A young married man plowing, his wife hoeing, and his baby sleeping in the fence corner in a cradle, is what a gentleman saw near Hartwell, Ga., recently.

In his younger days Prince Bismarck was credited with saying that all large cities should be swept from the face of the earth, they being but hot-beds of revolution.

An 11-year-old boy at Queen City, Tex., born without arms, is said to use his toes with as much ease and dexterity as ordinary boys do their fingers. He can even write legibly with his toes.

A blind girl has excelled all previous members of the fourth class in the high school at Portland, Me., by attaining a rank of 100 in all her studies for one month, except Latin, and 98 in that.

William Allen, Jr., has brought suit for $100,000 damages against thirty-seven residents of the county of Clermont, Ohio, whom he accuses of having attempted to lynch him in May, 1879.

Garibaldi, who is in excellent health, is at present repairing and enlarging his house on the island of Caprera. The enlargement is made in view of his recent marriage with the nurse of his children.

The editor of the Albany Argus has a pointer bitch which catches fish by submerging her head and taking them with her mouth. She does this purely for sport, and does not eat or even hurt the fish.

A woman at Allenville, Ark., conspired with a drug clerk to give her husband poison as though by mistake. The plan was to let the man die, and then the widow was to sue the clerk's employer for damages.

Iron mountain, Mo., is all that its name implies, being seven-tenths pure iron. It is nearly a mile long, half as broad and several hundred feet high. It is being carried away at the rate of 850 tons a day.

In the seven years of the Revolutionary war Great Britain sent to America about 112,000 soldiers and 22,000 seamen. The forces raised by the United States during the same period consisted of about 232,000 Continental soldiers and 56,000 militia.

"I only want to show you one thing more, Professor. I have invented a short method of boring mountains which I think will prove very valuable." "My dear sir," burst forth the wearied listener, "if you would only invent a short method of boring individuals you would indeed confer a lasting benefit upon the race."

When, in the reign of James I., Mrs. Turner, chief starcher to the Queen and the fashionable world, was hanged, she came to the gallows in the peaked style of hat introduced by Queen Elizabeth, which sent that kind of head gear out of fashion as effectually as did Mrs. Manning's black satin dress at her execution that glossy material now again in vogue. The bonnet worn by Queen Victoria on the day of her accession was a genuine coal scuttle.

Basle successfully holds her own against all competition in the ribbon trade. This supremacy dates from the Edict of Nantes, in common with the English trade. As far back as 1810 there were some 600 ribbon looms at work in the canton, producing annually material valued at $1,250,000. In 1872 there were 7,000 looms, employing 6,000 weavers and helpers and sixty designers, and consuming annually 400 tons of silk, out of which over 130,000,000 yards of ribbon were manufactured, valued at $12,500,000.

Mrs. Wilkins, of Oxford, N. C., had three children of her own and was stepmother to a boy. The latter annoyed her by stealing eatables from the pantry, and she tried in vain to prevent his depredations. She locked the daintiest of the food in a chest, and he opened it with a skeleton key. Finally she poisoned some cake, put it in a closet, and went away for a day's visit. On her return, instead of finding that the boy was dead, she saw the remains of two of her children who had been killed by the poison.

Newly-Painted Rooms.

The danger of inhaling the vapor of turpentine has been long known, and its pernicious influence on the health is beyond all doubt, as has been verified in several cases occurring in persons sleeping in newly-painted rooms, some of which have even proved fatal. Several theories, more or less plausible, have been propounded to explain the prejudicial effects of the inhalation of these vapors; but, whatever be the correct explanation, there is no doubt of the danger of occupying a room recently painted in which turpentine has been employed, before complete desiccation has taken place. It was pointed out by the Council of Hygiene, that a sudden death which recently happened in Paris was attributable to this cause, it being shown that it could not be ascribed to the lead which entered into the composition of the paint of the room in which the deceased slept. The lead, being fixed and non-volatile, cannot in these cases be accused of being the offending element.

SECRETS OF THE PRINTING OFFICE.

One Class of Men Who Were Never Known to Betray Professional Confidence.

[From the London Printer and Stationer.]

Printers have never, we think, received due appreciation for the honorable confidence which they have preserved in regard to the secrets with which they have been intrusted. Such a case as this often happens. An article in a newspaper or magazine makes what is called a "sensation." It is entirely anonymous, and public curiosity is excited to the utmost to discover the name of its author. The writer may be a Cabinet Minister, a high official, a courtier, or any of the thousand and one persons who, if he were suspected of writing for the press, would at once lose his position, his office—perhaps his reputation. On the other hand, the writer may be a struggling author, a hard-working journalist, or a mere literary amateur. In any case his secret is preserved; his anonymity is safe as long as it is confided to the printers.

Some years ago there was a great stir made about a book entitled "Ecce Homo." It was a clever work, and had an unexampled success. "Who is the author?" was the question on everybody's lips. Some scores of persons were named, and they repudiated their participation in it. All sorts of conjectures were hazarded, and no doubt large sums would have been paid by several conductors of journals for authentic information as to the name of the author. Yet that name was known to a master-printer, his overseer, and at least some of the compositors, but it was never revealed. When the name was published, it was not through the instrumentality of the printers, but entirely independent of them. They had faithfully kept their secret.

Going back a few years, the authorship of the "Waverly Novels" may be referred to as a remarkable incident of literary history. Sir Walter Scott's authorship, although known by twenty persons, including a number of printers, was so well concealed that the great novelist could not, even in his matchless vocabulary, find words of praise sufficient to express the sense of his grateful acknowledgment and wondering admiration for the matchless fidelity with which the mystery had been preserved.

There is another species of secrecy—that relating to the careful supervision of confidential public documents, books printed for secret societies, and the authorship of articles or pamphlets, as already referred to, which has been most honorably maintained. When treaties are prematurely published in newspapers the copy is obtained from some leaky or venal official, and not from any of the printers who set up or work off the original. A case of this kind occurred a year or two ago, wherein a convention between this country and another power was revealed to one of the evening newspapers. In the Foreign Office, at Whitehall, there is a regular staff of printers always at work, and if these men liked they might let out secrets of the most momentous kind, any one of which would, perhaps, in these days of journalistic competition, be worth a few hundred pounds. But such a dereliction of duty has never yet occurred; it was a clerk, and not a compositor, who betrayed his trust.

Most honorable to the profession is the story of Harding, the printer, who bravely bore imprisonment rather than reveal the authorship of the celebrated "Drapier" letters. The printer sat in his cell calmly refusing the entreaties of his friends to divulge the name of the writer, Dean Swift, a church magnate, and a great wit, who dressed himself in the disguise of a low Irish peasant, and sat by, listening to the noble refusal and the tender importunities, only anxious that no word or glance from the unfortunate printer should reveal the secret. Swift was bent solely upon securing his own safety at the expense of the printer; he cowered before the legal danger which Harding boldly confronted. The world has unequally allotted the meed of fame to the two combatants. The wit and the printer both fought the battle for the liberty of the press, until the sense of an outraged community released the typographer from the peril so nobly encountered.

There is also the allegiance which printers pay to their chief, in not divulging important intelligence. In some cases a compositor is necessarily intrusted with an item of news which would be negotiable immediately, and worth pounds to him. Seldom or ever is there a betrayal of trust in this way. The examination papers, printed so extensively in London, are of the most tremendous importance to certain classes, who would pay almost any sum to obtain the roughest proof the night before. An instance of this kind occurred quite recently. A printer was "got at," and promised a considerable amount of money for a rough proof. What was his course of action? He simply informed the authorities, and the tempter was punished. It was another and a creditable example of how well and honorably kept are the secrets of the printing office.

Bologna.

Bo-logn-ya is a walled city in Italy, yet it invented sausages. Bologna has no hogs, yet the shops reek with the odors of leeks and garlic. Cairo may have forty-nine smells, but how many has Bologna? There are nineteen kinds of cheese (that are good), and each with a smell—oh, what a smell! There are the shops of cooked vegetables where you buy a boiled hot potato for a soldi, or a half-kilo for five of them, all these smell; then the sausages. It's a perfect sausage fair, an industrial exposition of Bolognas. They are in links, in gut, in bladders (of all sizes), in cakes, in stomachs, in membrances, in nets, in flask-like forms, in clubs, in cudgels, in canes; sausages smoked, dried, leeked, fatted, lean, spiced, plain, mildewed, decayed, greasy, moldy, [illegible] gray, mottled, broken, tottering with age, or plump with youth.

And yet we feasted on them and the thin wafer-like, mosaic-like surface of it was delicate and zestful.

Francis Vincent, of Wilmington, Del., has described to Congress in a long memorial a plan for uniting under one government all the English-speaking countries of the world. He admits that there may be obstacles to overcome.

"FIFTEEN MINUTES TO SPARE."

BY WALLIE C. YOUNG.

O youth, in life's bright, rosy morn,
Whilst sunbeams gild thy way
And thoughts intense within thee burn,
Be mindful of to-day!
The present thou mayst claim for thine—
The future's a dream most fair—
Think twice ere thou dost squander, then
Thy "fifteen minutes to spare."

And, should a comrade say to thee:
"We'll shun the narrow way,
And eat, and drink, and merry be,
For to-morrow we'll away;"
Turn thou at once, the tempter scorn
Who spreads for thee a snare:
Touch not, nor taste, but be a man
In "thy fifteen minutes to spare."

There are treasures scattered on the [illegible]
That await a searching hand,
And coral wreaths in the billowy main
And grains of gold in the sand;
There are gems of learning snugly hid
And bright thoughts, here and there
That may be thine to revel amid
In thy "fifteen minutes to spare."

The transient rain-drops of a day
Help make the sparkling rill,
And it, in turn, doth haste away
To help old ocean fill.
If thou wouldst wear a starry crown
Mid angel bands up there,
Then earn the jewels, one by one,
In thy "fifteen minutes to spare."
Clarendon, Ark.

PITH AND POINT.

Whenever the Indians and soldiers have a brush the soldiers are apt to furnish the hair.

The trouble in this country is not so much that we cannot raise coffee as that we can't settle it.

What need is there to worry and fret,
And vainly try more trouble to borrow,
When we know that after the sun has set
To-day will be yesterday to-morrow.

"The family man," says Mrs. Quilp, "resembles an oyster on the half-shell. The shell is shown at home—the soft side abroad."

A mule's head does not contain a brain capable of culture and refined rearing, but it is wonderful to what extent the other end of his form can be reared.

"Whom can we trust?" is the black-type inquiry of an exchange. It is of no consequence. "Whom can we induce to trust us?" is the soul agonizer.

"Tennyson spends hours on a single line." And so, by the way, does the washerwomen. And the line of the latter is the longest.—Norristown Herald.

His name is not "May-I-shoot-a-long-horned-cow"—that is, if the King of Siam's name is referred to. He writes in this way: "Mahah Chuta-long-korn Klow."

While a Leadville lawyer was cross-examining a woman who was on the witness-stand, she exclaimed: "I'm a lady, and by thunder don't you forget it."

Father—"But Charley, again I see no improvement in your marks." Charley—"Yes, papa, it is high time that you had a serious talk with the teacher, or else he'll keep on that way forever."

A citizen of Plymouth, Ind., fired six shots at a supposed burglar, and then his wife called out: "See here, Sam, if you don't stop shooting at me you'll have the house full of neighbors."

Said a crafty husband to his business partner, "I have promised my wife an immense surprise for her birthday." "More extravagance?" "I shall give her nothing, it will be an immense surprise."

"When you order a new covering for your parasol, of a particular color, you should always give the shade, my dear," said a lady to her daughter, who exclaimed, "Give the shade, mamma! Why, the parasol will do that!"

Mr. Bildebback laid down his paper and gazed thoughtfully into vacancy. "From the frequency of glowing and highly eulogistic obituary notices," the old man said, "I judge there is an unprecedented mortality among the mean men just now."

A schoolboy spelled d-e-c-i-m-a-l and pronounced it dismal. "What do you mean by calling that dismal?" exclaimed the teacher. "'Cause it is," answered the boy. "It's dismal fractions. All fractions are dismal. There isn't a bit of fun in any of 'em."

Two fishermen were talking. "I have found a splendid place for fish recently—a new place where they bite like everything!" "Ah, have you? Where is it?" "A little above Serves. I was there yesterday." "What did you catch?" "The 6:40 train coming home."

The farmer feeds the bleating u u,
The sailor sails the c c,
The gardener p ants the p p, he does,
The printer takes his e.
The sinner wipes his weeping i i,
The farmer swarms his b b,
The printer daily sets his m m,
The teamster yells his g g.
The lawyer gathers in his [illegible],
When he has tried his [illegible],
The Sheriff's ever on the [illegible],
The gambler risks his a a.

Butter? You remember the story of the guest who was eating more butter than biscuit, while the landlady looked on and fidgeted and hinted until she fairly went into a nervous fit. Finally she said, "Do you know butter is up to 65 cents a pound?" The hungry guest reached out and took what there was left. "Well," he drawled, approvingly and reassuringly, "good butter is wuth it."—Burlington Hawk-Eye.

Turkish Clemency to Vermin.

A Turkish family often remove from one set of apartments to another in order to escape the fleas and other vermin. The insects take up their abode between the badly-jointed planks and under the rugs. They increase and multiply, because the Turks are unwilling to destroy animal life. A lady, familiar with Turkish manners, tells the following story of the Turk's clemency toward fleas:

I was once visiting at the house of a Pasha lately arrived at Adrianople. The Hanoum, a charming woman, was complaining bitterly to me of her rest having been much disturbed the previous night by the abundance of these creatures in her apartment.

One of the slaves modestly remarked that she had occupied herself in scalding the floor of the room her mistress had slept in, and expressed a hope that she would not be longer troubled in that respect.

A general outcry against the slave's want of humanity was raised by all the women present, and a chorus of "Yuzuk! Gunah!" (Pity! Sin!) was heard.

It is curious that they raised no such outcry when they heard of the frightful destruction of human life that took place a few years later among their Christian neighbors in Bulgaria, but a few miles from their own secure homes.

VOORHEES.

The Indiana Senator Makes It Hot for "the Other Side of the Chamber."

A Spirited Debate in the Senate on the Supervisors' Tenure Bill.

On [illegible] the Supervisors' bill was taken up. The bill was read, as follows:

"Be it enacted, etc., That the term of office of Chief Supervisor of Election provided for in section 2,025 of the Revised Statutes shall be two years. Such term shall begin the 1st day of May in each even-numbered year. The terms of those now in office shall expire the 1st day of May, 1880, and their successors shall be appointed from among the qualified electors of the proper judicial district by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate."

Mr. McDonald said he did not believe Federal interference with elections in this country was within the constitution or beneficial in its results. He continued: "But, as we can't repeal the law, we have been trying to take out the teeth of the Federal election machinery and make it as innocuous as possible for harm. The Senator from New York has spoken of this bill as having been introduced by the Chairman of the Democratic Senatorial caucus. It was introduced by the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. Wallace), who was Chairman of that caucus; but it was not introduced as from any consultation of that kind. On the contrary, it was presented by him in connection with the report which it became his duty to make as Chairman of the select committee of this Senate to inquire into the workings of these election laws."

Mr. Teller—What report?

Mr. McDonald—Well, if the report has not been brought forward, I will state that it is in obedience to testimony which he has taken bearing on that question.

Mr. McDonald went on to review the testimony taken before the Wallace committee, and continued: "It was the disclosure of these facts that rendered it necessary, in our opinion, if possible to take out of these laws their political character, and if they are to continue, allow them to continue in that way, and that way alone, by which there shall be no interference on the part of this Government in favor of one party against the other; that there shall be no paid emissaries to stand around the polls. These laws are not in the interests of free and fair elections. The power exists now, under the law as it stands, for these Deputy Marshals to break up any poll by the arrest of State officers, hold it and destroy it for the day, and if they are to be mere partisans in the future, as they have been in the past, that will be the history of the next election held under their supervision. The design of this bill is to place the appointing of executive officers where the constitution intended it to be—in the hands of the President and Senate. They shall no longer be selected from one side, but both parties shall have the benefit of these beneficent laws, if they are beneficent. I hope the day is not far distant when we can get rid of this whole machinery, notwithstanding the alarm of the Senator from New York, for I believe the people of the United States are better able to conduct their elections than the minions of any administration appointed or used to control elections in its interest."

Mr. Teller asked why the Democrats did not bring forward some measure to repress the lawlessness admitted to exist in various sections? The pretense that this bill was to prevent election abuses was absurd. (While he was speaking of the use of tissue ballots in the South, Mr. Hampton handed him a tissue ballot, and asked him to read it.) Mr. Teller said it purported to be a Republican tissue ballot, and thereupon went into the history of the election in Charleston. His theory was that Republicans knew that Democrats would cast tissue ballots, and that Inspectors would put their hands in the box and take out the heavy ballots, leaving mostly tissue ballots, so the Republicans cast tissue ballots, but not in the ordinary sense. They cast them legally and in this way escaped having them thrown out.

Mr. Hampton remarked that the present representative from that county was elected by 10,000 majority. Mr. Teller had said 3,000 Democratic tissue ballots were cast. Even allowing the 3,000 he still had 7,000 majority.

Mr. Thurman moved an amendment as follows: "Provided, that no person now holding or who has held the office of Chief Supervisor of Election shall be reappointed."

Mr. Edmunds—Let us have that read again. It sounds quite like the "Ohio idea."

It was read again.

Mr. Thurman—I hope it will be the idea of a majority of the Senate in a very short time, and of Congress, and of the President. I do not undertake to say that every Supervisor of Election who has been appointed is a bad man at all, but I know there have been bad men among them, one man so bad that I think his name will be infamous in the history of this country, and I do not propose he shall be a Supervisor of Election, if I can help it. I cannot distinguish between all those men who have exercised their powers. I think it a wiser thing to say that none of them shall be reappointed. We know the President will not make a single appointment while the Senate is in season. They will all be made after we have departed. And does the Senator from Colorado mean to say a Republican Chief Magistrate wants to break down the election laws?

Mr. Edmunds asked if there was any precedent for Congress to declare that certain persons should not hold office because they have held the same office before? The Supreme Court had even decided a law unconstitutional which disqualified persons who had engaged in rebellion.

Mr. Thurman said there were precedents in the constitution itself. An importer could not be appointed Secretary of the Treasury. These election laws said only Commissioners of Courts should be appointed Supervisors. This practically disfranchised everybody else. The Senator from Vermont always proceeded on the theory that the President had imperial power; that Congress was treading on his toes in directing what he should do.

Mr. Hoar said this bill was part of a scheme to destroy liberties by a sort of dry-rot. The Government was not to be overthrown by blood and violence, but by corruption of the ballot-box.

An animated running debate followed, in which Messrs. Hampton, Butler, Hoar and Teller took the principal part, and which turned upon the evidence taken before the Wallace committee and the interpretation of it in various ways.

Mr. Voorhees then took the floor and demanded of those who had charged the Democratic side with fearing to discuss questions of public interest to name matters so evaded.

Mr. Edmunds—It would take all afternoon. Your mouths have been shut up like dead oysters; but, under the influence of this hot weather, you seem to have now got off your balance.

Mr. Voorhees—I ask them to name any question at all that they have desired to discuss, and in the absence of response by Senators who made the charge I will denounce it as not true.

Mr. Edmunds—Well, take the Marshals bill.

Mr. Voorhees—Have we not discussed it fully?

Mr. Edmunds—Not very much. And then take the other thing.

Mr. Voorhees—The other thing? That is an ideal expression for the scholarly Senator from Vermont.

Mr. Edmunds—I borrow it from the Senator from Ohio, who said once we were all things to all men.

Mr. Voorhees—Oh, no; the Senator is trifling.

Mr. Edmunds—Will my kind friend who is in such good temper allow me to have read the statement of the "big Injun" of this Democratic wigwam (referring to Mr. Thurman), that it is the business of Republicans to talk and of Democrats to vote?

Mr. Voorhees—I challenge the Senator from Colorado, the Senator from New York, and any other Senator to name any question that we have declined to discuss; and you need not suppose that I will go away from this question until I have an answer.

Mr. Kirkwood stated that had asked Democrats when the Army Appropriation bill was pending whether the people were to understand by the rider to that bill that the President was to have no power to enforce laws except upon invitation of the Governor of a State, and they had made no response.

Mr. Voorhees—You can get an answer now. The wide difference between the Senator from Iowa and the school of politics he represents and mine is that I believe, and those who act with me, that we can trust the people, and you don't. The Senator and those who are with him believe they have to have an army, troops, Supervisors, agents of the Federal Government to harrass, press, and, if necessary, stamp upon the people of the United States in their sovereign capacity. I believe no such thing. I believe the people are sovereign in their intelligence, in their virtue, and in their rights. The Senator from Iowa says that when the issue in regard to the use of troops at the polls was up we did not discuss it with him. I am glad to know that we did not discuss that question. It is so fundamental, deeply founded, so everlastingly grounded in the essential principles of liberty that it is not, in the order of things, on principle a debatable question. But it was debated, forced upon this side of the chamber, not at this session, but a year or so ago, in the fullest possible manner. Now, I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Vermont to a suggestion which he made to me a while ago, that the "other thing" was not discussed. What it was I didn't comprehend, but I do now. It was the Electoral-count bill. Have we shrunk from debate on that question? Did not the Senator from Alabama open that discussion and challenge all the intellect, all the wisdom, and all the wit and learning you have on that side of the chamber? Why, then, do you stand here adopting the language of the Senator from Vermont, saying, "We are dumb as oysters?" Will you answer me?

Mr. Edmunds (who had taken a seat on the Democratic side, near Mr. Voorhees, and kept up a good-humored running commentary on the latter's remarks)—I am merely in your condition myself; I am dumber than an oyster.

Mr. Voorhees—The Senator from Vermont spoke without judgment when he said Senators on this side of the chamber had been dumb as oysters. I challenged the Senator from Colorado to name a question we had declined to discuss, and, with the kindest feelings toward him, I say he used language that was hurtful, hard, and untrue. He talked about men being afraid to join in discussion. We are peers here. I know of no question that this side of the chamber has dreaded or declined to discuss, and I do not intend to let an impeaching, impugning charge of that kind go out of this chamber without being met; and no Senator can make that charge good. When the Senator from Vermont said we had been dumb as an oyster upon some questions, and then upon "another thing," he referred to a question which was discussed here an entire afternoon, most ably, by the Senator from Alabama, who met all the shafts of wit and wisdom hurled at him by the Senators from New York and Vermont; and yet they dare to say that we decline discussion. The sooner you disabuse your minds, I say to Senators, on that point the better. There is nothing of the kind whatever.

Mr. Edmunds—Suppose you come to discussion of this very philosophical bill now pending.

Mr. Voorhees—I am discussing matters you have thrust into this debate, which are injurious to personal honor, and which I do not intend to let pass unchallenged. I never wished to be on my feet in the Senate, but no set of men shall stand up and charge cowardice on this side of the chamber unless they can show cause.

Mr. Conkling—Will it be agreeable to the Senator from Indiana to name me some of subjects—the leading measures—which the Democratic majority of the Senate has either discussed or dealt with at this session?

Mr. Voorhees—Yes, sir. Will the Senator from New York do me the favor to answer the question which I propounded, first to the Senator from Colorado, and then to the Senator from Vermont, and all the rest of the Senators, to name one question that supports the charge that we have declined to meet you in discussion?

Mr. Conkling—I understood the question of the Senator from Indiana to be much broader than that. I understood him to invite us to name questions or subjects which they had refused or failed to discuss. I have no objection to doing that, except the brevity of life.

Mr. Voorhees—Oh, that don't impose upon anybody or deceive anybody.

Mr. Conkling—I do not mean it to deceive anybody, but I should have no objection to beginning with a very large question which the Senator from Indiana gave us notice that he was going to discuss, and which he grieved me to the heart by refusing to allow me to hear him discuss.

Mr. Voorhees—The Senator from New York answers in the most limping, halting, imperfect, faltering manner to the question of what proposition this side of the chamber has refused or declined to discuss with that side. I never allow men, after making a false issue, to escape it by throwing up something else. The Senator from Colorado repeated over and over that this side of the chamber was afraid to meet certain things. I knew I was not conscious of fear. I knew I was a reasonable equal with anybody on that side of the chamber. I did not know what I was afraid of. I listened with great pleasure to the Senators from New York, Vermont and Colorado, but I knew there was nothing that we had dreaded to meet on this side.

Mr. Edmunds—You always whistle when you go by a graveyard, don't you?

Mr. Voorhees—And especially if the Senator from Vermont was in that graveyard.

Mr. Edmunds—Because you would be very much afraid then, possibly.

Mr. Voorhees—Did the Senator from New York tender the issue of finance? Did he ever call it up? The Senator from Colorado insisted in words not agreeable to hear that we were afraid to meet questions tendered by that side.

Mr. Conkling—Most assuredly I wished a discussion of the finance question when I read in the newspapers that the honorable Senator was going to make a speech.

Mr. Voorhees (interrupting)—When did you ever say so?

Mr. Conkling—Why, Mr. President, as the heart panteth for water brooks so I panted for that speech about the dollar of our daddies.

Mr. Voorhees—You never dared above your breath to say you did.

Mr. Conkling—I was holding my breath to hear the oration of the Senator.

Mr. Voorhees—You never dared challenge such a discussion. Nobody knows what the specific views of the Senator from New York are on the financial question, and he has never uttered them. When the silver debate took place here that lasted six months, conspicuously the Senator from New York didn't dare to utter his opinions. Conspicuously of all the Senators in this body, more than anybody else, he hushed his voice, he suppressed his opinion, if he had any, and never uttered one single word on the subject; so much so that the great metropolitan journals of New York, his own great State, queried and wondered what influence it was debilitating and paralyzing the stalwart intellectuality of the Senator on that subject. And he dared to challenge me. A question of the greatest moment, whether silver should be recoined, whether the money of the fathers should reinstated, came and went, and passed through all its stages, without even the Senator from New York having a feeble, infantile whisper on that subject. He is not the man to question me on what questions in debate I dare or dare not meet, for no greater question than the question of remonetization of silver ever swept through this Capitol, and no man was ever more silent than he was when it came.

Mr. Conkling—The Senator from Indiana, perhaps because he misunderstands me, or perhaps for some other reason, chooses to give a very strange odor of personality to this debate. I seek no personality with the Senator. I never charged him with not daring to do anything. That is a word he coined himself.

Mr. Voorhees—When the Senator from New York says I have injected a flavor of personality into the debate he is mistaken. The Senator from New York knows that my feelings toward him are those of entire personal kindness, and I have no desire whatever to change them in that regard; but at the same time I don't intend that side of the chamber, led by the great ability of the Senator from New York, shall put even so humble a person as myself in a false position, nor shall he lead this discussion away from the true issue. A charge was made in the boldest, grossest manner that we were afraid to meet questions proposed by that side, and I say it is not true, and the history of the present session will show it. And now, passing from the points that have been made, I desire to pay a little attention to the bill under discussion. I do not believe in supervision or chief supervision of elections. With all the strength of my convictions, heart and mind, I am against them all; for whenever it comes to me that the American people cannot govern themselves, either in county, township or State, I will feel from my education that this Government is lost as a republic. If Senators on that side of the chamber, where they talk of a nation, mean that a nation has power to subvert fundamental principles of popular sovereignty and self-control, I do not believe in that sort of a nation. I believe in no loose confederacy, from which an erratic star may shoot at its own pleasure. I believe in no power of a State to break the Union. I said so during the war in my place in the House; and I believe just as little in the power of the Federal Government to usurp and supplant the power of the State in local self-government and home rule. The amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio (Thurman) gives vital power, force, efficiency and acceptability to this bill, and that is, that no man who has heretofore held the office of Supervisor, and, holding it, illustrated his tyranny, usurpation, oppression and power of outrage, shall ever hold it again. I would not vote for any bill that would give to the President of the United States power to give John Davenport and assimilated pirates in politics the right to stay in office.

After denouncing Davenport's acts, Mr. Voorhees continued: "We will meet this question and discuss it with you, unless American liberty shall die, as long as the inherent, everlasting, glorious rights for which our fathers led armies and bled in are left. As long as these principles endure, so long we will be right, and you will be wrong, and nobody knows it better than Senators on that side themselves. It is they who are afraid to meet the question. The Senator from Vermont is afraid to take away brute force, to dispense with John Davenport, to trust to the doctrines of the constitution, which said this Union was founded on the virtue and intelligence of the people."

THE EXODUS INVESTIGATION.

Conclusions Reached by the Committee.

Senator Vance, of the majority of the Exodus Committee, has submitted a majority report to the United States Senate stating that much of the evidence given was of such a character as would not be received in a court of justice, but it was received with a view of ascertaining, if possible, the true condition of the colored people. The report continues: "We think it clearly established from the testimony that the migration of colored people was undoubtedly induced in a great degree by Northern politicians, and by negro leaders in the employ of railroad lines." The committee find that the negroes are not deprived of their political rights, and not excluded from juries; that the wages paid are fair, about equal to the pay in the Northern States; and that the school privileges are shared equally by whites and blacks.

Continuing, the report says: "With regard to the political outrages which have formed the staple of complaint for many years against the people of the South, your committee diligently inquired, and have to report that they found nothing, or almost nothing, new. Many old stories were revived or dwelt upon by zealous witnesses, but very few, indeed, ventured to say that any considerable violence or outrage had been exhibited toward the colored people of the South within the last few years; and still fewer of all those who testified on this subject, and who were evidently anxious to make the most of it, testified to anything as within their own knowledge. It was all hearsay, and nothing but hearsay, with rare exceptions. With regard to the alleged extortion by landlords and country merchants who furnished supplies to laborers and tenants, the committee admit that they found it to be frequently the case that bad and dishonest men would take advantage of the ignorance or necessity of negroes and obtain exorbitant prices, but in justice to the planters of the South they feel bound to assert, however, that this abuse is not at all general or frequent. That there is much in the condition of the negroes to be deplored in the South no one will deny; that that condition is gradually and steadily improving in every respect is really true. That there has been a clashing between the races socially and politically is not to be wondered at."

The report concludes as follows: "The sooner the colored people of the South are taught to know that their interests are promoted by cultivating the friendship of their white neighbors, instead of their enmity, the sooner they will gain that friendship; and, that friendship and harmony once fully attained, there is nothing to bar the way to their speedy civilization and advancement in wealth and prosperity except such as hinder all people in that great work."

Artificial Diamonds.

A great deal has been said lately of the discovery of a method of making diamonds. At first the discovery was denied, and lastly it was declared true, that something that behaved like a diamond had really been made. It was a pure crystal; it would cut sapphire; it split like a diamond; and burned like a diamond.

The chemist who has succeeded in making these diamonds is J. B. Hanny, of Glasgow, Scotland, and his process may be briefly described. A hydrocarbon gas—that is, a gas compound of hydrogen and carbon—is forced under enormous pressure into a very strong iron tube about four inches in diameter, and having a bore of only one inch.

Chemicals containing nitrogen that have a tendency to combine with the nitrogen, and thus leave the carbon free, are placed in the tube with the gas. Under great pressure and at a red heat this is said to take place, and, on breaking the tube open, the pure carbon is found as minute crystals on the inside of the tube.

These crystals are the artificial diamonds. They are very small, but it takes a long time and much labor and money to make them, and they are of no value whatever as diamonds.

They are too small to be of any use, and if any young gentleman thinks that when the time comes for him to buy an engagement ring he can get an artificial diamond cheap, the poor girl will be dead, or married to another man, before that day appears.

This is the whole of the matter—diamonds can be made, but it's not worth while to make them.

Not Much of a Loss.

Young men should, when conversing with young ladies, use expressions free from ambiguity, else the experience of a Cleveland clerk may be theirs.

A young lady went to a drug-store and had a prescription made up.

"How much?" inquired the lady.

"Fifty cents," said the clerk.

"But I have only 45 cents with me," replied the customer. "Can't you let me have it for that?"

"No, ma'am," said the clerk; "but you can pay me the 5 cents when you come in again."

"But suppose I were to die?" said the lady, jocularly.

"Well, it wouldn't be a very great loss," was the smiling response.

And immediately the smiling clerk gathered, from the indignant flash on the lady's face, that he had been misunderstood, and before he could assure her that it was the little balance and not she that would be no great loss, she had bounced out at a 'go-as-you-please gait, and was beyond the sound of his voice.

INDIANA NEWS.

A CONNERSVILLE horse fell dead from fright at a locomotive.

THE farmers of Knox county feel gloomy over the wheat prospect.

A NEW ALBANY doctor, young and unmarried, officiated at eleven births last week.

THE sale of harvesting implements in New Albany, just at present, is something marvelous.

THE Presbyterians have begun work on their new church in Wabash. It will cost about $20,000.

THE State House contractors have just started to burn their first kiln of bricks, at Centerton, containing 450,000 bricks.

FOREST fires have been raging on the knobs, three miles west of New Albany, and have destroyed a large quantity of valuable timber.

THE catalogue of Wabash College shows 165 students in attendance. The number of alumni living is 311. Commencement will be held June 23.

MRS. REBECCA ANN BILLINGSLY, a widow, has been arrested at Shelbyville for having attempted to obtain a pension which she was not entitled to.

THE DePauw plate-glass works at New Albany, after lying idle nearly four months on account of a strike of the operatives, has now resumed operations.

THE State Superintendent has completed the semi-annual apportionment of the school fund, the total amount reported in for distribution being $1,090,950.

MARION county has 115 cases pending before the Supreme Court, of which ninety-two are old cases and twenty-three have been filed during the last term.

A HEAVY gale at North Vernon, with a rain-storm, blew the hyppodrome canvas and one tent of Hayward's circus to the ground. The Colonel suffered $1,000 damages.

A HOTEL landlord at Indianapolis wears a hat woven of pineapple straw, which weighs only two ounces. It was made on the island of St. Helena, and is valued at $100.

WHILE Mrs. Kate Brown, a wealthy lady living near Scipio, Jennings county, was working among her flowers, she was stricken with paralysis, and died almost instantly.

CHRISTIAN MELLENGER, whose little child was burned to death in a stable at Fort Wayne, has caused the arrest of Charles Cemesky, aged 16, who, it is said, set the stable on fire.

COL. SMITH VAWTER says, on the 14th of May, 1834, a cold snap overtook vegetation in Indiana, killing the wheat and many forest trees. Ice froze to the thickness of several inches.

WORK has been commenced by the contractor for the construction of a third reservoir for the New Albany waterworks, with a capacity of 6,500,000 gallons. The contract price is $20,000.

BUSINESS has of late become so brisk that the Indianapolis rolling-mill is about two months behind in orders. For some time past they have been working a full force of hands both night and day.

IN October, 1877, Wm. Wolfe, then 19 years of age, residing in the northern part of Knox county, shot and instantly killed Eli Collins. The case, after several postponements, has now been dismissed.

THE long-continued efforts of the Government revenue officials to discover the moonshiners, who are known to have been carrying on their unlawful business in Crawford county for a year or two, are likely to succeed at last.

THE singular illness in the family of Capt. John Box, residing two miles north of New Albany, heretofore attributed to milk sickness, is now traced to arsenic. Three of the family are now in a paralytic condition.

TWO HOWARD county boys named Child were out hunting squirrels for their sick mother, when the gun, in the hands of one of them, was accidentally discharged, the load entering the head of the other and killing him instantly.

THERE is intense excitement at New Albany over a loose mad dog which had bitten fully fifty dogs. Police gave chase and killed him. It is now feared that within nine days there will be a number of mad dogs fully developed.

THE New Albany ornamental glass-works, for the manufacture of plate-mirrors and ornamental glass of all kinds, has commenced operations. The process of silvering is a New Albany invention and entirely indestructible. The works are extensive.

FARMERS in Putnam county complain of the appearance of the embryo fly in the wheat, which is said to be general in that vicinity. They say the eggs deposited in the fall resisted the mild winter, and that the threatened pest is rapidly developing.

THE appointment of Earnest Robbins, of Shelbyville, to a cadetship at West Point by Congressman De La Matyr has been revoked by the War Department, on the ground that he does not reside in the district represented in Congress by that gentleman.

IN 1843 David McClure was a member of the Indiana Legislature from Scott county, and rode from Lexington to the capital on a bay horse, while his friend, William H. English, accompanied him on a bald-faced nag. The doctor is talked of again for the Legislature from the counties of Floyd, Clark, and Scott.

MRS. MARTHA C. ROOT sues the Vandalia railroad and the Pullman Car Company at Indianapolis for $10,000 damages, caused by the failure to furnish her a sleeping-car berth, after she had paid for it, from St. Louis to Indianapolis. She alleges that she was sick and feeble, and was forced into a passenger coach, and compelled to remain there the entire distance, causing her great suffering and the loss of her health.

A SINGULAR accident occurred near the track of the Whitewater railroad, just north of Connersville, a few days since. Mrs. Elmendorf and daughter were driving along the road parallel with the track, when the horse became frightened at an approaching train, and started to run. The ladies both jumped out of the vehicle unhurt, but the horse, after running a few rods, and without coming into contact with anything, fell dead in the road.

ENGINEER THOMAS, of the Little Miami railroad, had an experience that he will never forget. He has charge of the engine that propels the afternoon passenger train from Dayton, and just as he was approaching Brinley's Station he discovered a small child on the track, not 100 yards distant, and as it was down grade he knew he could not stop the train before it reached the little one, but he reversed the lever, and told his fireman to take a position on the "cow catcher," and just as the engine reached the spot he grasped the little one, who, unconscious of danger, was clapping its hands with glee, and lifted it from the track. The little one was turned over to its father, who, on learning how it had been snatched from the very jaws of death, was so overcome with emotion that he fainted.

A FOWL PROCEEDING.

Pitched Battle Between a Lady and an Enraged Rooster.

[From the Hartford Times.]

A lady of this city had really an interesting battle with a rooster. She had two flocks of about a dozen hens and one rooster each, with a separate "run" for each squad, and the hen-house is partitioned through the middle, with a window in the partition. Almost every day the lady visits the hennery, and usually stops to stroke the pet of the feathered favorites. Under this treatment the fowls have become quite tame, and never before had she such an experience as we are about to relate. The lady, as she tells the story herself, had passed through the first division of the hen-house, and stopped to pet the fowls in the other half, and, while she was thus engaged, she noticed the big old rooster in the other domicile had taken a position where he could see the lady's operations through the partition window. He watched her with a jealous eye. Directly the lady reached out to take in her hands a hen, but it evaded her, and ran off with a frightened scream. At this the looker-on in Vienna—the old rooster—became unduly excited, ruffled his feathers, elongated his neck, and showed he was as "mad as mad could be." He looked as if he wanted to tackle the lady, and, sure enough, when she entered his room to pass out he did make a most determined onslaught. He rushed at her, fairly bristling with indignation, and savagely struck at her with his spurs. The lady, rather pleased than otherwise, lifted a foot to poke him away, and did give him a vigorous shove. But he returned and let fly his spur-mounted heels, and gave the lady's No. 3 gaiter a lively crack, leaving quite a stinging sensation. And from this time out the lady and the plucky old rooster had a regular pitched battle. She says that she rather enjoyed the sport, but before she got through the fowl was so terribly in earnest it did not seem like fun, and she determined to end up the fight by taking the old fellow by the neck and holding him suspended in mid-air until the fight was all taken out of him. The next fly he made at her she clutched him and yanked him from his feet, but he struck at her several times with his spurs in rapid succession, and in a most spiteful and ugly manner. He got in one blow on the back of her hand and wrist that left a mark three inches long, and she was glad to drop him. But now her woman dander was up, and she was bound to conquer. She turned on him and kicked at him first with one foot and then with the other, following him around the little house, he fighting gallantly as he retreated. He would fly at her, catch her by her dress with his bill, and crack would go the spurs with as much vigor as if he had a fellow-rooster's head in chancery. Again and again the lady grasped him by the neck, choking, twisting and shaking him, but he would compel her to let go by the rapid thumps of his tough, hard old spurs. After the fight had lasted fully ten minutes, the lady thought, as there could not be much honor in conquering a rooster, and, rather admiring his pluck, she thought she would withdraw and let him enjoy his crow of victory. But as she turned to go the onslaughts of the plucky fellow were fiercer, and she was compelled to retreat backward, and kept her feet employed in trying to keep him at bay. When she turned to open the exit door the rooster, as a parting salute, flew up at her waist high and gave her belt a crack. It was a fowl blow, but the lady did not stop to claim the victory on that account. She hurriedly closed the door, and the determined fellow actually gave the door a clip, and looked disgusted because the lady had got out of his reach.

Thinking on One's Legs.

We agree with others that general condemnation of manuscript sermons is too sweeping. But we also think the statement that "very few men can think well on their legs" needs qualification. It is true that too few think that they can, but many of the doubters are probably mistaken. Until recently the editor of this paper reckoned himself among those who could not extemporize. Five years ago he resolved to return to his earlier mode of extempore preaching, and he has found it very easy to follow a line of thought previously arranged. Many who doubt that they can think on their legs have never faithfully tried to form the habit.—New York Methodist.

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY

Established 1847 at 12 N. 8th Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE Physicians in charge of this old and well known Institution are regular graduates in medicine and surgery. Years of Experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases have [illegible] their skill and ability so much superior to that of the ordinary practitioner, that they have acquired a national reputation through their treatment of complicated cases.

INDISCRETION—EXPOSURE [illegible]

YOUNG MEN [illegible]

PATIENTS TREATED by Mail and Express [illegible]

DR. BUTTS, 12 North 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

DON'T RENT

BUY A HOME IN MICHIGAN.

$5 TO $10 PER ACRE!

Strong Soils! Sure Crops! Railroad through Center of Lands. Healthy Climate. Schools and Churches. Intelligent Population.

HIGHEST REWARD TO FARMERS.

These lands are a long distance East of the Mississippi River. Large amount saved in travel and transportation of crops. Descriptive pamphlet in English and German.

Address W. O. HUGHART, Commissioner, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

THERMALINE

A Safe and Reliable substitute for Quinine

The only 25 cent

AGUE REMEDY

IN THE WORLD

CURES

CHILLS & FEVER

and all MALARIAL DISEASES.

Sold by all Druggists. Mailed FREE on receipt of price. Write to DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York, for their ten cent book, mailed to the readers of this paper FREE on application.

MACQUEEN'S MATICO OINTMENT.

An Infallible Remedy for Piles. 25c per box

Gives Immediate Relief.

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.

Safe and reliable cure for Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Recent or Chronic. They will cure any recent case in seven days. The word Docuta is on every box. Price per box, with full directions, Capsulets (small size) 75 cents. Capsules (large size) $1.50. At all Drug Stores. Mailed on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 35 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.

The above four preparations for sale by F. R. Davenport or J. H. Ehlers, druggists, Auburn, Indiana.

SEIDLITINE.

Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant as a glass of Lemonade. 5 cents each. All Drug Stores.

LAXATINE.

Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevents and Cures Constipation. 25 cents per box. All Drug Stores.

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)

A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.

Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.

For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.

For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.

It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.

It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.

Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.

Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.

WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE

Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, overwork, mental shocks, and other causes.

Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.

Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS

Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhea, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. No other Pills require such small doses for thorough work. Price 25 cts. a box.

Warner's Safe Remedies are sold by Druggists & Dealers in Medicine everywhere.

H. H. Warner & Co., Proprietors, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.

READ! SAFE THIS

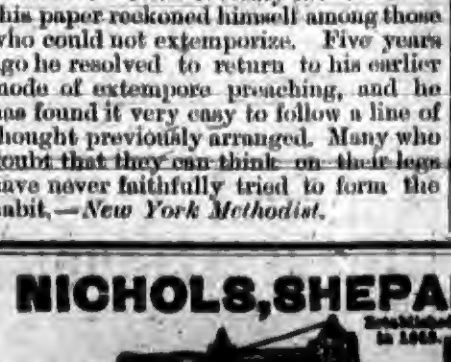
NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO. Battle Creek, Mich.

Established in 1848.

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE

"VIBRATOR"

Threshing Machinery and Portable and Traction Engines.



THE STANDARD of excellence throughout the Grain-Raising World.

MATCHLESS for Grain-Saving, Time-Saving, Perfect Cleaning, Rapid and Thorough Work.

INCOMPARABLE in Quality of Material, Perfection of Parts, Thorough Workmanship, Elegant Finish, and Beauty of Model.

MARVELOUS for vastly superior work in all kinds of Grain, and universally known as the only successful Thresher in Flax, Timothy, Clover, and all other Seeds.

ASTONISHINGLY DURABLE and wonderfully simple, using less than one half the usual gears and belts.

PORTABLE, TRACTION, and STRAW-BURNING STEAM-ENGINES, with special features of Power, Durability, Safety, Economy, and Beauty entirely unknown in other makes. Steam-Power Outfits and Steam-Power Separators a specialty. Four sizes of Separators, from 6 to 12 horse-power; also 2 styles Improved Mounted Horse-Powers.

32 Years of Prosperous and Continuous Business by this house, without change of name, location, or management, furnishes a strong guarantee for superior goods and honorable dealing.

CAUTION! The wonderful success and popularity of our Vibrator Machinery has driven other machines to the wall; hence various makers are now attempting to build and palm off inferior and mongrel imitations of our famous goods.

BE NOT DECEIVED

by such experimental and worthless machinery. If you buy at all, get the "ORIGINAL" and the "GENUINE" from us.

For full particulars call on our dealers or write to us for Illustrated Circulars, which we mail free. Address

NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO., Battle Creek, Mich.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

GREAT REDUCTION

—ON—

Coffee, Sugar, Tea and Tobacco.

Coffees we used to sell at 18 cents now reduced to 16, and a good fair Rio Coffee at 14 cents per pound; and the Extra A Sugar we sold at 9 cents, now down to 8 cents; and our best Young Hyson Tea that we sold at 70 cents now reduced to 65 cents. This is the best tea in the market, and equal to teas sold elsewhere at $1 per pound. We have other teas from 25 up to 40 and 50 cents per pound.

TEAS! TEAS! TEAS!

The boom in teas last fall has not been maintained. Prices, in place of advancing, have declined so much that we are now selling the best Young Hyson tea lower than it has sold in ten years.

Good Young Hyson, 25c; Choice Young Hyson, 50c; Extra Young Hyson, 40c; Best young Hyson, 65c; Good Imperial tea, 40c; Best Imperial tea, 50 and 65c; Good Gunpowder tea, 40c; Best Gunpowder tea, 50 and 65c; Good Oolong tea, 30c; Best Oolong tea, 40 and 60c; Good uncolored Japan tea, 25, best 40 and 60c.

WHITE AND YELLOW SUGARS.

Cut Loaf, 10c; Coffee A, 9 1-2; Granulated, 10c; Extra C, 8c; Powdered Sugar, 10c; Yellow Sugar, 7c.

COFFEES--RIO, JAVA and MARRICABO.

Good Rio Coffee, 14c; Best Select Rio, 16c; Old Government Java, 23c; Choice Marricabo, 18c; Roasted Rio, 18 and 20c; Bengal Coffee, 20c.

SYRUP AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Extra Golden Syrup per gallon, 45c; White Sugar Loaf Drips, 60c; Choice Maple Syrup, 90c; New Orleans, 40c; Best New Orleans, 60c; Sorghum, 45c.

TOBACCOS.

Good Fine Cut, 40c; Choice Fine Cut, 60; Uncle Ned, 35c; Best Fine Cut, 75c; Good Plug tobacco, 40c; Best Natural Leaf, 60c; Durham Smoking, 48c; Bull Head, 28c;

OILS. OILS.

FISH OIL, LARD OIL, NEAT'S FOOT OIL, HEADLIGHT OIL, AND MACHINE OILS. Fish oil, 70c; Neat's foot oil, 70c per gallon; lard oil, 70c; headlight 16c; machine oil 20c; best golden machine oil, 30.

MEATS: HAMS, SHOULDERS, AND SIDE MEAT.

Sugar cured hams, 10c, smoked shoulders, 6c, Breakfast bacon, 8c; pickeled pork, 6c.

Fish--Lake Fish and Mackerel.

No. 1 White fish, half barrel, $5; Pickerel half barrel, $3.50; White fish, kits, $1; Skinned cat, half barrel, $7; Mackerel, kits, $1 and $1.50; Smoked Hallibut 10c; extra dress Mackerel $1.75.

Liquors, Wines Whiskies Scotch Ale, Dublin and London Porter.

Good whisky per gallon, $1; whisky one year old, $1; whisky two years old, $1.40 whisky three years old, 76 gallons, $2.50; brandy two years old, $1.50; Scotch ale per bottle, 18c; Dublin porter per bottle, 18c; Port wine, $1.25; Sherry wine, $1.25; California wine, $1.25, Gin, $2; London porter per bottle, 18c; Ginger ale per bottle, 12 1-2c

CANDIES, NUTS AND RAISINS.

Stick candy, 14c; French mixed candy, 20c; raisins per box, $2; raisins per pound, 10; currants, 7c; citron, 18c; Brazil nuts, per quart, 10 10c; Filberts, 12 1-2c; English walnuts, 12 1-2c, Texas pecans, 10c, Oranges per dozen 35c, Lemons, 30c, Dried Peaches, 10c, Dried Apples, 8c.

20 Cents on the Dollar you can save at least by purchasing at the

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— firstdoor east of Mcquiston & Ralstons double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

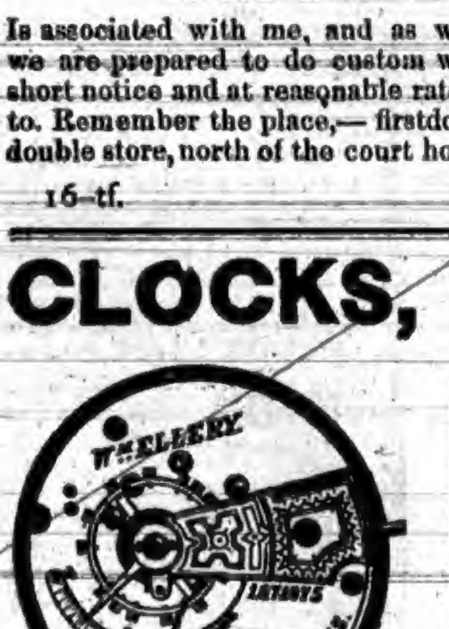
CLOCKS, CLOCKS,



GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,
SPOONS, KNIVES, and FORKS,
Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains, Ladies Gold Chains, Castors' Everything in the Jewelry line.
Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions
olin Strings.

Special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at
JOE. ABRIGHT'S,
Second door north of Postoffice Auburn, Indinas

A Presentiment Fulfilled.

Amasa Wilsey, of Petaluma, Cal., dreamed last fall that he would die on May 1, 1880. The occurrence impressed him, though he affected to attach no importance to it, and he joined three life insurance societies, so as to leave his wife provided for in case of his death. On May 1st he was apparently in perfect health. A dinner was to have been given to him in the evening, to celebrate his escape from the fulfillment of the dream. The party had just gathered, when he fell from his chair, stricken by heart disease, and died in a few minutes.

A Jackass that Wouldn't Scare.

[San Antonio Herald.]

A vagrant ass stood beside the track of the Sunset railroad at the depot a few mornings ago; an engine moved slowly up; it stopped within a few feet of the ass; the engineer blew one of those terrible screams prolonged and ear-piercing—such a blast as makes a sleeping Millerite think of the day of judgment. Did the ass scare? Not worth a cent. Did he shake the sloth from his limbs, erect his tail and speed away like the asses of Bassorah, faster than the Bedouin coursers run back to the chapparal? No he didn't. He turned one ear toward the engine, just as a deaf man uses his tin ear-trumpet, and caught every particle of the sound. And when the steam-blown whistle ceased its notes, and all the echoes died away, the animal straightened out his neck, opened his mouth, and, in a voice that deafened all the railroad men and caused the freight clerk to drop his pen, roared: "I can't! I can't! I can't! I can't be beat! be beat! be beat! I c-a-n-'t b-e-be-be-b-e beat!

Phoolish Phancies.

A good side show—a pretty cheek.

The latest agony—tooth-ache at midnight.

Held for a further hearing—the ear trumpet.

Which is the most ancient of trees? The elder.

Livery horses belong to the hire class of animals.

It is in the toy drum that two heads are worse than none.

A man's deed's will live after him—and so will his mortgages.

What State in the American Union is high in the middle and round at both ends? O-hi-o.

Cats have no fixed political belief.—They're usually on the fence.

A promising youth about to be chastised by his father called upon his grand father to protect him from the "superfluous middle man."

A Broadway engraver recently made this mistake: "Mr. and Mrs. ——— respectfully request your presents at the marriage of their daughter."

A gentleman, speaking of a young beauty's fashionable, yellowish hair, called it "pure gold." "It ought to be," replied a friend; "it looks like twenty-four carrots."

"We wish," says a Texas newspaper, "that a few of our friends could be permitted to live till they die a natural death, so as to show the world what a magnificently healthy country Texas really is."

A Boston lawyer told another lawyer who asked him a question, that he usually received pay for his advice.

"Then," said lawyer No. 1, extending 50 cents, "tell me all you know, and give me back the change."

A timid friend of ours has married a lady whose weight verges closely upon 200 pounds.

"My dear," says he to her, "shall I help you over the fence?" "No," says she to him, "help the fence."

"You made a fool of me," said an irritated man to his wife, "and that's the way you got me to marry you."

"My love," sweetly responded his wife, "you do yourself injustice. Call yourself a fool, if you please, but remember that you are in all respects a self-made man."

A president of a college, in a horse-car, noticed one of the freshmen curled in front of him, and exhibiting obvious signs of vinous exhilaration, For a few moments the president surveyed the undergraduate, and finally exclaimed "Been on a drunk?" The half-conscious student rallied, and, with a gleam of good-fellowship in his eye, ejaculated, "So—hic—have I."

◆

A classical student asks: "If Atlas supported the world, what supported Atlas?" The question, dear sir, has often been asked, but never, so far as we are aware, been satisfactorily answered. We have always been of the opinion that Atlas must have married a rich wife, and got his support from her father.

◆

NOT WANTED.

How doth the busy, busy Grant
Improve each shining hour,
And flit from Dan to Bersheba,
To pluck the third-term flower.

From Greenland's icy mountains
To India's coral strand,
He bummeth up, he bummeth down,
He bummeth every land.

And yet the voter man, he thinks
That most prodigious smell
That clung about the second term
Would haunt the third as well.

And this is why the voter man
Winks hard his dexter eye
And says: "If Useless talls the crust
I don't want any pie."

RAILROADS.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 10, 1878.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Night ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 50 am	10 12	2 55	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 50	2 26	7 13	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 20 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 50	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 00	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 20 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 46	8 55
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 25 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 30	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 27	2 33
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 05
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 15	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 45	4 55	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 00	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 6	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15 pm	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

WABASH St. LOUIS AND PACIFIC R'Y.

The Great Through Car Route to

Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa.

TRAINS LEAVE AUBURN.

EAST.		WEST.
Mail	12:34 p. m.	Mail	3:20 p. m.
Accom'n	12:57 a. m.	Accom'n	[illegible] a. m.
Local F't	4:45 p. m.	Local F't	6:38 a. m.
M'l tr'n arrives at Butler	1:30 p. m.	M'l tr'n arr. at Logansport	6:45 p. m.

No Change of Cars From

TOLEDO OR FT WAYNE TO St. Louis, Kansas City St Joseph, Hannibal, Quincy and Atchison.

No Change of Cars From

St. Louis To Kansas City, St. Joseph Omaha and Ottumwa.

Remember that the

Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific

Has No Emigrant Cars.

Everybody rides in Elegant Parlor Coaches—nicely upholstered and carpeted. Baggage checked through to destination.

☞ Don't forget the above inducements, given only by this great line, and when you go

West Southwest, North or Northw'st Don't accept any ticket unless it reads over the

Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R'y.

For Routes, Rates, Elegant Maps of the Western Country, and any information you may desire in regard to going West, please address,

J. C. GAULT, Gen. Manager,
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent,
St. Louis, or
LOUIS JOHNSON, Ticket Ag't, Auburn Ind.

Ft. Wayne & Jackson Railroad.

SHORT LINE

Time-Card takes effect April 11, 1880.
(CHICAGO TIME.)

GOING NORTH.

Leave Auburn:

6:10 A. M.—From Fort Wayne 2:05 a. m.; arrive at Waterloo 4:40; Pleasant Lake, 5:30; Angola, 6:20; Fremont, 6:45; Reading, 6:35; Bankers, 7:50; (connecting closely with D. H. & S. W. R.;) Jonesville, 8:13; Jackson, 9:20 a. m. there connecting for Ann Arbor, 10:35, Detroit, 11:50 a. m.; Grand Rapids, 4:30 p. m.

12:31 P. M.—From Fort Wayne 11:30 a. m., Academie, 11:40; Huntertown, 11:56; New Era, 12:10 p. m.; Auburn Junction, 12:28; arrive at Waterloo 12:42, connecting with L. S. & M. S. train east and west; Summit, 12:52; Pleasant Lake, 1:03; Angola, 1:11; Fremont, 1:32; Reading, 2:10; Bankers, 2:20, making close connection with D. H. & S. W. R. R.; Jonesville, 2:35, (making connection with L. S. & M. S. for points east; Hillsdale, 2:48; Adrian 3:05; Toledo, 5:25, p. m.), Jackson, 3 40 p. m., making close connection for Ann Arbor, Detroit, Lansing, Ionia, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Battle Creek, etc.

8:50 P. M.—From Fort Wayne, 5:00 p. m; New Era, 5:40 arrive at Waterloo 6:11; Summit, 6:25; Pleasant Lake, 6:36; Angola, 7:00; Fremont, 7:23; Reading, 8:35; Jonesville, 9:20; Jackson, 11:05 p. m.; connecting closely for Chicago, Detroit and Grand Rapids.

GOING SOUTH.

Leave Auburn:

9:21 A. M.—From Jackson, 5:05 a. m; closely connecting from Chicago; Jonesville, 6:50; connecting from Chicago, etc.; Reading, 7:48; Montgomery, 7:56; Fremont, 8:17; Angola, 8:34; Pleasant Lake, 9:44; Summit, 8:53; Waterloo, 9:10; arrive at St. Johns, 9:30; New Era, 9:45; Huntertown, 9:56; Academie, 10:05; Ft. Wayne, 10:20 a. m. connecting closely with Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, etc.

3 17 P. M.—From Jackson 12:25 p. m.; (connecting from Detroit 9:15 a. m., Ann Arbor, Saginaw, Lansing, Grand Rapids, etc;) Jonesville, 1:21, close connection from Toledo; Bankers, 1:38; Reading, 1:40; Montgomery, 1:54; Fremont, 2:15; Angola, 2:33; Pleasant Lake, 2:49; Summit, 2:59; Waterloo, 3:08; arrive at Auburn Junction, 3:20; St. Johns, 3:31; New Era, 3:36; Stoner's, 3:46; Huntertown, 3:51; Academie, 4:00 Fort Wayne, 4:15 p. m.; connecting for Indianapolis, Louisville, Lima, Cincinnati, etc.

11:30 P. M.—From Detroit, 4:05 p.m.; Grand Rapids 11:50 a. m.; Kalamazoo, 1 40 p.m.; Jackson, 6 45 p. m.; Jonesville, 8 05; Reading, 8 35; Fremont, 9 45; Angola, 10 15; Pleasant Lake, 10 35; Waterloo, 11 10; arrive at New Era 12 20 a. m.; Fort Wayne, 1 2? a. m., connecting with early trains west, south and east.

4 10 a. m. train run daily. All other trains daily except Sundays.

M. D. WOODFORD, Gen'l Supt.
H. BROMLEY, Gen'l Fr't. & Pass'r Agent.

Fort Wayne, Muncie and Cin.

—AND—

White Water Railroads.

Time Card in effect November 16, 1879.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1. Mail.	2 Express.
FORT WAYNE	10 40 am	5 40 pm
Bluffton	11 52 am	6 56 pm
Montpelier	12 21 pm	7 37 pm
Hartford	12 37 pm	8 04 pm
MUNCIE	1 48 pm	9 00 pm
Newcastle	2 30 pm
Cambridge City	3 14 pm
Connersville	3 45 pm
Cincinnati	6 55 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 25 pm	10 56 pm
Louisville
Terre Haute
St. Louis

STATIONS	GOING NORTH 2 Mail.	4 Express	6 Accom.
St. Louis
Terre Haute
Louisville
Indianapolis	11 30 am	6 40 pm	4 02 am
Cincinnati	6 40 am
Connersville	11 51 am
Cambridge City	12 26 pm
New Castle	1 10 pm
Muncie	2 20 pm	9 20 pm	6 42 am
Hartford	3 09 pm	10 08 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	3 34 pm	10 32 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	4 10 pm	11 09 pm	9 10 am
Fort Wayne	5 15 pm	12 35 am	11 00 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.
Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.
All trains daily except Sunday.
Trains run on Columbus time.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R

CHICAGO DIVISION.

IN EFFECT FROM JAN. 1, 1880.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.
Chicago	8 50am	9 40pm
Walkerton Junction	12 10pm	1 03am	10 42am
Milford Junction	1 29	2 15	2 20pm
Cromwell	1 48	2 45	3 30
Albion	2 [illegible]	3 [illegible]	4 25
Avilla	2 34	3 30	5 20
Garrett ar	2 59	3 45	5 55
Garrett lv	3 10	3 55	4 15
Auburn Junction	3 24	4 02	4 38
St. Joe	3 44	4 25	5 40
Hicksville	4 00	4 42	6 22
Defiance	4 45	5 27	8 50
Fostoria	6 44	7 25	2 20pm
Tiffin	7 09	7 54	3 27
Chicago Junction	8 10	9 00	6 00

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.
Chicago Junction	6 30pm	8 10am	5 20am
Tiffin	7 56	9 12	8 20
Fostoria	8 36	9 36	9 36
Defiance	10 32	11 30	4 45pm
Hicksville	11 16	12 14pm	6 12
St. Joe	11 38	12 33	6 50
Auburn Junction	11 54	12 50	7 36
Garrett ar	12 15am	12 58	8 00
Garrett lv	12 15	1 25	6 20am
Avilla	12 30	1 40	7 10
Albion	12 45	2 00	7 52
Cromwell	1 10	2 32	8 48
Milford Junction	1 33	3 00	9 52
Walkerton Junction	2 58	4 12	12 05pm
Chicago	5 50	7 05

O. H. HUDSON, Superintendent.
SAM'L POWELL, Act. Gen. Ticket & Pass. Agent, Chicago.
L. M. COLE, Gen. Ticket Agent, Baltimore, Md

Examination Of Teachers.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, in the high-school building at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACINTOSH,
Co. Sup't. of schools.

ROBERT OGDEN,

Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,

IRON AND LEAD PIPE.

BRASS GOODS

OF ALL KINDS.

125 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana

SPECIAL NOTICE TO FARMERS!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Be it known that I, Jefferson Grube, have invented certain new and useful improvements in

Grain Separators,

and have letters patent therefor. This invention has relation to machines for separating Grain, Seed and Chaff each from the other, and adapted to employ the same High Blast for each separation, and to conduct the grain and seed to opposite ends of the machine, whence they are conducted by proper chutes into sacks, held in position by the machine itself. I expect to have ready by June 1, the

Best Grain Separator and Chaffer

IN THE MARKET.

Warranted to separate plantain seed from clover seed. For simplicity, and convenience it surpasses all others. It delivers grain direct into sacks, which saves much handling.

☞ For further particulars, address the undersigned, at Auburn, Indiana.

JEFFERSON GRUBE, Patentee.

Agricultural Implements!

THE

Latest Improved Farm Machinery

OF ALL KINDS.

The Three Rivers
"Invincible"
VIBRATOR.

The Renowned
Atlas Engine!
For farm use.

THE PEERLESS Reaper and Mower!

Over 20 000 now in use.

DEERING'S WIRE AND TWINE BINDER,

The only successful TWINE Binder in this or any other market. Greatly improved for 188.

LEADER ONE-WHEEL HARVESTER,

Which created so much excitement among the farmers last year.

ELLWOOD CULTIVATORS,

Riding or Walking, with four, six or nine blades. They have more good points and re less complicated than any other cultivator made.

The Steel-beam Red-Jacket Plow

And many other kinds. Also dealers in the

Archer Self-Dumping Hay-Rake.
Adjustable Bar Spring Tooth Harrow.
And The Harris' Double
Harpoon Horse Hay-Fork.

Examine our samples carefully, and get our prices before you contract. We guarantee you a bargain,

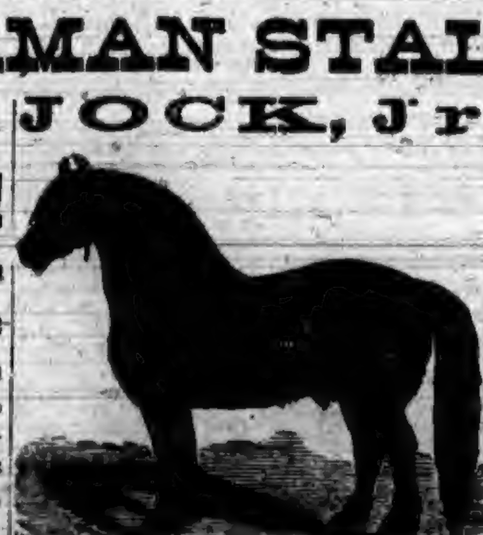
J. N. MYERS & CO.,
Odd Fellows' Building, AUBURN, IND.

NORMAN STALLION

JOCK, Jr

SIRED BY:
Imported Jock!
Out of a thorough-bred
Norman Mare

Jock, Jr. will stand for mares during the season of 1880 commencing April 1st, at my barn in Auburn, DeKalb county, Ind.



This powerful horse is a bay-roan, 16 hands high, and weighs full

1,700 Pounds.

TERMS:
$10.00

Payable when the mare is known to be with foal.

Owners parting with mares are liable for insurance.

All accidents are at owners risk.

A. W. ALLEN. Auburn, Indiana.

Recorders Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 10. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, JUNE 17, 1880. Number 25.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

EDITORS,

THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5.00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. P. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Thayer,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, ST. JOHNS, (DeKalb P. O.) Ind. 15-tf.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. J. Miller,

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners; two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET, EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates. T. D. Gross, Prop't Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FREE OMNIBUS TO AND FROM ALL trains. Good sample rooms on first floor. John Butt, Proprietor, Waterloo, Indiana.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Notice of Administration.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THE undersigned has been appointed by the judge of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Charles Probst, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

HENRY PROBST, Administrator.

June 7, 1880. 21-3w

Tickets! Tickets! Tickets!

First-class, emigrant and round-trip railroad tickets to all points east or west can be bought at low rates by calling upon the undersigned at Auburn Junction, or addressing

J. J. MARTIN, Ag't, B. & O. R. R.
tf Auburn, Ind.

Read This.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, agent for the GENUINE SINGER, at Spencerville, Ind. Horses and cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office at Cahill's tin-shop. 14-tf.

ECKHART

Carriage Works

One-half mile east of Court House.

I have constantly on hand a large stock of the latest styles of

CARRIAGES, PHAETONS, & PLATFORM SPRING WAGONS.

Three years ago my business only required a shop 18x24, and I could do all the work myself excepting the smith work, but since then there has been such a demand for my work that I have

Greatly Increased

my facilities, and at present my shops, stock rooms and ware-rooms occupy nearly

10,000 Square Feet,

and I employ eight hands, not including myself. Having had twenty-three years experience, and being a practical mechanic in painting, wood-work, and trimming, I flatter myself that I can turn out as good work for the money as any one in the state. Please remember that my work is fully warranted, and no misrepresentation is used to sell work

We are now turning out a finished Buggy from the rough every four days. Busses and call at ECKHART CARRIAGE WORKS when in need of a buggy.

C. ECKHART,
Auburn, Ind., 4-6m.

Landers and Gray.

The Standard-Bearers of Democracy in the Coming Campaign.

The Strongest State Ticket That Could Have Possibly Been Chosen to Back Them.

A Large and Orderly Convention Presided Over by Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks.

Much Enthusiasm and General Good Feeling Manifested by the Delegates.

Speeches by Hons. T. A. Hendricks, Francis T. Hord, Franklin Landers, Colonel Isaac P. Gray and others—The Platform.

[State Sentinel.]

The democratic state convention met at the Wigwam, and was called to order at 11 o'clock by Colonel B. C. Shaw, chairman of the state central committee. By 10 o'clock the large building was a perfect jam, and no little difficulty was experienced by the committee selected to seat delegates to accomplish the task delegated to them by the state committee.

GENTLEMEN—The time has come that was appointed by resolution of the state central committee for the meeting of the state democratic convention. We are here for the purpose of performing the high duties of selecting the gentlemen who will represent the democracy of Indiana at the Cincinnati convention, soon to be held. [Applause.]

You have assembled here in vast multitudes, attesting the devotion of the democratic party to the principles of the same, and it is hoped, during the progress of this convention, that every gentleman, not a delegate, who has been honored with a seat in this convention will do his utmost to preserve order, that all may have a fair show in the organization and in the business of the convention. [A voice, "Amen!" Laughter.] I am directed by the state central committee to nominate for temporary chairman Hon. Francis T. Hord, of Bartholomew county.

At the conclusion of Col. Shaw's remarks, James H. Rice, secretary of the state committee, called the roll of counties, showing full delegations present from each.

Hon. Francis T. Hord, of Bartholomew county, was then proposed for the position of temporary chairman, and was elected unanimously. Mr. Hord was introduced to the convention, and was received with cheers. He said:

GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION—I must return my acknowledgements to you for the honor with which you have distinguished me, and by your intelligent co-operation I trust that I may be able to perform the duties you have imposed upon me. We are now on the verge of one of the most important and heated contests that has ever marked our political history. Already the air is tremulous with the reverberations of the preparations for the contest, and our ears are filled with the rumbling of the marshaled and approaching hosts, and this august band of patriots has assembled to select its captains for the fray. [Applause.]

It is a contest between free government and the greedy encroachments of a remorseless power. It is a contest for the consummation of power at Washington, and the proper and lawful distribution of that power among the people. [Applause.] It is a contest for a free ballot and a free election, as opposed to the supervising power and blighting control of partisan marshals and federal office-holders. [Applause.] It is a contest of freemen as opposed to despotic restraint. It is a contest of the republic against the empire. [Applause.] Our fathers, gentlemen, purchased our form of government by struggle, by blood. They proceeded from injuries to arms, from arms to liberty and from liberty to glory [applause], and freemen as we are, we will not suffer the iron hand of power to smite that liberty and no cloud to darken or obscure that glory [cries of "Never! never!"] and without that liberty, to you as freemen gold has no power, birth has no distinction, station has no dignity, country has no charms. Gentlemen of the convention, we have the appalling spectacle before us of a great party in this country that has lived for fifteen years by the sensational traduction of the southern people in our southern states. Detraction and prejudice have been their hope and their fruition, but, thank God, it has been the office of the democracy to bear to this faction north and south, the olive-branch, seeking to fight down contests and factions, and seeking to pluck from the north and south the arrows that fill our memories, and to blot out the troubles that are written between them and that have divided and distracted the country. The democracy, thank God, has united the country into one solid union, with one flag above us, and seeking a common destiny. The democracy has said to the north, forgive and reconcile, and we have said to the south concede, yield to the just dominion of the law, and we have said to both you have a common God in a common country; while the one commands you to love, the other kneels to you for peace. [Applause.]

Four years ago we had an election in this country, but the leprosy of fraud has poisoned the blood of this republic, and yesterday the republican party nominated a man who was conspicuous in his infamy as a member of that electoral commission that fastened that blot, that damning stain, upon the escutcheon of the country (applause), and by his action we have a man holding the office of president by fraud and by peculation. They have nominated a man who has been notoriously stained with the credit mobilier frauds, and for the vice-president they have selected a man whom Hayes, polluted with fraud as he is, regarded as too corrupt to stand in his presence. We have a man in Indiana [long continued applause], who can be and will be the next president of the United States [applause]; his banner will be seen in the thickest of the conflict; he will bear our colors through the smoke and storm and roar of the conflict, and when we elect him, by the help of God we will inaugurate him. [Long continued applause.] We are here to select a state ticket. Let all dissensions and divisions cease, and let us be one united phalanx, and victory will be with us next November. We have a wary adversary to meet, but by meeting him boldly we can defeat him. I have said more than I anticipated when I arose, and I trust by your co-operation this day I will be able to perform my duties as temporary chairman of this meeting.

During the remarks of Mr. Hord, the candidacy of Governor Hendricks was incidentally mentioned when a cheer was sent up by the vast crowd that almost shook the building, and which was prolonged for fifteen minutes.

Judge Lowry, of Allen county, moved that the convention proceed to the appointment of a chief seargent-at-arms, with power to appoint assistants, which was carried, and Charles A. Munson, of Fort Wayne, was selected.

The committee on

PERMANENT ORGANIZATION,

consisting of Colonel Charles Denby, Vanderburg county; Hon. Abraham Nullette, Orange county; John Benz, Crawford county, James B. Foley, Decatur county; George B. Allison, Brown county; W. H. Beck, Fayette county; Austin H. Brown, Marion county; G. T. B. Carr, Grant county; John F. McHugh, Tippecanoe county; Fred. Hoover, Jasper county; Samuel A. Schoff, Jay county; Theodore Reed, DeKalb county; Arthur Thompson, Marshall county; made the following report:

GENTLEMEN—Your committee have selected for permanent chairman Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks; for permanent secretary, John W. Kern, Howard county. For delegates at large to the national convention, Hons. Joseph E. McDonald, Daniel W. Voorhees, Wm. E. Niblack and James R. Slack. For presidential electors, Hons. David S. Gooding and John R. Coffroth.

The following important rules were recommended by the committee for the consideration of the convention:

1. That each representative delegate in this convention selected by primary conventions held in counties, townships or wards, shall have a right to cast his individual vote on all questions and nominations.

2. That in case delegates have been selected solely by a county convention, and such conventions shall have adopted a resolution directing the delegates to vote as a unit, the vote of such county shall be counted as a unit on all questions of nominations.

3. Nominations of candidates to be balloted for shall be made by simply announcing the name without any speech whatever.

4. In calling the roll of counties they shall be called alphabetically, and each county shall vote when its name is called, and no county shall be passed until its vote is announced by its chairman.

The report was adopted.

SPEECH OF HON. T. A. HENDRICKS.

Following this report, Hon. T. A. Hendricks was introduced, amid a storm of applause, and stepping to the front of the platform, said:

